By the following extract from a private letter of a commander of the navy, dated Port Royal, Dec. 31st, it will be seen that South Carolina has at last a loyal Governor and a "live one." A few more such Governors would do more to bring the people of that state to their senses than would a score of Gen. Shermans.

In a brevious letter I informed you that we had taken possession of St. Helena Sound and the islands adjacent thereto, and the white people having completely deserted the forts, houses and hamlets, left some twelve or fifteen hundred negroes to take care of themselves. I learn that these negroes, although persuaded and commanded to come away, positively refused, notwithstanding they were threatened and told by their masters that the Lincolnites would kill every man of them. They determined to remain, and remain tney did. We formed them into a colony and permitted them to select one of their number to be denominated as Governor, to whom all the blacks should be obedient, with an assurance of protection from us all.

A day or two since, while everything was looking very quiet, a rebel sergeant and two privates from Charleston, armed with muskets, pistols and cutlasses, came down to St. Helena to recover some property or things they had forgotten and left behind. As they neared the village the Governor orpered out the whole force, surrounded the three rebels, and demanded an unconditional surrender, or instant death. Seeing themselves overpowered, and knowing that the terms would be fulfilled, they surrendered arms and all, when the Governor immediately ordered them to be sent on board one of our gun-boats, and they are now prisioners on board of the Wabash."

The Fredericksburgh Recorder of the 3d says that on the previous Saturday night, some ten or more negroes, belonging to W. W. Taylor, of Mount Airy, and the estate of Robert W. Carter, of Sabine Hall, Richmond County, Va, succeeded in making their escape, it is supposed to the vessels maintaining the blockade of the Rappahannock at its mouth. They succeeded by making use of a boat kept by the overseer of the Sabine Hall tract for the purpose of going to and from a duck-blind. The negroes told one of their number they intended to have a salute fired on their arrival aboard the Federal steamer, and about 4 o'clock on Sunday evening, the reports of the discharge of two cannon were distinctly heard.

A SCHOOL FOR CONTRABANDS.

The Lawrence (Kansas) Republican gives these interesting particulars of the attempts making in that place to develop the minds of the "contrabands."

The school was started on the same principle with our Sabbath school—one or two taking the general oversight and preserving order, and then having the scholars divided into classes large enough to occupy the time of one teacher during the evening. At first the school was held in a small room and began with four scholars, but it rapidly increased, until the room was full and crowded, and then it was moved into the Court House. Our citizens have been very liberal in contributing towards fitting the court house in proper shape, and volunteer teachers have been sufficient to supply the demand. The school is held every night in the week, except Saturday. Last Friday evening we visited the school, and it is not often we have seen a more interesting sight. There were present that evening eighty-three scholars and twenty-seven teachers. The court house was crowded, and we have seldom seen a more orderly school of any kind. Most of these people came among us entirely ignorant even of their letters. They had to begin like little children, at the alphabet. But the eagerness with which they learn is exceedingly interesting. They seem to be straining forward with all their might, as if they could not learn fast enough. One young man who had been to the school only five nights, and began with the alphabet, now spells in words of two syllables. Another, in the same time, had progressed so that he could read, quite readily, the simple lessons given in the spelling books. The scholars were of all ages. Here is a class of little girls, eager and restless; there is a class of grown men, solemn and earnest. A class of maidens, in their teens, contrasts with another of elderly women. But all alike showed the same intentions of application. We were especially pleased with the courteous frankness with which they all answered any questions in reference to their progress. Some who began when the school opened, can now read with some fluency, and are ready to commence with figures.

The school continued from 7 to 9 o'clock. After the lesson was finished, a short time was spent in singing. Their wild, untutored voices produced a strange but pleasant impression. One of their songs, altered from a familiar Sunday-school hymn, seemed peculiarly fitted for the occasion, and they sung it as though they meant it.

> "Where, O! where is Captain Moses,
> Who led Israel out from Egypt?
> Safe now in the promised land."

It is worth one evening to see such a sight. Eighty-three scholars, just out of bondage, giving themselves intently to study, after working all day to earn their bread, and 27 teachers—some of our most cultivated and refined ladies and gentlemen—laboring night after night, voluntarily and without compensation, is a sight not often seen.

LETTER FROM TRENTON.

Dear Anglo:—I saw not long since a communication from Dr. Martin R. Delany, recommending the propriety of holding a council of the leading colored men of all the States, so as to exchange and interchange their views upon the most practicable, wise and best plan to be adopted for the benefit and interest of the free colored people of the United States. I have always regarded the amelioration of the condition of the colored people of the United States as paramount to any other question that could occupy their minds. Because they are the representatives of the slaves; and a convention of such men as are competent to discuss the question in all of its bearings, cannot fail to do good, although it may fail to adopt any regular, systematic plan of operations. The discussion itself will court inquiry and cause investigation, besides drowning out thoughts and views which would reflect credit upon the speakers or writers, and the convention and those represented.

The people of the United States do not as yet know the amount of power we possess. They don't know us fully in any sense for good. Our vices are greedily sought after; but our virtues they wish not to learn. The object as recommmended will give them a better knowledge of us—which is only necessary to make them like us better.

We have a character, a reputation which will command respect both at home and abroad. Let us not then hide our talent; but let it be put out on exchange, so that it may bring forth with usury.

Dr. Delany's suggestion is a good one—may it meet with a hearty and cordial response from every lover of Freedom and the rights of man.

Wm. E. Walker.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 18, 1862.

Abuses practised on the Colored People of Richmond.—The whole condition of the management of our city fortifications needs investigation in more respects than one. We have learned with the utmost surprise, that the Commissary Department on the works, which involves a large and important trust, is in the hands of John Hagan, the negro-driver whose black mail operations were yesterday ventilated in the Mayor's Court, and whose political importance that has procured him the appointment, is said to consist in the fact that he is, according to the rowdy appellation, 'King of the Creek Nation,' the best bully in town, and can carry any election he pleases in Butcher town.

In paying off the negroes at work on the fortifications, we understand that most villainous abuses have been practised. The paymaster requires them to be identified by their overseers, and we are informed that it has been a common practice for some of the overseers to charge these poor creatures 10 per cent of their pay as fees for their identification.

Who are these overseers, and who is responsible for their conduct? Some of them have been fished up from the back slums of the city, and these again, as appeared from the exhibition in the Mayor's Court yesterday of a brace of Hagan's whippers-in, have emlpoyed creatures a little lower than themselves to hunt up free negroes in the city, giving them the alternative of paying black-mail or of being carried to the jail and whipped. One of the most awful and revolting specimens of the barbarity of these creatures was related to Mayor Mayo in our hearing yesterday, where a free negro on the fortifications had his back actually cut into a mangle of bleeding flesh, the driver having given him, as we were told by a policeman, 581 lashes with the whip, until the poor victim sank exhausted under his fiendish rage. In the name of God is there no jusice in courts of human justice for iniquities like this?—Richmond Exam.

Rev. J. Sella Martin.—We find the following advertisement in the 'London Star of Dec. 21st.:—

> THE REV. SELLA MARTIN, five years ago a Slave, now an eloquent and useful colored Minister in Boston, U. S., will preach at SURREY CHAPEL, on SUNDAY (To-morrow) Evening, and will give his own Personal History and Escape from Slavery on MONDAY EVENING in the same place, making a collection fo' his intelligent Christian sister and her children still in bondage.
>
> Plaistow, E. JOHN CURWEN.

We must confess to being mistaken in regard to Mr. Martin's mission to Great Britain. We had been informed that he had gone there at the urgent request of Gov. Andrews, of Massachusetts, to speak against the recognition of the Cotton Confederacy. It may be, however, that Mr. Martin purposes giving his attention to both matters, looking after only one at a time, giving the most important one the precedence.

A rat, or bandicoot, was recently caught in Katagoom, Africa, measuring two feet seven inches from the nose to the tip of the tail. Its hair was long and of a light gray.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Never have we beheld a day so auspicious as the present for our people. The great wheel of providence has made a revolution in our favor. The everlasting covenant of mercy seem visible in the signs of the times.

When we look across the great waters, upon the land of our fathers, upon Africa, which has bled for centuries, and whose shores have been infested with pirates, and frequently visited by desolation and death, we see her now an object of hope brighter than ever shown before

Never was there such an interest felt, and action taken among the most intelligent and free thinking class of our people for Africa as now. Civilization and christianity are working harmoniously side by side for the redemption of that great continent, where I verily believe the glory of christianity will be more gloriously displayed than else where under the whole heavens.

It is found that the richness of her resources is unparaleled. The eyes of all civilized nations are attracted towards her fields of treasure. They are now more than ever seeking her markets, with them they will carry their principles of civilization, which will be compared by the native African, and he will adopt those most congenial to his nature, while he believes and adopts the principles of christianity with all its pristine glory. The angel of the covenant is now troubling her stagnant waters, and many are rushing to be healed of their spiritual maladies.

On turning our attention to Africans at at home, a new state of things meets our gaze—the whole people of this country witness now what they never expected to witness. The nation truly have struggled with Great Britain to maintain her independence, but a war so lamentable as the one now pending never entered the minds of the people of this country. The great house of this republic is divided against itself.

The struggle is going on. The sword Christ came to send on earth is in the midst of this people. The blast of war is heard throughout the land. The smoke of battle seem to becloud the happy prospects of this great nation, and the roar of the British Lion causes the American Eagle to tremble, scream and mount aloft, while the viper which has cunningly stole its way under its wing, unless it is very soon shaken loose will bring it to the ground, and cause those stars and stripes which it holds in its piercing beak to trail in the dust.

And yet through this gloomy aspect of affairs, a ray of hope brighter than ever shown before, appears to us. We see beyond, the cheering prospect of a general emancipation of four millions of our downtrodden brethren.

Although it has not been the object of this government in this war to interfere with slavery, but he who controls the fortunes of war and can divert the councils of nations, has a hidden hand in this matter, and hath said to the slave power "so far shalt thou come and no farther—and here shalt thy proud waves be stayed." Stern necessity will force the government and the military power to act favourably in that direction.

Who of us thought for one moment, one year ago, that, such a thing as confiscation or general emancipation would have been urged in such high quarters as it is at present. And ever since the war has commenced the yoke of slavery has been lifted from the neck of thousands of our oppressed brethren. This is a new thing to us..

The ball is rolling, and ere long will fell every pin that stands up in behalf of that hell begotten institution. The leaven is at work, and soon the whole lump will be leavened.

God is employing the southern rebellion and this government as instrumentalities not only to emancipate the oppressed, but as means of introducing a free gospel and education, its handmaid, to those who dwell in the land of the shadow of death. The missionary operations which have been going on at Fortress Monroe and Newport News, and the plan for educating the contrabands at Port Royal are portentous of the good times coming. This is only a small beginning of what our eyes will behold in five years hence. The little light which already shines upon them will shine brighter unto the perfect day. And with what little they have already received, to say nothing of any farther action on the part of the government or the army, they would ultimately work out their own salvation.

In view of these facts, it behooves us, as a Christian people, to put implicit confidence in him who rules the armies of heaven, and frustrates the schemes of the unjust; and to pray to God to bring about speedily the day when truth and righteousness shall triumph over sin and injustice all over this land and throughout the world.

As to the precise spot where civilization, learning and Christian principles among our people on this continent will be developed, may be a matter of conjecture for the present. We will have to submit the control of this matter to the Providence of God who doeth all things well.

If such be his pleasure, that the colored people shall remain in their present localities in America, and here to work out their salvation, no power can change his purpose, and the great work of social and civil elevation will go on here as well as elsewhere. But the signs of the times seem to indicate that Providence has designated a spot among the many beautiful Isles of the West Indies, which is unparalleled for its rich resources and magnificent climate, commercial facilities, and conveniences for social development and Christian civilization.

In the past year not less than 1500 have found refuge on the Island of Hayti, among whom are many of the most intelligent and industrious class of our people, who, we cannot but believe, are in the land of God the messengers of a purer Christianity than have heretofore characterised the former people of that place.

The development of religious freedom, which will ultimately supplant the milder form of Catholic despotism, will be the great work of those who go hence to find an asylum upon that spot. I am one, however, who believes that it is not intended that our nation is to occupy one spot altogether. But like other civilized nations, or a people in pursuit of civilization, will by some means spread to different parts of the globe; and hence here, as well as in Africa or in Hayti or any other place, we have a work to do.

It would be unreasonable to conjecture that all the colored people of this country will leave it, and the work of elevation with a view of remaining here should be considered as important as under any other or favorable circumstances. E. J. A.

OBITUARY

Died near Bethlehem, Pa. Jan. 8th, Mr. Thomas Jones, aged 69 years, 7 months and 22 days.

Mr. Jones was born a slave in Maryland, May 16th, 1792, and remained in slavery for twenty-seven years. His father died a slave at the age of seventy-five years. A short time previous to his death, he gathered his family around his bed-side and told them his life was fast drawing to a close, that his long term of servitude was nearly ended, but he regretted leaving them in the same sad condition he had been all of his days. He advised them to put their trust in the Almighty, for he was the God of the negro as well as that of his oppressor.

As soon as an opportunity offered, Thomas made an attempt to escape from bondage, but being detected, he was separated from his family, consisting of his wife and three children—they being sold for the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars. About three months afterward he was sold to a man from whom he received the worst of treatment. On one occasion they threatened to tie and whip him: but he told them that they must not undertake anything of that sort, for if they did, they or he should die; for he would suffer no man, white or black, to tie or whip him. He was again sold, and carried to Richmond, Va., from whence he attempted to escape, but failed. He was thereupon threatened with two hundred lashes, but upon declaring that he would not permit them to whip him, the threat was not put in execution. Being closely watched, and finding it impossible to escape in the usual way, he resorted to this expedient: He won the affections of a white woman, a Miss Martin, and to whom he divulged his secrets. They finally started away together without being suspected, and in four days reached without molestation, Lancaster county, Pa., and from there went to Berks county, and after remaining there a short time, left for Northampton county where they settled. At the time of his death they had lived in the county for forty-three years.

He was much beloved by the entire community, and was considered one of the finest men in the county. He took pleasure in attending meetings of debating clubs, and in discussions on the Slavery question was without his equal.

Mr. Jones' physical developments were great. He was one of the first captains on the Delaware and Lehigh Canal, having been engaged in running boats for about twenty-eight years, in which occupation he was until three years previous to his death, during which period he was confined to his room from the disease of the heart, liver complaint and dropsy of the chest.

He had at one time managed to save several thousand dollars, a part of which he used in the purchase of the freedom of his brother, who has gone to the war.

Mr. Jones' funeral took place from his late residence, on Friday, Jan. 10th, and was attended by a large concourse of friends and acquaintances. The funeral sermon was preached by a German minister of Bethlehem, from a text selected by Mr. Jones himself: "Set thine house in order, for thou shalt die, and not live." Isaiah, 38: 1.

He was at his death, a member of the Methodist church at Freemansburg, with which he had been connected for ten years. He had made his peace with his Maker, and was waiting for the hour to come when all his trouble would be at an end.

He was the father of eleven children, and the grandfather of twenty-five, all of whom reside in Pennsylvania. E. Emory.

Bethlehem, Pa., Jan. 13, 1862.

BANNER PRESENTATION AT BETHEL CHURCH.

Sheba's Court, No. 1, Heroines of Jericho, having some time since resolved on the presentation of a banner to Mt. Calvary Encampment, No. 14, Knight's Templar of New York, selected last Thursday evening for the occasion. The church was well filled, but had the affair been properly advertised, the place would have been entirely too small.

At intervals previous to the arrival of the chief attraction the choir of the church led by Mr. Henry Robinson, entertained the audience with some select anthems.

THE CHURCH

Was decorated with the banners of many subordinate Lodges, and also with those of the Royal Arch Chapter, the whole draped with evergreens. At 9 o'clock the Grand Lodge, A. Y. M., of the state of New York, entered, followed fifteen minutes after by the Sheba's Court, No. 1, Heroines of Jericho; the Court being escorted by many Royal Arch Masons, the choir singing during their entrance, "See the conquering hero comes,"

At 9 o'clock and 25 minutes, the entered. They are a fine-looking body of men, and being clothed in full regalia made a very good appearance.

KNIGHTS TEMPLARS

Prayer was offered by Br. J. D. S. Hall, after which Sir Knight Geo. Smith acting as master of ceremonies introduced Br. Prelate, the Rev. J. R. V. Thomas, who after singing that sterling hymn,

"Blow ye the trumpet, blow," with the assistance of the craft sang the masonic Ode commencing,

"When earth's foundations first were laid
By the Almighty Artist's hand,
'Twas then our perfect laws were made,
Established by His strict command.
Hail mysterious, hail glorious Masonry!
That makes us ever great and free!"

At the conclusion of this song Br. Thomas, in a speech of much power and beauty presented to the encampment the splendid standard which had been prepared for the occasion. As this, perhaps, is the most splendid banner ever given by any of our Societies, we give a description of it.

A piece of black silk velvet of the finest kind composed the groundwork. This was trimmed by gold lace about an inch wide, and also by heavy bullion fringe. In the center a large star of white silk was placed, the points of which were bound with silver cords In this star was inserted a circular piece of red velvet, about fourteen inches over. In the center of this piece of velvet a gold-thread cross and serpent, were elaborately worked, and beyond this center-piece, but within the limits of the star, was the motto, "IN HOC SIGNO VINCES," beautifully wrought in letters of gold. The reverse contained the following: "Presented to Mount Calvary Encampment, No. 14, of N. Y., by Sheba's Court, No. 1, Heroines of Jericho, S. N. Y." This splendid standard which we understand cost $118, was received on behalf of the Encampment by Sir Knight A. M. Green, of Mt. Calvary Commandery. The address of this gentleman gave evidence of the perfect workman. It was brief, but this was more than counterbalanced by its compactness.

His intimate acquaintance with the ancient history of Masonry and its great lights both ancient and modern, made it an easy task for him to cull its choicest flowers and present them as a boquet to that delighted assemblage. It is hardly necessary to say that this and Brother Thomas' address were received with demonstrations of continued applause. Previous to the appearance of Brother Green, the Knights sang their song, commencing:

"To the Knight Templar's awful dome,
Where glorious Knights in arms were drest,
Filled with surprise, I slowly came,
With solemn jewels on my breast."

and at the conclusion of his remarks they sang the Knight Templars Song, commencing thus:

"God bless the worthy band
Who grace this happy land
With valiant Knights.
May we united three,
Of the blest Trinity,
Cement the unity
Of all great lights."

At the conclusion of these exercises the benediction was pronounced, and the ladies of the Court, escorted by the Sir Knights, left the church for the supper room, where an oyster supper had been prepared. The room was densely filled, but we are sorry to say that here we were somewhat disappointed; but as this was the first effort of the ladies, we suppose that the mantle of charity must be thrown over them.

AN EPISODE AND A SURPRISE.

About an hour afere supper we observed the Rev. Richard H. Cain, pastor of the Bridge street church, seated among a group of ladies, among whom was Mrs. Laura Hazzard, of Baltimore. Presently we observed the Reverend gentleman rise and look very sharply round the room, and then take his departure with the above named lady. A few moments after the above occurrence, a lady friend told us that she had just witnessed the marriage of the above named parties, by the Rev. J. D. S. Hall. The surprise was as great to our lady friend as to ourself, as neither party had made any preparation for such an occasion, the bride being clothed in the habiliments of mourning. Nor was the surprise confined to those in that room; for we learn that the Reverend gentleman had made the most perfect arrangements to carry it out at his boarding house. We understand that by a device he got Mr. B. to occupy a portion of his bed, and at three o'clock A. M. he made him leave the bed, telling him he wanted the place for his wife.

REV. L. C. LOCKWOOD AND MR. DAVIS IN BROOKLYN.—These gentlemen visited the Bridge street church on Sunday evening, where Mr. Davis addressed the people very acceptably.

Mr. Horace Waters, with his youthful singers were present, and sung the song of the "Contrabands." The Hutchinson family were present and sang some Anti-Slavery songs. It is hardly necessary to say that the exercises of the evening afforded great delight to the audience.

THE HOME JOURNAL.—If it were possible for this delightful periodical to improve we should say that it has improved with the New Year. The singularly clear, diamond-cut and fascinating story of Christine makes the heart leap and the nerves tingle with its power. 'The lookings-on at the war' keep one posted in men and things at Washington. But more than all, there is a home-tone, full of gentle, social, genial things, which render this journal indispensable in every home circle.

The African M. E. Zion Church held a festival on the evening of New Years, in their house of worship, which is to be dedicated next Sabbath. The room was crowded with the parents, children and members of the congregation, and listened respectfully and attentively to addresses from Revs. Mr. Myers and P. M. Bartlett. It was gratifying to observe the good order and quiet behavior of the children, and the interest manifested in the remarks made to them. The Rev. John Washington, the preacher in charge, has succeeded in creating considerable interest among the adults in the study of the Holy Scriptures, quite a number meeting regularly with the children for religious instructions. This Sabbath School numbers about 50, and it is hoped the interest will increase until all the parents with their children will convene every Sabbath, and dilligently improve the opportunity afforded them.—FLUSHING JOURNAL, 2d inst.

VICTORIA CLUB.—In a notice of the festival of this association in our issue of Jan. 11th, the name of Mrs. S. R——y, of 9th street, was omitted from the list of members. The omission was unintentional, for Mrs. R. is one of the most active and energetic members of the Club.

AID FOR THE FREEDMEN OF BEAUFORT.—We are glad to learn that a select circle of the ladies of New York are making arrangements for a grand calico-dress Ball, to be given for the benefit of the ex-slaves at Beaufort, S. C.; to come off before the Lent season. From the well known character of the committee in whose hands the affair is to be placed, we have little hesitation in saying it will be the finest affair of the season, and we trust that all pleasure-seekers will contribute toward the success of this truly commendable project.

FESTIVAL FOR THE EX-SLAVES AT FORTRESS MONROE.

We have learned with pleasure of a movement in which Rev. H. H. Garnet, Mrs. P. S. Porter and others are engaged, to get up at an early date a Festival at the Continental Hall, cor. 8th Avenue and 34th st. for the benefit of the freedmen at Fortress Monroe. While the arrangements are being completed the [illegible] can be gathering up clothing for these people, which will be promptly forwarded to Fortress Monroe, if left with Rev. H. H. Garnet, 174 W. 30th st: Mrs. Stevens, 48 Leonard st.: The American Missionary Association, 61 John st., and at this Office.

MARRIED.

CAIN, HAZZARD.—At No. 223 Second st. New York, Jan. 16th, by Rev. J. D. S. Hall, Rev. Richard H. Cain, of Ohio, to Mrs. Laura Hazzard, of Baltimore.

DIED.

In this city, Jan. 16th, of inflammation of the lungs, Amelia Andris, daughter of Pleasant and Susannah Smith, aged three years and five days.

Special Notices.

I. O. OF G. S. AND D. OF S.

Office of the R. W. G., Chief of the E. D. G. Lodge, No. 75 South 6th st. W'msburg. Jan 21st.

Whereas the officers and members of Crystal Fount Union Lodge No. 6 of Newark, N. J., have, in proper form, acknowledged the authority of the R. W. E. D. Grand Lodge, and declared their willingness to support the constitution of the said G. L., and to conform to the rules and regulations of the order: Now therefore, I, Moses B. Coss, do by the power in me vested, as he R. W. G. Chief of said Grand Lodge, No. 6. of Newark, N. J. to be this day reinstated under the Jurisdiction of our G. Lodge.

L. S. } In testimony of which I have set my hand, and caused the seal of G. L. to be affixed, this 21st day of Jan., A. D. 1862.

ARRIVALS

At Mrs. PLANTS' Boarding House:—

Mr. Thomas Seymour, Boston, Mass.
Walter Williams, Norfolk, Va.
William Wilson, " "
Isaiah Sick, " "
George Woodruff, " "
William Rhode, Washington, D. C.

"SONG OF THE CONTRABANDS,"—The music of this delightful song can be had of Horace Waters, 481 Broadway. Let every body get it.—"Where have the loved ones gone," song and chorus. This is also a very pleasing production, for sale by the same publisher.

MRS. ELIZA LEWIS' SALVE,
ANDERSON'S HAIR RESTORATIVE,
(New London,)
SPANISH OIL, (For the Hair,)
WHITE'S VEGETABLE EXTRACT,
BRANDRETH'S SUGAR COATED PILLS,
For Sale at the
Drug Store 55 West Broadway
27tf.

PHILADELPHIA AGENCY.

Wm. E. De Cordover, 419 South[illegible] st. is authorized to receive subscriptions and advertisements for the Anglo African. All orders left with him will receive prompt attention.

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND
BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,
PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St., and with G. Oton. 18tf

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated "Hoagland Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

MASONIC DIRECTORY, FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R.W.G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st, the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka, No. 15, Norwick, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14. Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 EastHouston Street, N. Y. City.

LECTURES.

THE UNDERSIGNED is prepared to fill engagements to deliver single Lectures, on the following subjects:

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY WITH REFERENCE TO NATURAL THEOLOGY; THE ADAPTATIONS OF THE EARTH, OR TERRESTRIAL ADAPTATIONS; MENTAL PHILOSOPHY.
THE ANCIENT HONORS OF THE BLACK AND COLORED RACES OF THE EARTH;

—Being a series of popular discourses recently delivered, founded on the following texts:

1. "Look not upon me because I am black." [Song of Sol.—1.6.
2. "Princes shall come out of Egypt." [Psalm 68—31.
3. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin." [Jer.—13.23.
4. "Cursed be Canaan.'—Gen.—9.25.
5. "I beseech thee for my son Onesimus." Philemon.

TERMS—The lecturer's passage both ways, and one-fourth of profits.

[From the Detroit Daily Advertiser, March 1, 1860.]

"MR. BERRY'S lecture last night is stated to have displayed much thought, and to have been in every respect meritorious."

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

MRS. E. CLARKE, IS HAPPY TO ANnounce to her friends and the public, that she has opened her new BOARDING HOUSE, and will be very thankful for their patronage, at No. 66 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK. 14-

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist.
79 Thompson St., N. Y.

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with Ice Cream, Fruit, and other Delicacies.
BENJ. F. BROWN,
70 Bleecker
between Broadway & Crosby 4t

A. ROBERTS,
120 Clinton Court, 8th st., New York, agent for the Weekly Anglo-African. Copies may be had of him at an early hour after its publication

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,

REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.

New York—corner of Prince and Marion street near Broadway.

Hours of Worship;—

Prayer-meeting, 10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.

Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock,
Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.
Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,

(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. WM. J. ALSTON, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1 2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—

10½ . . . . A. M.
3 . . . . P. M.
7½ . . . . P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn. 13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

REV. ELI N. HALL, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:

10½ o'clock, ... A. M.
" . . . . P. M.
" . . . . P. M.

10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:

10 1-2 o clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 1 " . . . . P. M.

12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—

3 o'clock, P. M.
7 1-2 " P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

LECTURE every Wednesday evening.

Rev. CHAS. H. THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 " . . . . P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. HALL, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. JOHN T. RAYMOND, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

AGENT FOR WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

TROY AGENCY.—Mr. Henry Burke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

NEW MUSIC.—"The Lord doth now to this Nation Speak," "O, Let my People Go," Parody on "Song of the Contrabands," words by Moses, music by Baker. Price 35 cts. including "Contrabands' Song," or 4 pieces for $1, mailed free. Just published by HORACE WATERS, 481 Broadway.
24 6t.

THE HORACE WATERS PIANOS,
MELODEONS, ALEXANDRE ORGANS,
and
T. Gilbert & Co's. Celebrated Æolian Pianos,

are the finest instruments for Parlors and Churches now in use. A large assortment can be seen at the new Warerooms 481 Broadway, between Grand and Broome streets, which will be sold at extremely low prices. Pianos and Melodeons from sundry makers, new and second hand, to let, and rent allowed if purchased, as per agreement. Monthly payments received for the same. Also, second-hand pianos at great bargains, prices from $25 to $100. Sheet Music, Music Books, and all kinds of Music merchandise at war prices. A Pianist in attendance will try new music.
HORACE WATERS, AGENT.

BOSTON HOUSE,
MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been
ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,
In all its branches—such as
BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.,
Residence—120th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.
18 26t

THE BEST DRESSING FOR THE HAIR during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts.

TO LET.—THE ROOM ON THE SECOND floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston-st., or of the Janitor 235 West 16th-st.

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen it you want a Nice, Fashionable well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this or any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,
168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG
Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as
BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS
of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made
MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.
DON'T FORGET,
168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET.
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,
On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.
Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.
Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.
First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.
The Clergy supplied at a discount.
KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y. 19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

BOARDING AND LODGING
IN BROOKLYN,
At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 58 Atlantic St., near South Ferry. $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodgings 75 cts. per week. 15tf

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS!
For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.
Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side. Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 182 Suffolk Street. Terms very moderate. a10 1y.

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS
Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn.
10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMOdate a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tf

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTES, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 SOUTH STREET, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS. CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS,
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) REspectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

WARRANTED TO CURE A HEADACHE in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable extract. For sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold and Frankfort Sts.

MRS. E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS-MAKER,
25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.

BOARDING AND LODGING.

BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 180 [illegible] Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in very healthy and convenient part of the city.
Boarding for Ladies $2,50
" " Gents, 3,00
Lodging per week 75

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER,
219 CENTRE STREET NEW YORK.

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate Ladies and Gentlemen with FIRST CLASS Board, on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. [illegible] Street, a few doors north of Grand. [illegible]

POCKET WATER FILTERS
AND DRINKING TUBES.
Indispensable for Soldiers, Travellers, [illegible] [illegible] wanted. Samples mailed on receipt of [illegible] by addressing
DAY & CO.,
3-13t Box 464 P.O., Newark, N.J.

Poetry.

From the Atlantic Monthly.

AT PORT ROYAL.—1861.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

The tent-lights glimmer on the land,
The ship-lights on the sea:
The night wind smooths with drifting sand
Our track on lone Tybee.

At last our grating keels outslide,
Our good boats forward swing;
And while we ride the land-locked tide
Our negroes row and sing

For dear the bondman holds his gifts
Of music and of song:
The gold that kindly Nature sifts
Among his sands of wrong.

The power to make his toiling days
And poor home-comforts please:
The quaint relief of mirth that plays
With sorrow's minor keys.

Another glow than sunset's fire
Has filled the West with light.
Where field and garner, barn and byre
Are blazing through the night.

The land is wild with fear and hate.
The rout runs mad and fast:
From hand to hand, from gate to gate.
The flaming brand is passed

The lurid glow falls strong across
Dark faces broad with smiles:
Not theirs the terror, hate and loss
That fire yon blazing piles.

With oar-strokes timing to their song,
They weave in simple lays
The pathos of remembered wrong,
The hope of better days—

The triumph-song that Miriam sung,
The joy of uncaged birds:
Softening with Afric's mellow tongue
Their broken Saxon words.

[SONG OF THE NEGRO BOATMAN.]

Oh, praise an' tanks! De Lord he come
To set de people free:
An massa tink it day ob doom,
An' we ob jubilee.
De Lord dat heap de Red Sea waves
He jus as 'trong as den:
He say de word: we las' night slaves,
To-day de Lord's freemen.
De yam will grow, de cotton blow,
We'll hab de rice an' corn:
O nebber you fear, if nebber you hear
De driver blow his horn!

Ole massa on trabbles gone:
He leab de land behind:
De Lord's breff blow him furder on,
Like corn-shuck in de wind
We own de hoe, we own de plow,
We own de hands dat hold:
We sell de pig, we sell de cow,
But nebber chile be sold
De yam will grow, de cotton blow,
We'll hab de rice an' corn:
O nebber you fear, if nebber you hear
De driver blow his horn!

We pray de Lord: he gib us signs
Dat some day we be free:
De Norf-wind tell it to de pines,
De wild duck to de sea;
We tink it when de church-bell ring,
We dream it in de dream:
De rice-bird mean it when he sing,
De eagle when he scream.
De yam will grow, de cotton blow,
He'll gib de rice an' corn:
So nebber you fear, if nebber you hear
De driver blow his horn!

We know de promise nebber fail,
An' nebber lie de word:
So, like de 'postles in de jail,
We waited for de Lord:
An' now he open ebery door.
An' trow away de key:
He tink we lub him so before,
We lub him better free.
De yam will grow, de cotton blow,
He'll gib de rice an' corn:
So nebber you fear, if nebber you hear
De driver blow his horn!

So sing our dusky gondoliers:
And with a secret pain,
And smiles that seem akin to tears,
We hear the wild refrain

We dare not share the negro's trust,
Nor yet his hope deny:
We only know that God is just,
And every wrong shall die

Rude seems the song; each swarthy face,
Flame-lighted, ruder still:
We start to think that hapless race
Must shape our good or ill:

That laws of changeless justice bind
Oppressor with oppressed:
And close as sin and suffering joined,
We march to Fate abreast.

Sing on, poor hearts! your chant shall be
Our sign of blight or bloom—
The Vala-song of Liberty,
Or death-rune of our doom!

LIFE IN RICHMOND, VA.

A perusal of the following article will afford the best picture of Southern life th at we have lately seen. Let no one fail to read it.

MAYOR'S COURT, Wednesday, Jan. 8, 1862.—Yesterday morning John Hagan was arraigned before the Mayor and two Associate Justices, to show his authority for accepting substitutes for free negroes detailed to work on the fortifications around the City of Richmond, and to answer a charge of threatning to assault Mr. Edward A. Pollard, an associate editor of the "Richmond Examiner."

Hagan and the witnesses in the latter case were in Court at 11 o'clock.

The Mayor said—I have heard that the treatment of a negro has been such that I prefer to wait until 12 o'clock, and inquire into the matter.

Hagan—I have nothing to do with the negro.

Mayor—I don't know that; please have a little patience; I will be very much obliged to you to tell me who has the management of that negro? (referring to a negro beaten at the Battery, which matter is more fully explained in the sequel).

Hagan—Mr. Hines has control of him.

Hagan here started out of the room, but as recalled, and reminded that he was under arrest.

Hagan—I must be a very dangerous fellow if I can't be permitted to go out of doors!

Mayor—You can go out if you give me security to be here at 12 o'clock, and undertake in the meantime to keep the peace and be of good behavior.

Mr. Folkes—I will undertake for him.

Hagan—I will be here at 12 o'clock.

Mayor—And you undertake in the meantime to keep the peace?

Folkes—I will undertake for him if he promises to behave himself—not otherwise.

After some haggling, Hagan promised to keep the peace. He was evidently anxious to create the impression that he was eager to pursue and make an attack upon Mr. Pollard, who had just left the Court-room.

At 12 o'clock the parties reappeared in Court.

In the meantime Messrs. Timberlake and Sanxay had taken their seats on the benah along with the Mayor.

Mr. Mayo asked Hagan if he had ordered a negro to be whipped at the Battery this (yesterday) morning. Hagan said he did not, that he had nothing to do with the negroes but to deliver them to the manager of the Battery.

Mr. Crane—I have come here to represent Jim Evans, and desire to know whether the matter under discussion had any bearing on his case?

Mayo—I was representing to these Justices that I had been informed that a negro we had ordered to be sent to the battery had this morning been most brutally beaten there, and that I had convened them to inquire into whether there was any authority under the law for any one to whip him. I have sent one of my officers to bring the negro from Chesterfield to this Court, and I hope the Justice will be willing to wait his return.

After waiting about an hour, during which a desultory conversation was carried on between Hagan and any one in the Court room disposed to engage in conversation with him. Mr. Davis, the officer sent by the Mayor after Beverly Morris, the negro alleged to have been brutally whipped, returned with the negro. He stated to the Court that the negro had evidently been most unmercifully beaten; that he was one whelk from his neck to his ankles; that he was so beaten and abused as to be unable to stoop down. Mr. Davis also stated that the negro, when found by him at the Battery, had upon him a 50 pound ball and chain; that he had brought the negro over and had the ball and chain taken off.

Officer Quarles, who had examined the negro, corroborated Mr. Davis' statement of his terribly bruised condition.

Mr. Mayo here read the 5th section of the "Ordinance to provide for the enrolling and employment of free negroes in the public service," passed July 1, 1861, which is as follows: "That any free negro duly detailed and notified as aforesaid, who shall fail or refuse to obey the regulations as aforesaid, shall be subject to the penalties provided by law for persons drafted from the militia and failing or refusing to obey."

Mr. Mayo then read Engineer Clark's requisition for 100 negroes, and his authority, therein contained, to John Hagan to receive the same. After the reading, Mr. Mayo said to Clark, "In enrolling these negroes I enrolled several at the time confined in the City Jail, and whom I designed to put in the chain-gang. I want to know by what authority one of these negroes has been whipped as I understand he has been? You are a military man and we are civilians; perhaps you can enlighten us. Is there any law by which a soldier can be whipped?"

Clark—No one has authority from me to whip a negro; I believe flogging has been abolished in the army.

Mayor—I told the parties in charge of these negroes that, if they could not keep them otherwise, they might put balls and chains on them.

Crane to Clark—Is Hagan in your employment?

Clark—Let me explain my relations with Mr. Hagan. He is Quartermaster and Commissary, and does several other things.

Clark—He has, under this requisition of mine, authority only to receive negroes. I have no authority to authorize him to commute with negroes for substitutes.

Hagan—I have that authority; that's all right.

Crane—I did not ask you any questions. When you come to be interrogated, I am much mistaken if you will not have as much as you can do to answer the questions.

Mr. Mayo here read a paper, issued by himself and the two other justices then on the bench, which was designed to authorize Hagan to collect negroes for the public service, though as explained by his Honor, John Hagan's name had, by inadvertancy, been omitted. The paper, therefore, reads, you will proceed, &c.

Crane—This paper contains no evidence that those negroes had been notified, as required by the ordinance.

Hagan—They had been notified.

Crane—If the magistrates do not keep you quiet, I'll do it.

Hagan—You can't do it.

Crane—I can do it—and will.

Hagan—No you can't.

Crane—If I can't do it any other way, I'll take one of those chairs and knock you in the head.

Hagan I'd like to see you do it.

Mayo—Silence! We can keep him silent, Mr. Crane.

Crane—But you don't do it.

Mayo—Mr. Hagna, no one has addressed themselves to you.

Hagan, being silent for a few minutes, spent the interval in swaggering up and down in front of the bar, glancing horridly the while at court, counsel, witnesses and bystanders.

At this juncture, there being an apparent lull in the proceeding, Mr. McLaughlin who had been summoned as a witness, arose and said: I thought I had been summoned to a court of justice; but, as I find I have been mistaken, I hope I will be allowed to withdraw. I have practised law twenty-five years in this country, and I have never been in such a court before. The gentleman did not, nor was he called on to explain wherein he thought this court so extraordinary, but it was generally and readily understood by gentlemen in the room, that he alluded to the great licence allowed John Hagan, both in interrupting counsel and witnesses, and his bearing towards the Court itself, and all others.

Mayo—I don't care whether you have practised law before the Court of King's Bench, or before the constable at the cross-roads, if you repeat that language here, we will show you that you are in a court of justice; the Court say you are in contempt.

Crane—I hope your worship will take some measures to keep John Hagan quiet, and not allow him to be walking up and down and interrupting the proceedings.

Mayo—I have not heard a word from him since I told him to be silent.

Crane—You will hear from him very soon.

Mayo to Mr. Clark—I wish you would send me back the negroes, I sent to the battery from the city jail.

Hagan—The most of them have run away.

Mayor—Mr. Morris, take that negro, Beverly, that has been beaten to the jail, and you, Mr. Davis, get a list of the chain-gang negroes I sent to the battery, anp go and bring them back and put them in jail.

[Here follows a long account of a fight in a newspaper office between Hagan and Pollard, Hagan having gone in the office to whip Pollard for having published him in said paper.]

Edward A. Pollard, being sworn, made the following statement: I am informed, and fully believe, that this man, John Hagan, has practiced black mail and swindling on free negroes of this city—

Hagan—Mind what you say.

Mr. Pollard resuming—I believe that he has managed these practices by pretending to carry free negroes to the fortifications, and forcing from them sums of money for their acquittance. I am informed of an instance of this in the case of James Evans, one of his victims. I believe the statements of the boy, because they were made to me by him not for any purpose of complaint. I believe them because I have understood that there were white persons by, who can testify that he paid the money and refused to take it back from Hagan, when, on Monday last, he dragged the boy from the barber-shop to take him back to Manchester: and I believe it from the distinct circumstance that in the encounter with Hagan, when I spoke to him in a tone of remonstrance, which invited him to explain or contradict the facts stated in the newspaper article, he did not deny them.

Hagan—You aint got white witnesses.

Crane—I have got white witnesses.

Pollard—These circumstances, taken in connection with the certificate I have here, and which I produce to your honor, in Hagan's own handwriting, given by him to the boy, when he paid the money, which certificate, I believe, it is settled he had no right to give, and under the color of which he made the extortion, leaves not a particle of doubt in my mind that he acted illegally, corruptly, and to the outrage of public justice.

McLaughlin and P. A. Woods were called and sworn:

McLaughlin—I don't know that I can do more than answer any questions that are put to me; I was in the barber-shop on the 2d of January; I went in to shave off my whiskers, preparatory to crossing the Potomac; I wished to disguise myself; a man came in with a book, and said he was an officer; he said to one of the barbers, 'You go to the Court-house in twenty minutes;' to the other, Jim Evans, he said, 'Put on your coat and follow me;' Hagan was not the man; I had always thought Evans was white; I went next morning to shave again; I found Evans there; I said, 'Well, you are back again?' he said, 'Yes, I paid forty dollars and got off;' day before yesterday (Monday) I was in the barber-shop again, and this man with the big fur-coat (Hagan) came in and said to Evans, 'You must go with me to Manchester;' Evans said, 'I have paid you forty dollars;' I then heard Evans say repeatedly, 'I will not take the money back—I will not take the money back;' I did not see the money; Hagan said he had a bowie knife: he swore vengeance against all the editors in Richmond; and he looked at me so significantly (laughter), and I having had some connection with the Richmond Press, I could not help thinking his remarks were directed at me; I had not seen the article in 'The Examiner,' and knew nothing about it; I walked up to him and said, 'Friend, what is the matter?' he told me 'The Examiner' had published something about him; I told him I had nothing to do with that, he said well, he could cut and fight and all that sort of thing, and that he intended to kill all the editors; I heard the negro say repeatedly, in Hagan's presence, 'I'll not take back the money;' Hagan swore vengeance against 'The Examiner.'

Crane—I know free-negro testimony is not admissible in court, but I can prove that this boy is not a negro; and I believe I have heard your honor say that the brains of a jackass were sometimes evidence.

Mayo—Yes; but not what the jackass said.

Crane—As much a master of languages as your honor is, I doubt if you would be able to translate what a jackass would say.

Mayo—The status of Evans is not now a question before the court.

P. A. Woods deposed—I went into the barber-shop under the American on Monday, 6th January; two white men were in there; one of them was Hagan; I thought they wanted wainting on; I sat down with my back to all the parties; I heard the white man with Hagan say he 'could not get a substitute with $40;' Jim Evans said, 'They ought not to insist on my taking the money back;' Jim then came round to where Hobson was shaving me, and asked Hobson if he should take the money back; he told him to use his own judgment about the matter: from the sound of the footsteps behind me, I think that Jim then went into another room; when he came back into the barber-shop, I heard him say, 'I have done nothing, Hagan, to make you dap me:' Hagan said very little to Jim; the most he said was against the editor of 'The Examiner.'

Clark, engineer, sworn—I know nothing of any money having been received to exempt negroes. Here the Mayor called on Pollard for the certificate exempting Jim Evans and signed by John Hagan, which was produced.

Hagan—Let me see it; I'll tell you whether it is mine or not. Hagan could not just then get a look at it, and the Mayor ordered a copy to be taken, which was done.

Clark to Crane—I can't say say whether that is Hagan's hand-writing or not; I am not familiar with his writing.

Hagan (glancing toward the scrap of paper)—I suppose it is optional with me whether I acknowledge it or not? To this query no one replied.

Crane—Clark, please look at the list of negroes names and see if Jim Evans's name is there.

Clark (after examining the list)—It is not there.

Crane—Well, you gave John Hagan no authority to hunt up and take Jim Evans.

Clark—I had none to give him.

William A. Mason, sworn, deposed—All I know is that John Hagan told me that he had put down two negroes for whom he wanted substitutes; I told him Henry Easley had two slaves which I was authorised to hire; he said he wanted one for James Evans and one for Abraham Lucas; that they had paid him money; he did not say how much; he promised Easley fifty cents a day for each of his negroes.

Mayo—'Was it Monday you were in the barber-shop, Woods?'

Woods—'Yes, sir.'

Crane—'The negro John Carter (Jim's substitute) was at work last Monday in Jim Evans's place.'

Mayo—'That is the reason I asked Woods the question as to when he was in the barber-shop.'

Quarles, policeman, being sworn, deposed—'I went into the American Barber-shop on Monday, and was shaving when Mason came in and said to Jim, I want you at the Court-house at 12 o'clock; if you are not there I will have you put in jail or whipped; I told Mason I would go his security that he would be there; Mason said he must be there in twenty minutes, security or no security; Jim hurried off before he had finished tending to me.'

Mayo—'That induces me to ask you, Mason, what authority you had for ordering this negro to the Court-house?'

Mason—'Hagan told me he had a commission for me to go around and summon all the free negroes.'

Crane—I hope your honor will not fail to put that down in your memoranda.

Hogan—It is all right.

Crane—Oh, yes; everything is all right with you. Really, somebody will have to try the boasted strength of Hagan's skull.

Pollard—What disposition will your honor make of the case.

Mayo—Gentlemen: I am sitting here now merely in the incipient stage of a prosecutor; no one has any absolute right to be present but the witnesses. I will take the facts and consider them, and see what action was expedient in the premises (to Pollard), and inasmuch as you say the facts you deposed are contained in 'The Examiner, I should be glad if you will furnish me with a copy; strange as it may seem, I do not read the papers, except to look and see the reports of the proceedings before me.

Pollard—Certainly, sir; I will furnish you with a paper, if it will assist your judgment; although you will find nothing in it not contained in my affidavit.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SLAVES CONTRABAND OF WAR

THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed to
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING

B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.

2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.

3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.

4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.

5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.

6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.

7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

THE
PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC.

The undersigned announce in preparation a

MILITARY ALMANAC,
SUITED TO THE
REQUIREMENTS OF THE TIMES.

It will contain about Fifty Pages of valuable statistical and reading matter, among which will be found a statement of the causes and antecedents of the war, with a succinct narrative of its progress and incidents, including the principal battles and skirmishes, by land and sea, to the present time; a list of the leading officers of the Government, political and military, with biographical notices, and the leading officers of the so-called Southern Confederacy; a sketch of the organization of the army, the isignia of officers; an abstract of the articles of war; tables of pay and and rations; national hymns, anecdotes, &c., &c., making a complete

Book of Reference for the Use of the People.

Price 12 cents for single copy—$8 per hundred, with a further reduction on larger quantities.

A limited space will be devoted to advertisements, at the following rates:

One Page,	$30	Quarter Page,	$9
Three-fourth Page,	24	Eighth of Page,	5
Half Page,	16	Two Pages,	55

Payable on presentation of proof sheet of advertisement for correction, otherwise with an addition of fifty per cent.

It will also embrace a Mercantile Directory containing names of dealers, at a charge of fifty cents to each, payable at the time of subscribing.

To bring this Department more prominently before the general public, copies of the work will be gratuitously suspended for reference in the principal hotels of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other large cities. In addition, each advertiser of half a page or more may specify, at the time of subscribing, twelve hotels in any of the above cities, or such others as may be of convenient access to the publishers, where copies shall be gratuitously suspended.—A copy will also be hung up for public reference in the business place of each advertiser whose bill is promptly paid. Advertisements are to appear in all copies issued previous to December 1st, which the publishers guarantee shall not be less than 3,000 copies, if only for gratuitous distribution. No person authorized to collect without written authorization.

DEXTER & CO.,
Publishers and Printers,
17 Spruce street, New York.
86 Milk street, opposite Pearl St., Boston.
146 South Fourth street, Philadelphia.
23 tf

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess of dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing; and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
THOS. R. CROCKER,
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.

D. W. INGERSOL,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 12th, 1855.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

JAMES EDWIN HALSEY,
193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Headache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want a good and safe article.

ALBRO LYONS.
20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway; Mrs. Staat's, 78 Thompson St.; Chas. H. Ring's, 155 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

WM. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes of people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Warranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occassionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS:

EMBELLISHMENT—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or he Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihndas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture,—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by . R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James m'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by artin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J erce Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—b Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. ell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo. 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

ife of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

Th Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787-9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Associatian 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvery, aand the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the Northwest Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 294 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which places it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo, William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe,
90 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear: the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE;—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1, NO. 27 NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 1, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

The Weekly Anglo-African.
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY
BY ROBT. HAMILTON,
NO. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.
Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.
All communications for the paper must be addressed
ROBT HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

PART II.

> Hear the word!—who fight for freedom!
> Shout it in the battle van!
> Hope! for bleeding human nature
> Christ the God, is Christ the Man!
>
> H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER VI.

THE CONFRONTMENT.

Alone, early on Monday morning, ere an inmate of the premises had risen, Henry sat in the bower devising measures and the course to pursue in relation to obtaining his wife. If she could be purchased the money was ready; if not, a determination to have her at any risk had been maturely decided on. Thus was he meditating, when the Seeleys summoned him to domestic duties.

That morning Madame Garcia was stirring unusually early, having much in relation to his unruly servant to report to her brother. The maid was, in her estimation, the worst of beings—stubborn, disobedient, saucy and wicked—insisting that measures the severest, should be taken to check her in time, and subdue her spirit. She had tried every reasonable method to break her, but entirely failed in the effort. She had whipped her, pinched her, goaded her, and even smoked her and burnt her with a smoothing iron,[*] but all had failed to reach her; she was so effectually depraved and obdurate.

'She has been spoilt by her first mistress in her training, and a life-time will not now correct the error.'

'I know of no other remedy, Adelaide, than to sell her immediately off of our hands,' replied Peter Albertis to his sister. 'She is the stubbornest creature I ever had to deal with. She takes more lashing than a dog; and if you can't break her, she can't be broken.'

'There is now an opportunity to do so, Mr. Albertis, as our man Gilbert and she seem much attached, and he may make proposals to buy her,' suggested Madame Seeley, intentionally for him to profit by the hint, as he was passing at the time it was spoken.

'I decidedly object to the proposal of Madame Seeley; as she should be allowed no such privileges,' readily responded Madame Garcia.

'You can't object if she desire it, so you must make the best of a bad thing, Adelaide,' replied Albertis.

'I don't understand you, brother! Do you mean to say that we cannot do as we please with our own negroes?'

'You may think it hard, but what is law is fair, I suppose. This law gives the slave the right, whenever desirous to leave his master, to make him a tender in Spanish coin, which if he don't accept, on proof of the tender the slave may apply to the parish priest or bishop of the district, who has the right immediately to declare such slave free.'

'I'm sure I was not aware of that before.'

'Very likely, sister; but that does not make it any the less law.'

'And what is the sum that the negro must offer?'

'Four hundred and fifty dollars, I think.'

'If this is the kind of place Cuba is, I don't want to live here! We better go back to Louisiana. Why, your negro girl cost you more than twice that much!'

'Yes, I paid for her two thousand dollars cash; but it is better to get a part of my money back than lose the whole. The law in it's wisdom supposes it better to lose our property than our lives; better to let the negro have his liberty at his own expense at a price fixed by law, than have him to take his liberty and the Island by violence at the expense of our blood. Those who made the laws could probably see farther than you or I, Adelaide.'

'Then if what you say be true, I don't see what's to be gained by staying in such a country. I want to go home!'

'You might not better it by going there, for, as in Cuba, there are also many existing laws of which you know nothing. And respecting the contingencies of insurrection, you are not more safe than here. In New Orleans, as in Havana, the great gun at the fort must at a certain hour every night be fired, to intimidate and keep down the negroes; and there as here, while you are unsuspectingly sleeping in your quiet bed in seeming safety, a guard for private and public safety must be kept through the night, and even secret guards through the day, to keep in check the disposition to rebellion on the part of the slave population.'

'Then indeed must we be in a most dangerous position.'

'I know it; but hang it, it can't be helped. We must do the best we can under the circumstances, that's all.'

'I wonder all the negroes in Cuba are not free, since they have the right to purchase themselves.'

'They don't all know it, and if they did, few, comparatively could raise the means. And even now among those who have the means and desire, a given fee dropped into the hands of certain parties, impairs their memory wonderfully, making them forget the existence of such law, or the time when to proclaim it.'

'I should think that the English who are such friends to the negroes, would see that the law was strictly enforced.'

'Womanlike Adelaide, you don't understand political matters. The English have nothing to do with it, and they have no more love for negroes than for other people. They have sympathy for the negro because he is oppressed; but never help those, in a general sense, who don't help themselves. If the negroes rise and take off our heads, declaring their independence, the English will be the first to acknowledge it. But they'll never come and cut of our heads, politely handing them to the negroes. The English must see that something is done before they'll recognize the doer. Until the negro does something, the English will let him remain as he is; so don't be troubled about English negro-interference in Cuba, nor your own country.'

'Well,' said Adelaide with a deep, long sigh; 'I wish I was in Louisiana.'

Henry having been a secret auditor, found opportunity to impart to his wife the entire conversation between Albertis, his sister and Cornelia Seeley. He strictly instructed her to peremptorily refuse to live with him an hour longer, and seize an opportunity immediately of confronting him on the subject of her rights.

As if unconscious of the existing state of feelins, Maggie with the children went sauntering into the parlor.

'Well, my girl,' saluted Albertis; 'are you ready to go home with me?'

'No, sir.'

'Don't want to go, hey! then we'll find a way to make you!'

'I won't live on your place any more, and there is no use in asking me!'

'Don't let her give such impudence, brother! I'd knock her down first!' interposed Madame Garcia.

'I'll sell you, you impudent strap, to the hardest master I can find!'

'I won't serve any person any more, so I won't! and its no use to talk about selling me!' said Maggie, emboldened at the thought of freedom, knowing that her husband sustained her in it.

'I want none of your impudence here, Lot, and won't take it,' reproved Madame Garcia.

'I now demand a bill of sale of you to myself, Mr. Albertis, and tender in Spanish gold four hundred and fifty dollars!' reaching out to him the money in a careless way, which she drew from under her apron.

At this Albertis was surprised, his sister indignant, and the other two ladies highly pleased. The matter was too plain, and no longer to be ignored. Maggie knew her rights, and Albertis discovered it. Dissembling for the moment he said:

'I want more money; that's not half what I paid for you!'

'I make you a legal tender, and I'll give no more!' concluded Maggie, abruptly turning from him and walking out of the room.

'It's all over with her I see,' said Albertis; that Cuban negro has taught her this!' referring to Henry, who, on account of his fluent Spanish, was not suspected as a stranger.

'And are you going to take so small a sum as that?' inquired Madame Garcia anxiously.

'There is no use, Adelaide, in cutting off one's nose to spite his face; for the truth of the matter is, if I don't hasten to take that sum, she can decline giving me anything at all, and go to the parish priest and be declared free, in spite of all I can say or do!'

'There seems then to be no chance for us Americans here, except in the prospect of a patriotic movement?'

'But little reliance can be placed in them, a set of disatisfied, irresponsible American intruders, who only stir up strife to the danger of life and property.'

'Are not the patriots the Creoles?'

'They assume the name of Creole, but are little short of marauding foreigners. The negroes are the main stay of Cuba, and can never be induced to join the patriots, who, as soon as they got the Island, would deny the negroes the rights they now have. I know this information is against me, but you must be made sensible of your true position here, that when trouble comes you may the better be prepared to meet it.'

'But why should the Spanish government in the event of a loss of the Island, prefer a negro to a white dominion? This I confess I cannot comprehend.'

'Simply because the negroes are more docile, contented, religious and happy. They are civil, and more easily governed as a race than the Anglo-Americans; hence they make better subjects, being more submissive than they.'

In half an hour after the withdrawal of Maggie from the parlor, Albertis presented the following document, which was hastily executed and delivered.

> CASTILIAN HACIENDA,
> [*]ISLE OF CUBA, April 16, 1853.
>
> Received of my girl Lotty, of zambo complexion, calling herself Lotty Holland, formerly my slave, the sum of four hundred and fifty dollars legal tender, as purchase money for herself; by which act she is manumitted,[†] set free and enfranchised, according to the laws of Cuba, made and provided for in such cases.
>
> Signed PETER ALBERTIS,
> Proprietor of El Passo Hacienda.
>
> Witness { AUGUSTUS SEELEY,
> CORNELIA SEELEY,
> CELIA BONSELLE.

Adelaide Garcia refusing to witness the transaction, had gone into the lawn, while Garcia, Paul and Spencer, who from the first intended being only silent spectators to the whole, sat silently watching the proceedings.

The long desired end being attained—the dearest object of his desires, his wife found, her freedom obtained, and having secured this simple 'magna charta' of her liberty, Henry was among the happiest of men.

A private interview was had with the Seeleys, in which he made known his intention of leaving them, and they having no idea of the relation between them, supposed his intention was to unite with the maid in wedlock. Intending to leave immediately for America to remain in the country but a fortnight, the Seeleys at once proposed that the two accompany them as man and maid servants, as Seeley had inherited a large estate which for several years had been available. Money to him was not an object; the happiness of his wife being his only concern; and Henry had but to name his terms, which would readily be complied with. This the man as yet to them unknown, declined, preferring, as he stated rather for the time to remain awhile at Havana. He proposed to them instead, the arrangement of bringing with them a man and maid servant and two small boys;—one the child of the servants and the other a black boy eight years old, no relation, whom they might keep subject to his guardianship, until such times as he should himself have use for him. The man and maid servants proposed to be bought, would be left to their own choice. The restrictions being great concerning foreign negroes and mulattoes, Henry having gone into Cuba as a creole, that as soon as they boarded the vessel at New York on return, the servants should be claimed as their slaves, the custom being common in America to take slave servants to the free states, their masters instructing them to pass as free people. Madame Seeley was to have the boy as her page, but strictly to instruct him and attend to his morals. The persons would meet the Seeleys in the city, so soon as intelligence reached them through the friend to whom he would give them a note, enclosed to the care of the intelligencer who procured for them his services.

Everything having been well understood, the following, is a copy of the notes borne by the hands of the Seeleys, superscribed to the proprietor of the intelligence office:

> B. A. P., Esq., New York, U. S.—
>
> DEAR SIR:—Enclosed please find two letters, one addressed to our mutual friend, C. R——h, who called to see me; the old veteran in the cause of the runaway slave, which you will please hand to him; and the other to Rev. W. Mon——, of Detroit, Mich., which you will have mailed to him. Any assistance you can give to Lieutenant Seeley and lady, will very much oblige
>
> Yours respectfully,
> GILBERT.
>
> CUBA, April, 1853.
>
> P. S.—You will remember having procured a place for me to go with a party to Cuba, some time since. G.

The letter addressed to C. R——h, the slave's old friend in New York read thus:

> ISLE OF CUBA, April, 1853.
>
> C. R——H—MY DEAR SIR:
>
> This letter is enclosed in a note to our friend, B. A. P., of the intelligence office, in Leonard st.; borne by a gentleman and lady, Lieutenant Augustus Seeley and his wife, Madame Cornelia Seeley, with whom I came to Cuba when I left you. A mulatto man and his wife a quadroon woman, and two little boys—a small brown child, said to be their own, and a little black boy some eight years of age, no relation to them—will come to you from the neighborhood of Windsor, Canada West, sent on by that excellent, pious friend of the slave and his race, Rev. W. Mon——. Their names are Charles and Polly Tiptoe, who are to come to Cuba as servants to the Seeleys; for whom you need have no fears, as the lieutenant and his excellent lady have proven themselves the best of friends, and worthy of all confidence. Some day perhaps you may be surprised to learn who I am; but until then,
>
> I am very Respect'ly, GILBERT.

The Detroit letter read

> NEW YORK, April, 1853.
>
> REV. W. MON——MY VERY DEAR FRIEND:—The mere thought of your name produces in me emotions. You will please call over to the settlement as soon as possible, see our people there, and tell Charles Tiptoe and his wife to come immediately and bring my little son Joe, and little Tony to New York. The particulars will be made known to you hereafter. Console the old people by giving them to understand that I must either have got my wife, or am certain of doing so, else I would not send for the children; and that they will all hear in due season from me. Tell Charles to bring with him all the available money he has, but none of the others must come with him. Love to the old people particularly, also Andy and Clara, Eli, Ailcey and Ambrose. That you may know the letter is genuine, I fix my mark.
>
> Some day, my dearest of friends, I shall be able to do, and you will know me other than as now, your ever indebted and very grateful runaway slave, HENRY.
>
> P. S.—To prevent all traces of me, I assumed the name of Gilbert, my old traveling name after I left you, which is the only name by which I am known here. Should you hereafter hear of my whereabouts, it must be strictly kept to yourself, not even Andy and Eli are to know it till I am ready to inform them. G.

With cheerfulness receiving this billet addressed to the New York agent, a reciprocal hearty shake of the hands, and wish by the Seeleys for the happy union of Gilbert and Lotty against their return, they left for Havana early next morning en route for New York, there to celebrate their nuptials, and Henry and Maggie in another diligence in the afternoon of the same day, also proceeded direct to the city.

CHAPTER VII.

OBSCURITY.

On their arrival in Havana, Henry found lodgings for himself and wife in an obscure but very respectable old black family, consisting of man and wife, with a half grown adopted daughter, the wife too aged to do the active services of the family; the husband being a stevadore, made his means by superintending the loading of vessels at the quay, by the employment of large numbers of men. The house was in an obscure and retired locality, the family being, seemingly, without acquaintances or visitors.

This evening the Omnipotence of God was satisfactorily verified and established to depart from them 'no more forever,' in the living reality, as they sat together in the neat and comfortable little back-room assigned them in the humble abode of old man Zoda and wife Huldah Ghu.

Here was told that unparalleled tale of sorrow, to a husband never expected again to be seen by the wife; and his narrated facts, unequalled in the living history of a slave, concerning the determined efforts of that husband to reach the wife, and rescue her from thraldom at the risk of every consequence.

Goaded and oppressed by a master known to be her own father, under circumstances revolting to humanity, civilization and christianity, she had been ruthlessly torn from her child, husband and mother, and sold to a foreign land, all because, by the instincts of nature; if by the honor of a wife and womanhood she had not been justified; she repelled him. Sold again to a severe mistress, then to a heartless, cruel man for the worst of designs, by whom she had been almost daily beaten, frequently knocked down, kicked and stamped on, once struck and left for dead, and even smoked and burnt to subdue her. During these sufferings and those untold, her faith had often faltered, and she had staggered at the thought of, believing that 'God was no respecter of persons.'

Maddened to desperation at the tearing away of his wife during his absence from her child and home, he had confronted his master at the hazard of life, been set upon the auction block in the midst of an assemblage of anxious slavetraders, escaped being sold, traversed the greater part of the slave*holding States, amid dangers* the most imminent; been pursued, taken, and escaped, frequently during which time, he, too, had his faith much shaken, and found his dependence in Divine aid wavering. But God to them, however their unworthiness, had fully made manifest Himself, and established their faith in His promises, by again permitting them to meet each other under circumstances so singular and extraordinary.

The heartbroken look, hopeless countenance, languid eye, and dejected appearance of the gray-haired, apparently aged, sorrow stricken Lotty, the nurse of Adelaide Garcia, was now succeeded by the buoyant spirit, handsome smile, and brilliant eyed Maggie Holland, though the sunken sockets, and gray smitten hairs still remained, which time and circumstances would doubtless much improve.

'God be thanked for this privilege!' said Henry, as he sat with his wife leaning upon his knees, looking in his face, her right hand resting on his shoulder, his left supporting her waist.

'God's name be praised!' responded Maggie both laughing and crying at the same time.

Henry here, as rapidly as possible, detailed to her his plans and schemes; and the next day imparted his grand design upon Cuba. At this information she was much alarmed, and could not comprehend that an ordinary man and American slave such as he, should project such an undertaking.

'Never mind, wife, you will know better by-and-by,' was the only answer he would give, with a smile, at his wife's searching inquiries.

'Oh, husband don't have anything to do with it; as we are now both free and happy, let us attend to our own affairs. I think you have done enough.'

'I am not free, wife, by their acknowledgment, as you are, but have escaped; they can take me whenever they catch me.'

'I think, then, you might let them alone.'

'As God lives, I will avenge your wrongs; and not until they let us alone—cease to steal away our people from their native country and oppress us in their own—will I let them alone. They shall only live while I live, under the most alarming apprehensions. Our whole race among them must be brought to this determination, and then, and not till then, will they fear and respect us.'

'I don't know, husband, I may be wrong, and I expect you will say so; but I think our people had better not attempt any such thing, but be satisfied as we are among the whites, and God, in His appointed time, will do what is required.'

'My dear wife, you have much yet to learn in solving the problem of this great question of the destiny of our race. I'll give you one to work out at your leisure; it is this: Whatever liberty is worth to the whites, it is worth to the blacks; therefore, whatever it cost the whites to obtain it, the blacks should be willing and ready to pay, if they desire it. Work out this question in political arithmetic at your leisure, wife, and by the time you get through and fully understand the rule, then you will be ready to discuss the subject further with me.' Maggie smiled and sighed, but said no more on the subject.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE INTERVIEW—BLAKE.

Having placed his money in the keeping of his wife, Henry suggested that, having enjoyed a good rest of two days pleasure in her company, a visit in the city to make some acquaintances was indispensable at such a juncture.

His first object was to find the residence of the distinguished poet of Cuba, Placido; being directed to a large building occupied below, in the upper story of which was the study of the poet. On giving a light tap at the door, a voice in a somewhat suppressed but highly musical tone, said: 'Come in!' On entering, the stare of a person of slender form, lean and sinewy, rather morbid, orange-peel complexion, black hair hanging lively quite to the shoulders, heavy deep brow and full moustache, with great expressive black piercing eyes, with pen in hand sitting with right side to the table looking over the left shoulder toward the door, occupied the study.

'Be seated, sir!' said the yellow gentleman, as Henry politely bowing raised his cap, advancing toward the table.

'I am looking, sir, for the proprietor of the room,' said Henry.

'I am the person,' replied the gentleman.

'The poet, sir, I believe,' continued he.

'I may not answer your expectation, sir!' modestly answered the gentleman.

'Your name, sir?' inquired Henry.

'Placido,' was the reply; at which Henry rose to his feet, respectfully bowing.

'May I inquire your name?' asked the poet.

'Blacus, sir,' replied he.

'A familiar name to me. Many years ago I had a cousin of that name, an active, intelligent youth, the son of a wealty black tobacco, cigar, and snuff manufacturer, who left school and went to sea, since when his parents still living, who doted in him with high hopes of his future usefulness, have known nothing of him,' explained Placido.

'What was his Christian name, sir?'

'Carolus Henrico.'

'Cousin, don't you know me?' said Henry in a familiar voice, after nearly twenty years absence; 'I am Carolus Henrico Blacus, your cousin and school-mate, who nineteen years ago went to the Mediterranean. I dropped Carolus and Anglicised my name to prevent identity, going by the name of Henry Blake.'

'Is it delusion or reality!' replied Placido with emotion.

'It is reality. I am the lost boy of Cuba,' said Henry; when they mutually rushed into each others arms.

'Where in God's name have you been, cousin Henry—and what have you been doing?'

'My story, Placido, is easily told—the particulars you may get from one who will be more ready than I to give you details.'

'Who is that you——'

'I will tell you presently; but first to my story. When I left father's house at the age of seventeen, I went to sea on what I believed to be a Spanish man of war. I was put as apprentice, stood before the mast, the ship standing east for the Western coast of Africa, as I thought for the Mediterranean. On arriving on the coast, she put into the Bight of Benin near Wydah; was freighted with slaves—her true character then being but too well known—when she again put to sea, standing as I thought for Cuba, but instead, put into Key West, where she quickly disposed of her cargo to Americans. My expression of dissatisfaction at being deceived, offended the commander, who immediately sold me to a noted trader on the spot—one Col. Franks, of Mississippi, near Natchez. He seized me under loud and solemn protest, collared and choked me, declaring me to be his slave. By recommendations from the commander whose name was Maria Gomez, that I would become a good sailor, I was left with him, to return as apprentice to marine services, making three voyages, returning with as many cargoes, once to Brazil, once more to Key West, and once to Matanzas, Cuba, each of which times I was put in irons on landing, and kept in close confinement during the vessel's stay lest I ran away. The last cargo was taken to Key West, where Franks was in waiting, when a final settlement of the affairs resulted in my being taken by him to the United States, and there held as a slave, where in a few years I became enamored with a handsome young slave girl, a daughter of his (the mother being a black slave) married, have one living child, and thus entangled, had only to wait and watch an opportunity for years to do what has just now been affected,' narrated Henry to the astonishment of his intelligent auditor, who, during the time, stood pen in hand, with eyes fixed upon him.

'Just God!' exclaimed Placido; 'how merciful He is! Who could have believed it! And you are also a sailor, Henry!'

'I am, cousin; and have served the hardest apprenticeship at the business, I do assure you; I have gone through all the grades, from common seaman to first mate, and always on the coast had full command, as no white men manage vessels in the African waters, that being entirely given up to the blacks.'

'I really was not aware of that before; you surprise me!' said Placido.

'That is so! every vessel of every nation, whether trader or man of war, so soon as they enter African waters are manned and managed by native blacks, the whites being unable to stand the climate.'

'That, then, opens up to me an entirely new field of thought.'

'And so it does. It did to me, and I've no doubt it does so to every man of thought, black or white.'

'Give me your hand, Henry'—both clasping hands—'now by the instincts of our nature, and mutual sympathy in the common cause of our race, pledge to me on the hazard of our political destiny what you intend to do.'

'Placido, the hazard is too much! were it lost, the price is too great—I could not pay it. But I read across the water, in a Cuba journal at New Orleans, a lyric from your pen, in which the fire of liberty blazed as from the altar of a freeman's heart. I therefore make no hazard when I this to you impart: I have come to Cuba to help to free my race; and that which I desire here to do, I've done in another place.'

'Amen!' exclaimed Placido; 'Heaven certainly designed it, and directed you here at this most auspicious moment, that the oppressed of Cuba also may 'declare the glory of God!'

'Have you thought much in that direction, Placido?'

'I have, though I've done but little, and had just finished the last word of the last stanza of a short poem intended to be read at a social gathering to be held at the house of a friend one evening this week, which meets for the express purpose of maturing some plan of action.'

'Read it.'

'I will; tell me what you think of it:

> Were I a slave I would be free!
>   I would not live to live a slave;
> But rise and strike for liberty,
>   For Freedom, or a martyr's grave!
>
> One look upon the bloody scourge,
>   Would rouse my soul to brave the fight,
> And all that's human in me urge,
>   To battle for my innate right!
>
> One look upon the tyrant's chains,
>   Would draw my sabre from its sheath,
> And drive the hot blood through my veins,
>   To rush for liberty or death!
>
> One look upon my tortured wife,
>   Shrieking beneath the driver's blows,
> Would nerve me on to desp'rate strife,
>   Nor would I spare her dastard foes!
>
> Arm'd with the vindicating brand,
>   For once the tyrant's heart should feel;
> No milk-sop plea should stay my hand,
>   The slave's great wrong would drive the steel!
>
> Away the unavailing plea!
>   Of peace, the tyrant's blood to spare:
> If you would set the captive free,
>   Teach him for freedom bold to dare!
>
> To throw his galling fetters by,
>   To wing the cry on every breath,
> Determined manhood's conquering cry,
>   For Justice, Liberty, or death!

'If Heaven decreed my advent here—and I believe it did—it was to have my spirits renewed and soul inspired by that stimulating appeal, such as before never reached the ear of a poor, weary, faltering bondman, Placido. I thank God that it has been my lot to hear it, culled fresh from your fertile brain. Were there but a smouldering spark nearly extinguished in the smothered embers of my doubts and fears, it is now kindled into a flame, which can only be quenched by the regenerating waters of unconditional emancipation.'

'Ah, cousin, though you consider us here free—those I mean who are not the slaves of some white man—I do assure you that my soul as much as yours pants for a draft from the fountain of liberty! We are not free, but merely exist by suffrance—a miserable life for intelligent people, to be sure!'

'You, Placido, are the man for the times!'

'Don't flatter, Henry; I'm not.'

'You are, and its no flattery to say so. The expression of an honest conviction is not flattery. When the spirits of the Christian begin to droop, to hear the word of life, is refreshing to the soul. That is precisely my case at present.'

'Then you have the vital spark in you?'

'Ah, Placido, I often think of the peaceful hours I once enjoyed at the common altar of the professing Christian. I then believed in what was popularly termed religion, as practised in all the slave States of America; I was devoted to my church, and loved to hear on a Sabbath, the word of God spoken by him whom I believed to be a man of God. But how sadly have I been deceived! I still believe in God, and have faith in His promises; but serving Him in the way that I was, I had only the shadow without the substance,—the religion of my oppressors. I thank God that He timely opened my eyes.'

'In this, Henry, I believe you are right; I long since saw it, but you are clear on the subject. I had not thought so much as that.'

'Then as we agree, let us at once drop the religion of our oppressors, and take the Scriptures for our guide and Christ as our example.'

'What difference will that make to us? I merely ask for information, seeing you have matured the subject.'

'The difference will be just this, Placido—that we shall not be disciplined in our worship, obedience as slaves to our masters, the slaveholders, by associating in our mind with that religion, submission to the oppressor's will.'

'I see, Henry, it is plain; and every day convinces me that we have much yet to learn to fit us for freedom.'

'I differ with you, Placido; we know enough now, and all that remains to be done, is to make ourselves free, and then put what we know into practice. We know much more than we dare attempt to do. We want space for action—elbow room; and in order to obtain it, we must shove our oppressors out of the way.'

Heaven has indeed, I repeat, decreed your advent here to——'

'Learn of you!' interrupted Henry.

'No; but to teach us just what we needed,' replied Placido.

'God grant us, then, a successful harmony of sentiment!' responded Henry.

'Grant that we may see eye to eye!' exclaimed Placido.

'Amen, amen!' concluded Henry when relinquishing hands they mutually clasped, embracing in each others arms.

'Tell me now, cousin, to whom did you allude when you first came in, as the person from whom I should obtain details of your life?'

'My wife.'

'Is she here?'

'She is,' replied Henry, relating all the particulars of their separation and reunion.

'Where have you got her?'

'At the house of an old family, west of the Plaza; Zoda and Huldah Ghu are their names; the man is a stevedore.'

'She must not remain there.'

'Why?' asked Henry.

'I deem it an unsafe quarter under the circumstances—that's all,' suggested Placido.

'Then she is committed to your charge. Come with me to see her.'

'Gladly will I do so; but tell me this before we leave—whither are you bound, cousin?'

'I go directly to Matanzas, to take out a slaver as sailing master, with the intention of taking her in mid ocean as a prize for ourselves, as we must have a vessel at our command before we make a strike. She is also freighted with powder for Dahomi, with several fine field pieces, none of which, I learned were to be disposed of, but safely deposited at the slaver's rendezvous in an island which I know off the African coast, for future use in trade. I am well acquainted with the native Krumen on the coast, many of the heads of whom speak several European tongues, and as sailing-master, I can obtain as many as I wish, who will make a powerful force in carrying out my scheme on the vessel.'

'I thank God for this interview. Henry, I thank God. Come, let's go and see your wife,' said Placido in conclusion, when they left the poet's study for the hut of Zoda Ghu, back of the Plazas.

LETTER FROM REV. S. V. BERRY TO REV. J. T. HOLLY.

To the Rev. J. T. Holly, Missionary at Drouillard, Hayti.

In a letter written by you, and published in the "Pine and Palm," of date Dec. 21st ult., I am surprised to find my name included with others whom you charge with attempting to magnify the sufferings of the New Haven Colony in Hayti, by disseminating false and exaggerated reports in relation to the condition of the emigrants.

In that letter you take particular pains to single me out as your chief victim for the world's odium, by charging me with the fabrication of the report of the death of Mrs. Rosanna Cook. This report you publicly charge me with having "manufactured" and "circulated."—And this charge you make, not on the ground of your personal knowledge of the truth of what you assert, but simply on the ipse dixit of a man known by you to be of doubtful veracity. Now this act on your part is in every respect, and in the fullest sense a case of slander: It is slander premeditated and "manufactured" by the missionary of Drouillard and "circulated" abroad in the world to wound the cause of religion and injure the fair fame of his brother minister and successor at New Haven. You may deny being the author of this slander, but that you are the publisher of it is an undeniable fact—and the publisher of a known slander is in every respect as bad as the author.

You say that Mr. Cook informed you that the Rev. S. V. Berry certified him

---

[*] This cruelty of fastening slaves in a tight room, smoking them with burning rags, and burning them with a hot smoothing iron, has often been done in the South.

[*] The time of Henry's sale in Mississippi, and all of the circumstances, antecede the dates given by several years.

[†] Manumitted, set free and enfranchised—the terms used in the free papers of manumitted persons in America.

him of the death of his wife, "on some special information which he claimed to have received from Hayti.

Now so far from ever having made such pretensions or communicated such a report to Mr. Cook, I do most solemnly affirm that I have never to my knowledge seen him neither have I at any time or in any manner had any communication with him.

The report of Mrs. Cook's death originated with Mr. Cooke himself. This fact is publicly known in New Haven, as well as the circumstances connected with it. The period at which Mr. Cook pretended to have received a letter from Hayti, with the sad intelligence of the death of Mrs. Cook, is remembered by many who went to see him, and found him apparently in great distress of mind. Mr. Cook's motive in making this report was money; for I was told by a clergyman who went to see him, that immediately on the day following the pretended report he commenced selling his wife's furniture, etc. and even made an attempt to mortgage her real estate. I will spare the feelings of his wife, who is said to be an excellent woman, by drawing a veil over what followed the sale. I will only add, this is the man upon whose veracity you publish me to the world as a manufacturer of false reports. The business of blackening the character of the innocent is very poor employment. especially for a minister of the gospel: and any one who engages in the retail of second-hand slander must be badly off for better business. It is a terrible stoop, a wonderful condescension of the dignity of the ministry to come down to such work. It is not the Master's work.

Your attack on the reputation of Loren Brooks is another very ungenerous act. It is not only ungenerous, but it is unjust.—Even the lady upon the evidence of whose letter you pretend to convict Mr. Brooks of falsehood declares that you must have misunderstood the reading of her letter. Mr. Brooks is a young man of honesty and integrity, and it is cruel in any man to seek to blacken his character in order to gratify his own private animosity. All this I suppose you have inflicted upon him because he would not stay in Hayti with you and "brave death." For the same reason I presume you stigmatise Abram J. Morrison, Jacob Jones, Loren Brooks, Mrs. Mary. O Monroe, and her two boys Rhinehart and Blanchard, as DESERTERS, because ill health compelled them to return to their native land. On the same principle you would brand disabled soldiers as deserters. If the Haytian government permits emigrants to return, I cannot see whence you derive your authority to brand them with the stigma of deserters. If you manifest the same reckless, overbearing, domineering and haughty spirit at Drouillard which your letters exhibit towards us, I think you will frequently have occasion to complain of deserters.

Take the advice of an elder brother, "leave off wrath." "Lay aside all bitterness." Write in the spirit of love and gentleness and kindness. Give earnest heed to your calling as a minister of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Be assured that we have no desire to magnify your sufferings. We deplore them. Many of your friends in the United States feel to sympathise with you if you would let them. But your sweeping denunciations against us stifles the sympathy of your best and warmest friends.

No intelligent colored person having a due sense of honor can read your sweeping denunciations against your brethren of the United States, without a flush of honest indignation. No rebel trader of the South has used language of more insulting import to the loyal North. Remember the advice of Dr. James Mc Cune Smith to you:—"Don't let your words run away with you." And I would add,—Let not the impulse of misdirected zeal destroy you.

Yours fraternally,

S. V. BERRY.

New Haven, Ct. Jan. 16, 1862.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 1, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

A Speech and a Comment.

In a report of the second day's proceedings of the twenty-ninth anniversary of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society, in the New York "Daily Times," of Jan. 26th, we find the following:—

"Mr. Remond of Salem, (colored,) who spoke so excitedly yesterday, took the platform at the conclusion of Mr. Phillips' brief address, and gave us what was in reality a great treat. He was filled with the spirit of his theme, and evidently felt all that he said, as he stood pleading that the country which recognizes Irishmen, Germans and English would also recognize manhood in the persons of 4,000,000 blacks who are not foreigners, but who are born here, live here, are identified with the prosperity of the country, and have no desire for the success of any country but the land of their birth. He did not feel hopeful in view of the present aspect of affairs; he felt blue; he was conscious every day that he belongs to a despised race, and one that was not loved by the American people. He was sure that the deep damnation of the American people is its utter disregard of the principle of freedom, and he knew that he did not exaggerate when he said that the prevailing feeling among Northern men is, let the niggers go to the d—l, if by that means our trade may be secured and our profits unimpaired. "Gracious God," said he, with an outbursting agony, "who can the black man trust outside of this hall? Who is there that cares for him, who that regards him, who that will protect him? Nobody, nobody, so help me God."

Is it no more than fair to say, that the sight of an earnest black man, standing up nobly before a vast audience of white men, earnestly pleading for the good of his race, does and did more for the success of the cause than all the speeches of all the men who have on this or any other occasion taken up the cudgels for him."

The burden of Mr. Remond's speech was true and natural so far as he is personally concerned: he might have said there is no one inside of this hall on whom the black man can rely for protection or succor, with perhaps a single exception. For twenty-five or six years Mr. Remond has been, and is, after the strictest sect, a Garrisonian Abolitionist; he labored in its early movements most faithfully: he bore the brunt of the calumnies and oppression, the mobbings, the hootings, the assaults which were heaped upon that noble band in the times of 1834–7. He shared its poverty, its obloquy, and stood side by side with its foremost men, always distinguished by a bold and undaunted front and a fiery yet polished eloquence peculiarly his own. So constant, so faithful, has he been that we do not call to mind a single instance in which he has met with rebuke from his iron-willed chief, nor any of the subordinates. And now when the flower of his youth, and the strength of his manhood have been devoted to exalt this party; now when the chills of approaching age begin to damp the ardor of his mind, and when winter-time begins to stare him in the face; now that the party claims success and feels triumphant, he feels no joy warming up his heart—and why?

It is because he feels alone. He has not been made—he an equal sharer in its dark days of penury—an equal sharer in the good things which have recently fallen to the lot of his white brother Abolitionists. Rich Abolitionists, dying, have made handsome bequests to their white Abolition brethren, but have forgotten entirely their black Abolition brother: or, if they have remembered him at all, it is after the fashion in which white men generally recollect black men in their wills. Mr. Garrison is made pecuniarily comfortable with a snug remainder for his family. Why should not Mr. Remond be at least smiled upon with a few thousand dollars?

But while Mr. Remond's speech may be very true in regard to himself personally, it is not true in regard to the blacks generally. When he asks, "Who can the black man trust outside of this hall?" We answer promptly, HE CAN TRUST HIMSELF. The black man is his own best friend: the most reliable, most certain, most efficient under God. The black man is big enough, strong enough, numerous enough, and ugly enough (if he choose to frown and fight), to take the best care of himself. He has mistaken his power too long; he has thought that power lay in exciting sympathy for his condition, so abject, so degraded: but he is growing out of that mistake most rapidly. The real secret of his power is self-reliance, self-dependence, made up with a determined and united front. The history of to-day, truly written, will show that in our land the black has passed out away from a dependent or parasitic state. Instead of leaning upon white men, the whites lean upon him. He does not now, and never did need protection. All he needed was, and all he needs is—fair play; unless his horoscope greatly errs, a few months more will give him fair play—and then if our fairer cousins choose to compete, rather than assimilate with us, we say, as Casius M. Clay once said on this very subject, "The devil take the hindmost."

Let us hear of no more "wailing" for support, succor, or trust: it betrays conscious imbecility to crave such things. Let us keep a good look out, and our eye teeth cut, and we will have our own sooner perhaps than we shall feel fully prepared to enjoy it.

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18th, 1862.

MR. EDITOR: We have had in the week just past all most every kind of weather; for instance, Sunday last was a bright, clear day, very warm, the thermometer at mid-day and in open air stood at 74 degrees; and on Tuesday at noon, stood 25 degrees, showing a difference in the temperature in 48 hours of 49 degrees. During the period named, we have had snow, hail, rain, freezing, thawing, and mud in abundance; and so sudden have been the changes in the atmosphere, that almost every one we meet complain of bad colds. The small-pox has not as yet abated, but is raging fearfully in the city, and many are falling under its influence. The typhoid fever seems to have abated to a considerable degree since the weather has become cold; but among children the measles is very prevalent. So great is the fear entertained by our people for the small-pox, that almost every one you come in contact with have a strong odor of asafœtida, camphor and tar combined, and worn about their persons as a preventitive against this disease.

We learn that a rich literary treat is in store. The Young Ladies Literary Association has invited the Rev. Wm. H. Gillard, of E street chapel A. M. E. Church, to deliver before their institution a lecture, and that Mr. Gillard has accepted. This lecture will come off on Friday evening next, at the residence of Mrs. Simmons in L street. This lecture was to have come off on Friday evening last, but was postponed on account of the inclement state of the weather. The ladies have indeed shown wisdom in their excellent selection of a lecturer, for Mr. Gillard is a gentleman of fine literary acquirements, and is an agreeable speaker, and one every way capable of filling, with credit to himself and pleasure and instruction to the ladies, the important trust reposed in him. You may think it strange, Mr. Editor, that I have not in some of my previous letters noticed this association, among others that I have from time to time spoken of; but the reason is that never until now did your humble correspondent know of the existence of such a society, although between your correspondent and the rev. and worthy President an intimacy of the most friendly character has long existed. I do promise you that I will in future furnish you with a report of its debates, lectures, essays, and any public or general proceedings that might be interesting. I do hope that at the next meeting of the society an appropriation of two dollars will be made from the treasury to pay one year's subscription to the ANGLO AFRICAN; for all such societies should, at least, rally around and support so dear a paper and literary gem.

Among the distinguished strangers that arrived in town the past week are Mrs. Harriet Parks, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and the Rev. Charles J. Carter, of Canada West. The latter has been lecturing here in several colored churches in a very acceptable manner—particularly at Zion Wesley Church (Island), Rev. Mr. Hamer, Pastor.

On Monday night, at 12 o'clock, a dreadful fire took place in a row of frame buildings situated above M street, owned and occupied by colored families. It appears that in the house owned and occupied by a Mr. Joseph Lee a child was sick with the measels; a candle was set on a chair near the bed-side by the mother of the child on going to bed, and it is supposed that she must have placed the light too near the bed, for when the mother was awakened by the screams of the child, she found the room filled with smoke, and her bed enveloped in flames; she seized the child, and with the rest of the inmates barely escaped with her life. The fire spread with such rapidity that the adjoining house, owned by Mr. John H. Brown and occupied by Mr. Judson Dover and his daughter Miss Sarah E. Dover, dress maker, and Mr. George Dover, an invalid, who was compelled to go out in the inclement weather after being confined to his room for the past three months, was soon in flames. The fire soon reached Mr. Thomas Cross's house, and his family too, although sick, was compelled to go out in the rain and snow. The fourth and last house was that of Mr. Edward Ambush, who also lost all of his effects. The loss falls very heavily on these people, for their property was gained by years of toil and days of hard labor. But behold, it vanished in an hour! The loss is estimated to be between $4000 and $4500; Messrs. Brown and Ambush being the only parties insured.

On Monday night last the Hon. Owen Lovejoy entertained a colored audience at Israel Church; I was not present, but have been furnished a sketch of his lecture by my friend Mr. Wm. E. Mathews, which I herewith send.

BOX.

LETTER FROM NEWARK.

MR. EDITOR: We are pleased to learn that there is a society being organized in the Plane street church, to be called the Elymus P. Rogers Literary Association, of the City of Newark, and will be composed of ladies and gentlemen. Essays and lectures will be written and delivered, and discussions on various subjects will be had. An institution of this kind has been much needed here, particularly among the young people.

On Wednesday evening last we had a wedding here. The happy couple were Mr. John Talmadge and Miss Mary Tiebout. The festivities passed off very pleasantly. On the following Sunday they appeared at church, making a very fine appearance.

At the close of the afternoon services at Plane street church, Mr. Giles, the Superintendant of the Sabbath School, a position held by him for twenty-four years, tendered his resignation; consequently the school which has been distinct from the morning school, will now be merged into it, and conducted by the members of the church.

The A. M. E. Church, Catherine street, has been holding protracted meetings for two weeks past, and much interest has been awakened, and many persons have been brought to a saving knowledge of the truth. Preaching has been had every evening by clergymen from New York and other places, as well as of this city.

ISAAC TEMBROOK.

LETTER FROM BALTIMORE.

Baltimore, Jan 27th, 1862.

DEAR ANGLO,—Some two or three weeks have passed since we last wrote you, but there has been, and still is such a scarcity of news, that we scarcely know of what to write. Miss E T. Greenfield,—the Black Swan—assisted by Mme. Brown, gave a series of concerts at various places in this city; the last on Wednesday 22d, at Temperance Hall. All were well attended by delighted audiences. The last was attended by a large majority of the Michigan Regiment, now encamped on Prospect Hill, this city. Miss G. and Mme. B. left here on Thursday last.

On Monday 13th inst. we had the pleasure of listening to a very able lecture on "The Languages," by the Rev. H. M. Turner, delivered by request before the Galbreath Lyceum of this city. The subject was treated in an able and felicitous manner by the lecturer, and evinced a deep research into that much neglected branch of study.

Dr. H. J. Brown, has been giving a series of Phrenological and Physiological lectures in this city, and also treating cases of disease. He lectures this evening before the Galbreath Lyceum.

The election of officers for the Baltimore Lyceum resulted in the election of Mr. Thos. Gaskins, Prest., and Miss Elizabeth Ccniok, Vice Prest. (re-elected). The ladies connected with the Waters Chapel Fair gave a concert on Thursday evening last (23d) which was very well attended. Prof. H. W. Webb presided at the piano. The vocalists were Mrs. E. Tilghman, Baltimore's Favorite, Misses Brown, Offor, Naile, Nicholson and Getch, and mr. E. Fleetwood. The concert was made up of Solos Duetts and Trios, and several of the performers were encored.

MAJOR.

A WORD FROM BROOKLYN.

MR. EDITOR:—As you are ever anxious to know what is going on in our little village, Brooklyn, alongside of your great Gotham, I will tell you, if you promise not to divulge the secret, lest Ethiop might hear it. In a cosy little place, somewhere in the once classic region of High street, for there once did Ethiop teach the young ideas how to trail the trellises that reach to the fair summit of science, is Madame Ross with her vigorous little school, playing away quite heartily in her good work. Last week, in her own quiet way, in the presence of a few invited guests, she gave an exercise of her pupils, distributed her well selected tokens of merit, and richly feasted her gay little companions and sent them home with their parents, happier and better for being brought together. Now, what I am going to tell you, Mr. Editor;—don't let it go in at one ear and out at the other, but let it sink deep into your editorial heart: that this school of Madame Ross, if she is encouraged, is bound to triumph.

A VISITOR.

DR. DELANY ON HAYTIAN EMIGRATION.

TO PROF. M. H. FREEMAN of Avery College:

MY DEAR SIR:—Having been the second time inquired of by you for my opinion of the Haitien Emigration enterprise, and knowing that you entertain a high opinion of its Superintending Manager in America, I conceive it due to give you a candid reply, knowing that you are earnestly inquiring for information.

I have studiously avoided touching this subject, because shortly after my arrival in America a year ago, presuming on my acquaintance with and the friendship of intelligent gentlemen in connection with it, I simply ventered an opinion of the policy by which it was commenced and managed—though favorable to my friends—when I met with such unexpected and unmerited severities; though at the expense of sharing in common with my race the humiliation of submitting to the most fatal errors and blunders by which any people ever were attempted to be misled; I had concluded never to touch the subject again.

Abstractly considered I have no objection to Haitien Emigration. Regarding it in the light of choosing one's own rulers, seeking self-government, aiding our self-emancipated brethren to sustain a Black Nationality, (or Colored, if that adjective be prefered,) I agree with it; it is my favorite theme and policy, and you and I endorsed it long before the gentleman conducting that enterprise ever saw America, or Haiti, or probably a black person at all. And if it be to enter into the more elevated and profitable industrial pursuits, and thereby become contributors to the social and commercial relations of society and the world, as well as recipients of the benefits arising from these relations; to this I cheerfully subscribe. To none of these things do I object.

My objection is to the fearful manner in which our people are being misled into the belief that Haiti presents the natural advantages and facilities for a great and powerful nation. A more ridiculously radical error never was committed, and charity compels me to believe that it is honestly done.

The directors of the destiny of our race must not only be well acquainted with all our relations, past and present, but must understand the great international policies of the world, and the motives and designs by which the ruling nations are actuated, and doubtless the political economists and statesmen of the day laugh to scorn the idea that the blacks who go to Haiti entertain the expectation of that island ever becoming one of the national powers of the earth. Our leaders must be of our own race.

Territorial domain and population are the essential elements of a great nationality, and no country which has these only to a very limited extent, can ever become great and powerful.

Haiti is a small island, with no prospect or probability of additional territory, and consequently must always have a limited population, the resources of whom must become less as they increase in numbers; that is, the means to sustain the government must decrease by the resources being divided among a greater number of people. This is not all.

The ational policy of the ruling powers of Europe is determinedly opposed to the self-government of the black races, and the recent seisure of Spain upon two-thirds of Haiti, is but the first step towards a total reduction of that island, with its one million of self-emancipated people with well bought liberty, to a miserable political dependence.

It is worthy of note as a historical fact, that Spain was the first nation in the light of Christian civilization, to legalise a traffic in our race, and make merchandise of our people. Corolus V. 1517. This policy was sanctioned by Elizabeth, Queen of England; and under James I., 1618, the Government established a regular trade in African slaves.—Sampson's Historical Dictionary, p. 348.

The concordat or treaty recently entered into between Faber Jeffrard, the President of Haiti, and Pio Nono, Sovereign Pontiff of Rome, is but the first act in the drama of the Emperor of the French, in seizing upon the other third and last part of the Island. Pius IX is wholly dependent upon the Emperor of the French for his political and spiritual existence as a Pope; hence, the dividing of the Haitien part of the Island into five Arch Bishopricks, is to place at once the entire Haitien people, subject to Napoleon III. because he being the Protector of the Pope, all under the Pope, as the people will be, must also be subject to him; and the first attempt on the part of either rulers or populace at interference with the high clerical authorities established there, will bring the established power of Louis Napoleon over the entire Haitien people; and doubtless this is the very object of the concordat. And may not this be designed as the future seat of the Holy See; as besides its being more secure by its removal from the dangerous discordant and restless elements of Europe, and in near proximity to America; the negro race, from their docility of character, are a safer element for His Holiness to reside among, and more easily suppressed, if disposed ever to rise as did the Italians under Garibaldi, by the policy of nations being against them, and a "tripple alliance" could easily surround the Island.

And yet, because of the silence—may I not say—the reprehensible humiliating silence on our part, we are insultingly told, that this concordat is the "wisest policy" and the best measure that could have been entered into for the blacks, and that President Jeffrard is the "only black statesman in the western hemisphere." Indeed it is highly probable that the financial obligations of Haiti to France have been cancelled by the Emperor in the President's personal favor, as he must have had some strong personal motive in thus betraying his high trust as the Executive and Chief of a confiding people, by compromising their country and liberty.

Of course you will understand that England, if not the other great Powers, is privy to all of these movements.

One important feature prominent in the course prsued by these nations towards the black races is, that their policy is changed from that of abject slavery, to reducing them to political dependents. They must be in subordinate relations.

The great preponderance of the white race in this hemisphere with no exotic increase of the other, must eventually extinguish the blacks, and thus by natural causes exterminate the race; except, indeed, a segregation of the entire black population on some part of the continent.

To these general unfavorable contingencies Africa can never be subject, being a vast continent, peopled by one of the great enduring, fixed, reproducing, absorbing races of the earth, which must continue throughout all coming time—as it has time past—only ceasing when the world shall pass away.

Duty to my family, who with me are willing to sacrifice and be sacrificed for the regeneration of the African race—to my children and posterity who must come after me, and to my race, compel me to make this record, to vindicate them from the obloquy and odium which would reasonably redound upon them, should our passiveness and silence permit the high-handed monstrous errors, which have so long been propogated and practiced, and now favorably finding their way into the columns of some of the leading daily journals, go uncorrected.

You will readily perceive sir, that I do not object to Haitien emigration, but simply desire that those who go, do so intelligently and know what they are doing.

I am, dear Professor, for God and Humanity, the redemption of our race and regeneration of Africa.

Your friend and brother,

M. R. DELANY.

97 High St., BROOKLYN, L. I.

LOSS OF THE BRITISH BRIG OXFORD.—Capt. Truman of the ship Calhoun, at this port, reports, 20th inst., lat. 40° 34', lon. 62° 49', fell in with the British brig Oxford, of and from Liverpool, N. S., for [illegible], four days out, water-logged, took from her Capt. Joseph Israel, the Rev. John [illegible] Utting, a passenger, two mates, the cook, and four seamen, and brought them to this port.

The Duties of Free Colored Men to Africa.

MR. EDITOR:—Though "the primal duties shine aloft like stars," I fail to discover among them, with my moral telescope, a special imperative duty, saying to me "away to Africa;" either because I do not at present enjoy all the rights I should here at home; or because Africa, as described by her most learned representative, is "wasting away beneath the accretions of civil and moral miseries;" because "Darkness covers the land, and gross darkness the people;" because "confidence and security are destroyed there;" or because, as he says, "Licentiousness abounds everywhere in Africa."

I do not acknowledge any special obligation binding me to forego all the hopes I cherish for myself and my children, amidst civilization, enterprise and enlightenment, here in my native land, because the ashes of some sire of mine, whom I never knew, and never shall know, may perchance blow broadcast over the broad continent of Africa. I know that some friend of mine, perhaps some companion of my youth, may descant with a holy horror upon my having been robbed of my "self-respect," because of my having this feeling; and declare that "I have lost the force of strong native principles, and prime natural affections;" but nevertheless I feel a dignity and a deep conviction therein.

I can conceive of the possibility of my having been moved by a missionary sentiment, saying to me as a man, as a member of the human brotherhood, as a christian, give up family ties and relations, that principle of self-love which spurs men on to self advantage and self aggrandizement;" give up hope, of ease; give up life itself if needs be, in endeavors to diffuse light among heathen in benighted parts: this I might feel as a duty in an independent relation, outside of all nationalities. I can admire the moral sublimity here pictured; I can say, behold here a bright star shines aloft; I pay it deference, because of it's self-denial, it's broad and Christ-like scope.

The point I had in view, in sending you, Mr. Editor, this communication, was to give prominence to two facts given by my friend, the Rev. Alexander Crummell, in his published letter addressed to Dr. Charles B. Dunbar relative to Africa, one of which sets forth the condition of Africa. He says: "Africa lies low and is wretched, * * * is wasting away beneath the accretions of civil and moral miseries. Darkness covers the land, and gross darkness the people; great social evils universally prevail; confidence and security are destroyed; licentiousness abounds everywhere; Moloch rules and reigns throughout the whole continent. * * * They have not the Gospel; they are living without God." This is a doleful picture: but it "only epitomises the miseries of Africa;" so he says. Verily, here is work to be done. Mark, in the other fact, the character essential to redeem Africa. The Reverend friend says they are "to be men of force and energy,—men who will not suffer themselves to be outrivalled in enterprise and vigor,—men who are prepared for pains, and want, and suffering,—men of such invincible courage that the spirit cannot be tamed by transient failures, incidental misadventures, or even glaring miscalculations,—men who can exaggerate the feeblest resources into potent agencies and fruitful capital." Have the "Free colored men in America" acquired such a character? Has not the lack of this character alone been the cause of his present dependent condition in the land! I would ask whether it is our duty, even in view of any affinity we may feel to Africa, for us to go there to perform a work, if we are not equal to the task?

If we go there with the motives of self, may we not lay ourselves open to the charge of being "Buccaneers?" One more question: Have the "free colored men in America" used all the opportunities; have they combined, and used all reasonable exertions essential to develope the needed character required to raise up Africa? Have they done all they might to elevate themselves in this land or in any other?

It is my honest conviction that for a time, first, the tide of emigration will set from Africa to America under Providence, for the infusion of the African element into the mixed element constituting a new American element being formed here, which mixed element may as an advanced element, having for its motto, universal brotherhood, diffuse itself over the world, into Africa, promulgating the light and principles which shall animate it; embodying the essential character described by the Rev. Mr. Crummell as essential to save Africa.

OLD ZION.

WHAT CAN WE DO FOR OUR SOUTHERN BRETHREN?

MR EDITOR.—I noticed a leader in your paper of the 28th of December last, headed 'What can we do for our country?' and answered in the same leader; now I ask, what ought our people at the North to do for our brethren at the South? As many of them are left by their so called masters in possession of the lands, I think it right that they should possess them. I [illegible] that members of Congress are proposing a provisional government for the se[illegible], and suggesting a division of the property among the soldiers and sailors, [illegible] the black inhabitants out. Would [illegible] be right!

I [illegible] that we of the North should look after our forsaken and unlettered brethren. They are unable to contend for their own rights, and I think that we should organize for that very purpose. I make the suggestion, hoping that some of our leaders will take hold of it and act. Where are Frederick Douglas, Chas. L. Remond, Wm. Wells Brown, J. W. Loguen, and the host of other leading men?

R. J. C.

St. Cloud, Min. Jan. 6, 1862.

A SURPRISE.

MR. EDITOR: Permit me a space in your paper to say that a company of ladies and gentlemen from Jamaica, L. I., gave a surprise party to the Rev. Wm. Moore, their pastor, at Flushing, on Thursday evening, the 23d inst. The Rev. gentleman greeted the company very cordially. His dwelling was filled to its utmost capacity; furthermore, the table groaned beneath the pressure of viands, which the ladies lavishly deposited thereon, which was received with usual gusto. In conclusion, Mr. Editor, allow me to say the Rev. gentleman was so highly delighted that he could not express his gratitude towards the company.

There is a great revival here at present.

DON QUIXOTTE.

Jamaica, Jan. 27, 1862.

LECTURE.—This evening, Rev. William E. Walker will deliver a lecture at Temperance Hall, on "The Destiny of the Colored race of America, and the relation they sustain to the Union." Admission free.

Mr. Walker is a graduate of the Western Theological Seminary, who has resided in Trenton for some time past. He is a gentleman of intelligence and education, and has the highest testimonials from some of the most prominent clergymen of New England and the West. His lecture will no doubt be interesting and valuable; and we hope will call out a large audience. The destiny of his race is a subject which has long engaged his thoughts, and his lecture will develop his ideas on a subject which now very generally occupies the public mind.—Trenton, N. J., Republican.

THE REBELS AFRAID OF NEGRO WOMEN.—The following letter was sent to the Virginia Senate by Gov. Letcher:

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPT., RICHMOND, Jan. 8, 1862,
HON. JOHN LETCHER, Gov'r of Virginia:

SIR:—I have the honor to inform you that Brig. Gen. Whiting has telegraphed to this Department that he has taken up some eighteen or twenty negro women and children, residing within Virginia, against whom the proof of correspondence with the enemy is too strong to permit them to remain in front of our lines on the Potomac. They have been sent to the rear of our army. The husbands of these negro women are now with the enemy. I will thank you to inform me what disposition shall be made of these women and children. They cannot be permitted to remain in front of our lines, and there are no accomodations for them in the rear.

Your obedient servant,

J. P. BENJAMIN,

Secretary of War.

The Portland Advertiser records the death of a colored woman, a servant in the family of Dr. Lodge a Homœopathic physician of that city, from the affects of a dose of Gelseminun, which he had administered to her by way of experiment. It appeared on the inquest that he at the same time gave the medicine to other members of his family, his purpose being to witness its effects in healthy persons, in order to determine its medical qualities as a remedial agent. The deceased was supposed to be healthy, but a post mortem examination revealed the fact that her heart was affected, and the effect of Gelseminum (a root) being to depress the circulation, and decrease the strength of the heart's pulsations. The woman sank under it and died.

AN IOWA OFFICER ON NEGRO CATCHING.

Col. Vandevier, of Iowa, having been falsely charged with delivering up the slaves of rebels, writes to the Dubuque Times:—

"I say emphatically that I never have returned, and, God helping me, I never will return to slavery a fleeing fugitive. I would submit to be cashiered or shot rather than perform so menial an office. If I thought by engaging in this war for the vindication of our Constitution and our flag, the office of slave-catcher was to be superadded to the duty of a soldier, I would spurn the service with scorn and contempt. The rebel government is fighting in the interest of slavery. I will never fight on that side under any flag. In uttering these words I am confident that I but echo the sentiments of the brave men whom I have the honor to command, and the people that I represent."

THE ENGLISH AND LAGOS.—The West African Herald, emphatically reiterates the contradiction given to the assertion that King Docemo had contemplated the taking of Captain Bedingfeld and the Vice-Consul prisoners, and the killing of the merchants. A writer in it under the signature of "Truth," says: "It is true the poor fellow signed the annexation paper with tears in his eyes, but as to resistance, I pledge you my word he never dreamt of it.

TAKE NOTICE.—Among the economical list of articles recently introduced, are those for sale by Rice & Co., 83 Nassau street. (See advertisement.) Their unrivalled coffee strainer, which costs only 25 cents, will save one-fourth of your coffee, and keep it from grounds or sediment. Their indelible pencil for marking linen is just the thing wanted; and their cement is warranted to mend crockery, glass, furniture, leather, &c., as strongly as before broken. Their patent magnetic tack hammer is an ingenious article for the household; it picks up the tacks point downwards, and there they hang until driven home to their appointed place. This will save many fingers from being pounded. Their patent hemmer and shield for hand sewing every lady should have. Their electric weather glass or storm indicator foretels the approach of storms from twelve to twenty-four hours in advance. Their excelsior thermometer is a newly patented and useful article. Their patent match safe for the vest pocket is a neat and unique article, which every gentleman should possess. Every article sells for 25 cents, and they guarantee satisfaction or refund the money.

Give them a call or send an order, which will be promptly attended to.

PERSONAL.

Frederick Douglass passed through this city a few days ago. His lecture in Philadelphia on the war was well received by an appreciative audience. The Christian Recorder says of Mr. Douglass:

"We saw, almost at a glance, that the Frederick Douglass before us was the Frederick Douglass of other days—and even more: his majestic bearing and dignity were not gone—the fire of his eye and the glow of his face were there—the power and influence of his voice, the cutting logic and lofty eloquence of other days, were not diminished. And to all these were added the depth and breadth of thought, and the candor of expression, which constant investigation and increasing years cannot fail to bring."

Rev. Dr. Pennington has kindly sent us by the hands of Rev. H. H. Garnet, a copy of "A Narrative of Events of the Life of J. H. Banks, an escaped slave," which we find to be a very interesting work. It was edited by Dr. Pennington, and evidences that the doctor was not idle during his short sojourn in Liverpool. From the introduction we make the following extract:

"Others may differ from me, but I adhere to the firm belief that the descendants of Africa on the Western Continent and its dependencies are to be free, remain where they are, and eventually occupy the lands which they have watered with their sweat and tears. This is distributive justice. Legitimate commerce does not require the perpetual enslavement of the race; nor does Christian civilization require their exportation to any other clime."

"Hon. John D. Johnson, of the enterprising Liberian firm of Johnson, Turpin & Dunbar, spoke on the evening of the 20th ult., in the Hall of Representatives, Washington, on the occasion of the forty-fifth annual meeting of the American Colonization Society. He commenced by an expression of thanks of the colonists in Liberia for what had been done for them by the friends of the African race. He had spent ten years in Africa, and deemed himself a proper witness in behalf of the cause. He had seen emigrants from all parts of the world, in all their changes from the first landing, and thought that two years' residence was amply sufficient to bind them to the country as closely as if it were the land of their birth. He thought that the prosperity of the colony would be greatly advanced by the immigration of some of the intelligent colored people in several states. He alluded to the returned Africans, and stated that many of them were rapidly becoming civilized, and had been employed in various useful capacities. Mr. Johnson expressed solicitude for the recognition of Liberia by the Government, and said that Liberians were insulted by no people except the English, until Spain, recently, upon the withdrawal of the United States fleet, had dared to follow the example.

William Wells Brown, the talented lecturer and author, has retired from the service of the Zampillaerostating "Moses" of the Haytian Bureau, and is now lecturing with fine success on literary subjects. Our Paterson correspondent says of his lecture in that city: "It was a splendid success."

Rev. J. Sella Martin is addressing large and select audiences in Great Britain. Our paper of last week contained a notice for a lecture by Mr. Martin, signed by Rev. John Curwen, and which contained a misstatement. Mr. Curwen having become acquainted with Mr. Martin's history, and knowing that he would be glad to redeem his sister and her children from bondage, thought that the occasion of the lecture would be a good opportunity to make an appeal in their behalf. Mr. Martin, seeing the misstatement, informed Mr. Curwen that it was no part of his mission to collect funds for that purpose, and the error was corrected at the meeting and published.

THE NEGROES AT ALEXANDRIA.

In the Senate, January 14, Mr. Wilson read the following portions of a letter addressed to him by Dr. Samuel G. Howe:

"I thank you for your work on behalf of the poor fugitive slaves confined in the jail here." * * "Last June I tried in vain to do something for these victims of our impolicy. I pleaded with one member of the Cabinet to do something for them; and described the condition of thirty-five men, women, and children then held in bonds by the United States marshal for the benefit of their owners. * * * * * *

"But you have appealed to the great heart of the people, and they will cheer you on by a shout of indignation at the atrocities perpetrated under the very walls of the Capitol.

"The same atrocities are practiced under the same authority in the jail at Alexandria, which I lately inspected. The building is a wretched one, totally unfit for a public prison. It seems to have been built in the days when accused persons were considered as public enemies, and to be caged like wild beasts. The cells are narrow, dark, and damp, and the rings and staples fixed in some of the walls tell their own story. The internal arrangements are very bad; and the general condition of the house is filthy and noisome to the last degree. Such a jail would be presented by the Grand Jury in any Northern city as an intolerable nuisance. The system of administration is disgraceful to any State claiming to be Christian and civilized. The jail is rented out to an individual for $400 a year, who hires a turnkey and other assistants, and boards the prisoners for thirty-five cents a day.

"In the case of negroes who are arrested for being without free papers or passes, the board is paid by the master when he comes for them. If no claimant appears, and the poor fellow cannot prove that he is free, he is kept until the fees amount to a sum, when he may be sold to satisfy the claims of injustice.

"Among the prisoners are nineteen whose only offence is that of fleeing from those who claimed to be their masters. Some of them have been confined several months; but, in spite of all the horrors of the place, they do not want to be sent back to their masters, because they fear 'being sold down South.' I saw fifteen of these unfortunate creatures, and spent time enough to ascertain the exact truth respecting their history and condition. I examined what are called 'the books,' and such wretchedly written memoranda respecting their commitment as exist.

"I had a peremptory order from the commandant upon the jailor to give me all information, and he did so, evidently being in great fear of the authorities. I conversed with the prisoners in his presence, and then alone; so that I got pretty good evidence." * * * *

"Let me note some of these cases to show how loosely injustice is administered in the sacred soil of Virginia by the United States authorities. You may infer what must have been the former state of things.

"The records show that, on the 9th of August, 1861, Cynthia Brent was taken up by somebody, and put in the jail as a supposed runaway slave. On the 29th of August, a Mr. Close, who had owned the girl's father, obtained an order for the chattle, and took her away. She escaped from him, but fell into the hands of her master, Mr. Swan, who brought her, on the 10th of September, and imprisoned her on his own authority, and she is still in prison.

"On the 16th of August, 1861, came one Mrs. Kitson—she ought not to have any Christian name—and claiming four fugitives—two women, one 'boy,' and one child—as her slaves; and, as she paid their board, she took them off, probably to sell them to other 'beasts of burden.'

"June 12, 1861, was brought in Benhood, a fugitive. He was kept nearly five months, and probably began to think he was safe; but, on the 6th of November, one Fleming, claiming to be agent of his master—now himself a fugitive—came with an order from General Montgomery, and carried poor Benhood off to a known fate in unknown parts.

"The persons claiming to own these human beings are, for the most part, rebels, and have fled; the United States acts as jailor, and takes care of their chattels during their absence."

AMUSEMENTS.

FESTIVAL AT ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.—We dropped into this church on the evening of the 21st ult., and found an assemblage present not very numerous, but very select. As we entered, Madame Magnan was entertaining the company with one of her best songs, being accompanied on the piano by her daughter Virginia, who plays remarkably well for one so young.

Messrs. Bailey, of New York and Magruder, of Washington, contributed much to the entertainment of the evening.

We noticed present the Rev. Duncan Dunbar and a large number of his congregation; also the Rev. William J. Alstone of St. Philips Church.

We have one complaint to make, and that is—the managers gave entirely too much for the money. The idea of giving two or three cups of tea with bread, ham, oysters, and biscuit, followed by mottoes, raisins, kisses and blanc mange, and all these conveyed to you by some of the most lovely creatures that New York and Brooklyn afford, was almost criminal. Why, the charming manner in which you were waited upon was worth infinitely more than the 25 cents required as a fee of entrance.

The elegance of the affair reflects great credit upon the managers, and will help to make the entertainments given at the Rev. Mr. Raymond's church very popular.

SOUTHERN ITEMS.

The Charleston "Courier" has this incident: "A few days since a shell from one of our guns in a battery, not a hundred miles from this city, fell without explosion. It was found by a group of little Africans, who, supposing it to contain something good, put it into a fire and gave it a roasting. Fortunately the explosion which ensued frightened them without serious injury."

The Southern Mothers of Memphis acknowledge the receipt of fifty dollars, through the hands of the Mayor of Little Rock, Arkansas, being the contribution from the negroes of that city for the relief of the Arkansas soldiers.

SONG OF THE SOUTH CAROLINA NEGROES.—When the northern soldiers at Port Royal captured a Southern planter named Cuthbert, his negroes improvised the following song of rejoicing:—

'De Northmen dey's got massa now,
De Northmen dey's got massa now,
De Northmen dey's got massa now,
Glory Hallelujah!'

We have received a private letter from Port Royal, S. C., from an army chaplain, who gives an encouraging account of the fugitive slaves of that place. He speaks with special delight of their willingness to learn; a fact to which all correspondents from that neighborhood bear uniform testimony. He says: "My first spelling-book, given away under the sanction of the Government, was to a very intelligent colored man who had learned to be a good traitor. He had worked for the enemy in Beaufort and Charleston. His wife and two little children had been taken from him by the slaveholders. He is a Christian man. The spelling-book is a Union one! His name is Gabriel Hayne. May God bless him!"—INDEPENDENT.

THE SPIRIT OF EMIGRATION.

We have been favored by a visit from Mr. Wm. L. and Beverly C. Yancey, who are on their way to Hayti. We observe that most persons going to that Island at this time are of a better class than those formerly forwarded.

We perceive that the authorities of Hayti desire that there should be a little cessation in the flow of emigration, in order that those who are there should have time to get settled ere any more are sent. They also say that the season has been a very sickly one, and hence both natives and foreigners have suffered; but that latterly the general health has greatly improved.

It will be seen that the local government of Jamaica is also moving to secure a portion of our population. Several persons have already spoken to us upon this matter, desiring to know what advantages are to accrue.

A club, consisting of some of our most intelligent gentlemen, has lately been formed in this city for the purpose of acquiring information in regard to the republic of Liberia. The President of this club is Mr. Jer'h Bowers.

MARRIED.

SPICER, PAYNE.—In this city, on Thursday 23d inst. at Church of St. Francis Xavier, by the Rev. Mr. Moylan, Joshua Spicer to Miss Ellen Payne, all of this city.

LOCHLIN, BRANDON.—In this city, Jan. 24th, by the Rev. David Stevens, Edgar Locklin, of Catskill, to Julia J. Brandon, of Hudson, N. Y.

NORRIS, RUGG.—In Sag Harbor, L. I., Jan 23d, by Rev. Alexander Posey, William A. Norris, of Boston, to Mrs. Mary J. Rugg, of the former place

DIED.

GREEN.—In this city, Jan. 12th, of congestion of the brain, John Benjamin Edward, infant son of John D. and Harriet A. Green, aged 5 months and 3 days.

JOHNSTON.—At the residence of George A. Rice, Esq. Newport, R. I. Jan. 20th, of consumption, Mary Jane Johnston, aged 27 years.

BISHOP.—At Troy, N. Y., Jan. 27th, Charlotte Ann Elizabeth, the youngest daughter of John H. and Mary C. Bishop. Aged 1 year, 3 months and 4 days.

REDDING.—In New York, Jan. 27, 1862, Richard, Jr., infant son of Richard and Hester Redding, aged 10 months and 2 days.

No more the pleasant child is seen,
To please the parents' eye;
The tender plant so fresh and green,
Is in eternity.

Special Notices.

Rev. J. N. Gloucester will Preach in Bridge street Methodist Church, Brooklyn, on next Sabbath Evening.—Subject—The imperative duty of the Government to its Contrabands, and our duty to them and to God.

NOTICE.

We, the Sheba's Court Ancient Heroines of Jericho, return our most sincere thanks to the generous public for their kind patronage on the occasion of our grand Ovation on the 16th of Jan., and are happy to inform the public of the gross receipts, which were $145; but we are sorry that we could not have given better satisfaction at our festival. There should have been plenty for all, but the Committee could not get a chance to serve it in consequence of the crowd being so great. We hope the kind public will excuse us this time, and on the next we pledge ourselves to give every satisfaction

GEORGE SMITH, W. F.

FESTIVAL
FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE FREEDMEN OF FORTRESS MONROE, VA., AND PORT ROYAL, S. C.

A mental feast and festival will be held at CONTINENTAL HALL, corner of Eighth Avenue and 34th st. on Tuesday Evening, the 11th of Feb., by a Committee of colored ladies and gentlemen, for the purpose of obtaining clothing and books for the Colored Persons lately freed at the above-named places.

There will be speeches by several distinguished persons. Some Contrabands are expected to speak on the occasion.

Rev. H. H. Garnet, Dr. Delany and others are expected to address the audience, after which there will be a variety of Refreshments for sale at prices suitable to the times; and the Festival will wind up with social conversation, singing and promenading.

Tickets of Admission 10 cents

Donations may be left with the Treasurer, Mrs. Martha Ann Porter, 170 West 29th st., or with the Committee at the Hall on the evening of the Festival.

For further particulars see the Circular.

WM. ANDERSON Chairman.
P. S. PORTER Secretary.

THE LADIES OF NEW YORK
WILL GIVE A
GRAND CALICO DRESS BALL,
In Aid of the "Contrabands" at Beaufort, S. C.

On the Evening of Thursday, Feb. 6th, 1862, at MOZART HALL 668 Broadway, opposite Bond street. Tickets $1 including supper, to be had of the Committee, Mrs. J. H. Jackson, 68 Sullivan st.

E. Parker, 90 Wooster st.
L. Shed, Steamer Empire State,
C. Hopewell, 50 Laurens st.
E. Odell, Mott st.
Miss C. Brace, 50 Laurens st.
Mrs. P. Williams, Corner Putnam and Franklin Avenues, Brooklyn.

The Floor will be under the direction of an experienced Gentleman.

Dancing to commence at 9. Supper at 12 P. M.

The Committee wish it distinctly understood, that Ladies will not change their dresses during the evening. And, it is hoped that those who can afford to do so, will donate them to the relief of those who in the joy of their new born Freedom, are now appealing to the world for assistance and recognition.

The Committee will be happy to receive at their residences articles of clothing from ladies and gentlemen until Saturday, Feb. 8th.

A GRAND GOOD SAMARITAN Re-Union and Entertainment of PURITY LODGE,
No. 3, D of S. I. O. of G. S.

Will be given on Thursday evening, Feb 13th, 1862, at the METROPOLITAN ASSEMBLY ROOMS, 178 Prince street, on which occasion the following Lodges are invited and expected to be present in Full Regalia:

The R. W. Grand Lodge, No. 2. Fountain Union, No. 1. Progressive Union, No. 4, Williamsburg. Rebecca Union, No. 5, Brooklyn. Crystal Fount, No. 7 Newark. Fidelity, No. 1. D. of S. Unity, No. 2, Harmony, No. 4, Newark.

Also the following Tabernacles: I. O. of B. & S. of L. & C. R. W. G. Tabernacle, State of New York. R. H. Cousins, G. W. S.

Henry Highland Garnet Tabernacle, No. 1. J. W. B. Smith Tabernacle, No. 2. Jas. Morris Williams Tabernacle, Brooklyn, No. 3. J. D. S. Hall Tabernacle, No. 4. Margaret A. Jackson Tabernacle, No. 5.

The Entire Building is engaged for the occasion.

A Separate Room will be provided for each Order, to arrange there the Grand Evening's Procession.

Mr. Charles Hornbeck, Grand Marshal for the Evening.

Prof. Hardy's full Band will furnish the music.

TICKETS 50 cents. To be had of the Committee of Arrangement and of the Ticket Committee.

Supper will be served at One o'clock.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Sarah E. Rickets, 249 Houston st. Mary Hopkins, 343 West 26th st. Harriet L. Sandford, 105 West 27th st. Louisa Benson, 44 Leonard st. Jane Crummel, 75 Vandam st. Angeline Thompson, 105 West 27th st. Margaret Hammond, 343 West 26th st.

TICKET COMMITTEE.

Julia Dove, 39 Pell st. Susan Church, 105 Park st. near Mott. Elsie Ann Zabriskee, 241 Second st. Clara Putnam, 131 Suffolk st. Caroline Robinson, 44 Leonard st. Margaret Edgar, 81 Charlton st. Maria Washington, 32 Pell st. Margaret Cefers, 242 Second st. Mary Place, 95 Crosby st Charlotte Aldridge, 245 West 29th st. Hannah Miller, 343 West 26th st. Ann Sisco, 109 Thompson st. Charles R. Hornbeck, 120 West 20th st. Page C. Ridout, Sullivan st. Edward Clark, 107 Sheriff street. Stephen Lawrence, 35 William st. Oliver Holmes, 80 Nassau st. James P. Miller, 91 West 32d st. S. Gray, Broadway. Susan Plant, 97 High st., Brooklyn. Moses B. Coss, 75 South 6th st., Williamsburg.

R. D. KENNEY, Manager.

GRAND MUSICAL AND LITERARY FESTIVAL.
MADAME MAGNAN,

Will give a Grand Entertainment to the lovers of Music and Literature, on Wednesday Evening, Feb. 5th, 1862, in Zion Baptist Church, Rev. J. T. Raymond Pastor, in Sullivan st. near Houston.

The following ladies and gentlemen will lend their valuable aid: Mr. J. W. Jacobs Mr. A. Powers, Mr. G. Bodee, Miss M. Vogelsang, Mr. J. Gambier, Mr. J. Spelman, Miss H. L. Vogelsang, Miss O. Powers, Miss V. A. Magnan.

Tickets 25 cents, to be had of Mr. J. L. Hudson, No. 4 East Houston st., Mr. Drayton, 66 E. Houston, st., Mr. Harris, St. Charles, Broome st., and at the door on the evening of the Festival.

Doors open at 7—to commence at 8.

No postponement.

ARRIVALS

At Mrs. PLANTS' Boarding House:—
Mr. John Brooks, Washington, D. C.
Joshua Simms " "
James Stevens, Norfolk, Va.
Robt. H. Randall, from Monrovia, Liberia.

NOTICE.

The Skating School will be continued hereafter on Tuesday and Friday nights throughout the season.

Admittance on Tuesday night 15 cts., on Friday 10 cts. S. R. SCOTTRON.

PLANE ST. SELECT SCHOOL.
195 PLANE ST., NEWARK, N. J.
MRS. HARRIET E. ROGERS, PRINCIPAL.

The branches taught are Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography and History.

Plain Sewing. Ornamental Needlework, Worsted Embroidery and Fancy Knitting.

Piano Forte, Melodeon, and Vocal Music by Prof. John H. O'Fake.

A limited number of Misses between the ages of ten and fourteen may be boarded in the house on moderate terms. Healthy location, and a fine yard for exercise.

REFERENCES.

NEWARK, N.J.

Rev. E. J. Adams, Jefferson Ellis,
Adam Ray, Abram T. Cook.

BROOKLYN.

Rev. J. N. Gloucester.

NEW YORK.

Rev. H. M. Wilson, Rev. H. H. Garnet.

All letters may be addressed to Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, 194 Plane st. Newark N. J.
27 6t.

WORLD'S FAIR AGENCY.—The undersigned are acting as Agents for Merchants and Manufacturers to Exhibit at World's Fair, and to introduce into England, France and other European countries, articles of American Invention, Procuring Patents, making Sales, or in any way promoting their interests.

DEXTER & CO. 17 Spruce st. N. Y.;
86 Milk street, Boston; 149 S. Fourth st., Phila.
1m3ap.

I. O. OF G. S. AND D. OF S.

Office of the R. W. G., Chief of the E. D. G. Lodge, No.
75 South 6th st. W'msburg.
Jan 21st.

Whereas the officers and members of Crystal Fount Union Lodge No. 6 of Newark, N. J., have, in proper form, acknowledged the authority of the R. W. E. D. Grand Lodge, and declared their willingness to support the constitution of the said G. L., and to conform to the rules and regulations of the order: Now therefore, I, Moses B. Coss, do by the power in me vested, as he R. W. G. Chief of said Grand Lodge, Union Lodge No. 6. of Newark, N. J. to be this day reinstated under the Jurisdiction of our G. Lodge.

L. S. } In testimony of which I have set my hand, and caused the seal of G. L. to be affixed, this 21st day of Jan., A. D. 1862.

MRS. ELIZA LEWIS' SALVE,
ANDERSON'S HAIR RESTORATIVE,
(New London,)
SPANISH OIL, (For the Hair,)
WHITE'S VEGETABLE EXTRACT,
BRANDRETH'S SUGAR COATED PILLS,
For Sale at the
Drug Store 55 West Broadway
27tf.

PHILADELPHIA AGENCY.

Wm. K. De Cordever, 419 South 7th st. is authorized to receive subscriptions and advertisements for the Anglo-African. All orders left with him will receive prompt attention.

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND

BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,
PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St, and with G. Oton.
18tf

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated "Hoagland Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

MASONIC DIRECTORY,
FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st, the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka, No. 15, Norwich, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery. No. 14. Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 East Houston Street, N. Y. City.

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist.
79 Thompson St., N. Y.

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with

Ice Cream, Fruit, and other Delicacies.

BENJ. F. BROWN,
70 Bleecker
between Broadway & Crosby 4t

A. ROBERTS,
120 Clinton Court, 8th st., New York, agent for the Weekly Anglo-African. Copies may be had of him at an early hour after its publication

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,
REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.

New York—corner of Prince and Marion street near Broadway.

Hours of Worship:—
Prayer-meeting, 10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.

Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock,
Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.
Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,
(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. WM. J. ALSTON, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1 2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 . . . . P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—
10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn.
13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

REV. ELI N. HALL, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:
10½ o'clock, . . . A. M.
" . . . P. M.
" . . . P. M.
10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor; Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:

10 1-2 o'clock, . . . A. M.
3 " . . . P. M.
7 1 2 " . . . P. M.
12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—
3 o'clock, P. M.
7 1-2 " P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

LECTURE every Wednesday evening.

Rev. CHAS. H. THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock, . . . A. M.
3 " . . . P. M.
7 " . . . P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. HALL, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. JOHN T. RAYMOND, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock, . . . A. M.
3 " . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

AGENT FOR WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

TROY AGENCY.—Mr. Henry Barke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

NEW MUSIC.—"The Lord doth now to this Nation Speak," "O, Let my People Go," Parody on "Song of the Contrabands," words by Moses, music by Baker. Price 35 cts. including "Contrabands' Song," or 4 pieces for $1, mailed free. Just published by HORACE WATERS, 481 Broadway.

24 6t.

THE HORACE WATERS PIANOS,
MELODEONS, ALEXANDRE ORGANS,
and
T. Gilbert & Co's. Celebrated Æolian Pianos,

are the finest instruments for Parlors and Churches now in use. A large assortment can be seen at the new Warerooms 481 Broadway, between Grand and Broome streets, which will be sold at extremely low prices. Pianos and Melodeons from surviving makers, new and second hand, to let, and rent allowed if purchased, as per agreement. Monthly payments received for the same. Also, second-hand pianos at great bargains, prices from $25 to $100. Sheet Music, Music Books, and all kinds of Music merchandise at war prices. A Pianist in attendance will try new music.

HORACE WATERS, AGENT.

BOSTON HOUSE,
MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches. 19 26t.

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,
In all its branches—such as
BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH
GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.,
Residence—126th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.
18 26t

THE BEST DRESSING FOR THE HAIR during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts. 2 tf.

TO LET.—THE ROOM ON THE SECOND floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston-st., or of the Janitor 236 West 16th-st.

[illegible]

Gentlemen if you want a [illegible] well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price [illegible] can be bought at any other establishment [illegible] in any other city, please call at the [illegible] Tailor Establishment, 168 EWEN STREET, BET. GRAND & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG, Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as BROADCLOTHS, CASSIMERES, AND VESTINGS of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made MEN AND BOYS' CLOTHING.

DON'T FORGET,
168 EWEN ST.
Williamsburg.
9 1y.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET.

Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N. Y.

On an improved plan, by widow [illegible] JENNINGS successor to Mrs. BARRETT.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.

The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

AGENTS WANTED!

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) F. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y. 19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

BOARDING AND LODGING
IN BROOKLYN,

At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 58 Atlantic St., near South Ferry. $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodgings 75 cts. per week. 15tf

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS
For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side. Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 182 Suffolk, Street. Terms very moderate. 19 1y.

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS
Has Removed from 196 Washington St. to 71 Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMODATE a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate. 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tf

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTES, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 SOUTH STREET, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS.
COR. PEARL, & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) RESPECTFULLY announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

WARRANTED TO CURE A HEADACHE in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable extract. For sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold and Frankfort Sts.

MRS E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions
2d.

BOARDING AND LODGING

BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 120 West 26th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies $2.50
Gents, 3.00
Lodging per week, 75

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER
219 CENTRE STREET NEW YORK.

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate Ladies and GENTLEMEN with FIRST CLASS BOARD, on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. 13 Laurens Street, a few doors north of Grand. 16 13t

POCKET WATER-FILTER,
AND
DRINKING TUBE.

Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and [illegible] [illegible] Weighs one ounce. [illegible] vest pocket. Send for [illegible] wanted. Samples mailed [illegible] by addressing

DAY & CO.
Box 464 P. O. [illegible]
3-13t

Poetry.

THE PROHIBITED SONG.

In compliance with the request of several persons, we reprint the admirable poem by Whittier, which the Hutchinson's were not allowed to sing on the other side of the Potomac, Gen. Kearney and Gen. Franklin having solemnly declared it to be incendiary, whereupon Gen. McClellan has forbidden them to sing within his lines at all. Our readers will notice that this hymn is suggested by a famous hymn of Martin Luther :—"Ein feste burg ist unser Gott."

We wait beneath the furnace blast
The pangs of transformation :
Not painlessly doth God re-cast
And mould anew the nation.
Hot burns the fire
Where wrongs expire ;
Nor spares the hand
That from the land
Uproots the ancient evil.

The hand-breadth cloud the sages feared
Its bloody rain is dropping ;
The poison plant the fathers spared
All else is overtopping.
East, West, South, North,
It curses earth ;
All justice dies,
And fraud and lies
Live only in its shadow.

What gives the wheat-field blades of steel ?
What points the rebel cannon ?
What sets the roaring rabble's heel
On the old star-spangled pennon ?
What breaks the oath
Of the men of the South ?
What whets the knife
For the Union's life ?
Hark to the answer : SLAVERY !

Then waste no blows on lesser foes
In strife unworthy freemen.
God lifts to-day the vail and shows
The features of the demon !
O North and South,
Its victims both,
Can ye not cry,
"Let Slavery die !"
And union find in freedom ?

What though the cast-out spirit tear
The nation in his going,
We who have shared the guilt must share
The pang of his o'erthrowing !
Whate'er the loss,
Whate'er the cross,
Shall they complain
Of present pain
Who trust in God's hereafter ?

For who that leans on his right arm
Was ever yet forsaken ?
What righteous cause can suffer harm
If He its part has taken ?
Though wild and loud,
And dark the cloud,
Behind its folds
His hand upholds
The calm sky of to-morrow.

Above the maddening cry for blood,
Above the wild war-drumming,
Let Freedom's voice be heard, with good
The evil overcoming.
Give prayer and purse
To stay the curse
Whose wrong we share,
Whose shame we share,
Whose end shall gladden heaven !

In vain the bells of war shall ring
Of triumphs and revenges,
While still is spared this evil thing
That severs and estranges.
But, blest the ear
That yet shall hear
The jubilant bell
That rings the knell
Of Slavery forever !

Then let the selfish lip be dumb,
And hushed the breath of sighing !
Before the joy of peace, must come
The pains of purifying.
God give us grace
Each in his place
To bear his lot,
And, murmuring not,
Endure, and wait, and labor.—Tribune.

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

HOOKER'S DIVISION, near Budd's Ferry, Charles Co. Md., Jan. 20, '62.

MR. EDITOR : The weather here is very disagreeable—warm, sultry and damp; and the mud is the same fathomless and boundless sea referred to in my last. Within the month past there has not been much firing by the rebels. They seemed to have at last realised the utter folly of wasting ammunition, when their national finances, like our own, are bankrupt ; but the monotony was suddenly disturbed on last Saturday night when the Pensacola passed their batteries ; but, although they hurled messengers of death and destruction at her quick and fast, she passed unharmed.

There is an order here from headquarters to return all slaves to their masters, and to exclude them from the lines. There are upwards of two hundred fugitive slaves hovering around this camp, to which may be added some seventy employed at Liverpool Point by the government unloading vessels, etc. When the division moves, if ever it does, a black army will move with it, and all the Sewards and McClellans in the country cannot halt that army. A case was brought to the notice of the General, which I think compelled him to ask for information. Let me remark here that Gen. Hooker is sound on the question of the vigorous prosecution of the war. He is a regular officer ; but mark me, he will make his mark should he ever get his command on the enemies soil. The case I refer to was that of the slaves of a man by the name of Stonestreet, who owned some nine hundred or a thousand acres of land between Mattewoman Creek and Piscataway, and claimed ownership to about thirty persons. He joined the rebel army last May, and by power of attorney transferred his claim to one Jenkins ; and when this place was occupied by the Federal troops, all of that portion of the estate which may be called 'moveable,' disappeared, with the exception of an old man, a woman and four children. These few that were left behind only because they could not get away, were robbed of all their provisions by some of the members of the Excelsior Brigade, and they were left in a starving condition. No one dared to lay claim boldly to them, and they were forced to come into camp to see whether they could not be sent to Washington, there to be employed by the government. The general could not pass them to Washington because they were the slaves of a citizen of a loyal State, but would give them employment at Liverpool Point. He could take no action on United States soil. As a military commander he could not adjudicate a civil case. The instructions he has received from the Commander-in-Chief to investigate the cases of slaves in his lines, and to employ those whose masters have employed them or are engaged themselves in the rebel service, gives him power, if he chooses to exercise it, to confiscate them. This old man, the woman and children, are now near Port Tobacco, living with some of Stonestreet's family. Parties here have done their utmost to give them a safe passage, but there is so much to do in this direction that they are unequal to the task. We long for a movement anywhere, we don't care where, Northward or Southward.

We have at least one man who is a martyr, so far as position in the army goes. A little boy belonging to a man somewhere in Nansenoy ran away from his master, and was kept by the teamsters of the 11th Massachusetts Regiment. He was captured by the slave-hunters ; came back, and ran away the second time. The slavehunters reported to headquarters that the boy was again amongst them. Col. Vandyke, of the 26th Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers ordered Isaac Coburn, of the 11th Massachusetts Regiment, who was boss teamster of the 26th, to search for the boy and bring him to his tent ; Coburn refused, declaring that he did not enlist in the army to hunt slaves, nor would he hunt them for any one, and the slavehounds have tried to disgrace him ; they have reduced him to the , but instead of this being a disgrace to him, it is an honor ; and he may live to see the day when he can look down with contempt on the cringing, cowardly enslavers of men. They took the boy, and will perhaps whip him to death, as was poor Jack Scroggins. If they do not whip him to death he will be back here very soon. There is quite an audible murmur here about the return of fugitives. I expect to see the time very shortly when more than one slavehunter will bite the dust. An officer of high rank told one of them some time ago that in a very short time he would not guarantee his (the hunter's) life five minutes in the lines on a slave hunt.

Last evening the death like stillness which has brooded over the rebel batteries since the passage of the Pensacola, was broken by the most deafening volley of artillery I have heard since I have been here. The sight was truly beautiful. Flash after flash would burst out away across this broad river away in mid air like rockets—the shells would fly exploding with as great a concussion as the piece that discharged them. As the shells pass through the air the sound is startling. As they sonorously ring and whistle one feels as if they were fell demons flying through the air seeking whom they can devour. You may form some idea of their destructive power, when I tell you that if they will burst at the point of contact, say 64 pounder shells, they will plow up the earth to the depth of four feet and form a well three feet in diameter. There must have been an unusual number of vessels passing last night to have called forth such a pyrotechnical display.

I have noticed in the "Anglo-African" of the 4th inst., a letter from Dr. M. R. Delany to Dr. J. M'Cune Smith, and headed "Important Movement." I had made up my mind to call upon our leading men to guide our steps in the present dark and gloomy political wilderness. A convention of leading negroes at this time would wield a moral and political influence in this nation second to none other before convened. The higher the order of talent displayed by its members, the weightier will be its influence. It should not be too Democratic : that is, it should not be composed of a numerous membership ; three persons from each state ; you would thus keep out babblers and asses who wish to hear themselves talk. We want those of our representative men who have shown their ability to grapple with the mighty and momentous issues upon which is suspended the destiny of the teeming millions of our race. The age we live in is truly said to be one of ideas, and it is the aggregation of ideas that constitutes the aegis of power. Three members from each state would be select and sufficiently numerous. Every organised society, whether religious, social, or benevolent, should be taxed with a sufficient sum to publish thousands of copies of the deliberations to be scattered over the world, as the collected wisdom of a people who have resisted and triumphed over the most unyielding despotism the world ever saw—the despotism of American Slavery, and that the time has come when they can dictate terms to the trembling autocrat. I know what I am saying ; the eternal logic of facts tells me that the negro henceforth and forever, holds the balance of power in this country. And I exultingly declare it, and what is more, he is destined to achieve more for the cause of christianity and progressive civilization than the mean money loving Saxon. The loftiest type of human progression cannot be reached by the Saxon. Civilization but makes his barbarism exquisite. Who but polished savages could have spent whole lives in rearing up that monument of shame which the pro-slavery liteature of this country forms. I can speak of one body in Philadelphia, a responsible body, the Social, Civil, and Statistical Association, having the learning and wealth of that city among its membership, that should choose three delegates for Pennsylvania. What do you think of it gentlemen ?

G. E. S.

[From the Washington Republican.]

"WILL THE CONTRABANDS WORK?"

This is the question proposed by several of the Southern correspondents of Northern journals, and while many of them answer in the affirmative, others reply in the negative. A Port Royal correspondent of the Manchester (N. H.) American, we see, is furnishing some telling evidence on the subject. The writer says :

Mr. D. M. Robinson, of Manchester has a large number of the subjects of strife under his charge, near Beaufort, ginning cotton. They are to be paid eight dollars per month for their work, (1,) and have the same rations furnished them as are given to all our troops (2.) Some of these fellows work very well, but generally they are on the watch to escape the eye of the overseer, and be off out of the way of all work. Pay seems no inducement. (3) They are born slaves, are ignorant and indolent, and the philanthropist will have a broad field to work in to bring them to a proper state of industry. (4.) Certain emancipationists ought to travel among the negroes south of Washington, to know what negroes are. (5) Hearing will perplex, and seeing obfuscate the whole who are over-worried."

This is a flat contradiction, says the N. Y. Express, to many a statement previously published. Nobody, we suppose, will doubt that a man "who has a large number of the subjects of strife under his charge" is a more reliable witness than the newspaper correspondent. (6).—Baltimore Sun.

1. It has been the privilege of the undersigned to make several tours of observation through portions of the Southern coast. I have made full notes of my progress, and speak with a perfect knowledge of all the facts. Without any disparagement to the gentleman named, it should be borne in mind that he has employed the blacks, and writes of them under his Northern experience of labor. It is hardly fair to compare free with slave labor on a basis of eight dollars a month—a trifle over twenty-five cents a day. How many Northern laborers would work, and expect to support themselves and families at such a rate ? Let the prices be comparatively equal, and then the conclusions would be comparatively fair.

(2.) It may be true, in some cases—but it is by no means so in all—that the colored laborers in our lines receive "army rations." I know of one general officer, in a very important post, who gives the negroes (no matter how different the labor required of them may be from that to which they are accustomed) scarcely anything but hominy and molasses. Would Northern laborers be content with that ? They ought to be, if they are to be compared with negro laborers. The negroes are to be required to load and unload heavy cargoes of ships, transport rafts in the water, build entrenchments, and do the hardest kind of work, in the case referred to, mostly on hominy and molasses. Is such a test a fair one ?

It should be remembered, too, that if "rations" are given to the negro laborers, clothing is not. They must clothe themselves in winter weather and at work where there is always a great wear and tear of clothes, the best way they can. Where is the money to buy their clothes to come from, while they have to support themselves and families (and nearly all have them) on twenty-five cents a day ?

3. Why does "pay seem to be no inducement?" For the very good reason "that the negro, let him work ever so hard, has no guarantee that even the small pay he gets will be his ! A general officer, in command of a post where it is hoped by him the vanquished and vanished slaveholders will return, confess their rebellion and have their slaves restored to them, recently informed me that he should pay back to their owners all the negroes might earn ! This fact is soon learned by the blacks : and what inducement, then, have they to labor ? All hope of reward is stricken down dead within them—all motive to industry is utterly taken away from them—and yet they are expected, on twenty-five cents a day, and fed on hominy and molasses, to work like the free and compensated laborers of the North ! Was ever comparison more unjust ?

4. What does this fact prove—that "men who are born slaves are ignorant and indolent?" Does it not prove too much for slavery ?—that if you continue to keep men in slavery you will keep them ignorant and indolent ? To use the apt phrase—it don't prove "anything else ;" and if there is any argument in such a fact to support slavery "I can't see it." Give a man freedom and you remove his ignorance ; give him fair wages, with education, and you remove his indolence—other things being equal. Educated liberty, alone, is "the proper state of industry." All history and experience unite with common sense to attest this to be true.

5. I happen to be one of the "emancipationists" who have travelled "among negroes south of Washington ;" I have lived among them, for years, in this country and in the West Indies. I therefore "speak that which I know and testify that which I have seen," when I put here on record the fact that the negro will work well, when kindly treated and fairly paid. The facts of the case abundantly prove this. It will yet be proved more triumphantly in America.

6. The force of the strained inference of the N. Y. Express is all broken by the single fact that some of the most "reliable witnesses" in the case of the negro laborers, who are "newspaper correspondents," are the very persons who are directing much of this labor. It seems that this gentleman in question, who has so many negroes in charge, is himself a correspondent for the the Manchester Guardian ! I can readily bring thousands of competent witnesses to the stand—officers of the regular army and navy, quartermasters, surgeons, paymasters, colonels and generals who will testify that when well cared for and fairly paid the negroes work to the advantage of the public service.

It will be found, too, as this great struggle for the Union and the Constitution progresses to its conclusion of peace and liberty, that the negroes can do other things to promote it, quite as important as labor.

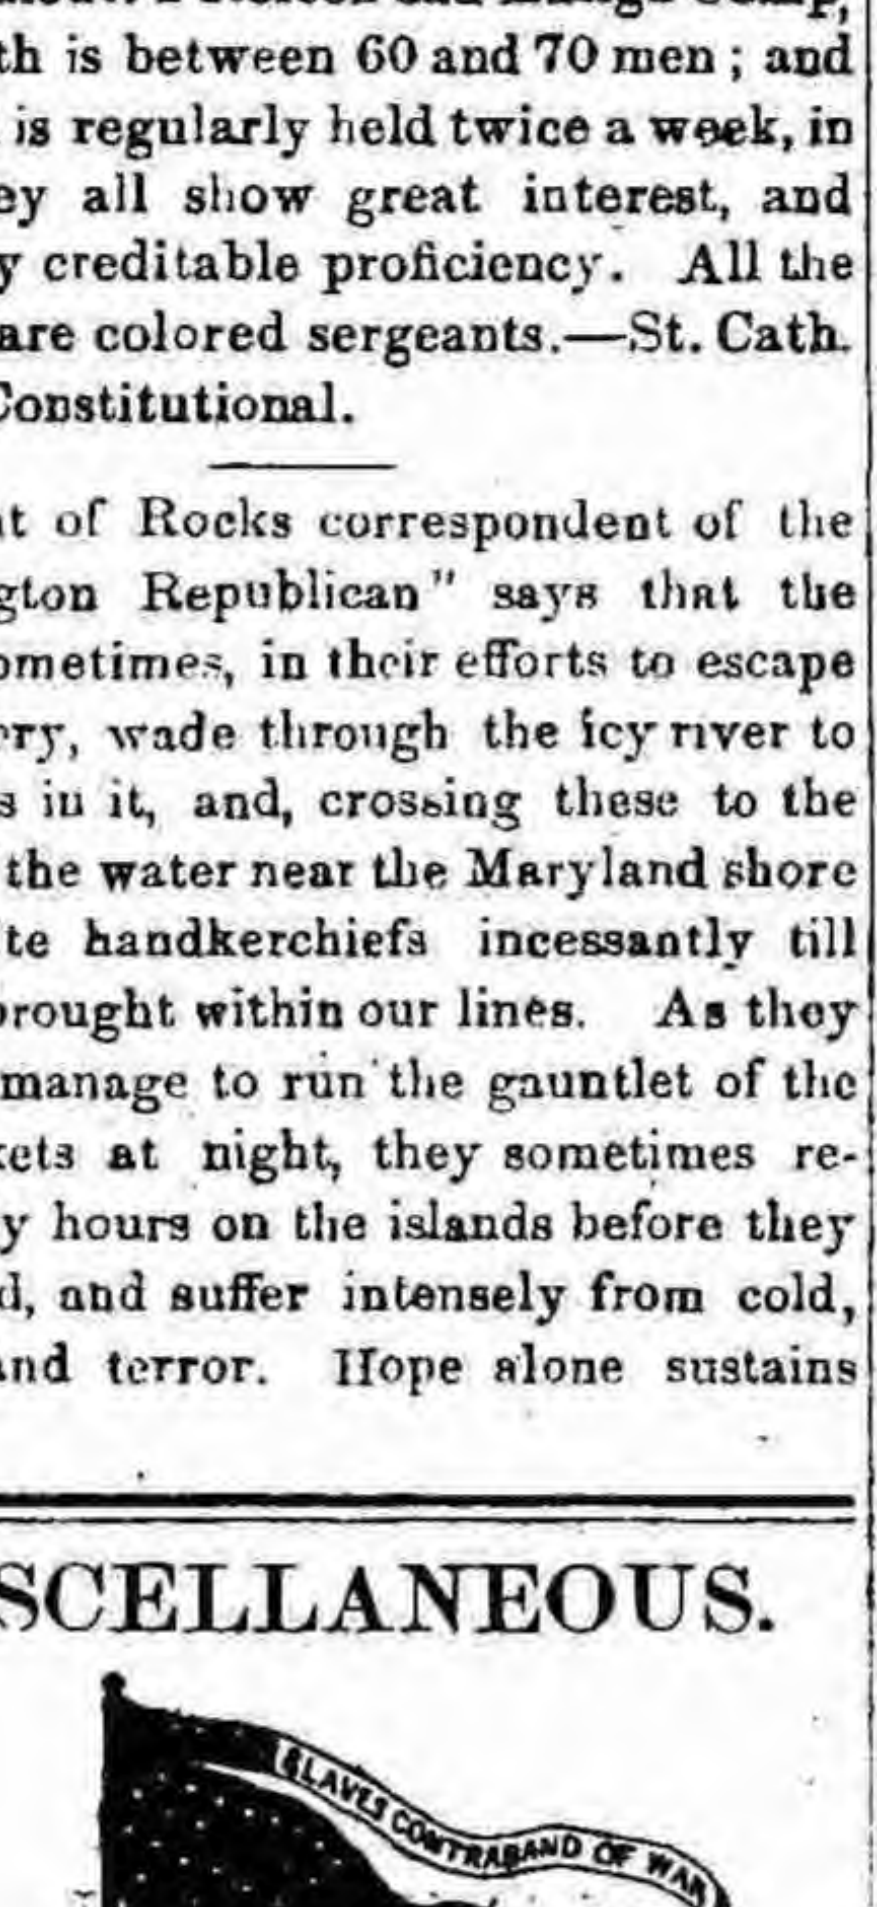
C. W. DENISON, U. S. Chaplain.
from Port Royal, S. C.

CAMPHENE ACCIDENT IN WASHINGTON.—On Tuesday evening, Elizabeth Moulton, a colored servant in the family of Mr. Barrow Frere, on D near Tenth street south, whilst engaged in filling a lamp, near a stove, from a can of camphene, accidentally spilled a few drops on the fire, which caused an explosion of the liquid in the can, an in an instant the woman was enveloped in flames. In her terror, she ran to her mistress for aid, and the flames communicated to the clothing of Mrs. Frere, who tried but did not succeed in extinguishing the flames, and was badly burned in the attempt. A son of Mrs. F., trying to rescue his mother, had his hands and arms badly burned. The colored woman ran into the street, and fell ; a gentleman near came to her relief and wrapping his shawl about her, carried her back into the house. It is feared that her injuries will prove fatal.

THE COLORED COMPANY.—This company is placed under the charge of Captain McGhie, Lieut. Peterson and Ensign Camp, Its strength is between 60 and 70 men ; and their drill is regularly held twice a week, in which they all show great interest, and make very creditable proficiency. All the sergeants are colored sergeants.—St. Cath. (C. W.) Constitutional.

A Point of Rocks correspondent of the "Washington Republican" says that the negroes sometimes, in their efforts to escape from slavery, wade through the icy river to the islands in it, and, crossing these to the margin of the water near the Maryland shore wave white handkerchiefs incessantly till they are brought within our lines. As they generally manage to run the gauntlet of the rebel pickets at night, they sometimes remain many hours on the islands before they are noticed, and suffer intensely from cold, hunger, and terror. Hope alone sustains them.

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860 : "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here ; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says : "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes : "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says : "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis : "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.

2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.

3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric; will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.

4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.

5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.

6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands ; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.

7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

THE
PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC.

The undersigned announce in preparation a

MILITARY ALMANAC,

SUITED TO THE
REQUIREMENTS OF THE TIMES.

It will contain about Fifty Pages of valuable statistical and reading matter, among which will be found a statement of the causes and antecedents of the war, with a succinct narrative of its progress and incidents, including the principal battles and skirmishes, by land and sea, to the present time ; a list of the leading officers of the Government, political and military, with biographical notices, and the leading officers of the so-called Southern Confederacy ; a sketch of the organization of the army, the insignia of officers ; an abstract of the articles of war ; tables of pay and and rations ; national hymns, anecdotes, &c., &c., making a complete

Book of Reference for the Use of the People.

Price 12 cents for single copy—$8 per hundred, with a further reduction on larger quantities.

A limited space will be devoted to advertisements, at the following rates :

One Page,	$30	Quarter Page,	$9
Three-fourth Page,	24	Eighth of Page	5
Half Page,	16	Two Pages,	55

Payable on presentation of proof sheet of advertisement for correction, otherwise with an addition of fifty per cent.

It will also embrace a Mercantile Directory containing names of dealers, at a charge of fifty cents to each, payable at the time of subscribing.

To bring this Department more prominently before the general public, copies of the work will be gratuitously suspended for reference in the principal hotels of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other large cities. In addition, each advertiser of half a page or more may specify, at the time of subscribing, twelve hotels in any of the above cities, or such others as may be of convenient access to the publishers, where copies shall be gratuitously suspended.—A copy will also be hung up for public reference in the business place of each advertiser whose bill is promptly paid. Advertisements are to appear in all copies issued previous to December 1st, which the publishers guarantee shall not be less than 3,000 copies, if only for gratuitous distribution. No person authorized to collect without written authorization.

DEXTER & CO.,
Publishers and Printers,
17 Spruce street, New York.
86 Milk street, opposite Pearl St., Boston.
146 South Fourth street, Philadelphia.
23 tf

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR !

Hair is an ornament and protection ; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely ; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess of dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing ; and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir : That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
THOS. R. CROCKER,
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir : You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.

D. W. INGERSOL,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 12th, 1855.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir : Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

JAMES EDWIN HALSEY,
193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Headache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want a good and safe article.

ALBRO LYONS.
20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway ; Mrs. Stant's, 73 Thompson St.; Chas. H. Ring's, 156 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

WM ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD !!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of

THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action ; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt ; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes of people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb hat grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Warranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body ; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why ? Simply because they are good, excellently good ; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occasionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY ;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.
Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25 ; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS :

EMBELLISHMENT—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake ; or he Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizensihp,—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihndas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture —by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon.
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James m'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S. Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Mercer Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25 ; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50 ; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS : Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gordon Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. ell. Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo., 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

ife of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

Th Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom ; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on slavery, and the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights ; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory : also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts. ; four copies, 50 cts ; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice : Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 294 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 15 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses—viz : 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin,
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die !" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress ; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream ;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz. or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland ;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party ; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia ; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents must be added.

Turner's J. A. Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
00 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear ; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. I. NO. 28 NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 8, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENTS

The Weekly Anglo-African,
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY
BY ROBT HAMILTON
NO 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.
Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines, if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.
All communications for the paper must be addressed ROBT HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, New York

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY

PART II

Hear the word '—who fight for freedom'
Shout it in the battle van'
Hope! for bleeding human nature '
Christ the God, is Christ the Man:
H BEECHER STOWE

CHAPTER IX.

MEETING AND GREETING.

Maggie having been introduced to the Poet as the cousin of Henry, was without ceremony taken to his father's, the uncle of Placido, and there introduced as the wife of an old friend of his, it being understood that Henry was to remain incognito, as they could not possibly have the slightest idea of him. Madame Blake was to remain as a guest, till the return of her husband from a voyage at sea, with which fact the Poet was familiar.

Here everything around was strange to Maggie, who found herself suddenly transferred from wretchedness as a slave on the hacienda of Emanuel Garcia, to that of the happiness of a lady in the elegant mansion of one of the wealthiest and most refined black merchants in the West Indies. Everything was kindness and affection, and but for the thought of the absence of her husband for a time, she would have been the happiest of women. But now she had reconciled herself to his course, for since meeting with the Poet, she was satisfied that he was not alone in the important scheme for the redemption of his race.

CHAPTER X.

SEEKING EMPLOYMENT.

With an affectionate leave of his wife, concealing from her his real movement, she rather suspecting his return to America; with sack in hand, Blake started ere a member of the family stirred.

Early this morning a soft rap at the door, aroused the Poet, who lodged in his study.

'It is not possible," said he, on opening the door; 'you are off already?'

'Yes cousin I must be off to meet the vessel in time, as she'll make no delay.'

'That's right, but tell me how you knew of the situation, when you were here yesterday?'

'I knew the place was vacant and a black preferred to fill it, and none other to take it than myself; whom if they could not secure, they intended to sail without the office being filled.'

'That explains. Well I must say ——'.

'Goodbye, cousin!' interrupted Blake, reaching out his hand.

'Goodbye!' responded Placido, when soon Blake was in a diligence hastening on towards Matanzas.

The next morning he approached the vessel lying at her moorings in the harbor; a burly Portugee, an excellent seaman, standing on her quarter deck.

'Ship ahoy!' cried the black in familiar nautical phrase.

'Aye, aye!' answered the Portugee.

'Master aboard sir?'

'I answer to that name; what's the matter?'

'I wish to speak to him.'

'Come along my hardy!' he replied in true sailor language.

Taking from his pocket a certificate of his marine qualifications, obtained when he left the slaver at Florida, and which he always managed to keep from Franks, who had lost sight entirely of it—he presented it, soliciting the situation of sailing master, having learned that the proprietors preferred black seamen.

'You are the very black that I've been looking for,' said the Portugee.

'Have you known of me before sir?' enquired Blake with no little anxiety.

'No,' replied the Portugee; 'but I'm in want of just such a larky as you; a likely good looking black to wrestle with the storms and outrip the hurricanes. By your looks a grin from you would fascinate a mermaid; the flash of your eye obscure the most vivid streak of lightning; and the sound of your voice silence the loudest clap of thunder. Have you ever staid a tempest and quieted the raging seas?'

'No sir;' was the simple reply to all this tirade. 'You are the master commanding, I believe?'

'No; my name is Senor Juan Castello, first mate of the Vulture. Can you remember that?' assumptuously said the Portugee in the true style of a slaver.

'I can, sir,' answered Blake.

'Can you read?' continued Castello.

'Yes sir.'

'What is your name?'

'Henry sir,' Blake now adopting his own name instead of Gilbert, the name by which he went to Cuba.

'Henry what? cant you afford another name? Your daddy must have been a poor man.'

'Blake, sir.'

'Ah! I thought you would be able to raise another. Are you English? I see you have an English name.

'African born sir, and Spanish bred,' was the reply.

'How in the name of St. Peter, did you come by that English name of yours?'

'Henrico Blacus was my name in Spanish, but being much among the English they called me Henry Blake.'

'Ah ha! I see,' replied Castello, with seeming satisfaction from the interview; 'been on the coast I see by your papers.

'Yes,' said Blake, 'I have.'

'The coast is divided into three trades ivory, gold, and slave. Which of them have you been in? Do you take?' knowingly explained the Portugee, concluding with that quaint expression.

'I cannot inform you sir,' replied Blake, seizing the opportunity to gain a point; 'in this my honor is at stake. I cannot betray my trust!'

'Good man, and good talk!' exclaimed the Portugee, who had the employment of the hands on board. 'You're the sailing master of the Vulture at your own wages! Doff duds![*] When making a low bow, wheeling around, going down the gangway to the quay, Blake picked up his luggage which had been left ashore, went on board entering immediately on duty.

CHAPTER XI.

COASTWARD BOUND.

The old ship 'Merchantman' fitted up at Baltimore and brought to Matanzas, had been changed in name to 'Vulture,' and a slight alteration from the original intention had been made in the arrangements. Lieutenant Seeley, who was to have filled the post of supercago, through the influence of his lady abandoned the enterprise entirely; passed-midshipman Spencer being appointed in his place. Captains Paul and Garcia, and Royer and Castello, were to be respectively commanders and mates in the order of the list, to represent their national character, as occasion required them to sail under either American or Spanish colors. The most active preparations were being made, and besides the officers already named, there were thirty other whites, many of whom were Americans, all shipped as common seamen, but in reality were supernumeraries retained to meet a contingency and check an emergency such as might ensue, as the real working hands of the vessel were blacks.

All eyes seemed fixed on Blake. His movements were of the most energetic and decisive character, being those of one adapted if not accustomed to give orders. From point to point, giving orders; sometimes scaling the shrouds among the rigging, at another moment mounting the top-masts with an ease and dexterity that astonished the superior officers. An expression of deep concern and anxiety marked the motions of his countenance.

Presently a boy on shore approached, to whom he beckoned, the lad passing quickly up the gangway handing him a note which hastily opening he read; saying in answer; 'Tell her I shant be gone long!' tearing it into fragments and casting them into the water; the boy bowing left the ship.

A fragment of this note fell upon the deck unobserved by Blake, which through curiosity was picked up by Castello, the words on which read.

'Faithfully yours to the end of the war
PLACIDO.'

'A letter from his wife I reckon!' said Captain Paul who had just come on board behind the boy; 'I'm glad you secured him he's a good fellow, all things considered.'

'You know him then?' enquired Castello.

'Yes, yes, he came to Cuba with my company.'

'What in St. Peter can she mean by this termination of the letter! "Yours to the end of the war!". This I cant understand: "Placido," as its signed, I suppose is her father's name.'

'I don't know; his name is Gilbert,' replied Paul.

'Gilbert! he shipped as Henry Blake,' said Castello.

'No matter; I suppose he wants to conceal his identity in the business!' suggested Paul.

'Yes, yes!' replied Castello, 'I noticed he had a good deal of feeling about the thing, and talked about his "honor" being at stake.'

'That explains,' said Paul, 'why his wife covers herself under a fictitious name, and conceals the business he is in, as if he was going to "war."'

'That explains it!' concluded Castello, satisfied with the tattling fragments of the billet.

The vessel was arranged to carry two thousand slaves, with full provisions for a nine months voyage. All things being in readiness and all hands to their posts, with the Spanish colors flying from the peak, under the stern command of Emanuel Garcia who boldly stood upon the quarter-deck to take her out of the harbor, she sailed in April near the first of May, for the Western Coast of Africa.

CHAPTER XII.

TRANS-ATLANTIC.

Scarcely had the Vulture reached the outside of the harbor before Paul appeared with glass in hand, aside of Capt. Garcia, at whose orders the Spanish colors were run down and the American hoisted in their stead. Paul was an able and experienced officer, who, according to usage in the trade, had taken this position as protection against the British West India cruisers, it being a disputed point that they have a right to search American vessels for slaves, however suspicious the vessel.

'A fine breeze!' remarked Paul.

'Quite so,' replied Garcia, who still stood at his side.

'What do you think of the black?' continued Paul, referring to the sailing-master.

'A strange fellow indeed! I cannot understand him. I hope he may turn out all right. I can't understand as you do that signing of the note sent him, 'till the end of the war.'

'That may have been caused by the ignorance of his wife who sent it,' explained Paul.

'Not a bit of it! I know her well. She's far from being ignorant, and knows only too well what to say and how to say it. Besides the note was not from her, but the noted negro or mulatto poet, Placido, an educated fellow who visits among the first white families in Havana, and even attends the levees of the Captain General. I noticed this blunder, but feared to excite the suspicions of Castello and others,' explained Garcia.

'Well really, well really!' said Paul with a tuck of the lips and a sigh.

'There's certainly something brewing among the negroes, as it is not long since much sensation was produced by the appearance of a prayer written by the mulatto poet, in which Heaven was invoked in the name of the slaves of Cuba.'

'It then must mean something more than a negro blunder,' remarked Paul.

'I fear so, really; and we should, in self-defence, if nothing more, keep a strict eye upon him and the negroes on board.'

'I'll go bail for that! Blame me if he escapes the sight of my eye!' said Paul; 'I can see a nigger through the decks!'

'Yes, but you can't regard him as a common negro, Captain Paul—one who possesses his intelligence—and I shall never forget the shrewdness with which he managed the purchase of the girl Lotty. Peter Albertis is regarded as one of the most discreet men, and any one who outdoes him, is not to be trifled with, I do assure you,' said Garcia; 'but——'

'A sail!' cried a voice from aloft,[*] Paul immediately sweeping the ocean with his glass.

'What of a sail, Captain Paul?' inquired Spencer just emerging from the companion way.

'I see a vessel in the distance, a brigantine British flag, by Harry!' replied Paul.

'How does she stem?' asked Garcia.

'She quarters our starboard bow.'

During this time the black sailing master stood upon the forecastle viewing with a steady eye all that passed, while the blacks on board all turned their attention toward him. A change suddenly came over his countenance—a stern look of grim satisfaction; while great anxiety, with flushes of excitement and fear, were apparent among the whites. The secret soon revealed itself. The British cruiser Sea Gull, which had suspected and been watching the movements of the Vulture, had now entered chase after her, gaining most rapidly, when the shaft broke, and the screw was disabled for service. On spreading her sails she was found inadequate to vie with the Baltimore clipper, and was consequently left in the distance, while the slaver proudly riding the waves arrogantly defied her approach.

'There has something gone wrong about her,' said Paul; 'as you see she has hoisted the canvass.'

'If she could catch us every man would be hung,' said Spencer with fright.

'All except the negroes, you mean. These they'd take to the colonies, and put them in office to rule the whites,' sarcastically replied Paul.

The whites raised a shout at the accident to the Sea Gull, which was then very evident. In this the blacks did not participate, being governed entirely by the apparent feelings of their head on board, upon whom they invariably cast a look at every incident. Did he but smile or give a look of approbation, the bland grin was seen to light up the dark gloom of their sombre faces; but did he look grave or ignore by notice passing events, then they too appeared as sad as pall-bearers in a funeral train. All this to the whites was significant and foreboding; but whence the beginning and whither the end, was incomprehensible to them.

The negroes fully understood themselves, as arrangements had been made with the old stevedore, Zada Ghu, who, in connection with loading the vessel, also procured for the Vulture negro sailors, which having been obtained, were assembled at his house ready to start for Matanzas, when fortunately Blake made his appearance just in time to instruct them. They knew their man, and understood themselves, and, so understanding, acted well their part.

For several hours pushing the chase without advantage, the Sea Gull tacked about and was suddenly lost to view. Paul eagerly surveyed the seas, when not but sky and water could be seen. Scaling the shrouds, Blake for an hour or more sat on the mizen-mast scanning the ocean.

The clouds which partially curtained the zenith had disappeared, the sun was fast receding from the horizon, the prospect which had been doubtful now seemed definite, and the beautiful crimson sky splendidly contrasted with the sublimity of the black and gloomy gulf beneath. It was then that the vastness of Omnipotence was felt and realised in all its grandeur, it was then the human heart manifested its most delicate sympathies; it was then that the soul poured forth from its hidden recesses those gifts of God to man, the Divine sentiment of benevolence, philanthropy and charity in tender accents of compassionate regard in Christian solicitude. The soul then dives into the mysteries of godliness or soars to the realms of bliss, when the reflector, for the time, is lost entirely to external objects.

Orders being given for the evening, and Garcia on watch, Paul entered the cabin, taking his seat with more than ordinary soberness, being closely eyed by his ship fellows. Here, quite unexpectedly he acknowledged his error in a matter which all had forgotten, manifested remorse, making admissions which surprised them all. He renounced the traffic in slaves as vile, accusing parties in New York for his participance in it. They first induced him to engage in it, when, finding it lucrative, he had subsequently made it a livelihood. But he would offend Heaven no longer—he had gone his last voyage, and then would have quit, but could not get from the vessel. He would relinquish all agency as far as he could in the interest of the voyage they were then making.

'At an unguarded moment,' said Paul; 'when self-interest was all-prevalent with me, I suffered myself, through political motives, to be forced into this thing, who, like Satan, not content with his own rebellion against Heaven, but corrupted some of the Angels, dragging them from Paradise with him.[*]

Spencer, who was young, regretted the part he had taken in the affair at New York, and hoped that one who had proven herself an honor to her sex, whose heart knew nothing but goodness, having, in his estimation, no other attribute than kindness, would forgive him. He had just entered the business of slavetrading; knew nothing about it, and should abandon the enterprise on his return, and sooner, did he have an opportunity of leaving the vessel.

So explaining and understanding each other, they went to their berths to await with anxiety a return of morning. But the blacks and Spaniards, though not intended for their ears, had caught every word that fell from the Americans, to the joy of the one, and the sadness of the others. Joy to the negroes who designed upon the Spaniards, and sadness to the Spaniards who feared the negroes. Though they paced the decks in their respective quarters, as if picket guarding each other, they mutually withdrew for the evening, and rested quietly till duty required their presence.

CHAPTER XIII.

SIGNIFICANT.

Early next morning, the first indication of the kind since the ship set sail, was the attention of the whites being arrested by a merry sea song of the blacks, which they chanted with cheerful glee, and rather portentous mood and decisive air:

"My country, the land of my birth,
Farewell to thy fetters and thee!
The by-word of tyrants—the scorn of the earth,
A mockery to all thou shalt be!
Hurra, for the sea and its waves!
Ye billows and surges, all hail!
My brothers henceforth—for ye scorn to be SLAVES,
As ye toss up your crests to the gale;
Farewell to the land of the blood-hound and chain,
My path is away o'er the fetterless main!"—

George Royer, the American mate, full of ardor and patriotism, hastening on deck, commanded immediate silence. Aware of the change that had taken place in his superior, Captain Paul, he felt the more sensible that the song was a taunt by the blacks to the Americans. To this order the negroes paid little attention, but continued singing the more cheerfully. Startling suspicions at once impressed him that the blacks designed a mutiny with the negro sailing master at their head, and Blake now became a dread. Hastening to the master's room and imparting his convictions, Garcia, followed by Captain Paul who also heard the message, was quickly on the deck.

'Silence!' commanded the Spaniard; 'what in the name of St. Joseph does all this mean?' when Blake, raising his hand, the blacks instantly ceased.

'What is the meaning of this disturbance, Blake?' inquired Paul on the negroes' ceasing.

'There has been none, sir!' was the reply.

'Were not the commands of the second officer, Mr. Royer, disobeyed?' continued Paul.

'They were not, sir. 'Less noise' was the command, and they sung easier, though it may have been more cheerfully. My people are merry when they work, especially at sea; and they must not be denied the right to sing, a privilege allowed seamen the world over!'

'Is that all?' asked Paul sharply, who, although declining a participance in the trade of the voyage, still held his commanding authority, representing the American interest.

'It is, sir!' replied Blake with feeling.

'Then I see no cause to fault them! Cheerily, then my lads, cheerily!' said Paul, who went directly to the cabin, when the negroes at the command of their leader commenced more cheerfully to sing:

'O Cuba! 'tis in thee
Dark land of slavery,
In thee we groan!
Long have our chains been worn,
Long has our grief been borne—
Our flesh has long been torn,
Even from our bones!
The white man rules the day

He bears despotic sway
O'er all the land;
He wields the tyrant's rod,
Fearless of man or God,
And at his impious nod,
We fall or stand:
Oh, shall we longer bleed!'—

Do you hear that!' exclaimed Royer, who also had gone to the cabin, but then stood in the companion way in a sulky mood, at the course pursued by his superior, 'these negroes are determined on mischief, and we will have to keep a close watch over them, if we wish to keep gashes out of our throats."

'Let us neither invite nor provoke those gashes to be made, Mr. Royer. Our over zealousness sometimes, in a good or a bad cause, if you please, makes us aggravate the resentment we are endeavoring to stave off.'

'Well, time will show who is right!' concluded Royer, pressing his lips to suppress the feeling.

And so it will as well prove who is wrong" replied the captain in conclusion.

Subsequently both Garcia and Royer became quite pleasantly disposed, treating with civility and even affability, the entire ship's company, frequently jesting with the common seamen with whom they met in the course of their duty. And the negroes, being mostly hired slaves,[*] and heretofore restricted in their movements about the ship, then boldly walked at will over the vessel, enjoying all the privileges of common seamen. The tone and sentiment of things had changed, and every one felt himself at liberty; and on terms of friendship with his fellows.

Fine weather and fine sailing now sped the vessel swiftly over the bosom of the ocean, each heart rejoicing, and each feeling seemingly satisfied that—

"No mail clad serfs, obedient to their lord,
In grim array the crimson cross demand.
Or gay assemble round the festive board.
Their chief's retainers—an immortal band."

Though Paul may, and doubtless will be censured for his course, and convicted of timidity and weakness, if not cowardice and want of integrity, but the sequel will prove him to have been right, and his course suited to the circumstances.

Among the blacks there was a singular character, comical in appearance, and comic by nature. His wit was surprisingly ready and almost unbounded, and provokingly ludicrous. Irony and satire abounded in almost everything he said, so that he became the attraction of all on board. Both Royer and Costello much disliked him, and fain would have summarily disposed of him, had fears not prevented. Gascar was a youth in adolescence, and being of slightly curved spine, with rather long legs and broad shoulders, though low stature—all of which were congenital—when he spoke and looked up, his expression was most striking, and he knew it.

'What are you doing there, you stack of black cats! Get up out of that?' said Royer, as the boy sat on a coil of rope upon the deck.

'Take 'are dat black cat don't scratch somebody!' responded the boy, throwing up his eyes in Royer's face, at which there was a roar of laughter from the whites present.

'There,' said the mate; 'you see what I told you, Captain!'

'I see nothing, sir; I see nothing!' tartly replied Paul.

'If I had my way, I'd keep the negroes in their place!' muttered Royer, which Gascar hearing, as though he had not noticed it, instantly commenced humming, loud enough to be heard by all—

"I'm a goin' to Afraka,
Whare de white man dare not stay;
I' ketch 'im by de collar,
Den de white man holler;
I hit 'im on de pate,
Den I make 'im blate!
I seize 'im by de throat—
Laud!—he bellar like a goat!"[†]

Hastening away, Royer declared that the only place where a white man was safe, and a negro taught to know his place, was the United States; and he cared not to go, nor to live anywhere else but there. Business alone compelled him to do otherwise, and did he but get back, he would never again leave his native country, as the last few days' experience had taught him no other was equal to it. In his own country a white man was all that he desired to be; and out of it, he was no better than a negro. Such a state of things would not do for him, and he determined never again to place himself in a position to bear them.

'I see —' said Royer.

'A sail!' cried out Gascar, interrupting the sentence, when every eye was again strained over the ocean, and anxiety once more arresting their attention.

---

[*] Doff duds—a nautical phrase, meaning 'pull off clothes,' or 'get ready for work.'

[*] Slavers always keep a 'lookout' aloft, as the person is termed.

[*] The author met with an old slavetrading master of a vessel, who admitted his wrongs, and seemed sorely to repent his great sins.

[*] Slaves are kept and hired to parties by the day or month, as a source of income to their master.

[†] This song was sung by a little black boy, sitting by himself on a fence, in the South, musing.

ANGLO-AFRICAN EXHIBITION OF INDUSTRY AND ART.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 16, 1861.

MR. EDITOR: Can I solicit a space in your widely circulated journal for the following communication? It has been my earnest desire, for years past, to see in our large central cities, an exhibition devoted exclusively to works of Art, artistic, mechanical, and industrial, either the productions or the property of our race; an exhibition whose aim should be to encourage those noble propensities apparent, in our people, and which would undoubtedly not only rescue from perpetual obscurity, many gems of Art, but would inspire a generous rivalry among those who have themselves made great advances in those noble paths. It has always been very striking to me that this exhibition would be eminently successful. Why? because there are artists now among us who would strive to be well represented at this exhibition, by productions of their greatest skill, who would feel as if their whole future fame depended upon their success in excelling the works of others.

The ingenious mechanic, with his useful improvements, his well-contrived machines, his works of skill, would be ambitious to secure himself eminence in his craft. The possessors of gems of Art or wonderful pieces of mechanical and ingenious construction, would be most anxious to display their rarities, and obtain merited applause for their industrious endeavors in making their valuable collections. Let all contribute to this exhibition, let the nimble fingers of the ladies do their best, for should this exhibition take place, (as I hope it will,) the ladies, who will doubtless be well represented, shall receive commendations in proportion to their noble endeavors.

What can I say to back this idea? Were I only to say that it will encourage Art in all its shapes among our race, I had said enough, but see the other advantages consequent upon it. You doubtless remember, that Michael Angelo owed his eminence as an artist to the friendly encouragement of 'De Medicis;' his talent might perhaps have lain dormant; but encouraged and stimulated by the praises bestowed on the statue of a satyr, which he had formed from snow, he rose to the brilliant fame which now irradiates his memory.

May we not, by this exhibition, and by the disposition on our part, to encourage Art, bring into repute talent of the highest order, now unrevealed for the want of encouragement and patronage? May we not, by this tendency on our part to encourage all in their efforts, embolden modest merit to display its anonymous works in the exhibition? whereas through retiring modesty, want of influence, fear of reproach, and chill penury, its works would otherwise never come to light. Many remember the melancholy fate of poor "Corregio," he whose pictures rank highest in Europe; he whose brilliant and unassisted talent has adorned Europe's finest galleries; who died from fatigue in bearing home the bag of paltry copper coins, which miserly compensation was awarded to him for one of his greatest pictures and masterpieces; we look back with disgust on the memory of his sordid patrons. May not the same odium attach to our memory in later years?

Let us now say, that besides encouraging modest and unassisted genius, we can thus bring into more prominent position talent that is already highly developed; talent that has already valiantly fought its own way up to reputation, despite the obstacles that encompassed it, and the labors and privations that surrounded it.

It is our imperative duty thus to act; let no sordid considerations withhold us from stretching out welcome hands to receive struggling genius—to comfort those faltering from want of patronage, and to enable them to gain the high goal for which they were aiming.

What gratification would be our share, if in carrying out this idea, we should cause to spring up among us some "Raphael" of inimitable talent;—some "Titian" who would cause the canvas again to glow with his unrivalled flesh-tints; some "Fra Bartholomeo," whose coloring equalled the richness of his own Italian sky; some "De Vanci," who would again display the wonderful form of man in all its glory, and portray his passions with undeviating truth;—some "Murillo," who would refresh the eye with his familiar and pleasing domestic scenes. Again, how well repaid would we be, if we were to awaken into activity some "Fulton," to astonish the world and himself with his invention;—some "Newton," to expound to man Nature's admirable laws; or others, who, thus encouraged, and thus stimulated, would emulate the skill of those great men who have enriched the world by their works.

Here I would also state that this being an exhibition of our own race, we should not be apt to feel backward in asserting our talent by our works. So much for works of Art, Mechanism, &c.

A few remarks may be made as to the exhibition of articles comprising works and gems of Art, now in the possession of our people. Many a masterpiece, for want of appreciation, is left unheeded, to decay among rubbish and ruins. By having this exhibition, we may bring to light some pictures of precious value. Doubtless, many have read of the Spanish beggar whose few things were about to be sold for rent; among them, two gentlemen recognized, in a small and old picture, dimmed by smoke, one of Murillo's paintings. The picture was sold for a sum sufficient to cover the beggar's debts, and render him comfortable for the rest of his days. May not such a fortunate occurrence happen in our day? May we not rescue some master-piece from oblivion, that now adorns the walls of the poor man's dilapidated house? May not even possessors of fine pictures find out, to their own good fortune, that a painting unheeded among their collections, is some masterpiece of European or American Art?

Some may urge the unwillingness of possessors of works of art to entrust them to a public exhibition. Others may urge that sufficient artists and mechanics do not exist in our race, to justify such an idea; or even that few among us have works of art of any rank, or worthy of exhibition.

We know that some obstacles will surround such an attempt as this exhibition; but the difficulties before enumerated are too futile to need refutation. The very fact that they are urged by persons, demonstrates that such persons have never had an opportunity to judge of these facts; there has never been an occasion where the genius, talent, and acquirements of our race could be fairly represented or exhibited. The authors of works of art or mechanism, after having completed their labors, remain still totally unknown, together with their works, excepting to the circle of private friends, and so it is, and always will be, that the talent which is now in our people, buried in obscurity and the humble walks of private life, will remain totally unknown, unless some manner of giving their talents publicity be contrived.

We know that talent of any rank soever gradually becomes wearied of its own endeavors, gradually wears itself away for want of the stimulus of public praise. We have but few obstacles to surmount, and a great amount of inestimable talent will be rescued from the obscurity of private life—we have, in fact, nothing difficult to overcome but our own inactivity; and the dislodging from the names of our people the accusations of want of genius, by presenting to the world the stern facts themselves. Let us arouse ourselves from this lethargy, let us stand forward boldly and intrepidly, and demonstrate the fact to a biased world, that few works of art, and they far between, having been visible, is owing to our want of encouragement, and our lack of opportunity to give them publicity; let us, now that an opportunity presents itself to destroy these selfish opinions, make good use of it. Let no consideration withhold us from the attempt, and let us redeem ourselves in the eyes of those bigots who impute inferiority to us of talent, and who, having had rare opportunities of education, have only become as John Randolph said, "like some land in his State, which produced more weeds and stubble the more it was cultivated.'

I hope that our people will seize hold of this plan with their whole soul, and carry it out.

Let us now endeavor to raise deserving and hidden talent to the rank it merits. Let us endeavor to arouse all those who, by their genius, are worthy a due share of applause and commendation, and thus clearly prove that the genius of our people, if properly cultivated and encouraged, can compete with that of any race or nation. We have but to attempt it, and success is sure. We have but to throw ourselves confidently on our resources, to appeal to the people who will readily answer to the call, and the whole affair will triumph, Art be stimulated, talent rewarded, genius cultivated, and our people made fully aware of their own resources;—these are the fruits of such an exhibition—the objects had in view would thus be fully attained. Another advantage is this: we will awaken in our people a greater love for, and appreciation of, the Sciences and Arts. The more such a tendency is shown, on the part of our people, the more Science, in all its handsome developments, will be nourished by them; the greater will be their assiduity in gaining for themselves the inestimable boon of educational improvement and mental culture; for, in proportion to their love of Art, will increase their love of belle lettres, will increase their refinement, until, finally they will become distinguished for their acquirements.

This is the hope which I have nourished for years; its realization would cause me infinite pleasure; and I can see no other mode of diffusing such feeling, but by having such an exhibition as I propose.

As I remarked, an objection may be urged of our lack of artists. Who has not heard of the unsurpassed Chaplin of Huntingdon, Pennsylvania?—the inimitable Duncanson of Cincinnati?—the merited fame of a Simpson of Boston?—the aspiring genius of a Dorsey of Philadelphia?—the well-earned celebrity of a Bowser of Philadelphia,—or of the astonishing Naturalist, S. G. Brown, of Washington, D. C.

We must not expect specimens of the Arts from our race at this exhibition, equalling those of the Saxon race;—they have their colleges, academies, their annual exhibition, to awaken talent, and encourage it on every occasion. We have never had anything of that kind. Let us arouse ourselves, and our endeavors will be highly rewarded with success. Let some arrangement be made to carry out this plan. I think such an exhibition could be easily brought to perfection, by our artists, and others, meeting or corresponding together on this subject. Many of our people, both ladies and gentlemen, will readily assist in the undertaking. They can make all such necessary arrangements as may best suit the purposes desired. I hope, Mr. Editor, you will assist by allowing space for communications on the subject in your valuable paper. Trusting that I may meet with a favorable response, and the object aimed at be eventually, and that ere long, attained. I am your truly,

EDWARD M. THOMAS.

Rev. Mr. Stiggins said: "I am a charitable man, and think every one entitled to his opinion; and never have selfish malice against my foes, not even against Mr. Mulberry, who has indirectly called me an old sinner; but still, if the Lord has a thunderbolt to spare, I think it would be well bestowed on brother Mulberry's head."

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 8, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

WANTED—MONEY.

The Government is running short of cash. There is a little matter of only fifty millions of the 7.30 per cent loan not yet taken up by the people. The "Tribune" naively asks, "Is there not force of character somewhere in the Government to make an electrifying appeal to the country for an immediate taking up of these fifty millions by every man or woman who has $100 or over to spare, and who loves his country to lend in this crisis, whatever he may? Men in power! do not drift heedlessly, impotently upon bankruptcy without making at least a show of effort to avoid it! Ask the people to stand by themselves!"

Rather a husky sentence that, "ask the people to stand by themselves!" Daniel Webster said, "call upon the people to come to the rescue!" That is full souled and musical; it means something. The "Tribune" is dry and strident, because it twists a lie out of its mouth. It knows very well that it talks bosh, gammon and shrivelling humbug when it calls upon the present Government to electrify the people with a call to aid and support the same.

The Government has done what it could do to check and smother all generous and patriotic feelings out of the hearts of the northern people. It cashiered BUTLER, crushed FREMONT, bowstringed GEN. JIM LANE, upholds the pro-slavery demon, Gen. Stone, who should have been hung for his treachery at Ball's Bluff, drives the Hutchinson's from the camp on the Potomac—how can it, how dare it attempt to arrouse a free people by an appeal to justice or patriotism? Of all the memories of the past, of all the incidents of the present, of all the hopes for the future, there is but one to which through good report and through evil report, in the heat of battle, or the mazes of diplomacy, one alone to which it has been persistently faithful—SLAVERY! And how much patriotism, how much money can it conjure up in the free North, to uphold and maintain Slavery?

It is all very nice to "ask the people to stand by themselves!" They are doing just that thing to-day. And, if, when they "stand by themselves," they do not also stand by the Government, then let the blame fall upon the Government, who have befooled and deserted the people, in order to uphold and maintain the "chief corner stone" of the rebellion. The only people on whom the Government can consistently call for support and aid is the fomenters and upholders of the rebellion to whom they have secured the peculiar institution intact as far as the rebels would let them.

The people of the free States have expended five hundred millions of dollars, have shed their own blood freely to put down this slaveholders rebellion, M'Clellan has three hundred thousand men on the Potomac, Buell and Hallock have two hundred thousand in Kentucky and Missouri, Burnside is thundering at the gates of the old North State, and a slave auction is held within hearing of his guns, and likely hands bring fourteen or fifteen hundred dollars a piece!

It is to the people of the South then, the slaveholders themselves that the Government must make their appeal for money. They have got all the men, and we hope and pray that they have also got all the money which the free North will give them until they begin in earnest to put down this rebellion by beginning to put down slavery.

If the Government would get money, the way is easy: let it be true to its own position, true to the people whom it represents, and of whom it is the executive; what a purblind farce it would have been, had France and England carefully guaranteed serfdom to all the Russians while making war upon that great empire! How much wiser is it for the Lincoln Government to guarantee slavery in the present rebellion?

If the Government would get money let it manifest good faith towards those ideas upon which it is based and by which alone it can be upheld.

1st. Let it abolish slavery in the District of Columbia.

2d. Let it abolish slavery in the United States.

3d. Let it confiscate all the territory held by the rebels.

4th. Let it declare all such confiscated territory to be public lands and pledge the same, and the proceeds thereof when sold as the guarantee for the payment of a great NATIONAL LOAN.

5th. Let it issue treasury notes, and bonds receivable in payment for such lands when preempted or otherwise sold.

With such guarantees, the money would be forthcoming, at home and abroad. At home, faith in the Government would be restored, and the private hoards even to the last old stocking would be freely yielded up to a guaranteed hope for a peaceful and prosperous future. Abroad the glory of a free country would commend the credit, that is the faith, which the schooling of the nineteenth century has taught capitalists, can alone be granted to the even distribution, the subducted antagonisms, between capital and labor, which can only exist, where a free people cultivate a free soil.

SWIFT RETRIBUTION.

For time immemorial the people of the North have been bowing down to the slaveholders of the South, and doing whatever dirty work they wanted done. No proposition which they choose to submit was too base for the North to carry out. In vain did our fathers protest against such conduct, even before the Abolitionists were heard of, but their appeals and protestations were made in vain. The North continued in its course electing Southerners, or, if not, a Southerner, some Northern lick-spittle, to the higher offices of Government; and these men being the slaves of the slave power, followed most faithfully its behest. Three-fourths of all the offices in the gift of the General Government were filled by slaveholders, whether Army, Navy or Judicial. Now, behold the consequence. Almost all the officers being from the South, have not only forsaken their duties, but are now doing their utmost to sacrifice the country, and to crush out the principle that has given it vitality and renown; and the country is now trembling on the very brink of ruin, just because the North would not listen to the warning of the ever loyal, though deeply injured, black citizens, or to the pleadings of the Abolitionists. We doubt if national retribution ever followed so closely on the heels of national derilection of duty; but this people have yet the power to save the country—to save civilization, if they will but exercise it—but whether they will do so, the future only will show. If they arouse to the calls of duty—if they will listen to the voice of conscience—they may not only save themselves, but may also assist in saving this continent from the ravages of Slavery, and Africa from the terrible scourge of the slave trade. May God, in His infinite mercy, give this nation the will to act "in the living present."

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

HOOKER'S DIVISION, near Budd's Ferry, Charles Co. Md., Jan. 29, '62.

MR. EDITOR,—It seems to me that the elements do really conspire against the Union arms. It was said, and with apparent good reason, that so soon as the frost hardened the roads sufficiently to admit the transportation of artillery and baggage rains, the Grand army of the Potomac would make an advance. But since this declaration was made Jack Frost has become refractory, in the dark hours of twilight he breathes a fragile firmness, a sort of crust over the soft yielding mud, which is dispelled by the sun's first rays. This alternate thawing and freezing does more to render the road impassable than if the atmosphere continued above the freezing point. Thus Jack Frost has become, instead of an ally, an alien to the Federal cause.

If Manassas Gap, or even Richmond, the metropolis of rebeldom presented an easy conquest, this army, this "slumbering giant," could not budge an inch: here it would have to lie at its huge length, barricaded in the mud.

I committed an error in my last, please correct. Francis Coburn, should read George Coburn. I will make a few remarks upon this case, so that there shall be no misunderstanding of it. An order was sent up to the 26th Regiment Pa. Vols, by Gen. Hooker, to send outside the lines a boy who was claimed as a fugitive from slavery; this was the extent of that order. Lieut. Col. Vandyke, who is ever ready to do the bidding of slave master and kidnapper, transcended the intent and spirit of that order by ordering this teamster to bring the boy to his tent, for the purpose of handing him over to the pretended mas'er; thus constituting himself without any authority a judge and a civil magistrate. His duty, according to General Hooker's own statement was to have dismissed the slave catchers, to have had no communication whatever with them, and to have sent the boy with a corporal's guard outside the regimental lines; but the poor, old, imbecile fellow was so ignorant that he did not know his duty in a case so plain as this. George Coburn knew that General Hooker nor Colonel Vandyke had any shadow of authority to command him to become the enslaver of men, and he peremptorily refused to obey the order of Colonel Vandyke; and it was for disobedience of this infamous order that he was disrated. Mr. Coburn belongs to 11th Regiment Mass. Vols. (Col. Blaisdell)

We have the boy who was kidnapped, through the connivance of a certain officer belonging to the division, again with us. He was discovered about fifteen miles from here, in the custody of one James Maddock, a regular kidnapper, an associate with Skinner. This Skinner has already served a term at the Richmond jail for kidnapping I may remark here that this Maddock was in company with the parties to whom Vandyke surrendered the above mentioned slave. As soon as the boy was discovered they removed him from Maddock's house to Skinner's. Col. Small, on hearing of the boy's disappearance became highly indignant, and sent over to Skinner's and had the boy brought over to camp in a most deplorable condition. He met with a terrible accident playing with a miniature cannon. He received a whole charge of powder in his face, and will lose the sight of both his eyes. This is most terrible. He is an intelligent boy and about twelve years of age. I will give his own statement verbatim:

"My name is James Henry Barnes. My mother and father are dead. Her name was Sarah Barnes. Before she died we lived at 110 Massachusetts Avenue, Washington city; after her death I was sent to the poor house. I left there and came iinto Camp Union last October, and have been with the division ever since. Maddock asked me whether I would like to live with him, and said he would give me a horse to ride, plenty of good things to eat, plenty of fine clothes to wear, and he bought me about a half dollar's worth of cakes and candies. He asked me to get in his wagon; I got in; he took me to his house, which is about fifteen miles from here; I staid there about three weeks; he sent me from there to Skinner's, and about an hour before I was brought away from Skinner's I got my face hurt. Captain Webb and Lieutenant Snow were at Maddocks house when I was there; they told me to take care of their horses. Captain Webb and Maddock are old cronies; I overheard Maddocks say that I was worth one hundred and eighty-five dollars."

This is the lad's statement, which was not even shaken by cross-examination. While the case is a plain one, and the facts prove beyond a shadow of doubt that this boy was kidnapped, yet it is impossible to bring the parties to justice. But while justice sleeps the moral turpitude of this act fastens upon the participators in the deed the ineffable scorn of all true and honest men. I pity the boy—for he is doomed never to see the light of day—he is stone blind for life. He is well cared for however, and is attended by a skilful army physician, who takes great ineerest in his case.

G. E. S.

P.S Jan. 30th. A couple of "Secesh" ladies were brought into camp this morning. Upon information of a slave by the name of "Jim," they were arrested for furnishing aid and comfort to the rebels.

Among other things, about thirty pairs of stockings were found on their premises already labeled C. S. A. One of them admitted that she had a brother in the rebel army, and when they rode past the Union flag one of them turned up her nose in contempt for the stars and stripes. The slave catchers are expected here next Saturday in pursuit of "Jim," but a thousand hearts are pledged to secure him his freedom. Returning fugitive slaves is growing daily to be up hill work.

G. E. S.

A COUNCIL NEEDED.

MR. EDITOR: The emigration or non-emigration of the colored people from the United States, intensely engaging, as it does, the attention of the American public as well as others outside of the Union interested in, or inimical to, the well-being to persons of African descent, surely no intelligent and enlightened man of color can at this juncture assume a nonchalant attitude with respect to the position of the respective parties in the controversy who present themselves and their claims to the consideration of those whom the question concerns.

It must be obvious to the most indifferent observer that the solution of the emigration problem is attended with insuperable difficulties, if the futile attempts at solution made by the most distinguished men of learning and genius during a series of years be taken into account; and I will affirm that the man who shall arise and exclaim 'Eureka' would be entitled to the eternal gratitude of his race, and the plaudits of an admiring world.

But, in this, I confess, we shall be doomed to disappointment, unless the respective chiefs alight from their respective hobbies, and, flinging away their favorite notions of expatriation (which appear, to say the least, too much like quixotism), meet on one broad unsectional platform, there to devise some rational plans or schemes that would meet the approbation of those for whose advantage they are so zealously and arduously laboring.

'Tis not, Mr. Editor, my intention to enter into a discussion of the respective claims of those who present themselves to us for our suffrage; for, it is evident, that unless there be an amalgamation of the discordant elements, and a basis of operation, which shall meet the common sense view of the Democracy (whose fate is at issue), firmly and broadly laid, no one need anticipate for years yet to come the realisation of any hope in regard to the amelioration of our condition here or elsewhere—or worse, a settlement of the question now at issue.

This matter has already occupied the consideration, and engaged the ablest pens, of talented men on either side—with what result everybody knows.

Yet, I will, for my part, say that the scheme of Dr. Delany mooted in his letter to Dr. J. McCune Smith relative to the calling of a council of gentlemen interested in, and devoted to, the regeneration and elevation of our people from all the States appears to be the best adapted to the present exigency.

After the soil of fair Albion had been for years deluged with the blood of her noblest sons in the wars of the Roses, the astute and politic Henry Tudor (the 7th Henry of England), on coming to the Throne after his victory at Bosworth, married the Princess Elizabeth of Cambridge, and thus united in their persons the complicated and rival interests of the houses of York and Lancaster, and forever buried the demon of fell war; thenceforth the prosperity and elevation of England amongst the nations of Europe was secured.

Cannot the talented and learned sons of Ham among us, who are sundered by their adoption of rival plans—their devotion to clashing interests—their obstinate prosecution of impracticable schemes—do more to retard the achievment of the noble work they have undertaken than the most sanguine evil-wisher could desire? Cannot they adopt a different and more liberal mode of procedure, such as would command the confidence of our people, and be conducive to the common well-being of all concerned?

It is lamentable to think of the precious time that has been frittered away—splendid talents misapplied—noble lives sacrificed in the fruitless attempt to climb mountains of difficulties accumulated by the vain fantasies of the men who ought to be the leaders and regenerators of their people.

May I then, as one deeply interested in the vital question of our people's elevation, direct the attention of your readers to the judicious scheme of Dr. Delany, adverted to above, as in itself simply practicable, and calculated, if unselfishly carried into operation, to effect much good?

VERB. SAP.

LETTER FROM PATERSON.

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 1st, 1862.

MR. EDITOR—The colored young men of this place having made arrangements for a course of lectures, the first of the series was delivered in the Godwin street Church, on Wednesday evening, 29th ult., by A. P. Smith, of Saddle River. Subject: "The War." The others of the course will be given by the Rev. Mr. Scudder, of Passaic, and Messrs. Wm. Van Renselaer and Wm. H. Hopper, on subjects that will be announced in due season.

I was astonished at seeing in the "Pine and Palm," a notice of an alleged colony of emigrants to Hayti from this place; but would have considered it more reliable had it informed us who the colony consists of, and when they intend to sail. I will be on hand to see them depart, certainly, if I only can find out when they are about to leave. But the truth is, Mr. Editor, the announcement of a colony from here is only one of those stupid canards the Rev. Redpath will persist in setting afloat, notwithstanding his conversion to the "Higher Insight." There is not a single person that intends going. As his correspondent says, a Club was formed, not to emigrate, but to consider the question; but it soon died a natural death.

OCCASIONAL.

ANOTHER CHAPTER OF REVELATIONS BY REDPATH—"HOLY SUBMISSION," &c.

MR. EDITOR.—I find a continuation of Mr. James Redpath's "Higher Insight" in his "Notes of the Movement," dated Jan. 18th, the "Preparatory Word" having naturally led the way to the "Word to our Friends." A careful perusal of this "Word" can hardly fail to remind the reader of some of the "movements" of Moliere's Quack. That individual on being reminded of his mistake in locating the heart on the right side and the liver on the left, makes the famous reply: "Yes, indeed, the heart used to be on the left and the liver on the right as you say; but we have changed all that!" Nos avous change tout cela. So, you know, resistance to tyrants was once obediance to God; but, it seems, Mr. James Redpath has changed all that now, changed it with a single scratch of his pen, and henceforth you, and I, and all of us, must be governed accordingly.

"Holy submission," which is now inculcated by the weeping prophet, like the "Higher Insight," is calculated to keep the slave in chains, and insure the safety of the Covey's and Legree's of the South, and Mr. Redpath, if he possesses the practical mind of which he so frequently boasts, must know as well as everybody else, that it can have no other effect. With the "Higher Insight" for the free, and the "Holy Submission" for the slave, the chain is complete.

But, continues the Revelation, resistance to the cruel wrongs of slavery, is "disastrous" to the character, &c. Was it, I would ask, "disastrous to the character" of the slaves of Hayti, when they rose in rebellion against their oppressors? Or, was it "disastrous to the character" of Frederick Douglass, to refuse a "Holy Submission" to the brutalities of brother Covey? It is hard to suppose that anybody but a knave or fool can answer in the affirmative.

But, the "Word" goes on to say, we, Mr. James Redpath, are under the control of a spirit, and have withdrawn from politics; why should we interfere? Aye, why? American politics are impure, mercenary selfish, they consent to leave thhe slave in his chains; why should Mr. Redpath, with his "Higher Insight," interfere? To do so would be coming between the tyrant and his victim.

About that spirit with which the weeping apostle is possessed, one thing at least is certain: it has a keen eye to what it considers the interest of one Mr. Redpath, leading him to James Gorden Bennett's summersaults, and causing him to eat his former spiritual utterances as submissively as Ancient Pistol, whom in his speech concerning opponents he so much resembles, did the leek. Were it not for this fact, it would be charitable to consider his incongruities as the result of insanity; but the pretence of being controled by a spirit, one day to favor resistance to slavery and the next a "Holy Submission," shows more of the mountebank than the fool.

The intimation that he will probably soon withdraw from the Haytian movement need occassion no surprise. Having sucked the Haytian orange dry, of course our seer will have another revelation, for it seems the "higher" the pay the "higher" the "insight."

Mark these words: He will abandon this Haytian scheme to morrow if the pecuniary motive is withheld, or if he can obtain the appointment as Chief Overseer in carrying out the Lincoln colonization scheme, as proposed in his message.

Excuse my troubling you with so long a notice of the vagaries of one whose only claim to a moments consideration consists in his improper intermeddling with affairs that do not concern him

A. P. SMITH.

Saddle River, N. J.

THE CONTRABANDS AT FORTRESS MONROE.

In the same speech in the Senate last week, in which he read a letter in relation to the Alexandria jail, Mr. Wilson read the following from a letter, which he said was from "a gentleman of character" at Fortress Monroe:

"The 'contraband' system is but another name for Government slavery. And whether the plan on which the system is worked be better or worse than it might, it cannot be other than evil while it is a slave system in the hands of military officials. One of these officials, who is on familiar terms with me, expressed his conviction that the Government had already made at least fifteen thousand dollars out of these Government slaves. General Wool stated yesterday that there is now a fund of $7,000 on hand from the avails of their labor. And yet the Government has laid out no expense on the women and children that do not work for Government, or have none to work for them, many of whom are suffering for want of comfortable quarters and clothing. Nor will the authorities allow charity to come in and make up the deficiency of Government about the fort, in supplying clothing, lest it should take away an incentive to labor for Government. No money is promised to women who work for Government, and the only stimulus afforded is clothing, and if clothing were given indiscriminately to all who need, the women would prefer to work for officers and soldiers, and get a little pay for it.

"But Government does not even pay many of the men in the employ of Government the small pittance of two dollars cash per month. Two men in the engineer department, at work on the railroad, told me yesterday that they had worked since the 13th of July, and had not received a cent, and they did not know any in the same gang that had. And many of these men have families in want of support. And now a change has been made in the commissary department, and I have heard that in the section outside of Old Point bridge, where most of the families are, the rations are to be reduced from five hundred to fifty, and that many of the families whose male head works for Government will be denied rations, and there will be great suffering.

"There are also great abuses practiced by subordinate officials in whipping and bruising the slaves. They have been knocked down with clubs, and they are cursed and otherwise abused in a shocking manner.

"No wonder, then, that one who knows told me that their number had greatly diminished within a month or more; a large number having become missing, how, he knows not; perhaps by escaping to the North.

"I have not heard of any going back to Secessia; but I have heard some of them say, with tears, that they never were treated as hard in slavery. Yet they cling to the Union as the sheet-anchor of their hopes of liberty, waiting for deliverance.

"Now, is it policy (not to speak of principle) to treat this people so? And is Government thus a great practical slaveholder? Will you not move for an investigating committee to come to Fortress Monroe and search into the facts of the case—not simply among officials, but among the people themselves, and those who feel interested for them."

AN ANGLO-AFRICAN EXHIBITION OF INDUSTRY AND ART.—Elsewhere in our columns will be found an article from the pen of Edward M. Thomas, Esq., of Washington city, suggesting the getting up "in one of our large central cities an exhibition devoted to works of art, artistic, mechanical and industrial, either the production or the property of the race." We must say that this certainly smacks of the practical, and is a suggestion, although not entirely new—for gentlemen in this city commenced moving in the matter weeks ago—the writer may rest assured will be carried out before the expiration of this year. An organization is now being formed, and in a few days a plan will be presented to the friends of the project for their endorsement; in the meanwhile, we would be glad to receive the views of all interested in the movement, and any information bearing thereon, such as the names of parties who would be likely to contribute articles for exhibition or means to secure its success, would be acceptable. Let us take hold of this matter in earnest, and not suffer an enterprise of so much importance to be lost sight of.

FESTIVAL OF THE BENEVOLENT DAUGHTERS OF CONFERENCE.—The [illegible] society gave an entertainment on the evening of the 30th ult., which, we hear, was pretty well attended, but not receiving the courtesies usually extended to the Press we can say nothing more about the affair.

From the Washington Republican.

KANSAS—THE WESTERN SLAVES.

The Governor of Kansas estimates that, during the year 1861, ten thousand white Union refugees, from Missouri and Arkansas came into Kansas, and five thousand fugitive slaves, principally from Missouri.

Of the two classes, as we learn from various sources, the white refugees arrive in the greatest destitution. The slaves in many instances, were laden with the "spoils of the Egyptians."

The accession to Kansas of this amount of black labor, was very opportune, and most gratifying to the people of that State. Without it, they would have been quite unable to have secured their crops during the last fall, so many of the whites being engaged in military operations. The people of Kansas have no prejudices to conquer, in paying a fair day's wages for a fair day's work, to anybody, white, black, or copper-colored, who is able and willing to work.

The character of the negroes employed by the Missouri and Arkansas farmers, is quite different from that of the slaves employed in large gangs on the great plantations in the Gulf States. The Missouri and Arkansas negroes, so far as they are owned by small agriculturists, which is largely the case, work with their masters, with whom they compare very well in intelligence, and to whom they are not much inferior in literary cultivation, the amount of that possessed by either being next to nothing. As a rule, these Missouri and Arkansas negroes are as good farmers as their masters, as well able to take care of themselves, and even more industrious and more thrifty. What is true, in this respect, of the Missouri and Arkansas negroes, is true of the same class of persons in Texas.

As the entire abolition of slavery west of the Mississippi river is a probable, and (as we believe) an impending event, it is gratifying to believe that the slaves to be liberated, will prove to be good laborers and farmers. The space over which they may be diffused is so vast that their presence will, however, be scarcely felt, either for good or evil.

By the census of 1860 the number of slaves was—

In Missouri	114,965
In Arkansas	111,104
In Texas	180,682

This number of persons is quite inconsiderable, compared with the area between the Mississippi river and the Rocky mountains, and extending from the Gulf to Mexico to the north line of the State of Missouri.

An Amusing Incident.

MR. EDITOR.—There is nothing at present going on in Bethlehem worthy of remark. Skating has been spoiled by the recent snow, and horseflesh being rather expensive, sleighing is a luxury rarely indulged in. I believe there has been only one party of colored gentlemen from Bethlehem this winter, which little affair proved more ludicrous than otherwise. The party proceeding from Bethlehem to Allentown stoped at the Eagle Hotel for supper, which was washed down by very strong coffee, and something else equally as strong. While at the Hotel, one of the gentlemen who wore a very ample raglan overcoat, appropriated the gong and concealed it beneath one of the seats in the sleigh. On the road from Allentown to Nazareth the gong was brought from its hiding place and its metal severely tested. The horses not being accustomed to a noise of that kind make an attempt to run away, which proved abortive, on account of one of them being rather aged, he having been so fortunate as to have been born sometime in the latter part of the last century.

After the party's return to Bethlehem, it fell to the lot of the gentleman with the spacious overcoat to stable the team, while the remainder of the party withdrew to the housa. After an interval of an hour or more Overcoat not making his appearance, some of the gentlemen went to look for him when it was ascertained that he, upon ascending into the hayloft with the intent of putting hay into the rack for the horses, had tumbled in himself, from whence he was extricated with difficulty.

The horses not being carniverous in their taste, he was in no danger of being eaten.

After carrying the gentleman to the house and giving him a complete thawing out at the stove, the question arose whether he fell in the rack from the effect of the something strong taken at the Eagle Hotel, or from the loss of equilibrium, he having a very large head.

S. E.

Bethlehem, Pa., Jan. 26th, 1862.

RELIGIOUS AND LITERARY READING CIRCLE OF SHILOH CHURCH.—Pursuant to a general invitation given by the Rev. Mr. Garnet, a large number of ladies and gentlemen assembled at his residence on Monday evening, notwithstanding the storm, and inaugurated what promises to be a very useful movement. The exercises consisted of singing, prayer, and the study of the Scriptures. 2. An Essay on Thought by Mr. Geo. H. Hurd; an original Poem by the Pastor; Reading by Mrs. Thompson and Miss Rook. 3. Singing and conversation.

Mr. Hurd was elected Prefect; Miss Sarah Rock, Scribe; Mr. John Stackhouse, Assistant; Mr. John J. Johnson, Treasurer. The circle will meet every Monday evening during the season, and is free to all without distinction.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE NEW YORK SOCIAL CLUB gave a grand invitation assembly on the evening of January 28th to the Victoria and Everett Club. A fine report of the affair has been furnished by a gentleman, but we having a rule requiring pay for such matter, and he, of course, not feeling disposed to expend time and money for an association of gentlemen abundantly able to look after their own disbursements, it does not appear. We will state, however, that on the occasion, the ladies made a fine appearance, and enjoyed themselves in a great degree. Since the above was put in type another report has been furnished and duly provided for. See amusements.

ASSEMBLY OF THE N. Y. SOCIAL CLUB.

MR. EDITOR.—Being in the city from the rural District, and learning that a grand return Complimentary Ball was to be given to the ladies of the Victoria Club, by the Gentlemen of the New York Social Club, and having the good fortune to receive a CARD, I made my appearance on Tuesday evening, Jan. 28th, at the place announced, and attended the first Ball since my return to this country after a long sojourn in Europe. I was ushered in the room by the reception Committee, who were all attention.

The Hall was brilliantly illuminated, beautifully festooned and ornamented with devices; to the left as I entered appeared in letters of silver, "Welcome Victoria," to the right "Welcome Everett,' in the front "N. Y. Social Club." My eyes then fell upon the guests;—the fine womanly and manly proportions before me, and the ease and grace with which they moved, could only be contrasted with the beautiful display and fine taste in dress so common to all in the room, with but very slight exception.

The officers of the New York Social Club are as follows: F. B. Voorhies, Prest.; M. S. Dillon, Vice Ppresident; Stephen West, Treasurer; Henry Jones, Secretary.

I made some inquiries of a tall well formed gentleman near me, as to the parties in the room. (I learned afterwards that the gentleman spoken of is known as "the Duke" or Pemberton as some call him.) I inquired if any of the ladies were foreigners—no says he, but I can give you the city district of some of them—and I noted the following among many equally worthy of notice:

From the Washington District, Madam W——s—Prest. of the Victoria, looking robust and healthy, wore white glace silk—very becoming.

Madam G——k—a very pretty dress tastefully trimmed.

Madam P——ll—(Bride,) white crape embroidered elaborately over white Leece Skirt, charming in person and dress. Decidedly the Belle of the Ball.

Madam V——s—blue Grecian silk, white twilled overskirt, looped with black velvet bows—very tasteful.

Madam B——t—Pink Glace, Silk Opera Cloak—a la negligia—very pretty.

Madam L——s—Peach Blossom Silk very rich.

Madam R——y—French Glace Silk, Chintz Figures, very pretty.

Miss K B——n—Pink and White Tarleton with a silk ruching head-dress, very becoming.

From the York District and vicinity; Madam J——s—white Tarleton, exquisite trimming, decidedly handsome.

Madam D——n—yellow Tarleton dress, vine trimming, hair very tastefully arranged.

Madam H——ll—neat Tarleton dress, simple and neat.

Madam C——s—Salmon colored silk, trimmed with black velvet, a la Pompadore.

Madam W——n—Chene silk, very tastefully arranged.

Miss B——e—White dress, black sash in excellent taste.

Madam G——ll—Black lace dress with bouquets of flowers surrounding the skirt, a la Parisian.

From the Chelsea District (up-town.)

Madam D——d—Steel gray poplin, very neat.

Miss P——n—Embroidered Indian corn colored crape—looking very neat and attractive.

Miss M——tt—Handsome white dress, blue trimming and bodice.

Just at this juncture in our conversation the ubiquitous and vigilant President of the club came near us and announced [illegible]; I soon learned that that meant supper. We were marched to an upper room, and the guests were seated to an entertainment worthy of [illegible] and the party. no Beast, bird, fish, and every animal production were drawn from; and the richest confections, with splendidly adorned pyramids, graced the table; and the flowing goblet filled with the rich nectar that Jupiter sips.

The ante or reception room was nicely carpeted, and on a table there was an antique punch bowl filled with the delightful beverage, placed upon a silver tray, with cake-basket to match, filled with fancy cake, to which the guests repaired during the intervals of the dance. There were one or two gents that seemed inclined to be odd; one appeared in a bear coat; another little philosopher had a side pair of green specs.

However, let us go to the supper table, and we shall hear the Ladies' Club complimented; and, in turn, the ladies complimenting the gents, and both hinting at consolidation.

One lady appeared as a spectator, but the Committee were too polite to allow such retirement, and successfully urged her to become one of the company, being invited.

The order of dancing was a novel arrangement (in gold), gotten up by our distinguished printer, J. J. Z., of Canal street it was both useful and ornamental, serving for a fan as well as an order. The ladies were so delighted with them that it was impossible for your correspondent to secure one for himself. CHESTER.

Speech of the Hon. John A. Bingham.

We have been favored by the author with copies of a speech made in the House of Representatives, Jan. 15th, by the Hon. John A. Bingham of Ohio, in favor of emancipating the slaves. It is a strong speech, and we regret that from the want of room we are unable to give it entire to our readers. The following is an extract from it:

Pass your laws liberating the 4,000,000 slaves held by the rebels, and thereby break every unjust yoke in that rebel region, and let the oppressed go free, in obedience to that command which comes to us as a voice out of heaven, "proclaim liberty throughout all the land, to all the inhabitants thereof." Do you say this is fanaticism? Do you say God was a fanatic when he commanded it, and that the fathers of the Republic were fanatics when they adopted it as the sign under which they should conquer, and burned it with fire into the very bell whose iron tongue summoned them to the stern work of resistance?

Sir, if such a law be passed it is said it will not be effective. Why not effective? Can you not enjoin upon the commanding officer of your army the execution of a general law of confiscation and liberation, in the same manner that by the law of 1806 the duty is now enjoined upon him to secure for the public use the public stores of the enemy taken in his camps, forts, magazines, and towns, and for the neglect of which such commanding officer shall be answerable. [Fifty-eighth Article of War.]

But it is said such a law will not, as to the rebels' slaves, be effective. Why not? Is it because the knowledge of the fact cannot reach these slaves? Pass your law simply declaring them freemen, and that they shall, if they fly to your standard, receive the protection of your army, and the joyful news will in ten days reach every slave in the Republic, by means of that human telegraph whose living network overlies every slave plantation, and is woven of the lacerated heart-strings of the victims of this infernal atrocity. Will not your law be effective if passed and communicated to the slave? Why not? Is it because he prefers slavery to freedom—the bondage of death to the glorious liberty of the sons of God? No, sir, there is no slave in this land, not reft of his reason by the providence of God or by the torture of oppression, who would not hail your statute of deliverance as the very gift of life. Though he is a slave however closely imprisoned in that thick darkness which may be felt, and which only falls upon those from whom tyranny shuts out the light, his hope for liberty as his right is not and cannot be extinguished, for it is allied to his hope of immortality, and is bound up with the elements of his soul, which cannot but by annihilation die.

Pass your law, proclaim it at the head of your army, execute it summarily by allowing these unwilling supporters of the rebellion to escape from their masters through your lines and receive your protection in return for their loyalty; and these children of oppression will make such an exodus from the house of their bondage as the world has not seen since that exodus of God's people which the dark-eyed daughters of Israel celebrated in that sublime song:

"The Lord hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea."

Pass this law, require its faithful execution by your army, and the rebellion must cease, or its authors, its aiders and abettors perish for bread. Do this, and crown yourselves with the immortal honor of giving liberty to one portion of our people and the serene blessings of peace to another. It is said that upon such statute of liberation, and by reason of its enactment, these slaves will rise in insurrection. To say this is to libel human nature in its lowest estate. Gratitude is inseparable from the human heart in every condition of life, in every zone of the earth's surface. To shiver the fetters which bind in cruel bondage the souls of men will not excite in them hatred or anger or revenge, but will attune the heart to the sweet melody of virtue, and inspire their hymns of thanksgiving to their deliverers.

Sir, if after your enactment of this statute of liberation, the slaves of these rebel masters rise in insurrection, it will not be because by your law they are declared freemen, but because their traitor masters, in defiance of your law, continue to deny them their liberty. A slave insurrection, however much to be deplored, would neither weaken your arms nor strengthen those of your rebel enemy. Whoever urges, therefore, such objection to this needful and just legislation, must, whether conscious of it or not, assume that rebels who, without colorable excuse, wage a cruel and exterminating war against their fellow-citizens, should not be deprived by the government, against which they have revolted, of the means by which they may make their rebellion a success, and without which they must ignominiously fail.

Pass this just and beneficent law as an act of justice to the slave; pass it as an act of justice to your country; pass it as an act of justice to your brave army of loyal citizen soldiers who stand this hour between you and the armed terrors of treason in the capital; pass it and crush this slave rebellion at once, and thereby make a like rebellion for a like object forever impossible in the Republic; but put the question to representatives, is the alleged property of these rebels in four million of slaves, and in their lands and crops, goods, monies, and chattles, more sacred than the lives of your soldiers and the life of your country? May God hide from my eyes and from the eyes of my children the day when the dying agony of my country shall begin. By no act of ours, either of omission or commission, may we contribute to that direst and blackest crime which can be committed by any people—the crime of national suicide. Who does not know that he who has the power to prevent the crime of self-destruction and withholds or refuses its exercise, and thereby prevents the deed, is himself a murderer? Why, I ask, in the name of eternal justice, should the people's treasure be expended at the rate of $2,000,000 a day, and the people themselves be mangled and maimed and murdered by these rebels, rather than end the sacrifice of treasure and of blood by a sublime act of justice which will give liberty to the slave, relief to the people, stability to the Constitution, peace to a distracted country, and make the Republic what its illustrious founders intended it to be, a temple for the "perpetual residence of an inviolable justice," a refuge for the oppressed, and a sacred sanctuary for the rights of mankind?

HOME AGAIN.

Home is the sacred refuge of our life.
—DRYDEN.

MR. EDITOR.—I arrived at home safe and sound on the 15th, after an absence of six weeks during which time I have traveled through a portion of the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri. I visited the city of Chicago, which bears the soubriquet of the New York of the West. It is a great business place; I suppose there is more business done there than any other city in the West.

I remained but a short time, long enough, however to find out that our people are not doing as well as they ought, in view of the chance they have had, they have certainly been wanting in energy and enterprise. And is this not lamentably the case with our people as a general thing, in almost every place. But there is a cause for it, and that cause is that sum of all villanies, American Slavery. This vile pernicious and damnable evil has conduced to degrade us, to enervate and cripple our energies I thank God that slavery's days are numbered. It has received its death stroke. Die it must, and die it shall, and be buried so deep as never again I trust to be resurrected. Then shall Ethiopia stretch out her hand to God.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A host of Alleghanians and Pittsburgers surprised ourself, Madame and little ones on the evening of the 21st, as they entered our humble dwelling with baskets and bundles filled with the comforts of life. We must confess that we felt somewhat infatuated as our eyes beheld the great pile of good things spread out before us. Mr. E. R. Parker, the representative of the party, in a neat little speech assured us that this was but a small evidence of esteem and friendship, and that they intended at some subsequent time to do still better. After enjoying themselves in their own way, they left for their homes at a late hour seemingly well pleased with their visit. We gave them our blessing as they were leaving, and prayed that the God of all grace might be with and prosper them in all their efforts. I hope to hear soon that the good people of New York, Brooklyn, and the region round about has served the editor of the Anglo-African the same way. More anon.

J. J. CLINTON.

Pittsburg, Jan. 26th, 1862.

NEWS FROM LIBERIA.

MONROVIA, LIBERIA,
Nov. 26, 1861.

The receipt a few days ago of one or two copies of the "Herald" by the friends of the President, containing a statement in reference to the treatment of the Congoes per ship Nightingale, had a very indigestible effect among the many supporters of his Excellency in this city. A meeting was called last night with a view to correct what they termed misapprehensions; but, after indulging in a tirade of abuse against whom they supposed was the author, they seemed to lose sight of the object for which they had assembled, and contented themselves by passing defamatory resolutions against T. M. Chester, instead of vindicating the government from the charges. The mere passage of resolutions, in these days of political intrigue, will not relieve an individual or a government from an imputation where there is just cause for suspicion. No one would have been more happy than your correspondent to have retracted every word uttered against the administration of President Benson if any of his friends had pointed out the least misrepresentation. It is a duty I owe to the public to correct any misrepresentations that may occur as soon as convinced that injustice has been done to any one.

Nothing has been heard of Spanish hostility since last month, of which I informed you. We are hourly expecting the mail from the States, which will inform us of the progress of the war, and Fernando Po, which will advise us of the intentions of the Governor General towards Liberia. It is thought here that as soon as England can lay the whole affair before the government of Spain the Governor General will be recalled.

Her Britannic Majesty's steamer Falcon came here some two weeks ago to settle, if possible, peaceably the difficulties between this government and any Spanish men-of-war that might be sent here with hostile intentions, and in the event that she could not bring about an amicable adjustment then she was to assist the Liberians.

President Benson gave a splendid dinner party to the officers of the Falcon, on the 19th instant, extending his invitations to them through the commander, who attended, accompanied by his first lieutenant, purser and the captain's private secretary. Several prominent citizens were present, and the whole affair passed off with entire satisfaction to the assembled guests.

The native tribes are still engaged in wars almost adjoining the settlement. A short time ago a battle was fought not more than about thirty or forty miles from this city, in which our allies routed their enemies with great slaughter. The kings and head men who have been concealing their hostility against this government are only awaiting for the Spaniards to destroy this city, and in twenty-four hours after every settlement on the river will be attacked. A Liberian has just returned from the interior, and while at a town one hundred and fifty miles back a report reached there that seven Spanish men-of-war were in this harbor, and immediately their war drum was heard throughout the town. The story was soon contradicted.

Great effort has been made by President Benson to have Liberia represented in the international exhibition next May in England. Some very excellent native curiosities, as well as some superior Liberian productions, will be forwarded. James L. Sims, Esq, who was sent by the government, has just returned from the interior with a fine collection of native articles, which I understand will be exhibited here before they are sent to Europe.

It is with regret that I inform you of the death of Mrs. Peter Downing, whose marriage about one year ago produced a great sensation in the negro upper-tendom of New York. She emigrated here about six months ago, in the bark Edward, with her husband; and, in consequence of being enceinte, she had been in bad health from the time she left your city until about two weeks before she died, when she seemed to revive and give assurances of a permanent resuscitation. She gave birth to a healthy daughter, which is now doing well, and a few hours after went into a state of insensibility for four days, from which she never recovered. Mrs. Downing was a native of Providence, R. I., and is the same Clemmie Parker whose superior culture and accomplishments were the admiration of all who were fortunate enough to make her acquaintance.

Affairs in Liberia were never in a more prosperous state. President Benson is carrying on many public improvements which will add to his great popularity both in this and other countries. He is certainly a great favorite with the people of Liberia, and already they speak of him as their next candidate for the Presidency. If he runs no one can defeat him.

Nov. 29, 1861.

Yesterday was observed throughout the republic as a day of thanksgiving. In this city the people attended church in the morning, ate big dinners in the afternoon, and enjoyed their social intercourse in the evening.

The mails arrived yesterday from the States and along the South coast.

A Spanish steamer-of-war was at Cape Palmas about two weeks ago. The natives in that vicinity, who were only waiting to hear that the Spaniards had conquered the Liberians at this point, before they would rise, hailed the arrival with much glee. They even boarded the man-of-war and informed the commander that the Liberians were preparing to fire into them. He sent an officer on shore to see if he could be allowed to get water, which privilege being granted, and the natives' falsehoods exposed, the commander came on shore and informed several persons that the whole affair had been misrepresented to the Governor General of Fernando Po, and that good feelings were entertained by him for the people of Liberia.

Thus ends our Spanish difficulty.

The Spanish captain who fired into the Quail—so the Spanish commander informed the people at Cape Palmas—reported on his return to Fernando Po that he had sunk her in this harbor. It is very unpleasant for an officer to be the messenger of his own shame.

The members of the Legislature arrived here yesterday. There can hardly be any doubt but what they will authorize the President to chastise some of the tribes in Liberia for their manifest hostile attitude during the Spanish excitement. The insurrectionary spirit was rife in each of the counties of this State. No important measures are yet upon the tapis.

This morning the articles for the international exhibition was exhibited in the hall of the House of Representatives. They mostly consist of native country clothes, kings' robes, warlike instruments from African iron, dye wood, rice, coffee, preserved fruit, iron ore, pipes, a somewhat fancy bridle, resembling those used by circus men in the States, and many other things. The smoking pipes made by the natives are an excellent specimen and can scarcely be beaten.—N. Y. Herald.

DEATH OF MRS. HOLLY.—We learn with deep regret through private letters received here from Port au Prince, of the death of the estimable wife of Rev. J. T. Holly. Although this announcement will be received with deep grief by the many friends of the deceased, it is not to them unexpected.

MARRIED.

WHITE, BROWN.—In this city, on Sunday evening, February 2, by Rev. H. Highland Garnet, Mr. Joseph Scott White, of New York, to Miss Virginia E. Brown, of Baltimore.

DIED.

PORTLAND.—At Jamaica, L. I., January 2d, Francis Abram Portland, of consumption. Aged 51 years.

RAYMOND.—In Norwich, Conn., Jan. 25th, of consumption, John T. Raymond, aged 48 years.

Special Notices.

A BLACK MAN'S VIEW OF THE WAR.

FREDERICK DOUGLASS will lecture at COOPER INSTITUTE, Wednesday evening, February 12, at 8 o'clock, on The War, and its Relation to White and Black Men. Admission 25 cents.

A GRAND PROMENADE

Concert will be given by Madame Ashmone for the benefit of St. James' Church, at Adelphi Hall, cor. of Grand and Eleventh streets, Williamsburg, on Friday evg.

Mr. Oton's band are engaged for the occasion. Tickets of admission 25 cts., to be had at the door.

HAIL TO THE GLORIOUS CHIEFTAIN of an Universal Civil and Religious Freedom!

A few colored friends of the Rev. Dr. Cheever propose to present to him, as a mark of their esteem for his Eminent Services in the Cause of Truth and Righteousness—a SILVER PITCHER.—on Tuesday the 11th inst. at Shiloh Church, cor. of Prince and Marion streets.

ORDER OF EXERCISES.

1. Singing by the Choir led by Professor Dias.
2. Prayer by the Pastor of the Church, Rev. H. H. Garnet.
3. Singing.
4. Reading of Letters from Distinguished Clergymen, who have been invited to attend.
5. Presentation—Rev. J. N. Gloucester.
6. Reception—Address by Rev. Dr. Cheever.
7. Singing.
8. Address—Rev. Mr. Sloan.
9. Address—Rev. H. Mattison
10. Singing.

Admission 10 cts.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Rev. J. N. Gloucester, Pof. J. Peterson, N. B. Lews, Esq.

A GRAND GOOD SAMARITAN
Re-Union and Entertainment of PURITY LODGE,
No. 3, D of S. I. O. of G. S

Will be given on Thursday evening, Feb 13th, 1862, at the METROPOLITAN ASSEMBLY ROOMS, 178 Prince street, on which occasion the following Lodges are invited and expected to be present in Full Regalia:

The R. W. Grand Lodge, No. 2. Fountain Union, No. 1. Progressive Union, No. 4, Williamsburg. Rebecca Union, No. 5, Brooklyn. Crystal Fount, No. 7 Newark. Fidelity, No. 1. D. of S. Unity, No. 2, Harmony, No. 4, Newark.

Also the following Tabernacles: F. O. of B. & S. of L. & C. R. W. G. Tabernacle, State of New York. R. H. Cousins, G. W. S.

Henry Highland Garnet Tabernacle, No. 1. J. W. B. Smith Tabernacle, No. 2. Jas. Morris Williams Tabernacle, Brooklyn, No. 3. J. D. S. Hall Tabernacle, No. 4. Margaret A. Jackson Tabernacle, No. 5.

The Entire Building is engaged for the occasion.

A Separate Room will be provided for each Order, to arrange there the Grand Evening's Procession.

Mr. Charles Hornbeck, Grand Marshal for the Evening.

Prof. Hardy's full Band will furnish the music.

TICKETS 50 cents. To be had of the Committee of Arrangement and of the Ticket Committee.

Supper will be served at One o'clock.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Sarah E. Rickets, 249 Houston st. Mary Hopkins, 343 West 26th st. Harriet L. Sandford, 105 West 27th st. Louisa Benson, 44 Leonard st. Jane Crummel, 75 Vandam st. Angeline Thompson, 105 West 27th st. Margaret Hammond, 343 West 26th st.

TICKET COMMITTEE.

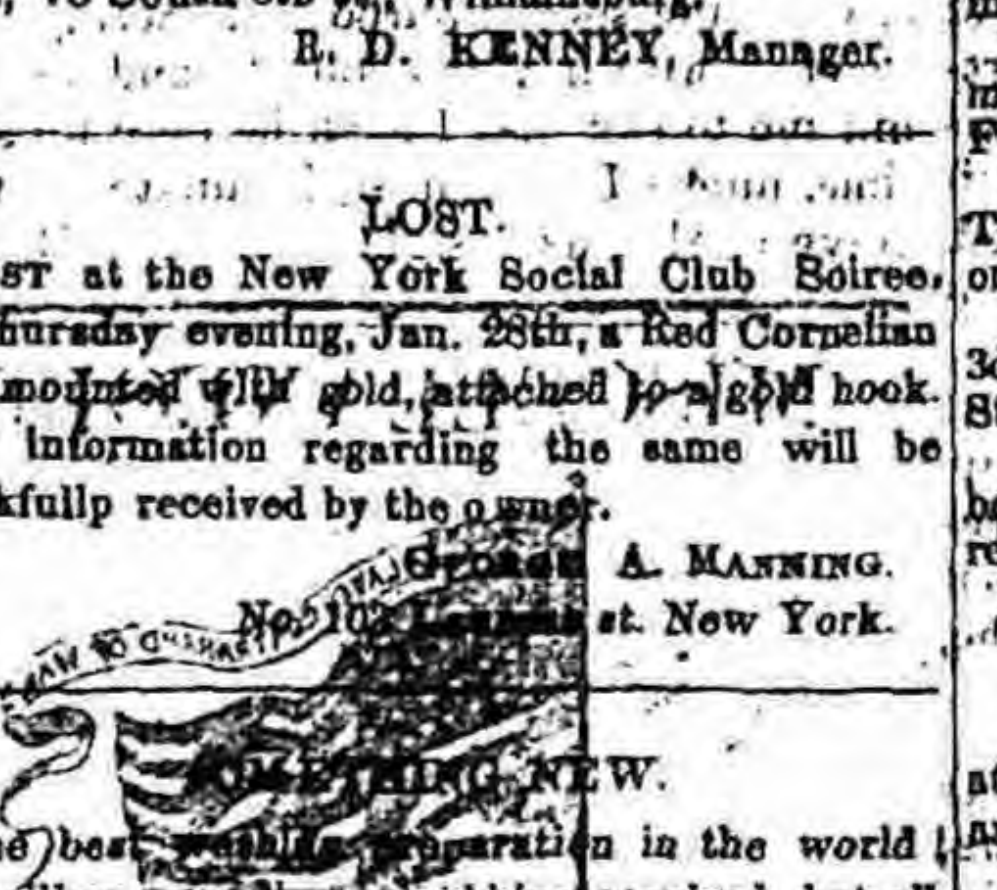
Julia Dove, 32 Pell st. Susan Church, 105 Park st. near Mott. Elsie Ann Zabriskee, 241 Second st. Clara Putnam, 131 Suffolk st. Caroline Robinson, 44 Leonard st. Margaret Edgar, 81 Charlton st. Maria Washington, 32 Pell st. Margaret Cefers, 242 Second st. Mary Place, 95 Crosby st Charlotte Aldridge, 245 West 29th st. Hannah Miller, 343 West 26th st. Ann Sisco, 109 Thompson st. Charles R. Hornbeck, 120 West 20th st. Page C. Ridout, Sullivan st. Edward Clark, 107 Sheriff street. Stephen Lawrence, 35 William st. Oliver Holmes, 80 Nassau st. James P. Miller, 91 West 32d st. S. Gray, Broadway. Susan Plant, 97 High st., Brooklyn. Moses B. Coss, 75 South 6th st., Williamsburg.

R. D. KENNEY, Manager.

LOST.

LOST at the New York Social Club Soiree, on Thursday evening, Jan. 28th, a Red Cornelian Seal mounted with gold, attached to a gold hook. Any information regarding the same will be thankfully received by the owner.

[illegible] A. MANNING.
No. 102 [illegible] st. New York.



SOMETHING NEW.

The best washing apparatus in the world! No boiling, pounding or rubbing required, but all done in simple warm water. Full instructions concerning its use and manufacture sent by mail on receipt of 25 cents. Address

RUFUS STICKNEY,
28 4 [illegible], Mass.

"O [illegible] THE NEGRO BOATMAN'S SONG," [illegible] of Miss E. H. Cass, No. 174 W. 30th st., New York. Price 2 cents per copy.

TO LET.—Rooms in house No. 213 Sullivan st, and also at No. 106 West 17th street.
28 ft.

WORLD'S FAIR AGENCY.—The undersigned are acting as Agents for Merchants and Manufacturers to Exhibit at World's Fair, and to introduce into England, France and other European countries, Articles of American Invention, Procuring Patents, making Sales, or in any way promoting their interests.

DEXTER & CO. 17 Spruce st., N. Y.: 86 Milk street, Boston: 149 S. Fourth st., Phila.
1m3ap.

MRS. ELIZA LEWIS' SALVE,
ANDERSON'S HAIR RESTORATIVE,
(New London,)
SPANISH OIL, (For the Hair.)
WHITE'S VEGETABLE EXTRACT,
BRANDRETH'S SUGAR COATED PILLS.
For Sale at the
Drug Store 55 West Broadway
tf.-17

PLANE St. SELECT SCHOOL.
105 PLANE ST., NEWARK, N. J.
MRS. HARRIET E. ROGERS, PRINCIPAL.

The branches taught are Reading, Writing Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography and History, Plain Sewing, Ornamental Needlework, Worsted Embroidery and Fancy Knitting.

Piano Forte, Melodeon, and Vocal Music by Prof. John H. O'Fake.

A limited number of Misses between the ages of ten and fourteen may be boarded in the house on moderate terms. Healthy location, and a fine yard for exercise.

REFERENCES.

NEWARK, N.J.
Rev. E. J. Adams, Jefferson Ellis,
Adam Ray, Abram T. Cook.
BROOKLYN.
Rev. J. N. Gloucester.
NEW YORK.
Rev. H. M. Wilson, Rev. H. H. Garnet.

All letters may be addressed to Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, 194 Plane st. Newark N. J.
27 6t.

PHILADELPHIA AGENCY.

Wm. R. De Cordover, 419 South 7th st. is authorized to receive subscriptions and advertisements for the Anglo-African. All orders left with him will receive prompt attention

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND

BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,
PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St., and with G. Oton.
18tf

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated "Hoagland Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Prize 50 cents. Give them a trial.

MASONIC
DIRECTORY,
FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R.W.G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No. 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st, the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka, No. 15, Norwick, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14, Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 East Houston Street, N. Y. City.

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tetabrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City.
17 13t

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by

G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist.
79 Thompson St., N. Y.

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with Ice Cream, Fruit, and other Delicacies.

BENJ. F. BROWN,
70 Bleecker
between Broadway & Crosby
4t

A. ROBERTS,

120 Clinton Court, 8th st, New York, agent for the Weekly Anglo-African. Copies may be had of him at an early hour after its publication.

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,
REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.

New York—corner of Prince and Marion street near Broadway.

Hours of Worship [illegible] 10½ A. M.
Prayer meeting 3 P. M.
7½ o'clock.

Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock
Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.
Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,
(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. WM. J. ALSTON, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—

10½	A. M.
3	P. M.
7½	P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn.
13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

REV. ELI N. HALL, Pastor. Residence—169 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:

10½ o'clock,	A. M.
"	P. M.
"	P. M.

10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:

10 1-2 o clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7 1 "	P. M.

12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—

3 o'clock,	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

LECTURE every Wednesday evening.

REV. CHAS. H. THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7 "	P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. HALL, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St. near Houston.

Rev. JOHN T. RAYMOND, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

AGENT FOR WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

TROY AGENCY.—Mr. Henry Burke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

NEW MUSIC.—"The Lord doth now to this Nation Speak;" "O, Let my People Go," Parody on "Song of the Contrabands," words by Moses, music by Baker. Price 35 cts. including "Contrabands' Song," or 4 pieces for $1, mailed free. Just published by HORACE WATERS, 481 Broadway.

24 6t.

THE HORACE WATERS PIANOS,
MELODEONS, ALEXANDRE ORGANS,
and
T. Gilbert & Co's. Celebrated Æolian Pianos,

are the finest instruments for Parlors and Churches now in use. A large assortment can be seen at the new Warerooms 481 Broadway, between Grand and Broome streets, which will be sold at extremely low prices. Pianos and Melodeons from sundry makers, new and second hand, to let, and rent allowed if purchased, as per agreement. Monthly payments received for the same. Also, second-hand pianos at great bargains, prices from $25 to $100, Sheet Music, Music Books, and all kinds of Music merchandise at war prices. A Pianist in attendance will try new music.

HORACE WATERS, AGENT.

BOSTON HOUSE,

MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding House in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches.
19 26t

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,
In all its branches—such as
BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH
GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.,

Residence—120th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.
18 26t

THE BEST DRESSING FOR THE HAIR during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts.
3 tt.

TO LET.—THE ROOM ON THE SECOND floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston street, or of the Janitor 225 West 15th-st.

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this or in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG.

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS

of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.

DON. FORGET, 168 EWEN ST.,
Williamsburg.
9 1y.

HEAD QUARTERS,
MASONIC HALL HOTEL EMPIRE STATE
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET.

Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS. The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y.
19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

BOARDING AND LODGING
IN BROOKLYN,

At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 58 Atlantic St., near South Ferry. $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodgings 75 cts. per week. 15tf

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS!

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side.—Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 182 Suffolk Street. Terms very moderate. a10 1y.

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS

Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn.
10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street.
11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMODATE a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate
9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding.
8 tf

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTES, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 SOUTH STREET, N.Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate.
31y.

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country.
5—4t

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS AND FURS,
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought.
12-tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) RESPECTFULLY announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

WARRANTED TO CURE A HEADACHE in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable extract. For sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold and Frankfort Sts.

MRS E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.
3tt.

BOARDING AND LODGING

BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in a very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies	$2.50
" Gents	3.00
Lodging per week	75

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER:
219 CENTRE STREET NEW YORK.

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate LADIES and GENTLEMEN with FIRST CLASS BOARD, on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. 13 Sheriff Street, a few doors north of Grand.
16 13t

POCKET WATER FILTER
AND
DRINKING TUBE.

Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. Weighs one ounce. Can be carried in the vest pocket. Send it to your friends. Agents wanted. Samples mailed on receipt of 50 cents, by addressing

DAY & CO.,
3-13t Box 464 P.O., Newark, N.J.

Poetry.

For the Anglo-African.

GOD'S JUDGMENTS.

BY FRANCES ELLEN WATKINS HARPER.

"When thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness."—Bible.

Judgment slumbered.—God in mercy
Stayed his strong avenging hand;
Sent them priests, and sent them prophets
But they would not understand.

Judgment lingered,—men grown bolder,
Gloried in their shame and guilt;
And the blood of God's poor children,
Was as water freely spilt.

And a million hearts lay quivering,
Smitten by oppression's rod:
But their sighs like gloomy incense,
Reach'd the burning throne of God!

Then arose a cry to heaven,
Deep and startling, sad and wild,
Sadder than the wail of Egypt,
Mourning for the first-born child!

For the sighing of the needy,
God at length did bare his hand!
And the footsteps of his judgments
Echoed through the guilty land.

Oh! the pain, the grief, the anguish!
Oh! the bitter, fearful strife!
When the judgments of Jehovah,
Press'd upon the nation's life!

And the land did reel and tremble
'Neath the terror of his frown;
For its guilt lay heavy on it,
Pressing like an iron crown!

As a warning to the nations,
Bathed in blood, and swathed in fire,
Lay the once oppressing nation,
Smitten by God's fearful ire!

For the Anglo African.

THE BOX IN THE WALL.

BY JACKO.

Near the close of those Autumn days, "the saddest of the year." I gathered the following romance during a ride. Silently for about two hours we wended our way through a grand avenue of trees, growing more picturesque at every turn, until nought met our gaze but a mass of rock whitened by age, which seemed to form a resting place for the concave vault above. Every sound was stilled, save the wild rushing of waters in the dark gulf half hidden from view by felled trees. Truly, thought I, this would be a fit abode for a misanthrope—shut out as it is from the gentler manifestations of Nature! Scarce had the thought crossed those "peopled chambers of the brain," when an old man closed up the narrow pathway before us. After my first start of surprise I did not wonder that one so well in keeping with these surroundings should be a solitary enjoyer of such a sublime scene.

"Excuse me travelers, for interrupting your way, I did not think a carriage could get along this road, and curiosity led me to see whether I was mistaken."

With these words he proudly bowed his grave-ripened head and disappeared. I knew not whither.

"The mountains are his daughters"—said I, "but what is his history?"

My driver answered, "No one in these parts knows that ma'am. One of the coldest mornings in the winter of 1817, I and several others were standing around the stove in Barton's tavern, telling about the hogs and horses that had been frozen to death that winter, when a gust of wind brought the door open, and a white-headed man walked in and sat down by the fire. 'Pretty cold day this, stranger,' said one of our neighbors. 'I have seen colder,' replied 'Old Homme' as the boys call him.

'Tell a feller how far you have come to day,' said Hall Stings.

'Much further than you think for, youngster.'

This answer was accompanied with a look that kept us from giving words to queries that curiosity prompted in our minds. He sat there some two or three hours, but said not a word to any one. We all got tired of waiting for him to go, so we one by one went to our dinners and left him. He went before we re-assembled, and we had just exhausted all surmises as to who he was, where he came from, what he wanted and where he went to, when he entered our midst with different little notions to sell, and offering to mend clocks. He always disposed of his goods at his own low prices, without saying but a few words. Sometimes our good dames used to offer him something to eat, but he always refused it in his quiet, proud way.

'Well, he continued with us for more than five years, and none knew where he slept, when or what he ate, or even if he ate at all. At the end of that time our village was all astir, cleaning house and getting ready for a new minister. Every one, from the three-year-old boy to the oldest grandmother contributed their share to prepare for the dominie. But Old Homme looked coldly, almost fiercely on, and said not a word. All of the villagers were secretly hoping that the new minister would find some clue to Homme's life.

He was a sad yet pleasant looking man, with large searching eyes full of expression. Some great sorrow had silvered his hair, but all his actions were quick, and characterised by a graceful cheerfulness. His sermons were so rich in thought and simple in expression that everyone within miles of the village came to hear Mr. Erving preach. But Old Homme when asked to do so always shook his head and said, 'It is many years since I have been to church, and it will be many more before I will go.'

No man had ever seen him smile or shed a tear. In 1850 the scarlet fever raged in our community, always choosing for its victims the 'darlings' of parental hearts, the heads of families, and our most honored citizens. Every house was visited by the destroying angel, save Mrs. Erving's. She was the general good Samaritan, never refusing to comfort and nurse, and always using every precaution not to endanger the life of her husband and twin daughters. At length one of her beautiful ones was stricken, and the mother was so weighed down by sorrow that she knew not what to do for her child. But the neighbors remembering her kindness to them, came in and did what they could for Setta, the 'village pet.' The doctor watched the little one all one night, and in the morning told the parents that their child was claimed to blossom in the garden of the Lamb. All the next day she lay in a stupor. Towards evening a terrific storm set in, and Setta opened her eyes, and dashed the covering from her, then went into a series of fits. None knew what to do, when Old Homme glided noiselessly in, threw off his wet cloak went to the sick child, felt its pulse, and drawing a small vial from his pocket placed it to the lips of the invalid, and she revived. He took her in his arms very gently, and held her for a half hour, then the fever left her, and the doctor said she would recover. Homme watched Setta for two days and nights taking no proffered nourishment or rest. On the third night he went his way while the household slumbered. Everyone wondered what cured Setta Erving, but nobody could tell. Old Homme went away for seven months after that. Setta's parents sent out men to hunt up the benefactor of their child, but their search was fruitless. The village was again thrown into an up-oar by Mr. Oates' barn catching fire, and the parsonage being burnt down before anything could be done to arrest the progress of the flames. Again Old Homme saved the lives and property of the Erving family, and then went his way. Many accused the strange old man of setting the barn on fire, but no one could prove it, and he scorned to deny or affirm it. So the matter rested. Years rolled on, still Old Homme continued to be unknown, and probably ever will be. One night he went to the tavern, called for pen ink and paper; after that he was heard of no more for over a year. Then he went to Mr. Erving's brother, Egleton, and handed him a small heavy iron box, saying, 'If you value your life, sir, never open this box until you hear of my death.' Egleton Erving placed the box in a secret spring closet in the wall, and tried to forget it. But curiosity led him several times to open it, though just as his hand would touch the lid, the old man's words, 'If you value your life,' would cause him to desist from his purpose.

Myrtle Dell, the Erving homestead was getting old, and Mr. E. concluded to have it re-built. So, when all the family were away visiting, the carpenters and masons were ordered to commence their work. Many times when Mrs E. and her brother had been talking of Homme and his box, he had told her if she could find it she might open it, if she chose to risk her life. Now he was away on the Sandwich Islands, and she determined to search for it amid the ruins of their old house. One masterly stroke of the ax touched the secret spring, and the box lay at the feet of Mrs. Erving, who stood anxiously watching for it. One of the workmen carried it to a friend's house, and she secured the door of the room in which it was, and sat down to divulge the great secret of twenty years. She hunted long and patiently to find the spring, at last, just as she was about to dash it down in despair, the box lid flew up, and an adder coiled itself around her neck, and struck its deadly fangs in her flesh—and she was no more. Her friends waited for her to rejoin them, and beginning to think she was ill, went to her room, tried the door, and finding it locked, pried open the lock, and found her clasped by the poisonous serpent in death's embrace. The cries of the ladies brought men to their assistance, who killed the adder and unwound it from Mrs. Erving's neck. There lay the iron box, with its carefully treasured manuscript, a delicately wrought gold case, a wavy mass of purple-black hair, and a boquet of faded flowers. Every means were employed to restore Mrs. E. but they all proved ineffectual. Her daughters, now married women, her husband and other friends gathered about her corpse, and could not but feel it was a monument to curiosity. 'Oh, if Ma had only left Old Homme's box alone!' sobbed the half frantic Setta. After the funeral, when each member of that stricken family silently sought their chambers, Setta took that fatal box and tried for awhile to forget her sorrow in reading the mysterious history. She paused for a moment to examine the costly case and found it to be a picture. It was the face of a man about thirty years old. No artist could have called it beautiful; but it was so strangely expressive that it chained the gaze of the beholder. The eyes were heavy and dark, and the brow was rather round than square, half concealed by thick long curls of black hair. It needed but one glance at the tress that lay in the box to convince a person from whose head it had been severed. The mouth was rather firm, but the lips were too full and pouting to give the face an air of decision.

Setta glanced from the picture to the bouquet, and longed to know how they came into posssession of "old Homme," "the man who never knew a tear." She took up the manuscript which was addressed to her uncle, Egleton Erving, and would have read, but every part of it was written in some language which she could not understand. She closed the lid again over the mystic relics of other days, and placed the box in an old family chest until uncle Egleton came home. The account of Mrs. Erving's death was the theme of every tongue. "Old Homme" heard it and of course understood. The villagers accused him of the murder. But after many trials, and many eloquent appeals, the jury were forced to bring in the verdict "not guilty." But all the people hated the old man.—The children shrunk away from him in terror, and even the dogs sent up a piteous howl when he came near them.

So he felt truly that he was alone. He went away into the bosom of the woods, where no man dared intrude and dwelt year in and year out guarding the sepulchre of his heart. Egleton Erving never returned from the Sandwich Islands. Setta stills retains the manuscript, but she gave "Old Homme" the picture, tress and boquet, and he placed his hand upon her head and said, "Amour, mon Dieu." The great mystery of the "box in the wall" is still unravelled."

From the Washington Republican.

Will the Contrabands Learn.

The Hon. Mr. Wadsworth, member of Congress of Kentucky, in his speech in the United States House of Representatives on the 15th instant, stated that what he was pleased to call the mission to the negroes of Port Royal, South Carolina, in connection with the portions of the Union army and navy now there, is a total failure; that the blacks cannot and will not learn to read; that they are utterly incapable of acquiring even the rudiments of education.

I regret to be under the necessity of differing from this honorable gentleman, but my long and careful experience and observation on this subject, has for several years past, completely disproved all his assertions. I shall put the facts of the case on record

Some time previous to the passage of the great and beneficient act of immediate and universal emancipation in the West Indies—an act, let me here say, that was obtained by the people of Great Britain, by their direct and continuous petitions to the Government—the missionaries among the people of color devoted their best energies to secure the education of the ignorant masses, in spite of sneers, and insults, and personal dangers, notwithstanding they were told by planters and persons high in authority that the negroes could not and would not learn. Although their school-houses were torn down, their churches burned, and themselves compelled to flee from the violence of bloodthirsty pro-slavery mobs to British vessels of war in the West Indian harbors, these holy men of God persevered to the glorious and final issue, proving, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that the negroes could and would learn, and that they ought to receive their liberty. As education progressed, as Christianity took its blessed work among the slaves, they rose from their degradation and chains to manhood and freedom. When that priceless boon came to them, by the proclamation of the Queen of England, as a millitary necessity to prevent insurrections, as well as for other good and sufficient reasons, the people of color received it on their bended knees, many of them with their bibles and primers and hymn-books in their hands. Education and liberty came to them together, and they who had proved that they were able to be educated proved that they were entitled to be free.

More than a quarter of a century has now rolled away since West India emancipation. What has followed? A series of years of ctontentment, quiet, happiness, and prosperity. Not a white man, woman or child has been injured in person or property. On the contrary, the products of the West Indies in favorable seasons, and at times of health, have steadily increased in the aggregate, land has advanced in value, crime has been lessened, and the blessings of Christianity and civilization have multiplied, "some thirity, some sixty, and some a hundredfold."

Such is the condition of the free West Indies to-day, as I know by personal observation and repeated experience. I am prepared to show, by similar testimony, that like results are now being, and will be, produced at the South.

SOUTHERN VIRGINIA.

At Fortress Monroe and Newport News, where our troops and ships of war are maintaining the cause and colors of the Union, judicious measures were early taken to give education to the contrabands. These measures were and have been violently opposed by certain authorities. Many obstacles are even now thrown in the way of contraband education.

They have not been, and are not, as violent as those in the West Indies, but they spring from the same causes, and have been prosecuted with like tenacity. But notwithstanding all this opposition, the colored people of South-eastern Virginia have incontestibly proved their desire and determination to learn to read. As the chaplain of the general hospital at Fortress Monroe, I was early led to put forth all the efforts properly in my power to diffuse the blessings of education. My very first public assembly proved how strongly the contrabands loved to learn. Their early and late demands were for books. "Give us alphabets." "Let us have spelling books." "Grant us Testaments." These were the earnest and oft-repeated cries that arose among the people all around me. How could I refuse to listen? From that day to this the good work of education has steadily progressed. I have been succeeded by faithful fellow-laborers. They have gone on perseveringly and successfully to this hour. There are now over three hundred adults who are patiently learning to read, and more than twice that number of children. As many as eight distinct and prosperous classes are in constant operation. The words of learning are passing constantly around. The rude songs and catchwords of the plantation are giving place to the rudimental passages and melodies of a sound education. Old men and women, in spectacles, learn how to read from the children who sit at their aged feet. Thousands in this way will obtain the essentials of reading, writing, and arithmetic, before the close of this year of our Lord, 1862

So much for the war for the Union in South-eastern Virginia.

NORTH AND SOUTH CAROLINA.

As I had the happiness to be one of the first to enter Fort Hatteras, at the time of its capture by the Union forces, so it was my privilege to prepare the way for the introduction of contraband education in North Carolina. The number of students is not so large as it is in Virginia, but the students are equally apt to learn. The supply of books is comparatively limited, but they are employed to good advantage. There are few obstacles in the way. The people learn readily and rapidly. Not less than two hundred contrabands, young and old, are reached, in various ways, with the blessings of a plain education.

So much for the Old North State being invaded by the mudsills of the Union.

In South Carolina, especially at Hilton Head and Beaufort, the work of educating the contrabands has made good progress. There have been peculiar obstacles encountered at the latter place, but they are being and will be all surmounted. Not far from three thousand colored laborers will be brought to enjoy the light of the alphabet, the spelling book, and the bible, on the South Carolina coast. The supply of books is large, and will be made abundant for all patriotic and philanthropic purposes. The people gather in their humble tents, in the plain buildings provided for them, and around their camp-fires in the open air, to learn to spell their letters into words, and then read the word of God. Their thirst for learning is intense and universal. Much as they feel the need of wages for honest labor, they feel the need of learning more. It is touching and sublime to witness the avidity with which they pore over the printed page. They seem to feed upon it as the children of Israel fed on the manna in the Wilderness. The words of learning pass from mouth to mouth; the youthful lips learn unwonted strains of melody and praise; and grey-headed people bow at the altars with delight where the spirits of Liberty and Education minister under the glorious Star-Spangled Banner.

These are facts. I have seen them, and know them to be true. Would that they were universal in America!

CHARLES W. DENISON, U. S. Chaplain,
from Port Royal, S. C.

INFORMATION WANTED.

MR. EDITOR.—In the "Pine and Palm" of Jan. 23nd, appears a communication from Hamilton, O. over the initials A. J. A., in which the writer calls James Redpath a Moses. Now I cannot conceive why Mr. R. should be considered a Moses, unless from his influence over the "rocks" of the Haytian Government, or because he once smote a "Rock." By the way, Mr. Editor, you will recollect that contemporary with the appointment of Dr. Jno. S. Rock as justice of the peace, was the removal of the Haytian Bureau from Boston to your city. Was there any connection between the two events?

We learn from the above named paper of the same date that much dissatisfaction prevails even in Hayti in regard to the management here of the emigration movement—would not this lead us to believe that the recent report that Mr. Redpath is to be superseded by Rev. J. T. Holly, is not without foundation? We read a few days ago, in the Congressional news, that the committee on Foreign Affairs will shortly repor to the Senate a bill recognizing Hayti and Liberia, and providing a Charge d' Affaires to each with authority to act as commissioners of emigration. Does not this foreshadow the realization to somebody of a "higher insight?"

In your next issue, with your permission, I will ask a few more questions.

ROBERT YOUNG.

Philadelphia, Jan. 27th, 1862.

P. S. As Mr. Redpath once visited our city for the special purpose of having an interview with me, but failed to find me, permit me to say that I shall be here for sometime, unless I too am so fortunate as to receive a "higher insight." R. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent liniment for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING

B. T. BABBITT'S

SUPERIOR FRENCH

CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps;) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

THE

PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC,

Containing besides the Calendar and Copious Astronomical Statistics, a History of the Great Rebellion, Biographical Sketches of the Prominent Military Officers, a Dictionary of Military Terms, very full information relative to Military Matters of interest to the people at large, National Hymns, Incidents, Anecdotes, &c., &c.

Published and for sale by DEXTER & Co., 17 Spruce street. Newsboys and others wanted to make sales.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess or dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter or how long standing: and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
THOS. R. CROCKER,
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.

D. W. INGERSOL,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 12th, 1855.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

JAMES EDWIN HALSEY,
193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Head ache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want a good and safe article.

ALBRO LYONS.

20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway; Mrs. Staat's, 78 Thompson St.; Chas. H. Ring's, 155 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

WM. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of

THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beckman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb hat grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz. Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Waranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equral in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangemen of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat o sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordiary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is erfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occassionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50, Muslin $1.00

CONTENTS;

EMBELLISHMENT—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or he Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship.—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brindis De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture —by Robert Gordon.
Is the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon.
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anony mous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James Mc Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly.
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J erce Langston.
The Shadows of Intelligerance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anony mous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Horland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY THOMAS HAMILTON,

48 Beekman St,

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington. D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gordan Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. ell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass. One vol., 12 mo., 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

Th Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787. 2. The Articles of Confederation 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on slavery, and the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory; also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code.
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 294 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 18x25, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel between decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which places it within the reach of the masses—viz. 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents) must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1.25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed.
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still and his wife, Vina, after forty years of Slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard; with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May. Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream [illegible]
Or, the true history of Deacon Giles's Distillery and Deacon Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents; $1 per doz. or $5 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By S. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland.
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party, late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia, and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 62 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added.

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual.
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton; its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption; and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 19 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
90 large [illegible] pages, in paper, by Mrs. P Han. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It contains a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet, bed and fancy linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW"

VOL. 1. NO. 29 NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 15, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENT

The Weekly Anglo-African,
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY
BY ROBT HAMILTON
No. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
Two Dollars per year or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery

RATES OF ADVERTISING
Six Cents a line for the first insertion and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.
Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines, if more than that Five Cents for each additional line.
All communications for the paper must be addressed
ROBT HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street New York

(Copyright secured in United States and Canada.)

BLAKE; OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba

BY MARTIN R. DELANY

PART II

Hear the word!—who fight for freedom!
Shout it in the battle van!
Hope! for bleeding human nature!
Christ the God, is Christ the Man!
H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER XIV

MAKING THE COAST

This day anxiety pervaded, and every eye was put upon the sketch, not only to get a glimpse of the portentious coast of Africa, but also in fearful anticipation of a pursuit by the British cruiser Medusa, whose prowess along the Gulf of Guinea was fearfully notorious to the slavers. The Kings of Dahomi and Ashanti were compelled to respect it in a manner which gave terror to the traders. Though every glass at command was levelled at every point of compass over the seas, yet not a sail was descried, and a surmise was justly concluded, that the distant object had its origin in the productive imagination of the comic seaman Gascor. For this imposition the impertinent Black, would have met at the hands of the crude American a severe chastisement, but the words of the song still rung in his ears, that he was

"Goin to Afraka
Where de white man dare not stay."

With this impression that "cats" however black, may "scratch" as well as others, the mate was contented to let things take their natural course, provided they grew no worse than they had been. The blacks were now closely watched, their every motion being noticed, and Blake was now looked upon with the greatest possible interest. On sailed the vessel like a goddess of the water, gracefully gliding every wave, riding the high seas like a water fowl, nothing more transpiring to give alarm save the occasional drolleries of Gascor, which always might be considered ominous.

The Vulture now entered the Gulf of Guinea and after several days of fair sailing put into a lagoon in one of the most secluded and least suspected places on the coast. Here was the trading post of the great factor a noted Portugee, Ludo Draco, the friend of Geza, King of Dahomi. Near but a short distance from the beach in the thickest of the bush, were situated the barracoons, many in number, being long one story wooden houses, thatched with grass. One mile from the barracoons in a beautifully cleared and elevated spot, was the residence of Draco, attained only by a narrow foot path, through the densest of the forest.

Scarcely had the vessel moored, till Blake was on shore and off into the forest. Cheers by the clapping of hands and as many grins as claps, were given in approbation of the arrival. The miserable victims who filled these coffleshambles of suffering humanity, having been so taught to do by their relentless and insatiable oppressor.

Garcia was now more at ease, and having observed the unceremonious manner in which the sailing master left them, he ordered the confinement of the others, to prevent the example being followed. But the blacks fully understood themselves, and did not design leaving the vessel.

The family of Draco consisted of a wife, Zorina, a handsome native African, and two daughters, Angelina and Seraphina, beautiful mulatto children, the former having just completed at Lisbon, her education in one of the first Convents. The residence was finely furnished, and the family pleasant and agreeable; but the circumstances surrounding them of the horrible manner in which their wealth was acquired, cast a gloom over the dazzling splendor of their gaudy mansion, making the noon-day and sunlight of their brilliant abode, as dark as midnight obscurity.

In Zarina was that amiable and benevolent expression of countenance, so common to the native women of her race, and which always implies a welcome to the priveleges of the house; but yet there was that absence of earnest gratification which usually characterizes those who anticipate gain from their visitors. Affable and sociable, she was still reserved and seriously thoughtful as though some weighty matter was struggling within.* It was the traffic in human beings, in which her husband was engaged, and already amassed a princely fortune, that disturbed her peace of mind. It was this, which like a millstone had sunk deep to the bottom, and troubled the still waters of her peaceful soul.

Though civilized, in early life a pupil in the Christian Missionary school at Badagry, and a professed convert, with afflictions such as these, Zorina was not the woman she would have been, and could not be such as her husband Ludo Draco desired she should be, a woman devoted as a wife to his pecuniary interests.

'What are the prospects Don Ludo, have you much stock in trade?' enquired Garcia of the Portugee, after refreshing with brandy and water.

'Only a moderate supply Senior—some five and twenty hundred in the pens—a little more than one good cargo,' replied Ludo Draco.

'Pretty good stock Don Ludo. Assorted selection?'

'They are prime what is of them, of both sexes, all sizes, men women and children, and few or no old negroes among them, Senhor.'

'What are slaves now worth, Don Ludo?'

'From twenty to forty dollars Senhor with a large cargo.'

'We have a double decker, and prepared for twenty hundred.'*

'What's your destination North or South America?'

'We cleared from Matanzas, but shall import where there is the greatest demand. You have the best knowledge of the markets—where had we best import, Don Ludo?'

'The Brazils are going down, that religious cant and nonsense about philanthropy and human rights has alredy reached there, and measures and restrictions have been decreed by the National Congress against importation.'

'What of Cuba, Don Ludo?'

'A little better Senhor, but not what it should be. Taking advantage of the political signs of the time, the prohibition of the trade in Brazil, and the leniency of the home government toward the negroes in consequence of their insurrectionary tendencies—the Cubans set their own price and pay what they please ahead, because of no competition in the trade. The United States is now decidedly the best market, because the supply is inadequate to the demand of the new territory continually opening up, without a heavy loss to the old states. Indeed the disciplined slave is preferred for the new States from their experience in labor, while the native African will do better in the old cultivated grounds. An American agency in Cuba is all you require to make the trade a most lucrative one.'

'Fine, fine, by St. Joseph!' said Garcia; 'not being in the business for sometime, I had lost the run of things. Old Key West, I suppose still holds her own?'

'Key West is all right, Senhor!' replied Draco.

At the mention of Key West, Royer looked knowingly at Paul and Garcia with a wink, as to them this was a familiar place of safety in years past, but true to his previous convictions of wrong, Paul preserved his seriousness and ignored a cognizance of the hint.

There was now a great point gained as there had been an unsettled opinion as to the best point to make with their cargo. Captain Emanuel Garcia and his Portuguese mate, Juan Costello, had at the start previous to the convictions of Paul, insisted on Matanzas as the place, whilst Paul and his American officer only held Cuba as a dernier resort, preferring the United States as the market—Key West being the place of safety.

'I am satisfied,' said Garcia, 'that the United States is the market. Let us have a full cargo, and as little delay as possible.'

At this moment a signal was given by the tapping of the bell suspended above the mansion.

'Gentlemen, a large supply has just arrived from the interior, walk with me,' said Draco, the party going directly to the barracoons for reception, secluded in a cloister near the mansion, those near the moorings being used only for shipping.

CHAPTER XV.

THE SLAVE FACTORY.

'Hark!' exclaimed Angelina, unaccustomed, from her continued absence at school, to such a sound—'What is that I hear?'

'It comes, my child, from the barracoons,' explained the mother, with a deep sigh.

'Do you tell me, mother, that wailings come already, since the tapping of that bell? What does it mean?'

'Preparing the slaves, my child, for packing, I suppose.'

'How preparing them, mother? What do they do to them?' anxiously inquired the girl.

'They whip and burn them, my child, to make them obey.'

'And what do you mean by "packing"?'

'Putting them down in the bottom of the ship, my child, so that they can't move about.'

'How can they live this way? Oh, mother, they can't live!'

'They can't live long, my child; but many of them die, when that makes room, and some of them live.'

'Oh horrible!—cruel, cruel!' exclaimed the more than astonished girl. 'Pardon me, mother—I cannot help it—and is this my father's business?'

'It is, my daughter,' replied the mother, the brightness of whose eyes were glaring with the evidence of sympathy for the sufferings of her people.

'Then forgive me, mother, I receive nothing from this day forth from my father's hand.* He's cruel, and——'

'Stop, my child!' interrupted the mother, 'curse† not him from whose lines you came.'

'Forgive me, mother. Heaven forbid! But I cannot consent to go to Madrid to obtain accomplishments at the price of blood. The Lady Superior when at Lisbon, taught me to "love my neighbor as myself"—that all mankind was my neighbor. I thought I was educated to come home and teach my race.'

'My child you must——'

'Hark! mother don't you hear?' again exclaimed the young affrighted girl, when another wailing came, more terrible than the other.

'Have patience my child.'

'I can't, mother—I can't! How can I have patience with such dreadful things as these?'

'God will give you patience, my child. Depend on Him.'

'I will depend on Him and go directly to the spot and beseech Him in mercy, for the poor suffering ones. Come and take me to them,' she concluded, calling for native servants to carry her after them, as the party had now left the receptacles for the trading posts at the landing on the lagoon, nearly a mile distant.

Soon she arrived near the dreadful scene
Where friends incarnate—vile confederate band—
Torture with thumscrew, lash, and fire-brand.

This most remarkable spot which for years had sent forth through the world its thousands of victims—a place repulsively noted in the history of wrong—was a dismal nook in the north-eastern extremity of the lagoon, extending quite into the bush, forming a cove of complete security and quiet. In this position lay the Vulture, and near the barracoons, under cover of seemingly impenetrable undergrowth, sat the beautiful Angelina, the good hearted natives who bore her there lying at her feet to protect her, as is their custom to strangers in the forest. In this position, quietly inspecting the whole proceedings, her soul became horror stricken.

'Hark!' again exclaimed Angelina in a suppressed frightened tone, unconscious, seemingly, of the half dressed natives lying at her feet, 'don't you hear? What in God's name does it mean?'

Scarcely had the awe stricken girl gave utterance, till a heart-rending wail sent a thrill through her.

'Oh! Oh! Oh!' was the cry from a hundred voices, as the last torture was inflicted upon them.‡

Again came a hissing sound, accompanied by the smell of scorched flesh, with wailings in their native tongues for mercy to God.

'Holy Madonna! Mother of God! is this the sacrifice, or what is it?'

'Yes,' replied a hidden, unknown voice, in chaste and elegant Portuguese—'a sacrifice of burnt offering to the god of Portugal and Spain.'

'Good sir, pray tell me,' looking around she said—'What is this, and where am I?'

'Be patient, dear child—be patient, and you shall hear—as from the graves of our forefathers—of untold suffering from this spot—

A place where demons daring land—
Fiends in bright noon-day—and sit
A hellish conclave band to barter
The sons and daughters of our land away.'

'May God protect me!' she screamed, and sunk in a swoon, when in an instant the servants bore her in the hammock away.

In parties of ten or more the branding iron was applied in such quick succession, that a sound and smell like that of broiling and scorched flesh was produced. At this last sad act of cruelty, and the voice in explanation of it, the tender and affrighted girl yielding to frail nature had sickened and fallen at the root of a tree, where she sat, when the first impressions of consciousness found her again at the side of a devoted mother under the roof of the dwelling, fondly ministering to her relief.

'Oh, mother—oh, mother! what an experience have I had this day! Oh what my ears have heard!' were the first words of Angelina on recovering.

'Tell me, my child,' with native simplicity but earnestness, inquired the mother, 'what is it?'

'As well may you, mother,' replied the excited intelligent girl; 'go

Ask the whirlwinds why they rove,
The storms their raging showers;
Ask the lightning why they move,
The thunders whence their powers!'

'My child, your head is bad; it is hot; it is not sound. You must keep quiet, my child,' anxiously admonished the mother, applying leaves taken from cold water, continually to her brow.

'A cup of water, mother; I am sick. Oh, I hear it again! They are burning them alive!' continued she to talk at random, till sleep quieted her voice, whilst the mother stood over her with a calabash of leaves and water anxiously watching every breath she drew.

CHAPTER XVI

BEFORE LEAVING

The Vulture was now freighted, the cargo completed and eighteen hundred human beings made up the bill of lading. All being ready, Ludo Draco left the vessel for his residence. The better to evade the vigilance of those ever watchful and indomitable guardians of the coast, the British cruisers, it is customary, under favorable circumstances, to leave the factories under cover of night.

It was now the fourth evening, the hour for sailing fast ensuing, up to which time the black sailing master had not appeared. About him there was much talk, speculation and uneasiness; some suspecting that he might have been the employed spy of the English, while Royer and Costello, the mates, believed that the tendency of the negro being degeneracy, he having before been on the coast and in the country, must have seized the opportunity of returning to the usages of savage life.

But he had not been far from the vessel since her arrival, but, having a knowledge of the place, had secreted himself near the residence of Draco, that the whole proceedings might be witnessed by him, and he thus become an unexpected auditor of the lamentations of the young and lovely Angeline, first in the mansion—he having stolen in after the trading party left at the sound of the bell—and subsequently under cover of the forest, whither he followed her cortege of carriers.

Midnight had arrived, all was still around and wrapped in silence, nothing disturbing the quietude, save the dashing of the surf against the beach, occasional noise of a night bird, or hideous screech of a distant hyena. No human being was to be seen, except a solitary black watchman moodily crouched upon the quarter deck, who, though a slave, was as vigilant on duty as the sentinel on a man-of-war. His duty was of two-fold—one for the vessel, and the other entirely foreign to its interest. Presently the form of a person was seen to approach; it was Blake, who, saluting the watchman, took a seat also upon the quarter deck, the seamen all taking rest at the time, not knowing what hour they would be called to duty.

A scene in the mansion had protracted his stay, although Blake was ready for duty so soon as the vessel was ready to sail. Her stay being but a few short days he had availed himself of the time and communicated with many of the natives opposed to the king, among whom he took his fare and lodging, except when concealed in disguise in the mansion, dressed as a native, being known only to the servants.

Draco, that evening, on entering the house for the first time, from the vessel, was met by his wife in tears, stating that their dear child was dying—when he hastened to her room and found her in a most distressing condition. Looking in his face she gave a silly look, with a smile, then closing her eyes lay as if lifeless.

"Oh, Don Ludo, my poor child is almost gone!" said Zorinda, the silvery tears studding her cheeks like crystal spangles on a velvet cushion; Draco making no reply, but gave a deep sigh.

Suddenly they were startled by a song of lamentation, the most remarkable and pathetic, in which the traffic, gains, and wealth of her father, the punishment, suffering and sorrows of her mother's race, caused by him and a king unworthy to be classed with the race of her mother, were uttered in tones of scathing rebuke. She would that she had not been born to have been thus distracted, that her mother had never seen her father, and that Dabony had never existed.

'Oh, 'tis my mother's race and not his! Yes, 'tis my blood and not his!' she frantically exclaimed, then again sank into stillness, when her mother pressing her hands and cheeks, cried out,

'My child is cold,—she must be dead! My poor child, my poor child! Oh!'

Tell me not of my sad lot,
Of death's cold cheeks repine,
Of life's last hope, and endless scope,
Of miseries of mine!

'They are nothing, mother, nothing. But you it is who feels as never woman felt, and none to pity. Oh, sister are you here! Know you pity, mother!' she again exclaimed, interrupting her mother, by stopping her wailing, and recognising her sister Seraphina, who lay at her side from the time she was taken into the mansion on the hammock.

Draco during the time stood in tears over her bed, and when the song and last frantic wail was given, taking his wife by one hand, and his youngest daughter, who lay on the bed beside her sister, by the other, leaning over and impressing kisses long and many upon her cheeks, he promised the distracted Angelina never again to traffic in human beings.

Suddenly springing up in the bed, she sat looking around at each person and object in the room; drawing her hand over her face, and raising her eyelids as if just aroused from a deep sleep, exclaimed:

'What is the matter—is any one sick! Have I been dreaming, or what? I am well now!'* when Blake left the mansion for the vessel, which he reached at so late an hour.

CHAPTER XVII.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

This morning at half-past three, a favorable wind having risen, the stern command of Royer was heard preparing to weigh anchor; the blacks being promptly at their post, among whom was Blake. Soon were the white sails spread to the breeze, and the clipper cleaving the waters like a monster of the sea. The day dawned most beautifully; the wind continued fair, and ten o'clock brought every white upon the decks to enjoy the pleasures of the morning. No sickness had pervaded them, and all looked fresh and cheerful. Until then no spiriotus liquor was allowed though a large supply was on board. This restriction had only been a precautionary measure, to guard against contingences until the cargo was obtained, and they homeward bound. But this morning the beverage was in great profusion, the blacks alone being prohibited its use, and among the privileged Royer was a patron. Excited with the ardent liquid, he seemed familiarly at ease, and simply required an occasion to execute his will. Though burly and sulky before he now became blustering, boisterous and overbearing, and Garcia, if none other, seemed to be in imminent danger.

'Where the mischief have you been?' roared the man, almost maddened by a too free indulgence, on seeing Blake on deck for the first time since the vessel moored; 'reveling I suppose back in the bush among the heathern wenches, palming yourself off for a nigger chief! Step light and bestir yourself my larky; you're not now in Africa to give nigger impudence to white men! Get about there, get about! or the knot-end of a tar rope may teach you how they make smart blacks in America!'

Blake giving him a look—and such a look!—ascended the shrouds, where seating himself, loitered on the mizen mast. Looking up at him, Royer called out——

'Come down there you saint of a chimney sweep, or I'll teach you how to——'

'Take care dat sweep don't throw sut in yo' eyes!'* interrupted Gascor, who till then had been lost sight of; Royer pretending not to have heard him, though the whites laughed out at the expression from the boy, and the blacks huddling, whispered together for a time.

'Disperse there you black clouds! We're not ready for a rain!' again ordered the intoxicated man on seeing the blacks standing together.

'But you may have a storm,' replied the boy.

'What's that you lump of charcoal!' rebuked Royer, looking about as if to find a ropes' end; 'what did you say!'

'Take care dat lump o' charcoal don't burn yeh, sir, dats all!' replied the boy to utter the merriment of Paul and Spencer, though the rest of the whites felt otherwise. Royer pressing his lips made no reply, but doubtless would have severely chastised him had not the pressence of Paul, and suspicion of the ultimate intention of the negroes deterred him.

The morning had passed and it was then about the middle of the afternoon, when Paul and Garcia both appearing on deck ordered an inspection of the hole of the ship for an examination of the slaves therein confined. The hatches being opened, those standing nearest fell back from the stench escaping as if repulsed by an explosion of gas.

'Heavens! there must be a good lot of 'em dead, captain,' exclaimed Paul, addressing Garcia as the fumes met them in the face.

'I reckon not,' answered Garcia, 'the stalls only want washing.'

'How is this done, captain?' enquired Lawrence Spencer.

'By means of a force pump and hose throwing sea water among them,' replied Garcia.

'This I supposed from the manner they are packed, but indeed the business is all so entirely new to me, that I don't pretend to know anything on shipboard, though I've served a long apprenticeship in nautical matters.'

The stench having somewhat abated, the officers and others approached the open hatches.

'Blake, my good fellow, I'm glad to see you again at your post, I don't know what that girl of yours would have done had we left you in Africa. I'm fearing she would have charged me with kidnapping you,' remarked captain Paul, being the first time he had spoken to him since they left the coast; at which he smilingly made no reply.

'Ah!' replied Royer, affecting pleasantry, 'I see what'll make the fellow laugh—talk about his girl. This morning he was as sulky as a black ram, because I told him about the nigger wenches on the coast. I suppose he thinks himself one cut above the black wenches.'

Paul looking at Royer, advanced whispering in his ear, 'You better treat him well; he's no common negro, I assure you,' to which Royer answered also in a whisper:

'But we're going where he will be common, where every negro's made to know his place.'

'Where is that?' whispered Paul.

'Home, in the United States, where else!' replied Royer.

'Yes, but you're not yet there, and it might be that you'll never reach here!' rejoined he.

'Curse the niggers, I hate em!' retorted Royer impatiently.

'That may be Mr. Royer, but it wasn't the way to show it I'm thinking, by comin' to Africa after 'em,' calmly replied Paul.

Abruptly leaving him, Royer advanced to the main hatchway, when Paul following after, they made ready to enter, each officer with a sapre at his side, revolver studded in his belt, and an unsheathed bowie-knife in his hand.

'Blake,' said Paul, 'you better take the lead!' to which Royer readily consented, though opposed to a negro leading in anything wherein a white man was concerned.

Blake entered the hatch followed by Paul, Garcia, Costello and Royer.

'Merciful God! what a sight,' exclaimed Spencer, as he caught the first sight of the half suffocated beings closely packed in narrow stalls like brutes wallowing in revolting mire.

'In very good condition,' replied the Spaniard, 'none dead worth naming, two fine children—a boy and girl of three years of age—having died through the night for want of air and water.'

'Stir up here you nests of black maggots, stir up!' exclaimed Royer, punching with a capstain bar all within his reach to see whether they lived or not.

'Good Heavens!' again exclaimed Spencer, 'what a condition they are in! I wonder they're not all dead. How on earth will we ever get them purified?'

'The pump and hose with plenty sea water is all that's required,' replied Garcia.

'Yes, give em plenty, that 'll soon straighten up matters,' added Royer, 'stir about there—stir about!' still punching in among them.

Next commenced the washing process when the double cranked pump was brought into full requisition. The stream was directed by Royer himself, which, regardless of their eyes, was thrown into their faces, when the poor wretches almost dying with thirst, opened their mouths to catch the stream as it played among them, sucking and licking the salt water off of each others heads and shoulders.

During the inspection of the stalls an affecting scene ensued. A fine specimen of a man, tall and athletic, of some forty-five years of age, was cruelly treated by the coarse and ruthless American. On looking imploringly at his abuser, he gave him a punch with the butt end of the bar, drawing blood, which streamed down his face. On again imploring him, Royer screamed—

'Do you look at me that way, you black devil!' when, turning his face away to conceal his grief, the mate gave him another blow on the cheek bone, producing contusion, when the tears stole down his manly face baptising with sorrow, his bare expanded breast heaving with emotions of despair.

To all this Blake was witness, with a watchful eye and determination more than ever to carry out his objects, observing which in his countenance, the grief-pierced captive cast at him a glance the most impressive.

Leaving this scene of distress, passing to another tier in which were confined principally females, the attention of Blake was attracted by a sprightly, handsome little bright eyed boy, playing about with as much delight and unconcern, as if gamboling with the freedom of a kid over some grassy common in his own loved nativity. He readily recognised in the child the likeness of the noble looking captive confined in another place, so ruthlessly abused by the heartless American mate, Royer.

While thus standing contemplating with sorrow the scenes around him, his attention was called to a woman, handsome and pleasant, with a meek and humble look, as she sat buried in her living grave. This woman was from Soudan, whose occupation had been that of a vender of 'country cloths,' as the native dry goods are termed, or as by the Creoles of Louisiana, a 'merchant woman.' She had been a Mohammedan, but, going into the Eba country to reside, had been converted to Christianity by missionary influence, but sold to Dahomi by the Ibadans, by whom she was taken in warfare.

As Abyssa caught the eye of Blake, she gave him a look which at once riveted his attention. She saw that he was a civilized man, and desired that he should observe her. The look was reciprocated, and as he passed close by where she sat, to get a better observation of her, he startled as his ears caught the whisper in good English—

Arm of the Lord, awake!

The commander and party leaving the hold, Blake also went to the deck, relieved from the stench of the great cesspool, and heart rending scenes of the living Potter's Field.

---

*The character exhibited by the sister of the native wife of a once noted slavetrader on the Coast, whom the writer met in Africa—a very respectable, intelligent, christian young woman.

*They frequently prepare the vessels to carry 2000, which was the case with a slaver taken by the British cruiser, brig Triton, which the writer saw at Sierra Leone, in April 1860.

*The young mulatto daughter of a slave-trader on the coast peremptorily refused to leave her people and go with him to Portugal to finish an education.

† The native African is very correct in speech, pronouncing very distinctly any word they learn in other languages. Curse—to speak ill of, by the native African.

‡ One method of torture inflicted by the foreign traders, to prevent meeting, is an oblong square piece of iron in a box form, made so as to admit the ends of the middle and ring fingers, when it is driven down as far as it will go, tearing the flesh from the bone as it forces its way.

*An interesting scene is said to have taken place between the family—which is colored—of a slave trader and himself who had renounced the trade previous to his renouncement and leaving the coast.

*A little native Grebo boy employed on a vessel on the coast of Africa, 1859, was remarkable for wit and repartee, regarding neither officers nor passengers, but had a ready reply for all.

From the Washington Republican

WILL THE CONTRABANDS FIGHT?

It has been shown, in previous numbers of the "National Republican," by the testimony of indisputable facts, that contrabands can and will work, and that they can and do learn.

The question at the head of this article—WILL THE CONTRABANDS FIGHT?—is a direct corollary from the others, and one of the most important and serious that can be answered at the present time. If it be true that the contrabands will fight for the preservation of the Union, even as they are at this moment armed and equipped to fight for its destruction, then it follows that the fact ought to be generally known, that the people and government may act accordingly.

From the earliest ages of the world, the people from whom the contrabands of this country originally sprang, have been a people of war. The antecedents of centuries in the nations around them combine to make them warlike. The origin and progress of the slave trade have done the same thing. Through all the tribes of the people of color, not only in this country, but in all others where they reside in numbers, the relations of tribal authority, royalty, chieftainship, warlike propensities, are preserved, canonized, and handed down from generation to generation. As the people of color have increased in this country, as they have become Americanized and carried comparatively remote from the king, and queens, and warriors, from whom portions of them sprang, they have still preserved and cherished the war-memorials of the past. They have, almost wholly, and for years, acted on the belief that they are to be delivered from American bondage as the children of Israel were delivered from the bondage of Egypt. Through many parts of the South there is a song sung that illustrates and intensifies this idea. It has been in use in some parts of Virginia for years, but has been forbidden to be sung in certain quarters of that State, and is never or seldom heard in States further South. In this popular contraband song such verses as the following occur:

When Israel was in Egypt's land,
O let my people go!
Oppressed so hard they could not stand,
O let my people go!

CHORUS—O go down, Moses,
Away down to Egypt's land,
And tell King Pharaoh
To let my people go!

Thus saith the Lord, bold Moses said,
O let my people go!
If not, I'll smite your first-born dead,
Then let my people go!

No more shall they in bondage toil,
O let my people go!
Let them come out with Egypt's spoil,
O let my people go!

Then Israel out of Egypt came,
O let my people go!
And left the proud oppressive land,
O let my people go!

'Twas just about in harvest time,
O let my people go!
When Joshua led his host divine—
O let my people go!

We need not always weep and mourn,
O let my people go!
And wear these Slavery chains forlorn—
O let my people go!

Here are the clearest intimations of the spirit of war. Here is the strong conception of the people of color that Moses and the children of Israel had a God given right to resist tyranny.

In addition to this testimony is that constantly presented in the events of the past and passing times. Although the contrabands have not been allowed to read, yet they have frequently overheard the reading of others. The result of the insurrection in St. Domingo has long been known among the contrabands of the South—the name of Toussant L'Overture has passed from mouth to mouth until it has become a secret household word—and a love of liberty, fed by a love of arms, has been rendered universal and almost omnipotent. It has been felt that if it was right for the colored Haytiens to fight to be free, it is equally right for colored Americans.

A strong incentive to the war element in the Old Dominion is found in the parade of the motto of the State on various public and private occasions. "RESISTANCE TO TYRANTS IS OBEDIENCE TO GOD," is pictured on the Virginia shield, with the figure of an armed woman, personating Liberty, with a lifted sword in her hand and her foot trampling on the neck of a prostrate tyrant. How suggestive to the contraband! Yet he has seen it, heard it explained, exhibited, illuminated in transparencies, painted in pictures, paraded on banners, fulminated in the thunders of stump speeches and dinner table oratory, until he has learned it all by heart, and drank deeply of the inspiration from which it springs. There has not been a Fourth of July oration, nor a reading of the Declaration of American Independence, nor a salute in honor of the spread of republican liberty, nor a shout for La Fayette nor Lamartine nor Kossuth, but it has been like an electric spark to the war passion in the sympathetic soul of the struggling contraband. The war fire has been kindled around his soul, and it has warmed within him the self-evident and unconquerable love of liberty.

So general is the conviction in the South that the determination to fight for freedom is universal, however latent, among the bondsmen, that there are cases where the singing of this very song of Moses leading the Israelites from the bondage of Egypt—in a far off country and remote age as that event was—has been punished in the most severe manner. Facts on this point are abundant, if there were room to insert them here. What mean the armed midnight minutemen of the Southern cities? What is the omen of the alarm bell in the centre of all these towns? Wherefore are they supplied, in their very hearts, with arsenals, cannon, magazines? Why was it that John Randolph, in his "Notes on Virginia," makes the startling statement—"The midnight bell tolls not in Richmond, but the mother hugs her infant more closely to her breast?" How impressive are those other words of the Sage of Monticello: "I tremble for my country when I remember that God is just, and that His justice cannot sleep forever; for in the contest which must inevitably come between the master and the slave, the Almighty has no attribute that can take sides with the master."

All these ominous things the contraband knows, sees, hears, feels. What is the lesson that they teach? This, and only this: THE CONTRABAND WILL FIGHT!

In Canada, it is well known, the escaped people of color have been organized into companies—in some instances into regiments—where they have learned the practice of war. Some of these have been accepted and well tested by the British Government. And knowledge of the fact has reached many parts of the South, and been communicated, by the mysterious affinities of slavery all among the contrabands. In the West Indies, the East Indies, China, Africa, and other countries, some of the best, bravest, most thoroughly disciplined, vigerous and victorious soldiers of England, France, Russia, and other countries are, or have been, of the contraband persuasion. What is true in other lands, other things being equal, is equally true in America.

The experience of the present war for the Union is forcibly illustrated, in this contraband question, by the wars of the Revolution and of 1812. In the former, Washington employed contrabands, on several dangerous occasions, among his courageous, sagacious and trusty sentinels. It was when he said, on the perilous heights of Newburgh, not far from West Point, when, as now, the whole country was endangered by the presence of traitors, "Let none but Americans be put on guard to night!" that he ordered COLORED MEN, contrabands, to shoulder the sentries musket, and stand in the front rank of honor and of danger. Full well did Washington know that the contrabands would fight.

Who was it that shed the first blood in the primal battle, the initiatory fight of the Revolution? A colored man—a contraband—the volunteer Attucks, who fell in front ranks of the American lines, the first American to fall by British bullets on American soil—the first dead martyr to American liberty!

The testimony of General Jackson in the last war with Great Britian is directly in point. In his proclamation to the contrabands, calling on them to join him in defending New Orleans, he pays a strong tribute to their bravery, love of home and kindred, and patriotic devotion to their country. All this is history and cannot be denied.

Ah! yes: rely upon it the contrabands will fight: 600,000 strong, with at least as many more volunteers from the emancipated of the West Indies.

The experience of all who have recently been in the South, in connection with the Union Army and naval force there, and of all who know that the generals and naval officers of the Confederate States have done in enlisting contrabands, goes, conclusively to establish this great point. The contrabands will fight and fight to the last. They learn the use of firearms quickly, they are accustomed to drill, they are fond of music, they are social and clannish and hence easily massed; and when they have brave and skillful commanders, above all, when they have a hope of liberty before them, the contrabands will fight on to the close of the war, and our glorious Union is preserved.

Many facts exist to attest the truth of these statements all over the land.

B. W. DENISON, U. S. Chaplin,
from Port Royal, S. C.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 15, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

NEW BOOKS

1st. "THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE IN LIBERIA. The Annual Address before the citizens of Maryland county, Cape Palmas, Liberia, July 26th, 1860. Being the day of National Independence, by the REV. ALX. CRUMMELL B. A., Queen's College, Cambridge. Missionary." New York, Bruce & Co.

2d. "Record of an Obscure Man." Boston: Ticknor & Fields.

For a month past, we have waited in vain for a leisure hour or two in which to collate these remarkable essays on the African question, the first written by the most learned and brilliant of the blacks, and the other by a New England lady in whose veins flow the unadulterated blood of the Pilgrims. But, it would seem, that leisure will never come; and we now write hastily and crudely what the dignity and interest of the subject would require to be carefully and thoughtfully written.

The views of these writers are in as striking contrast as their ethnological status. "The obscure Man" of whom Miss Putnam writes this "Record," is none other than the negro, of whom she gives the best, the fullest and most satisfactory record it has been our fortune meet with, after reading all we could find in print on the subject. There is neither the low abuse, the supercilious caste sneering, nor the opposite and quite as harmful negrophilisms in this volume, which we are so apt to encounter in the many productions about the "great irrepressible. She has condensed into two hundred and fourteen pages a summary of negro character, made up from the accounts of the various travellers who have written about Africa, and from our record in America, with here and there extracts from ancient learning. She recognizes in the negro an original, inherent, germ force of his own, solemn, grand, peculiar endowed with energy and vitality, enough to develope civil, social, and intellectual greatness out of its own resources—she discovers native heroes, statesmen and poets; and remarks:

"It is much to be desired that some men possessed of the peculiar genius and the zealous industry of the Danish, German and French scholars, who have done so much to preserve the early poetry of Europe, would apply themselves to learning the principal language of Africa, and enter that great unexplored field of primitive song.

"There will soon, no doubt, be educated men, of African descent who will be inspired with emulation, and will devote themselves to rendering this service to the mother country.

"I am persuaded that the result would be the rescue of a store of mythological and historical poems of great interest."—p. 139.

"Bowdich has noted down some fragments of mythology contained in the popular poetry of the Africans. A favorite song chanted in Empoongwe to the enchambee, in the moonlight evenings, relates the arts by which the Sun gained an ascendency over the Moon, created its equal by the common Father."

"(Hic canit errantum lunam solisque labores?")

"I am sorry that Bowdich could not secure the poem he heard sung to the harps by the deformed, quivering eyed bard from Imbiki, who they said was 'mad only when he played,' and who in his recitative, now mournful now impetuous, now exhilarated, wandered through the life of man and the animal and vegetable kingdoms! At the close of one of his Strophes, the strange bard burst out with the full force of his powerful voice in the notes of the "Hallelugh" of Handel."—p. 138.

"Africa has had her share of heroines, from the magnificent Queen of Matamba, renowned in diplomacy and war, down to the Queen of Akim, a woman of almost in fantile countenance and a voice low and soft as the tones of a flute, but also, in the war against the tiger, King of Ashantee, was seen every where in the heat of battle encouraging and exciting her troops: where ever the greatest danger was, there was the energetic Queen of Akim. Holman compares her to Boadicea, and even to the great Queen Bess."—p. 133.

The following seems cut out of the passage of Tacitus on the Germans, which Wendell Phillips mistakenly claimed for the Anglo-Saxons. "One considerable tribe (in the interior of Africa,) among whom the women were held in such esteem that nothing of importance was decided without their counsel."—p. 135.

The following passage relates to a matter discussed in our Magazine, (p. 16, 48) "The dark men of America form a new race, and can no longer with any propriety be called Africans. They are a very mixed race, and, as such, entitled, at a future time to contribute some vigorous passages to the story of humanity."

"The blood of the conquering Felatah, of the enduring Muzgee, of the song loving Sulima, of the ingenious Mandingo, of the intrepid Begharmi, mingles in the veins of this rising people, with that of some of the highest European races? * * In conversing with persons of this race, we are sensible of a certain originality in their views. Their humor, their pathos, has a different quality from the Anglo-Saxon; their thought has another shading than ours."—p. 58.

We gladly quote the following, not only for its intrinsic interest, but for the softening it gives to an alleged feature of "that treaty" made by Delany and Campbell with the Chiefs of Abbeokuta. We would respectfully call D. Smith's attention to the same.

"The slavery of African to African is, in truth, the mildest form of serfdom. It is not unusual for the slave to call the master 'My Father.' The name by which his condition is denoted has not for him the meaning which we attach to the word 'slave;' for it implies neither degradation nor hopelessness. If he possess more than common abilities, these are allowed full scope. The slave is sometimes richer than his master; he can even attain to high office in the state, if his talents and his tastes lead him in that direction. If he remain a humble husbandman, or artisan, or household-servant, his duties are light, and he has no fear of being crushed either by severity or contempt."

"The American planter owes, I believe, more than he is aware to the view of the relation of master and slave which his negro has inherited from Africa. The unquestioning acquiescence of the slave in his lot, his absorption in the family on which he depends, and identification of its interests with his own, are parts of a very old creed. The self-devotion, which has more the spirit of clanship than servility, and which the master himself must love and wonder at, is traditional. It dates from a time when the relation of superior and dependent was endeared by the sense of a common blood and a common country."—(p. 164.) For the remainder of this very remarkable passage—remarkable both for eloquence and clear insight—we must refer our reader to the book itself, which can be had at this office—price 75 cents.

In turning to Mr. Crummell's address—itself a splendid example of the copiousness, force and eloquence of the language in which it is written—we are struck with the fact that its fitting title should be "a panegyric on the English language and the English people," for we do not now call to mind any essay worthier of this name. With the exception of two short interlocutions, it is filled with laudations, not to say adulations of the tongue of Shakespeare and Milton, Franklin and Webster. Had our accomplished author contented himself with eulogising England and the English language, we could have silently differed from him, or even yielded our judgment to his eloquence and scholarship. But when, in order to support his views of the superiority of the Anglo-Saxon tongue, he finds it necessary to belittle, degrade and abuse all other languages under the sun, why then our Korymantee rises up in rebellion, and we must join issue with him. In comparing the English with the African dialects, he says:

"And first, let us speak of the African dialects. I refer now to that particular group of African aborigines who dwell in West Africa, from the Senegal to the Niger, and who have received the distinctive title of 'Negro.'

"Within this wide extent of territory are grouped a multitude of tribes and nations with various tongues and dialects, which doubtless had a common origin, but whose point of affiliation it would be difficult now to discover. But how great soever may be their differences, there are, nevertheless, definite marks of inferiority connected with them all, which place them at the widest distance from civilized languages. Of this whole class of languages, it may be said, in the aggregate that (a) 'They are,' to use the words of Dr. Leighton Wilson, 'harsh abrupt, energetic, indistinct in enunciation, meagre in point of words, abound with inarticulate nasal and guttural sounds, possess but few inflections and grammatical forms, and are withal exceedingly difficult of acquisition.'* This is his description of the Grebo, but it may be taken, I think, as on the whole, a correct description of the whole class of dialects which are entitled 'Negro.' (b) These languages, moreover, are characterised by lowness of ideas. As the speech of rude barbarians, they are marked by brutal and vindictive sentiments, and those principles which show a predominance of the animal propensities. (c) Again, they lack those ideas of virtue, of moral truth, and those distinctions of right and wrong with which we, all our life long, have been familiar. (d) Another marked feature of these languages is the absence of clear ideas of Justice, Law, Human Rights and Governmental Order, which are so prominent and manifest in civilized countries; and (e) lastly—These supernal truths of a personal present Deity, of the moral Government of God, of man's Immortality, of the Judgment, and of Everlasting Blessedness, which regulate the lives of Christians, are either entirely absent, or else exist, and are expressed in an obscure and distorted manner."

We will examine these a, b, c's in their order, and first. (a) A very careful examination of the vocabularies of these negro dialects, contained in Latham and Prichard, leads us to believe that they are the most flowing and musical of all languages, abounding in open vowel sounds. Let us take the word 'sun,' for example, in eleven of these dialects: 1, nangi; 2, nonge; 3, tili; 4, telle; 5, suge; 6, ouia; 7, e-ui-a; 8, o-ue-i; 9, mai; 10, anu; 11, ania.

M. Dard, in his dictionary of the Wolofs, says 'our French books then can be translated into the language of the Wolof negroes with perfect exactitude; and we are able to affirm that the same negroes understand well the sense of the words formed after that method, they are so accustomed to decompose these words.'

'The distinguishing feature of the Yoruba language is the beautiful completeness and perfect regularity which characterise its formative process.' (Vidal introduction to Crowther's Yoruba Grammar.)

(b and c). These two 'charges' are essentially the same. They are contradicted by the statements of Clapperton, Laing, Denham, and other African travellers; and a resume of their testimony may be found in page 93–7 of 'The Record of an Obscure man.' We feel pained and ashamed to quote the learning of a white lady of Massachusetts, in defence of native Africans misrepresented by a distinguished scholar of African descent. Hear Denham. "If it should be thought I have spoken too favorably of the natives, I can only answer that I have described them as I found them—hospitable, kind-hearted, honest and liberal. To the latest hour of my life I shall remember them with affectionate regard; and many are the untutored children of Nature in Central Africa who possess feelings and principles that would do honor to the most civilized Christian."

Again, in the introduction to Crowther's Grammar (for the loan of which we are indebted to our friend Dr. M. R. Delany), it is remarked:

"But there is something more striking in the high standard of morality observable in the sayings of the Yorubas, displaying, as it does, a conscious recognition of the intrinsic excellence of those peculiar virtues which we commonly regard as being appreciated only in civilized society. Were we to measure this people by the standard of their proverbial nationality, we should come to the conclusion that they had attained no inconsiderable height in the development of social relations, having passed out of that savage barbarism in which every individual lives for himself alone, into a higher state of being, in which the mutual dependence of one member on another is recognised, giving room for the exercise of social virtues, or a sort of moral compact for the safeguard of society."

Lastly, read the statement in Prof. Campbell's book, where along the road-side, at the foot of the trees in Yoruba, are found articles of traffic, with the prices annexed, trusting to the honesty of the buyer to pay for them honorably. Where, in all broad England, out of sound of the policeman's rattle, would such a picture be found! Speak, O Cantab!

"It was not an African, but an English mother, who, going to her work, left her children under the gallows where her husband's body was hanging, "to play in the care of their father." "Record" p. 169.

(d). Is professional. We must honor the cloth; we will only quote the "Record, &c.," p. 106.

"The fact is, that the African is reserved in conversation with strangers on religious topics; his awe of the unseen is great, and he does not dare to treat these subjects with familiarity. Park found among the negro people with which he was best acquainted, a belief, not only in God, but in a future state of rewards and punishments, universal. But, he says, it is difficult to make them converse on these subjects, and that, in particular, when questioned in regard to their ideas of future life they express themselves with reverence, but endeavor to shorten the discussion."

"This reminds me that I once heard a shrewd sea-captain say, that missionaries were somewhat prone to believe in the existence of these atrocities (cannibalism) among the converted. Perhaps they feel that it gives more importance to their work." p. 119.

One other authority

"The same observation may apply to to those proverbs which show how correct in estimate the Yorubas have formed in some respects of the character and attributes of the Divine Being. They have a true idea of God's watchful providence and care for all His creatures; and that man is dependent on that over-ruling power:" Introduction Crowther's Grammar, pp. 36.

We have thus adduced what we deem an ample contradiction of Mr. Crummell's statements about the native negro languages. We acquit him most emphatically of wilful misrepresentation. In his residence in Africa, it has been his misfortune to see mostly the African tribes who have been debased by the slave trade, or the scarcely more elevating contact with the Liberians themselves, from among whom—to quote Mr. Crummell (p. 19)—'scores of our youth, soon after leaving school, start with their cloth, guns, powder, and tobacco for the factory, whether on the coast or in the country." We wonder if the boys carry anything to drink with them?

There are several other salient points which we would be glad to notice in this eloquent brochure; but our limits forbid. We very much question, for example, the possibility or the philosophy of making 'indigenous, in this infant country (Liberia), the spirit and genius of the English language (p. 29), in immediate connection with its idiom.' There are as good languages in Africa, as full, copious, and less stained with damning memories. So long as he speaks it, the black man cannot forget that it is the tongue which alone perverted the Bible and History and Philosophy to affix to him the doom of perpetual slavery. It is the language which alone degrades him from manhood, and associates him with the brute creation.

We think, moreover, that when nations start out in a career of true greatness they germinate along with a language of their own. It is part of their vital force, and part of their growth. We have more of hope for Africa, in the language and laws of Abbeokuta with its astonishing self-development, than we have in a hundred Liberias, mere parasites on the English language and the American people. Are we not inhibited from putting new wine into old bottles?

A VISIT TO WASHINGTON, PA.

MR. EDITOR.—I arrived in this beautiful village on the 1st inst., on a pastoral visit. Washington is the county seat of Washington county. It is some twenty-six miles from Pittsburg, and is quite a business place. Our people are doing tolerably well. There are but few mechanics among them, two carpenters, one plasterer, and one bootmaker. The majority of them are employed in hotels and private houses, as cooks, waiters, chambermaids, hostlers, &c. Several are doing a good business hauling coal. There is considerable real estate owned by them; nearly every family owns the dwelling they live in, and some of the buildings are fine and commodious.

CHURCHES.

There are two colored churches here, the A. M. E. Zion, and A. M. E. Bethel, the former is a new church, recently built size 250 by 360 ft. It is pleasantly situated, number of members thirty. Pastor Rev. Charles Wright, who, by the way, is one of the most energetic, persevering and thorough-going ministers belonging to the Alleghany Conference. He has indeed been a blessing to the people in this region, for he has not only preached the gospel among them—and in this he has been quite successful—but with his own hands, with but little assistance, built the present church and two others, one in Brownsville, the other in Uniontown, Pa. Zion at this time is being favored with a special outpouring of the spirit, many have found the pearl of great price, and others are seeking the pardoning mercy of God. The sinking fund connected with this church held a meeting last night, which was quite interesting. Mrs. Anna Dorsey, the originator of the society, is president, and is well qualified to carry on an enterprise of this kind. She is persevering and has go ahead-ativeness largely developed. This institution numbers sixty-five members, and has done much toward liquidating the present debt.

The Bethel church is a good sized frame building; pastor Rev. Wm. Jackson.

COLORED PUBLIC SCHOOL.

The school house is a brick building, dimensions 24 by 36 ft. Number of scholars 116, average attendance 58. Teacher, Miss M. M. Taylor. The school is pretty well attended considering the neglect of parents in sending their children. But this indifference upon the part of parents and guardians is not confined to Washington. It seems to prevail universally among our people, and that to an alarming extent. God grant that the day may soon dawn when they will see the importance of educating their children. Knowledge is power and the acquisition of it is certainly one of the means that will conduce to our elevation.

J. J. CLINTON.

Washington, Pa., Feb. 6th, 1862.

P. S. I will leave here for Brownsville on the 9th, providence permitting. J. J. C.

LETTER FROM NEW LONDON.

NEW LONDON, Feb. 8th, 1862.

MR. EDITOR: The Rev. C. M. Butler, D.D., of Washington, D. C., delivered his "Sketches of the War," at Lawrence Hall, in this city, last Tuesday evening. It was a very interesting as well as instructive lecture. The lecturer related many affecting events which have signalised the Southern rebellion at Washington. He was of the opinion that had the Capitol been located on the banks of the Delaware as at first proposed, instead of the Potomac, this rebellion never could have occurred. The fact that the seat of Government has been surrounded by Slave States had given the South a power over the North. The controlling Southern sentiment there, gave them an opportunity to concoct, without suspicion or hindrance, their schemes of conquest and rebellion. The accursedness of this rebellion was forcibly presented by the lecturer in a series of incidents that came under his personal observation.

Last Sunday evening, about 8 o'clock, the shock of an earthquake was observed in several places in this county. At Colchester, a village about twenty miles from this city, it was felt very severe, and created quite an alarm in the village. It was stated in the New London papers that a congregation in one of the churches cut short the services, and rushed en masse to the door, accomplishing the complete evacuation of the building in less time than on any previous occasion. It seemed really probable that the building would be thrown down, so violent was the heaving of the ground there, as in all the neighborhood. People fled from their dwellings in terror and sought the streets; such a scene was never before witnessed in Colchester. The shock was also felt slightly in East New London.

New London is full of life at present. The sleighing is excellent; also the skating, which the beau monde seem to enjoy. The Peace and Unity Literary Society of this city has been disbanded, owing to the neglect of its members to attend the meetings regularly. Sic transit, utile dulci.

I notice, by an advertisement in the N. Y. papers, that Frederick Douglass, Esq., is to deliver a lecture on the war, at the Cooper Institute, next Wednesday night; I also notice that he lectures in Providence, R. I. I am in hopes that he will embrace an early opportunity of visiting our city, as there are a great many here that would be glad of the opportunity of listening to his stirring eloquence.

WIDE AWAKE.

The Grand Calico Dress Festival.

This truly praise-worthy affair came off on the evening of the 6th inst. in fine style. The Mozart Hall, which is quite commodious, was filled to its utmost capacity by as fine an assemblage as ever graced any hall in this or any other city.

The music, which was under the direction of Messrs. Hardy and Douglas, was enough to make a dead man dance, so brilliant were the selections; and so finely were they rendered. The floor being under the direction of Prof. T. B. Voorhies, of course everything in the dancing department was faultless. But what shall we say of the ladies? Did the absence of silks rob them of any of their charms? Verily not! for a more lovely sight we do not wish to see. Had it not been for the fashionable dances of Prof. Voorhies, and the faultlessly fashionable dressing of the gentlemen, together with the polished manners of the whole company, one might have imagined himself in company with maidens of the olden time, so neat and tidy did they appear in their calico dresses. This illusion was heightened by the appearance of several elderly ladies whose heads were dressed with turbans as of yore. We were pleased to observe that many distant cities were represented. Monrovia, the capital of Liberia, sending the accomplished and graceful Madam S——; Fall River, the sprightly Miss A. E. S.; while Bridgeport contributed to the pleasure of the evening, by the presence of Madam D——s, and Mr. and Mrs. H——d. Newark, not to be outdone, sent down the stately Madam J——s, while Brooklyn claimed precedence by sending over a host of her most lovely inhabitants, in the persons of the Misses P——, late of Harrisburgh; Miss F——s, Division avenue; Miss H. C——r, South Seventh street; Madam P——r and daughter, of High street; Madam R——y, and a large number whose names we failed to secure. New London was represented in the person of Miss H——.

Notwithstanding this great array of beauty our good old city was not eclipsed, for we believe that the following names, and many present but not named here for want of room, would maintain the cities reputation against the world. Mesdames M. and T., of Sullivan street; Miss C. P., of Fifteenth street; Miss W——s, Sullivan street; Madam W——s of do., Madam R——n of Broadway; Madam W., Laurens street; Misses H——y of City Hall Place; Miss F——r of [illegible] street; Madam L. of Laurens street; [illegible] East 22d street; Madam [illegible]——n [illegible] street; Miss R. J. of do.; Madam H——r and sister of Wooster street; Madam H——d of do.; Miss E. P. of Wooster street; Miss A——n of Sullivan street; Mad. V. of Cornelia street; Miss H. F——r of West 24th street; Madam H——l of Laurens street; Miss E. M. of do.; Madam P. L——e of do.; Madam S. M——s of Pine street; Miss E. F. K——e of Broadway; Madam E——s of E. Houston street; Miss E. C. of Congress street; Madam S. of Thompson street; Madam L——e of Varick street; Madam F. of Charlton street; Madam H——r of 8th street; Mrs. B. and B., and Miss R. of W. 22d street; Miss D. Z——s of St. John's Lane, and Madam B——s were among those who graced the festival with their presence.

Hartford was represented by Mr S——ns, and Stonington by Mr. McK——l. Our experience of years permits us to say that a more respectable or refined company never assembled in this city.

Now although every thing was conducted according to the rules of etiquette, yet so joyous and tender was the greetings of old friends, that time itself will fail to blot that festival from the memory.

THE SUPPER

was of the most substantial kind and the very best the market afforded, and gave great satisfaction to all present.

We believe we speak within bounds when we say that the results of the labors of the ladies who undertook this work of charity, is without a parallel, and justly deserves all honor, for their faithful works of love.

WANDERER.

AN UNMITIGATED FALSEHOOD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN,

SIR:—Permit me to call the attention of your readers to a publication which first appeared in the "Argus," then in the "Pine and Palm" of Jan. 30th., and also in the "Globe," under the caption, "Meeting of Colored Canadians." I am constrained to take this step, because of the repeated and persistent attacks of a handful of mischievous persons, who find encouragement from the "Pine and Palm," and those papers in Canada, friendly to the removal from the Provinces of the colored people.

I cannot now go into the details in this matter, but permit me to say in brief, and for the information of a shamefully deceived public, that no such resolutions as those in the "Pine and Palm" ever passed at any meeting in Chatham. That the charges of deeding the Mission School property to I. D. Shadd as "private property," is a falsehood of the most infamous kind, because invented for a deliberate purpose, by J. C. Brown, J. W. Menard—these in favor of the Haytian scheme—S. Holden and others, principals in a church quarrel in Chatham,—to prevent me from prosecuting the work confided to me by the Trustees of the school and church; the laudable, much needed generally approbated work by the colored and white citizens of Chatham, of all classes, of securing a high school and Mission Church for the use of the colored people, refugees and others. This string of resolutions like the former charges from the same source, were not only never passed, but never offered at the meeting in question; resolutions were offered, in keeping in style and matter with the ignorance, jealousy and wickedness of the parties proposing them, but they were promptly voted down, and resolutions sustaining the Mission School, its agent Mary A. S. Cary, the action of its Trustees in securing their property, one of whom by regular appointment is I. D. Shadd, were unanimously adopted, and subsequently signed by seventy persons who were at the meeting.

But by your permission the real resolutions shall ere long speak for themselves.

The resolutions now in circulation were drawn up by a lawyer of Chatham, the next day after the meeting, and published in the "Argus" of Chatham, against the knowledge of, and in the absence of the editor, but were published by the "Globe," after a true statement had been given. So complete has been the confusion of J. C. Brown and Menard at home since that time, that they have openly and frequently denied in Chatham, having signed or circulated such names.

A notorious falsehood, a series of falsehoods, are thus sent forth on the wings of the wind, which will no doubt, as designed defeat, and in the end may destroy the only Mission School ever established by the colored people among the fugitives. Should such be the case, one or two outrageously hypocritical and designing men in the United States and their colored associates and creatures in Canada, will no doubt enjoy a little triumph. However, believing fully that truth is mighty and will prevail, I shall by the help of God, prosecute the Mission School agency as heretofore,—shall as I now do, lecture against the Haytian Emigration Scheme,—Shall work with might and main for the establishment of the Mission High School and church, the work to which I have been appointed; I therefore would respectfully request those [illegible] friends [illegible] white, now [illegible] to visit Chatham for themselves, and there on the spot, learn for themselves; or otherwise communicate with gentlemen in Chatham, as A. McKellan, Esq., M. P. P.; Rev. Geo. Cochrane; Rev. H. L. Simpson; R. Stephenson, Esq.; Ed. Planet, or the Trustees concerned, among of whom [illegible] Dr. M. R. Delany now in New York city.

MARY A. SHADD CARY.

MADAM MAGNAN'S CONCERT AND LITERARY FESTIVAL which was given on the evening of the 5th, came off with much spirit. The church (Zion Baptist) was well filled by an appreciative audience, who appeared to enjoy the entertainment greatly. The beneficiary and her aids, the Misses Vogelsang and Miss O. Powers, were in splendid voice, the first three receiving an encore on almost every song; but the latter lady tread upon ground far too dangerous for one whose experience in singing is so limited. She will do better next time. Madam Magnan never sang better.

The addresses, recitations and songs given by Messrs. A. Powers, J. W. Jacobs, J. Gambier, Geo. Bodee and James Spelman were well received and highly applauded.

THE SPEECH OF JOHN S. ROCK

At the 29th Anniversary of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society, held in Allston Hall, Boston, on the 23d ult. was an able one. The Boston Herald, a Pro-Slavery Democratic sheet, says:

"John S. Rock, Esq., the colored member of the Suffolk Bar, made the ablest, most ingenius and most sensible speech of the day."

The Boston Journal called it "a most brilliant argument."

Mr. Garrison, who was to be the next speaker, said he could add nothing to what had been so ably said, apologized to the audience and declined to speak after Mr. Rock. But the audience insisted on a speech, when he said:

MR. PRESIDENT: It is too late, I think, for me to make even a brief speech; and I feel extremely reluctant to intrude upon your time or your bodily endurance, as a mere matter of courtesy or kindness. seems to me that after the speech to which we have listened, nothing need be added to deepen the impression of this audience in the right direction, in favor of the cause of the oppressed. Had I not better sit down? (Loud cries of "Go on," "Go on.") I will then, say a few words. (Great applause.)

One such speech as that which has just been made is a complete and triumphant answer to all the folly and nonsense that we have heard for so many years in regard to the intellect and the possibilities of the black man [applause];—whether he is an inferior being or not—whether he is capable of civilization—whether, if free, he can take care of himself—like other men. Is there a man in this house who would not be proud to be able to make such a speech, whatever his complexion? I, for one, hesitate about going on after its delivery [applause]—a speech so well reasoned, and so thoroughly conclusive in all its positions."

We shall give the speech in full next week. Send on your orders and your subscriptions.

DEATH OF SAMUEL WILDE, ESQ.—A good man has gone to his rest. Mr. Samuel Wilde, of the firm of Wilde & Sons, of this city, and proprietor of the "Principia," of which the veteran abolitionist, William Goodell is editor, died at his residence in Williamsburg on Wednesday afternoon, the 5th inst. after an illness of about twenty-four days. The "Principia" says that his first attack was of erysipelas, accompanied with fever, which afterwards became typhoid; to which was then added diptheria. Against these accumulated diseases he held up for a time but at last sank under them. His end was peace. A wise and good man is taken from us. He has entered his rest. To his family, to the church, to the poor, to the neighborhood, to the country, his loss at this time, will be great.

WHY NOT GIVE US CREDIT?—We notice that many of our exchanges, among which are the "Albany Statesman" and "Brooklyn Star," both able and impartial journals, have been publishing large extracts from the exceedingly interesting letters of G. E. S., our army correspondent in Hooker's Division, without giving the proper credit. Now, gentlemen, unless you do us justice hereafter, we shall be compelled to notify "the world and the rest of mankind" that everything of a creditable character that may appear in your respective journals from Hooker's Division, should be credited to our correspondent taken from our columns. We see no other way of setting the world right in the matter.

AN ALABAMA SHARPSHOOTER.—[illegible] Porter, a very intelligent Virginia slave, who was at the Bull's Run fight, but subsequently made his escape, tells us of a slave, attached to an Alabama regiment, named Jacob Jones, who was noted for precision of shot, [illegible] the appellation [illegible] was in the habit of [illegible] one Union picket, [illegible] on one occasion [illegible] home in quest of that sort of game, he was discovered, and almost instantly his career [illegible] body [illegible] [illegible] thousands [illegible] colored [illegible] the world, as a rule, is very obliging and indulgent, and lets him want it.

---

* Western Africa, &c. 457, by Rev. J. L. Wilson, D. D.

AMUSEMENTS.

ASSEMBLY OF THE N. Y. SOCIAL CLUB. The following is the report referred to in our last as having been received, but its insertion not paid for:

MR. EDITOR. The N. Y. Social Club, under the direction of the following officers. Messrs T. B. Voorhies, Pres., M. S. Dillon, Vice Pres., H. Jones, Sec., S. West, Treas., gave their first grand Invitation Assembly at the Hall 178 Prince st., to their numerous friends, on the evening of Jan 28th 1862 and the grandeur, taste, decorum and liberality with which it was conducted made it second to no entertainment of the kind ever given in this city within our recollection. The reception room was beautifully decorated with evergreens. Over the orchestra in letters of silver we read, "N. Y. Social Club," and upon the side walls "Welcome Victoria," "Welcome Everett." The guests, numbering over three hundred assembled at an early hour, and from the equality in numbers of the sexes, and the sublimity of their apparel, they presented one of the most beautiful scenes that mortal eyes ever beheld. As the guests entered the reception room each lady was presented with a petite fan, with the order of dancing and the names of the members of the club printed thereon in letters of gold. And upon a table in the anteroom, adjoining the reception room was placed a large antique punch bowl filled with that refreshing beverage, and a silver basket filled with fancy cake, to which the company repaired during the intervals of dancing, to refresh themselves in true Teutonic style. The band under the leadership of Professor Hardy discoursed most beautiful music. Dancing continued till one o'clock, A. M., when the guests were escorted by the Club to the banqueting room, where we beheld the supper table elaborately garnished with fruits, flowers, and numerous ornaments of confectionary. In the center stood a magnificent Chinese Temple, four feet high, composed of various candied fruits, &c. The supper consisted of all the delicacies of the season in a profuse quantity, with a bountiful supply of pale sherry sparkling Madeira, foaming Creme de Bouzy and superior Guardiente. The company were comfortably seated, and waited upon to their entire satisfaction by the members of the club who were untiring in their endeavors to please. The usual toasts and sentiments were omitted. Supper being over the guests withdrew to the reception room, where dancing was resumed. The Victoria Club, ladies, and Everett Club, gents., were fully represented. The ladies were elegantly dressed. Mrs. M. E. W—s, of Minetta Lane, wore a plain snow white silk, short sleeves, lace bertha studded with natural roses, a beautiful boquet of the same upon her bosom, a coronet of pearls upon her head, joined at the back with a streamer of royal velvet, and as she entered the room leaning upon the arm of her consort, she presented the appearance of a bridal queen, and was pronounced the belle of the evening. Mrs. C. J—s of York st. looked beautiful in a dress of white tarleton, puffed flounces with pink trimming, and pearl head dress. Mrs. E. D—n looked quite interesting in a neatly trimmed dress of yellow tarleton. Mrs. R. C—s, straw colored silk trimmed with black velvet. Little Miss M. P—n, embroidered crape dress, pearl head dress, and her pretty face was wreathed in smiles. Mrs. D—d, of 17th st. looked quite pretty in an ashes-of-roses moire antique, and black lace shawl. Mesdames E. J. B—s, S. C—s, M. W—t, of Thompson st., D. T—n, of Minetta Lane. Wm. S—y, looked charming in neatly fitting black silk dresses without ornaments save their interesting and smiling countenances. Mesdames M. H—ll, C. S—e, and Miss C. B—e, of Laurens st., looked neat and pretty. Madame V—s, made quite an interesting appearance. Mrs. S. R—y, of Ninth street looked noble in a dress of light colored silk, neatly trimmed. Mrs. C—ll of Jersey city, steel gray figured silk. Mrs. M. H—s, white silk, pointed flounces, trimmed with scarlet velvet. Mrs. C. G—tt, of King st. was neatly dressed and looked quite captivating.

In fact all the dear creatures looked beautiful and enchanting, almost beyond description, and were perfectly irresistible. Nothing occurred to mar the harmony of the entertainment, and though the flowing goblet passed freely around not a gentleman showed by word or act any forgetfulness of the presence of ladies, and these lords of creation received many flattering compliments in the form of motto verses from the hands of the fair sex. The gentlemen with few exceptions made a very creditable appearance, being appareled in evening assembly mode.

As the clock tolled the hour of five A. M. we began to take our departure, while the band discoursed softly and sweetly that plaintive air 'Sweet Home,' and as we gazed on the merry dancers now about to separate the following lines occurred to our mind.

TERPSICHORE.

To the light fantastic measure,
In the gay and brilliant hall,
Seekers of the phantom pleasure
Hasten quickly at thy call;
But neither mirth nor dance nor song
Can detain the syren long;
Haste to seize her while ye may,
Pleasure lingers but a day.
Then let her votaries bend the knee
At thy fair shrine Terpsichore.

CARLOS HERMOSOS.

THE SONG which the Sleighers sang.—It is a noteworthy circumstance that the two hundred thousand who went abroad in the great sleighs of the stage companies on the fine evenings of last week—the two hundred thousand representing the heart of the city, and who are never heard in Chambers of Commerce or the halls of the politicians—sang the song which the Massachusetts soldiers sang on their march through Broadway:—

"John Brown's body lies mouldering in the grave,
But his soul is marching on."

Tribune.

STILL IN BALTIMORE.—We learn that considerable excitement exists in Baltimore, growing out of the arrest of Rev Joseph Nickerson, on the complaint of the white Elder in charge, J. W. Bull, for preaching an abolition sermon. It appears that Mr. Nickerson, a Sabbath or two ago in the Sharp St. Church, preached from the hundred and twenty-fourth Psalm in the presence of this Bull, who thereupon immediately commenced goring him. In view of this event one of our subscribers writes us to discontinue his paper "until the devil is dead,"—a rather indefinite period, we think, unless he has reference to said Bull, in which case we would say as did father Suggins, that although we have no selfish malice against our foes, yet if the Lord has a thunder-bolt to spare, we would be pleased to see it bestowed on brother Bull's head.

DEATH AND BURIAL OF A MISSIONARY. Mrs. Gertrude J. Messenger, who had been a missionary at Bohlen, Africa, since 1843, recently took passage from that station for Brooklyn, her former home, but during the voyage, which was protracted and stormy, took ill, and died when the brig Ann, which conveyed her, was passing Sandy Hook, on Wednesday last. A coroner's inquest was held, and a verdict of death from debility was rendered. The remains were brought to St. Ann's Church, corner of Sands and Washington streets, Brooklyn, where the funeral services took place. The body was interred in Greenwood Cemetery. The lady was twenty-nine years of age, and her husband is now a missionary at Cape Palmas, Africa.

A THRILLING INCIDENT.—A few days ago, in England, a colored boy attached to Bell's Circus crossed a tight rope, extended over the Lea to the rear of the Cork Atheneum, taking a child on his back. On returning, he fell, and succeeded in holding on to the rope with his legs, where he remained suspended until assistance was obtained. Fortunately the child was well fastened on the performers back, where he remained until he was rescued by a party in a boat.

A NOBLE COLORED BOY.—On last Thursday a son of Mr. B. C. Emory, of New Castle, Pa., while playing on the ice on the Shenango, broke through, and narrowly escaped drowning. He was saved by the presence of mind of a little colored boy who took the comforter from his neck, laid down on his breast, threw the end to the boy in the water and brought him out safe.

ABOLITION OF SLAVERY IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The bill providing for the abolition of Slavery within the District of Columbia, introduced by Senator Wilson, and referred to the District Committee, was intrusted to Senator Morrill, who has prepared a bill which provides for the immediate emancipation of all the slaves in the District, and for a limited compensation to loyal owners, not to exceed $300 per slave on the average. Owners must, within ninety days, file their claims, together with proofs of value, and of loyalty, with Commissioners. These are to report within nine months. They are authorized to examine the slave as well as the master, in order to determine the latter's right to compensation. It is believed that the bill will commend itself to a majority of the Committee. It is composed of Messrs. Grimes, Dixon, Morrill, Wade, Anthony, Kennedy, and Powell. The number of slaves now in the District is about 3,000. Probably more than half belong to masters who will swear that they are loyal. The total cost to the nation of emancipating cannot be over $1,000,000, and may not be much more than $500,000.—Cor. of N. Y. Tribune.

JOKES.—That Secretary Seward ever perpetrated one.

That Mrs. James Gordon Bennet had a special invitation to Mrs. President Lincoln's dancing party.

That Chevalier Wyckof is fingering the President's secret service money.

That the President shed tears when the Hutchinsons sang "a Ship on fire" in the White-house. (vide Home Journal.)

That Nathaniel P. Willis actually kissed little Viola Hutchinson's hand at the conclusion of an anti-slavery song, in the White-house aforesaid! "O! Natt Dea!" (see Evening Post.)

THE GREAT CONTRABAND FESTIVAL, AT CONTINENTAL HALL.—This feast came off on the evening of the 11th, in fine style. The Hall, which will hold about four hundred persons, was densely crowded by our most substantial citizens, and everything passed off very pleasantly.

The Rev. H. H. Garnet, who occupied the chair, made a short address, as did also the Rev. Sampson White, and the Rev. Wm. J. Alston; but the feature of the evening was the speech of Mr. Parker, an escaped slave, who was in the battle of Bull Run, acting as an artillerest on the Rebel side. The statements which he makes are highly important and deeply interesting.

He occupied about an hour and a half, and was listened to with deep interest by the entire audience. We were pleased to notice that the refreshments were entirely consumed.

MRS. E. P. ROGER'S SCHOOL, NEWARK N. J.—MR. EDITOR:—It gives me great pleasure to state that the esteemed lady of our departed friend, Rev. E. P. Rogers, has now in progress a small but cheerfully growing school for young misses and masters at the age of ten, under and upwards, where all the primary branches are taught, associated with vocal and instrumental music.

I hope as she deserves, she will meet with a general encouragement. See her advertisement in another part of this paper.

J. N. G.

THE "HIGHER INSIGHT."—The bill now under consideration, providing for the offices of consul general to Hayti and Liberia, fixes the salaries respectively at $7,500 and $4,000.

A PIOUS EDITOR.—An anecdote, headed "A cause of thanksgiving," at the bottom of the 3rd column on the 3rd page of the "Pine and Palm" of Jan. 30th, we think proves unmistakably the fact that the pious editor does not concern himself about what goes into that journal, as he some time since announced to his readers. But what matters it?—the paper is only for black people!

THE PROMENADE CONCERT at Adelphi Hall, Williamsburg, for the benefit of St. James' church will take place Friday evening, 14th inst.

MARRIED.

SCHENCK, PRICE.—In this city, Feb 4th, by the Rev H. Highland Garnet, Homer M. Schenck of New York, and Mrs Sophia C. Price, of Baltimore.

DIED.

SMITH.—At New Utrecht, L. I., Jan 24th, of apoplexy, Ellen Smith, aged 59 years, three months and nine days.

FERGUSON.—In this city, Feb 10th, of consumption, Adriene Ferguson, aged 23 years, 8 months and 16 days.

BROWN.—In this city on Saturday, Feb. 8th, of congestion of the brain, Robert James, infant son of Robert and Elizabeth Brown, aged 3 years 3 months and 19 days.

JACKSON.—In this city, Feb. 9th, of cancer in the breast, Diana Jackson, aged 47 years 11 mo and 26 days.

THOMAS.—In Washington City, February 5th, Charles E., son of James Thomas in the 18th year of his age.

RICE.—In Philadelphia, Jan 31st, 1861, Sophia, wife of George Rice, Senr. in the 68th year of her age.

Special Notices.

A REPORT

The committee of Ladies who gave the Calico Dress Ball at Mozart Hall, submit the following report to the public:

The total receipts were . . .	$308,69
" " Expenses " . . .	152,38
Excess of receipts over expenditures	$156,31

A full account of the disposal of this sum will be published with the receipt of the gentlemen in whose hands the money is to be placed. Great care will be taken to be sure that the amount shall go direct to the contrabands, who must know that they have friends of their own race at the North, who are proud to aid them.

The Ladies are a little disappointed in the amount of clothing received up to this date and again urge their friends to bestow any articles they can spare for that purpose. They will receive contributions at their residences until the 21st inst.

The ladies desire to return thanks to Messrs. Downing, Tyson and other gentlemen for valuable assistance, and to Mr. T. B. Voorhies for his able and gentlemenly management of the floor on the night of the Ball.

MRS. J. H. JACKSON.
MRS. PARKER.
MRS. P. WILLIAMS.
MRS. SHAD.
MRS. HOPEWELL.
MRS. ODELL.
MISS BRUCE.

The
FIRST ANNUAL CONCERT
OF THE
ST. PHILIP'S SUNDAY SCHOOL,
Will be given on MONDAY EVENING,
FEB. 24th, 1862,
At the ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,
In Mulberry street, between Bleecker and Houston,

The proceeds to be applied for the benefit of the Sunday School Library.

The school will be assisted by the following ladies and gentlemen;

Miss Rebecca Wake, Miss Kate Bowers, Miss Victoria Price, Pianista.

Messrs E. and H. Dias, Basso.

W. F. Sturgis, Conductor.

Doors open at 6½, to commence at 8 o'clock.

Tickets of admission 15 cts., children 10 cts. to be had of Miss Ursie Parker, 90 Wooster st. Miss Selina Jackson, 68 Sullivan st., Miss Clara Bruce, 60 Laurens st., Miss Roach, 87 Sullivan st., Mrs. Peters, 77 Laurens st., Mr. Curtis, 153 Thompson st., Mr. Guignon, Williamsburg, and at the door.

The piano is from the celebrated warerooms of Horace Waters, Broadway.

1.

GRAND OVATION
AND
RE-UNION DEMONSTRATION AND TEA,
BY FOUNTAIN UNION LODGE,
No. 1, I. O. of G. S. and D. of S.

The officers and members of Fountain Union, beg leave to inform the public, that they intend to celebrate their Second Anniversary in Zion's Church, corner of Church and Leonard sts., on

THURSDAY EVENING,
Feb 27th, 1862.

The following Lodges have been invited, and are expected to be present in full regalia:

Phenix Union, No 3, Hudson, N. Y.; Progressive, No 4, Williamsburgh, N. Y.; Rebecca, No 6, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Crystal Fount, No. 6, Newark, N. J.; Fidelity, No 1, D of S, N. Y.; Unity, No 2, D of S, N. Y.; Purity, No 3, D of S, N. Y.; Harmony, No 4, D of S, Newark, N. J.; Fountain Union of New Haven, No 7, New Haven, Conn.; Representatives of Perseverance Lodge, No 1, G. S., of Bermuda; Grand Degree Lodge of the City of New York; R. W. G. Lodge, of the E. District of the I. O. of G. S. and D. of S.; R. W. N. G. Lodge of the I. O. G. S. and D. of S. [First Branch.]

The following gentlemen have been invited, and are expected to be present:

Revd's David Stevens, J. D. S. Hall, R. H. Cain, H. H. Garnet, James Hamilton, Moses Manning, Daniel P. Seaton, John Peterson, Esq., Wm. C. H. Curtis, P. H. Reason, Dr Martin R. Delany, Rev Wm. H. Bishop.

Also the following Lodges, Tabernacles and Associations have been invited, and are expected to be present in full Regalia:

Grand Tabernacle of the State of N. Y., B. and S. of Love and Charity; Past Grand Masters' Council of the Grand United Order of O. F., Hamilton Lodge, No 710, United Order of O. F.; Terry Lodge, No 900, United Order of O. F.; Philomathean Lodge, No. 646, United Order of O. F.; Sheba's Court, No. 1, Ancient Order of Heroines of Jericho; The Benevolent Daughters of Conference of Zion's Church; The United Daughters of Conference of Zion's Church; The United Sons of Conference of Zion's Church; The United Daughters of Bethel Church; The Female Haytien Society of the City of New York; The Sons of Morgan; The Sons of Wesley. Charles R. Hornbeck, G. Marshal.

Immediately after the exercises are over, a Tea will be given in the basement, to which the Societies will proceed en masse.

Tickets to the Anniversary, 12 cents; Tea, 38 cents; to Anniversary and Tea, 38 cents.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.—Ellen Stevens, 48 Leonard street; Julia Holmes, 80 Nassau street; Mary L. Place, 95 Crosby street; Hannah Miller, 343 West 26th street; M. B. Coss, Williamsburgh; John D. Bagwell, 182 Suffolk street; Page C. Ridout, 25 Sullivan street.

Tickets may also be had of Julia Dove, 32 Pell street; Susan Church, 105 Park street; Mary Hopkins, 343 West 26th st.; George W. Spriggs, 17th street; Pleasant R. Smith, Ludlow street; Abram Jarvis, Marshall street, Williamsburgh; Abram Trower, 279 South 4th street, Williamsburgh; Geo. Smith, 218 Wooster street, and at the door.

Doors open at 7 o'clock; Exercises to commence at 8.

For order of exercises see circular.

MISS E. T. GREENFIELD,
THE BLACK SWAN,
Respectfully announces
A GRAND CONCERT
For the benefit of
THE ABYSSINIAN BAPTIST CHURCH,
No. 166 Waverley Place, near the 6th Avenue, on WEDNESDAY EVENING, FEB 19, 1862.

On which occasion she will be assisted by Mrs. Brown, the American Nightingale, and niece of the late Frank Johnson. Prof. Kook will assist. Doors open at 7 o'clock—Concert to commence at 8, precisely. Should the weather prove stormy the concert will be postponed until the next evening. For full particulars see programme.

GRAND BANQUET,

And Masonic Demonstration, under the auspices of the Right Worshipful Grand Lodge for the State of New York, for the benefit of

THE WIDOWS AND ORPHANS' FUND.

The members of the Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, working under the jurisdiction of the R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, respectfully inform their friends and the public that they will give a Grand Banquet on the Evening of the 27th of February, 1862,

AT MOZART HALL, 663 BROADWAY.

The following Lodges will be present on the occasion in full Regalia:

Widow's Son, No 1. Celestial, No. 2. Meridian, No. 3. King Solomon, No. 4. Covenant, No. 7. Widow's Son, No. 10. Mount Olive, No. 11. Mount Calvary, No. 12. North Star, No. 14. Eureka, No. 15. Excelsior, No. 16. Jeptha, No. 17. Mount Moriah, No. 18. And Representations from Western Light, No. 6. Mount Nebo, No. 8, and Evening Star, No. 9. Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, will grace the evening by their presence.

Sheba's Court, No. 1, Ancient Order of Heroines of Jericho, is invited, and will be present on the occasion in full regalia.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14, Knights Templars of the City of New York, will be present by special invitation, and display that Magnificent Standard recently presented by Sheba's Court No. 1.

Grand Marshal, J. W. BROWN.

The Music will be under the direction of Prof. W. F. Sturges. The Supper will be in the hands of a competent Committee, who will pledge that they will spare neither labor nor expense in the perfection of their work.

TICKETS, (which are limited,) $1 Each.

And can be obtained at the following places:—Jacob Vanderbeck, 193 Church and 73 Thompson street; Henry Skinner, Leonard street; J. L. Hudson, No. 4 East Houston street; Francis Thompson, 41 Hicks street, Brooklyn; Charles E. and George F. Hodges, 51 Boerum street, E. Brooklyn; John Johnson, 128 West Fifteenth street; Charlotte Thompson, 55 President street, South Brooklyn; Spencer's Bowling Saloon, 154 Church street. W. S. Woddrop, Melrose, and at the door on the night of the Banquet.

GLASS, CHINA, AND EARTHENWARE MENDED,
BY A. ROBERTS,
120 Clinton Court, 8th st. New York.

A Supply of the EGYPTIAN CEMENT, for the above purpose constantly on hand. Price 25 cents per bottle.
29tf

BOARDING AND LODGING, at No. 3 Jersey street, by Mrs. Brown, (widow of the late J. W. Brown) who begs the patronage of her friends and acquaintances.
29tf

PLANE ST. SELECT SCHOOL.
195 PLANE ST., NEWARK, N. J.
MRS HARRIET E. ROGERS PRINCIPAL.

The branches taught are Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography and History.

Plain Sewing, Ornamental Needlework, Worsted Embroidery and Fancy Knitting.

Piano Forte, Melodeon, and Vocal Music by Prof. John H. O'Fake.

A limited number of Misses between the ages of ten and fourteen may be boarded in the house on moderate terms. Healthy location, and a fine yard for exercise.

REFERENCES.
NEWARK, N. J.
Rev. E. J. Adams, Jefferson Ellis,
Adam Ray, Abram T. Cook.
BROOKLYN.
Rev. J. N. Gloucester.
NEW YORK.
Rev. H. M. Wilson, Rev. H. H. Garnet.

All letters may be addressed to Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, 194 Plane st. Newark, N. J.
27 6t.

Elizabeth City, N. J. Feb. 8, 1862.

This is to certify that I heartily approve of the effort of Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers to establish a Select School for young misses. I have been acquainted with her for over twenty-five years, and am happy to recommend her and her enterprise to the patronage of the public in general.

DANIEL H. VANDERVEER,
Pastor of the 1st Colored Pres. Church, Eliz. City.

PHILADELPHIA AGENCY.

Wm. R. De Cordover, 419 South 7th st. is authorized to receive subscriptions and advertisements for the Anglo-African. All orders left with him will receive prompt attention.

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND.
BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,
PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
46 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 16 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St., and with G. Oton.
18tf

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated "Hoagland Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

A. ROBERTS,

120 Clinton Court, 8th st., New York, agent for the Weekly Anglo-African. Copies may be had of him at an early hour after its publication.

SOMETHING NEW.

The best washing preparation in the world. No boiling, pounding or rubbing required, but all done in simple warm water. Full instructions concerning its use and manufacture sent by mail on receipt of 25 cents.

Address
RUFUS STICKNEY,
28 4t Templeton, Mass.

WORLD'S FAIR AGENCY.—The undersigned are acting as Agents for Merchants and Manufacturers to Exhibit at World's Fair, and to introduce into England, France and other European countries, articles of American Invention, Procuring Patents, making Sales, or in any way promoting their interests.

DEXTER & CO. 17 Spruce st., N. Y.
86 Milk street, Boston; 129 S. Fourth st., Phila.
1m3ap

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate LADIES and GENTLEMEN with FIRST CLASS BOARD, on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. 13 Sheriff Street, a few doors north of Grand. 16 13t

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,
REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.
New York—corner of Prince and Marion streets near Broadway.
Hours of Worship:—
Prayer-meeting, 10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.
Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock,
Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.
Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,
(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)
Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.
Rev. WM. J. ALSTON, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.
R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.
HOURS OF WORSHIP
10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.
Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.
Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 56 West Broadway.
Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.
Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.
Hours of worship.—
10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.
Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.
Residence of Pastor, No 7 Fair St., Brooklyn.
13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.
REV. ELI N. HALL, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.
Hours of worship
10½ o'clock A. M.
" P. M.
" P. M.
10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,
28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby Pastor. Residence 69 Madison Avenue.
HOURS OF WORSHIP:
10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.
7 1 " P. M.
12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,
Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue.
Hours of worship:—
3 o'clock, P. M.
7 1-2 " P. M.
Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
LECTURE every Wednesday evening.
Rev. CHAS. H. THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,
Second Street, between Avenues B and C.
HOURS OF WORSHIP
10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
3 P. M.
7 P. M.
Rev. J. D. S. HALL, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.
Sullivan St., near Houston.
Rev. JOHN T. RAYMOND, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.
HOURS OF WORSHIP
10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.
7 1-2 " P. M.
Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr. Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven, opposite the Railroad depot.

AGENT FOR WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

TROY AGENCY.—Mr. Henry Burke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

NEW MUSIC.—"The Lord doth now to this Nation Speak," "O, Let my People Go," Parody on "Song of the Contrabands," words by Moses, music by Baker. Price 35 cts. including "Contrabands' Song," or 4 pieces for $1, mailed free. Just published by HORACE WATERS, 481 Broadway.

24 6t.

THE HORACE WATERS PIANOS,
MELODEONS, ALEXANDRE ORGANS,
and
T. Gilbert & Co's. Celebrated Æolian Pianos,

are the finest instruments for Parlors and Churches now in use. A large assortment can be seen at the new Warerooms 481 Broadway, between Grand and Broome streets, which will be sold at extremely low prices. Pianos and Melodeons from sundry makers, new and second hand, to let, and rent allowed if purchased, as per agreement. Monthly payments received for the same. Also, second-hand pianos at great bargains, prices from $25 to $100. Sheet Music, Music Books, and all kinds of Music merchandise at war prices. A Pianist in attendance will try new music.

HORACE WATERS, Agent.

BOSTON HOUSE.
MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been
ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

MRS. ELIZA LEWIS' SALVE,
ANDERSON'S HAIR RESTORATIVE,
(New London,)
SPANISH OIL, (For the Hair.)
WHITE'S VEGETABLE EXTRACT,
BRANDRETH'S SUGAR COATED PILLS.
For Sale at the
Drug Store 55 West Broadway.
1f 47

"O LET MY PEOPLE GO," and "THE NEGRO BOATMAN'S SONG," may be had of Miss E. H. Case, No. 174 W. 30th st., New York. Price 25 cents per copy.

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this, in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & [illegible], WILLIAMSBURG,
Where you will find a splendid assortment of [illegible] goods, such as
BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES AND VESTINGS,
of every [illegible]. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made
MEN AND BOYS' CLOTHING.
DON'T FORGET, 168 EWEN ST., Williamsburg.
9 1y.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET,
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N. Y.,

On an improved plan, by widower T. L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.
First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.
The Clergy supplied at a discount.
KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y. 19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t.

BOARDING AND LODGING
IN BROOKLYN,

At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 58 Atlantic St., near South Ferry, $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodging 75 cts. per week. 15tf

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS.

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co., N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E. 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N. Y.
10 5t.

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side. Mrs. Gant can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, either residents or [illegible], 12 Suffolk Street. Terms very moderate.

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS,

Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 78 Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 6t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMMODATE a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Greene Street, in the rear. Terms moderate. 9 13

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired, by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 8

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTES, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 South Street, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate.

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waiters, and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country.

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS AND FURS,
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) respectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

MRS. E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.

BOARDING AND LODGING

BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 120 West 30th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in a very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Lady $2.50
" " Gents $3.00
Lodging per week $1.75

JAMES W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER,
[illegible] Centre Street, New York.

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,
In all its branches—such as
BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH GUARDS, FINGER-RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.,
Residence [illegible] between 3d and 4th avenue.
[illegible]
18 26t

[illegible] POCKET [illegible] DRINKING TUBE.
Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. [illegible] wanted [illegible] by addressing [illegible] DAY & CO., [illegible] Box 464 P. O. Newark, N. J.

Poetry.

For the Anglo African.

TO MY DAUGHTER.

BY FRANCES ELLEN WATKINS HARPER.

[It is a beautiful conceit, that when a baby smiles in its sleep it is talking with the angels.]

Tell me, did the angels greet thee!
Greet my darling when she smiled?
Did they whisper softly, gently,
Pleasant words unto my child?
Did they whisper 'mid thy dreaming,
Thoughts that made thy slumbers glad,
Of the joy lighted city
Where the heart is never sad?

Did they tell thee of the fountains
Clear as crystal, fair as light,—
Of glory brighten'd country
Never shaded by a night.
Of life's pure pellucid river,—
Of the tree whose leaves do yield
Healing for the bruised nations?
Nations smitten, bruised, peeled?

Of the city ruby founded,
Built on gems of flashing light,
Paling all earth's lustrous jewels,
And the gates of pearly white.
Darling when earth's shadows deepen
O'er thy prison-house of clay,
May the footsteps of God's angel
Ever linger round thy way

"IT IS MORE BLESSED"

Give! as the morning that flows out of heaven;
Give! as the waves when their channel is riven;
Give! as the free air and sunshine are given;
Lavishly, utterly, joyfully give,
Not the waste drops of thy cup overflowing,
Not the faint sparks of thy hearth ever glowing,
Not a pale bud from the June roses blowing:
Give, as He gave thee, who gave thee to live.

Pour out thy love, like the rush of a river
Wasting its waters, forever and ever,
Through the burnt sands that reward not the giver;
Silent or songful thou nearest the sea.
Scatter thy life as the summer showers pouring!
What if no bird thro' the pearl rain is soaring?
What if no blossom looks upward adoring?
Look to the life that was lavish'd for thee!

So the wild wind strews its perfumed caresses,
Evil and thankless the desert it blesses,
Bitter the wave that its soft pinion presses,
Never it ceaseth to whisper and sing.
What if the hard heart give thorns for thy roses
What if on rocks thy tired bosom reposes;
Sweetest is music with minor-keyed closes,
Fairest the vines that on ruin will cling.

Almost the day of thy giving is over!
Ere from the grass dies the bee-haunted clover,
Thou wilt have vanish'd from friend and from lover:
What shall thy longing avail in the grave?
Give, as the heart gives, whose fetters are breaking,
Life, love, and hope, all thy dreams and thy waking,
Soon heaven's river thy soul-fever slaking,
Thou shalt know God, and the gift that he gave

THE SUBLIMITY OF THE PRESENT CRISIS.

The Church of the Puritans was last evening crowded more densely than on any previous occasion. Beside the usual mode of providing extra accommodations, the foot benches were handed out of the pews, turned up on end, and used as seats, this process making standing room for another set of eager listeners. Nearly a whole regiment of soldiers, now quartered in this city, were in attendance. The house was completely packed long before the hour for beginning service.

The Rev. Dr. Cheever preached on "the sublimity of the present crisis," taking for his text the following;

"O thou sword of the Lord, how long will it be ere thou be quiet? Put up thyself into the scabbard, rest and be still. How can it be quiet, seeing the Lord hath given it a charge against Ashkelon and against the sea shore? there hath He appointed it.—Jeremiah, xlvii, 6, 7.

Cursed be he that doeth the work of the Lord deceitfully, and cursed be he that keepeth back his sword from blood.—Jeremiah, xlviii, 10.

There are wars that are of the Lord, and they cannot and will not cease, till His purposes are accomplished by them. This war is of mercy as well as judgment, for the deliverance of the enslaved. God waits for us to prosecute it according to His Word, with this grand and glorious object in view. This purpose on our part would be our salvation. This effort would be for us the immediate crushing of the rebellion—an immediate victory. We are in great guilt, calamity, and danger, and amidst it all, though thrown immediately on God, we do not feel it as we ought, do not pray as we ought, do not prostrate ourselves before God, Unless we conquer, we die. We cannot conquer but by God. We cannot have God with us till we acknowledge our guilt, and repent of it. I will go and return to my place till they acknowledge their offense and seek my face. In their affliction they will seek me early. But repentance is emancipation. To that, therefore, we are absolutely shut up. Is there any of that, and of its coming in season? A member of Congress, in a letter recently written, says:

"I am still of opinion that this war is to put an end to Slavery, but I do not know that it will do it before it puts an end to our Government. It is my solemn conviction that in less than ninety days our sun rises in glory, or sets in Egyptian darkness. We will pray on, hope on, work on, do our duty to our country, come what may."

This proposed reconstruction of Slavery, in the very midst of God's judgments against this crime, is a hardihood of impiety against God, and an extreme of treason against the country, never paralled. It is just as when the besotted Israelites, right under the mount of God, beneath the thunderings and lightnings of God's glory, and while the region was all on fire with the majesty of heaven, taxed themselves to construct an idol in the image of a beast. So are our leaders and our people, in the very midst of the array of God's forces against this iniquity, setting up this Dagon in his place again, and preparing to dance before it. Would to God we had some Moses to come down from the mount, and, in the name and with the authority of a God of Justice and Righteousness, burn this calf in the fire, and grind it to powder, and mingle it in the water, and compel every General, and every Cabinet officer, every clergyman, and every layman, whose voice has been for this reconstruction and worship, to drink it to the dregs. This infatuation, this madness of inveterate and doting attachment to Slavery even while its mailed hand is at our throat with a death grip, it is to be feared is a judicial curse. Nothing in all history can parallel so suicidal a futurity. And as to meanness and criminality, it is as if the Apostolic Church had made a saint of Judas, after he had betrayed Christ, and hanged himself. It is as if the Israelites had expelled Joshua from their camp, and taken Achan or Og, King of Bashan, to be their leader. It is as if after John the Baptist's murder, they had elected Herod to be their prophet and pastor in his stead. In reference to the expulsion of the Hutchinsons from the camps on the Potomac, Dr. C. said, What in all ages has ever inspired an army of freemen, but freedom? Instead of that, the gamut of our generals, the watchword of our patriotism is the Constitution and Slavery, and the very melodies of freedom are forbidden. If you suffocate these impulses you destroy the life, the quickening energy on which you must rely in battle. In the battle of Waterloo, the Duke of Wellington perceived a wavering of the 42d Regiment of Highlanders, and, on inquiring, found that some one had commanded the bagpipes to cease playing. He instantly ordered them to be played in full blast, and immediately the brave regiment rallied, and rushed with indomitable courage to the conflict. Suppose that Wellington had ordered all the Scotch musicians to be expelled from the army, because they would play Bruce's address, and that was offensive to the French taste in music; this would have been not so absurd a piece of meanness and insolence as the order of the American Commander forbidding melodies of freedom in the American camp, because they set the army against Slavery. That act was an insult to the whole people of the North.

He concluded by considering certain contingencies before us. In reference to the attempts of making a peace by quelling the agitation of the question of human freedom, he said, the agitation can no more be put down by a reconstruction of the Union and Slavery, than you could stop an eruption of Etna by building a summer-house upon its crater, or tie up a stream of its lava with red tape, or calm Vesuvius by the sight of Gen. McClellan's epaulets, or a letter from the Secretary of State.

He closed with the following appeal: Let us abolish Slavery, and then, even if the Confederate band of men stealers are received into friendly partnership by the European Powers, and we stand alone, we shall be stronger, with God and Liberty on our side, than all Europe and the South with Satan and Slavery on theirs. [Applause.] Let us abolish Slavery, and our progress, as an empire in prosperity and power, has only begun. We should roll on in our career of greatness, under the blessing of God, while the community of slave traders would continue to decline, withered morally and physically, and disintegrated, degraded and blasted at every step. Let us abolish Slavery, and, though defeated now, because the measure came too late, yet being baptized of God ourselves for this work, even in blood, and ourselves really redeemed, we should abolish it, even in the South. Let us abolish Slavery, and although it is possible that by the help of Europe they may gain this diabolical independence for a season, they will be forced to give up this iniquity in the end. God will give them over into the power of those whom they have so long oppressed. They cannot stand as a slave empire the moment the North fling off their Slavery in hatred and scorn, and stand beside them as a free nation, no longer pledged to act the part of slave-hunters and bloodhounds for them, but inviting every panting fugitive to freedom, and pledged to God and humanity to protect and bless in God's name the victims of oppression. Let us abolish Slavery; for so doing we obey God and save the South as well as the North from incalculable misery. Let us abolish Slavery, and employ the Slaves themselves to spare and protect our own soldiers, and gain their rights and our salvation.

Dr. Cheever, at the conclusion of his sermon, addressed himself to the soldiers present in a very affectionate and eloquent manner, urging them never to obey any mandate, from whatever source it might come, to catch and send back the poor panting fugitive from the hand of bondage.

The discourse was applauded at various points, particularly when the name of Fremont was mentioned, and at the close the Hutchinsons sang the John Brown Hallelujah Hymn, which the audience received with hearty demonstrations of applause.—N. Y. Tribune of Feb. 3d.

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

HOOKER'S DIVISION, near Budd's Ferry, Charles Co. Md., Feb. 6th, '62.

MR. EDITOR.—Since my last we have had quite a little snow storm, which hid the mud for once at least. The snow commenced to fall on the evening of the 2d instant, and on the afternoon of the following day when it ceased, it lay to the depth of four inches. You may judge what a charming relief this must have been to us. I expect you have been blessed with a like visitation. It never snows but I think of a beautiful snow song, published this winter a year ago in the Anglo. You know sleighing days are the gala days of hard, stern winter. How the boys dance and sing, the girls gambol, the women laugh, and the sleigh bells jingle when the snow falls thick and fast! For the first time in my life have I seen the ground covered with snow without hearing the sleigh bells ring. I cannot say, positively, that sleigh-riding is an institution unknown to Dixie's land, but there is at least no sign of it in this portion of Dixie's vineyard.

The whole division is now engaged repairing the roads. In a few days the teams will be able to pass to and fro with comparative ease. They can do nothing until the roads are corduroyed. If they are allowed to remain as they are, in a few days whole regiments might be in a state of starvation. This may seem incredible, when it is known that provisions lay in abundance at Liverpool Point, three miles distant, and Run Point, five miles; but it is nevertheless the most probable thing imaginable. You will remember that the allied army lost twenty thousand horses, when in the harbor of Sebastopol there lay, loaded with forage, ships whose crews threw it overboard to get rid of it; it could not be carried over the roads; not until they constructed a railroad which ran into their very trenches were they able to supply their army, and maintain that memorable siege. A lesson might be learned from this example. It would be cheaper to construct a railroad at once, for when the government comes to foot the wood bill, and the wear and tear of teams and wagons is accounted for, it would be found more economical than the corduroy road.

There was quite an exciting time in one of the camps this morning. The slave hunters did not come for "Jim, the negro spy," on last Saturday as they said they would do, but they put it off until this morning. I suppose they thought they would, by this little delay, put him off his guard; but no, no, it seems that these fellows who have serious objections to serving a master, have learned intuitively that "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." When a man's limbs have been bruised by the galling chains, he knows how sweet it is to be able to step forth free and unencumbered, and he will run fast and kick hard should any one attempt to reinvest him with those chains. Well, about twelve o'clock three Maryland magnates—slave hunters—rode into camp, provided with abundant dingy looking papers. A crowd was of course assembled in double quick time, without any regard to either right or left dress. There stood James, looking on in calm dignity. One asked, "Why don't you take him!" "I want the officer to let me take him," stammered the frightened hunter.

"Why you fool, there is not an officer in this whole division that dare give this man to you as a slave."

"Put 'em out! put 'em out! Ride 'em on a rail!" went up from every quarter. In a twinkling of an eye they were in their saddles. Groans, hisses and snowballs were showered on their devoted heads, and the last that was seen of them was when they were making Maryland mud fly in ignoble style.

I noticed in the National Republican of Washington city, a short time ago, a statement to the effect that Mr. Redpath, the editor of the Haytien Emigration newspaper—the "Pine and Palm"—had proposed to the United States authorities to transport all the contrabands of war to Fortress Monroe, for the modest sum of $20 per head. I was amazed and startled; I hoped that this was a mis-statement, and have been waiting for a denial. The source from which it comes, and the denial not having been made, we must accept it as true.

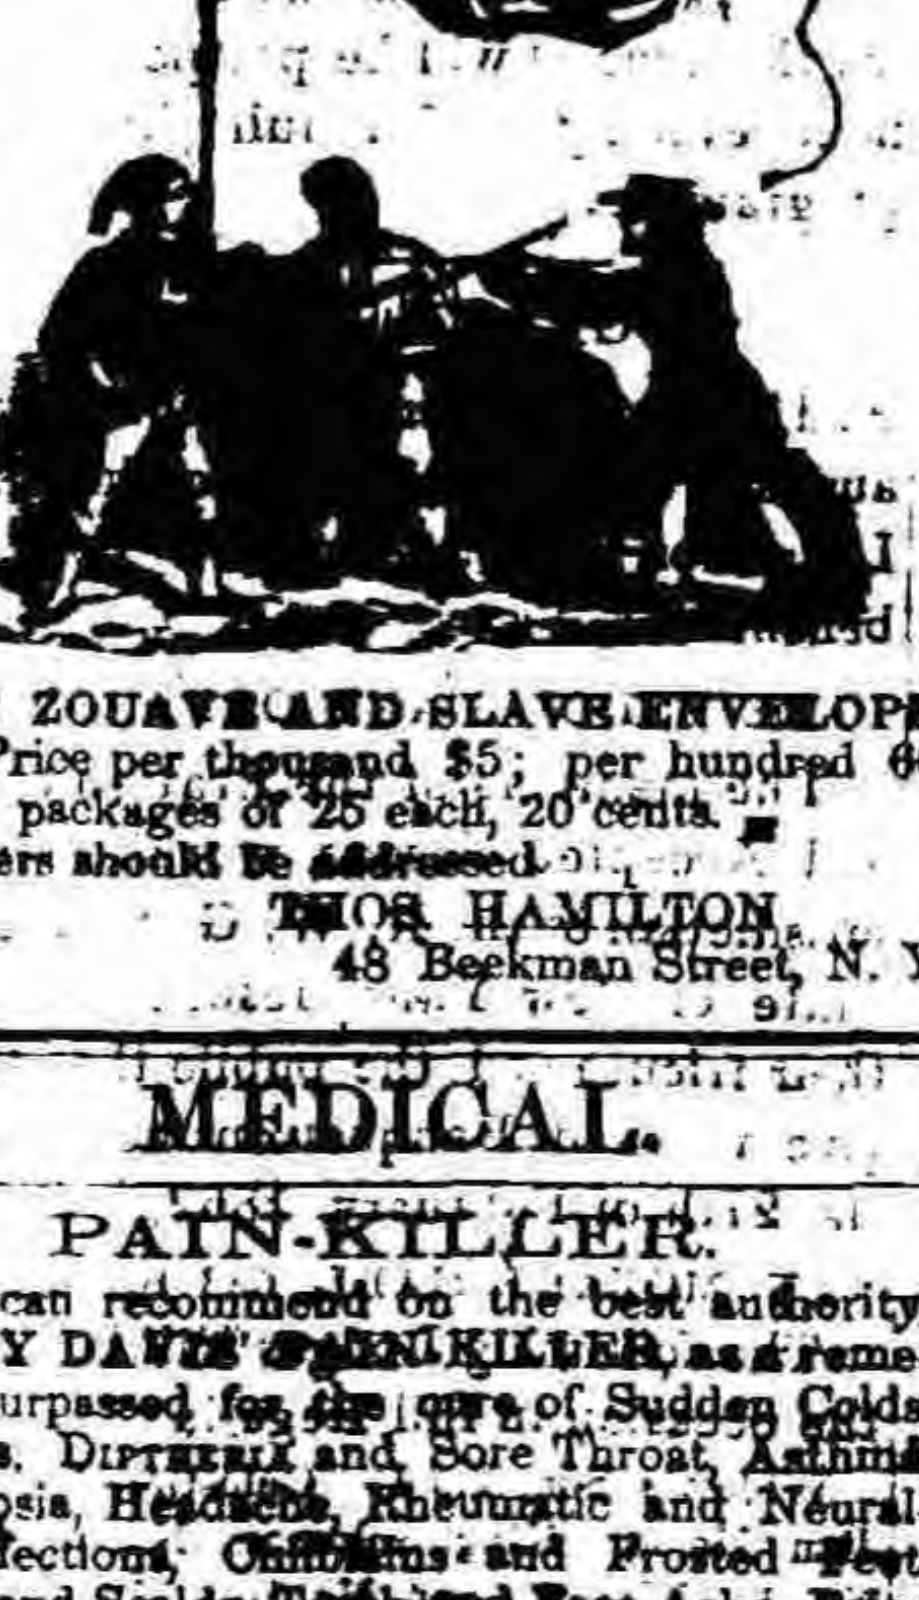
This last crowning usurpation compels us to pause and look around us, and see how we stand. About a year ago the announcement was made that an agency had been established at Boston with a white man at the head of it. A running contest was kept up by the agent and his aids with all who dared to dissent from the scheme. The foulest epithets were applied to those who had been foremost in the fight against oppression. The Anglo-African became the Pine and Palm, and the free discussion of the emigration question crushed. The only paper the masses could call their own was prostituted to the advocacy of a scheme which had already proved more disastrous to the colored people than anything in their history except slavery itself. I will venture to say that the amount of property sacrificed by the colored people of Philadelphia alone, in 1824, when citizen Granville and Frederick Hinton led them to emigrate to Trinidad and Hayti, would amount to millions of dollars. Large tracts of land were owned by colored people in the heart of our city, and are now worth millions, but it was all sacrificed upon the altar of emigration. I was confident that although Redpath might pay out Haytien gold lavishly, and shut his columns to every dissenting word that might be uttered against his scheme, would fail, not taking into consideration the course pursued by him and his parasites, which was overbearing and arrogant. To day sees Haytien Emigration stillborn on the hands of its fathers and progenitors, and, as if by some strange fatality to make its failure doubly sure, he dares to propose to trample in the dust all that is left of our liberties. No colonizationist ever dared to proceed to the length Redpath has, in his proposition to remove the freedmen at Fortress Monroe, regardless of their will or choice, to bind their hands and feet, if needs be, to make good his shipping contract.

Now that the slavery question is about to pass from the arena of political disputation, the question of expatriation will be thrust upon it. It can be seen looming up in mighty proportions in the distance. It is the next great barrier the enemies to human freedom, negro equality, and progressive civilization propose to build up. They have abundant and suitable materials to work with—these are the millions who have been schooled in that code of political ethics, the cardinal maxims of which are that the negro is inferior to the Caucasian, that he never can attain to equality with the dominant class in this country, and that his natural normal condition is slavery! They are determined to enslave or transport us if they possibly can, for they hate us cordially. Redpath has allied himself to these. It would be most disastrous to us at this stage of the contraband question to have the government do as he proposes. When I say us, I mean, of course to include the four millions of American slaves whose destiny is, to all appearances, suspended upon the decision of this question. Against these accursed ideas, these natural, moral, religious and political heresies, the anti-slavery men have waged an incessant war. Their only mission has been to give the lie to these infamous assumptions. My dear sir, if we look back to the past, and recall the struggles, the trials, and the triumphs of anti-slavery men, then turn to the noble words of Phillips and Sumner, hear Whittier sing, muse over the philosophy of Emerson, wonder at the genius of the lamented Parker, turn again to our distracted country, where war, bloody and merciless is precipitated by the slavery power, in a paroxysm of rage hoping thus to stay the overwhelming tide of public opinion, which this record of suffering and these noble words have created, can we look with any degree of allowance on any man or clique who indirectly calls this a farce? No, sir, we stand on the broad platform of the universal brotherhood of man. I expect to see the day when negro representatives unite in the halls of legislation. I believe, as a writer has beautifully said, that "the animosities are mortal but the humanities live forever." Redpath must be reckless, indeed, when knowing that he is repudiated by the colored population of the northern States attempts to take advantage of the dependence of those people who have been freed by the exigencies of this war. Just as they have been raised to the dignity of manhood, and a new life of hope and promise lies spread out before them, and are revelling in the exuberant joyfulness of a new life of freedom, Redpath proposes to expatriate them! If Haytian emigration was not already defunct, this act of Redpath would so completely annihilate it that it could never have a resurrection.

G. E. S.

'What is the meaning of 'lost' in French?' said a cab-driver to a foreign gentleman.—'Perdu,' answered the gentleman. 'Well, then, your trunk is perdu,' said the cab-driver.

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE

Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.

Orders should be addressed to

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent liniment for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world," [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.

PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.

10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,

BY USING

B. T. BABBITT'S

SUPERIOR FRENCH

CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

THE PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC,

Containing besides the Calendar and Copious Astronomical Statistics, a History of the Great Rebellion, Biographical Sketches of the Prominent Military Officers, a Dictionary of Military Terms, very full information relative to Military Matters of interest to the people at large, National Hymns, Incidents, Anecdotes, &c., &c.

Published and for sale by DEXTER & Co., 17 Spruce street. Newsboys and others wanted to make sales.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess or dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing; and before is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
THOS. R. [illegible],
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.

D. W. INGERSOL,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 12th, 1855.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative; and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling assured that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

JAMES EDWIN [illegible],
193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Headache," and found it [illegible] for the purpose specified, and recommend it to all who want a good and safe article.

ALBRO LYONS.

20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway; Mrs. Staat's, 73 Thompson St.; Chas. H. Ring's, 155 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

WM. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of

THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rhubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c. they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic diseases, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Warranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occasionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed, and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK.
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY EXPLORING PARTY;

BY

M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygiene, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions.

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman, who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St., N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS:

EMBELLISHMENT—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
Music.—By A. J. R. Conner.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
Afric-American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W[illegible]
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
[illegible] the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.—[illegible]
Blake; or the Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizensihp,—by James McCune Smith.
Claude Brihandes De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture,—by Robert Gordon.
Is the Constitution [illegible] a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington [illegible]
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty [illegible]
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson's Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James McCune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S. Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G. B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by John Mercer Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to

THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY THOMAS HAMILTON,

48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound.—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W. Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden, Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs. M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps, Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. Nell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown

The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.

By Fredrick Douglass. One vol., 12 mo. 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.

The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

The Martyrs and the Fugitive.

By the Rev. S. H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.

The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. [illegible] Illustrations, [illegible] pp, 12mo. Price $1.00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.

For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on slavery, and the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory; also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts., four copies, 50 cts., nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,

In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts, 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.

By Lysander Spooner. In paper, [illegible] pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.

By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage [illegible] Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.

Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with [illegible] representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 10x25, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (Middle Passage). There there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel between decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed; contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which places it within the reach of the masses—viz, 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents) must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.

A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes [illegible] Price, $1.25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,

Being the personal recollections of Peter Still and his wife, 'Vina,' after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1.25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.

"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches deliver [illegible] Congress, also an accurate likeness. Price only 50 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;

Or, the true history of Deacon Giles's Distillery and Deacon Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz. [illegible]

A [illegible] on the Carribbean Sea.

By [illegible] With an Introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of [illegible]

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland.

An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, [illegible] Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party, and in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia, and member of the International [illegible] Congress, London. Price, 50 [illegible]

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual

Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. [illegible]

The [illegible]

[illegible]

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 30 NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 22, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENTS

The Weekly Anglo-African.

IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY
BY ROBT. HAMILTON
NO. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.

Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.

All communications for the paper must be addressed ROBT HAMILTON.
48 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

PART II.

Hear the word!—who fight for freedom!
Shout it in the battle van!
Hope! for bleeding human nature!
Christ the God, is Christ the Man!
H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE MIDDLE PASSAGE.

The Vulture like a monster was gliding and mounting the then increasing swells of the seas, Blake stood as if unconscious of the presence of those around him, reconnoitering the surrounding waters.

'Did you notice how that stout black fellow, and the handsome negro woman, looked at Blake in the hole?' remarked Paul: "You reckon he knows 'em?'

'Negroes all know each other, you know; all uncles and aunts, brothers and sisters, and cousins,' replied the American. 'I never saw a negro yet, that was'nt acquainted with another negro you could name; negroes are all the same every where.'

'But how do you account for ——'

'A sail!' exclaimed Costello, interrupting Paul.

'A sail!' repeated Blake.

'A sail, a sail!' rang through the vessel, especially by the negroes, the blackness of whose faces seemed to glisten with emotion.

'North-east' remarked Paul elevating his glass; 'European I reckon.'

'Can't tell,' said Garcia following his example—'good way off yet.'

'Brig: I reckon she's a man-of-war,' continued Paul.

'Can't tell, sir!' replied Costello, exhibiting signs of fear.

During this time the approaching vessel was coursing from north-east to south-west, the Vulture from south-east to north-west, their lines of direction forming an X. Whilst every eye with fear was strained at the advancing seaman, suddenly she was seen to tack to the north-east, her direction being such as to have met the Vulture at a point in a given distance. All now stood in fearful silence waiting an expression from Garcia, who alone of the officers was an experienced slaver.

'Can't be after mischief, I reckon?' enquiringly said Paul, the first to break silence in the anxiously gazing group.

'An infernal fast sailor! replied Costello.

'No ide' what she is?' again enquired Paul.

'Some cussed thief of an Englishman I suppose,' said Royer; Garcia giving him a look of caution, to guard against the ear of the negroes.

The stranger was still advancing, but not near enough to determine what she was, as she carried no colors, and all still stood in fear waiting an opinion from the superior judgement of the Spaniard, when unexpectedly they were startled by a loud exclamation from Gascor'—

'Golly, but she come! De old Gull got nothin' to do but flap 'er wings, an' she pick up 'erself an' sails!'

'Shut up there, you black raven! Who asked you for your lip. Begone in an instant, or I'll lash you to the mizen-mast and give you a hundred!' ordered Royer; the boy making away quaintly saying:

'De raven goes; but he croak fo' he did go!'

Royer cast an eye at the blacks who stood on the forcastle quite aside from them—while the whites occupied the quarter deck—who smiled among themselves at the last repartee of their young fellow seaman.

'Curse the —!' said Royer scratching his head, but did not for prudential reasons finish the sentence.

All available canvass was given to the winds, strongly blowing from the north-east, and speed was now increased at least one fourth. It was evidently decided in the minds of all to be a chase, which could not be concealed, and every tack in nautical science was put to the test. On sped the Vulture dashing and splashing like a great living monster of the main, and on came the stranger in the distance riding and gliding the waves like a monstrous water fowl. The scene increased in interest as the vessels increased their speed, and the negroes were among the boldest of the crew. But the shades of evening were coming on, and the stranger which was to all appearance fast gaining on them, by illusion of the growing obscurity, seemingly fell back in the distance. The strictest watch was kept, and fearful anticipations troubled the whites during the entire evening.

Emboldened by what was now thought to be an Englishman, the negroes had determined to have a merry chaunt. So soon as Blake, who for a short time had withdrawn, made his appearance among them, they commenced in loud tones a glee:

We have hatred, dark and deep, for the fetter and the thong;
We bring light to prisoned spirits, for the captive wail a song!
We bring light ——"

'See!' interrupted Blake, as a vivid flash of lightning was seen in the distance, presently followed by a heavy rumbling of thunder.

The glee stopped, the blacks for the night, except those on watch, and the whites separated to rest till aroused in the morning to scenes of a more pleasing prospect, each party in hopes of the others disappointment.

CHAPTER XIX.

MIDDLE PASSAGE—CHASE CONTINUED.

A sail—a sail! a promised prize to hope!
Her nation—flag—how speaks the telescope?
She walks the water like a thing of life,
And seems to dare the elements to strife.
—BYRON

This morning ushered in a day of hope and cheerful promise to the mariner. The sun rose beautifully, overspreading by his reflections the expanded surface of the ocean, as if by the skill of some magic touch, changing at once the silvery to a golden hue. While the winds blew constantly—and occasionally moderate—a gale, there was not a cloud in the sky observable, to mar the prospects nor check the progress of a fair sail and passage to all appearance, during the remainder of the voyage. The spirits of all seemed in unison with the prospects of the day, cheerful and happy, all having assembled on the decks in anticipation of something decisive concerning the pursuing vessel the day before. And while thus standing in anxious expectation, the blacks had congregated together mooting a council regardless of their superiors who occupied another position on the same plane with themselves.

The whites were now quite desirous for a chant from the blacks, to divert their attention from the stranger which they expected shortly to make his appearance above the swelling seas. Passing by Gascor who stood alone, Royer desired to know what the blacks were doing so long together, and why they did not entertain the vessel with a merry sea song. Gascor made no reply but started toward the group wagging his head, which he occasionally touched on one side knowingly with the end of his finger, then stopping, looked back at the mate, then started again.

'What the deal does he mean?' said Royer.

'Headwork!' replied Paul, when there was a laugh at Royer's expense.

'At your old tricks again Captain Paul? You'll spoil negroes wherever you go!' retorted Royer; 'negroes should be kept in their place.'

'This is not the occasion for talking about "place" Mr. Royer,' rebuked Capt. Paul;' you had better think about fate!'

'I'll teach the black rascal how to behave to white men!" said Royer in reply.

'You'll find it a task, I'm thinking Mr. Royer!' said Paul.

'There we have it again! Give a nigger his own way and he's of no use to anybody,' rejoined Royer.

'May be so!' said Paul,

'I know so!' retorted Royer.

'This is no time for cross firing Mr. Royer, and the sooner you stop it the better!' rebuked Captain Paul in an authoritative tone.

Seizing a rope's-end, Royer, smarting under the rebuke of his superior officer, raised it over the boy, asking why he did not answer him when spoken to—to which the boy made no reply, but raised his head with a straining look over the sides of the deck toward the north-east.

'Answer me instantly!' commanded Royer.

'A sail!' replied the boy, pointing in the direction in which he was looking.

'A sail!' repeated Royer, dropping the rope.

'What is her course?' inquired Garcia, without his glass.

'Direct pursuit!' answered Costello.

'What flag?'

'Red ensign.'

'British then, as sure as the world!' exclaimed Garcia.

'Run up the Stars and Stripes,' commanded Royer.

'Off with the hatches there you black devils! Bring out the dead and dying; heave them overboard!' ordered the heartless Portugee.

The hatches, which had been for many hours closed, being opened, the blacks fell back, and retreated to escape the pestiferous fumes which met them.

'No running from dead niggers there you black wolves! Down in the hold like a gang of half starved hyenas into the grave of an executed thief!' exclaimed the reckless American.

Next came the heaves and sighs, wailing and cries, groaning and moaning of the thirsty, hungry, sick and dying, in tones of agony, such as to rend the soul with anguish to invoke Jehovah why

" Is there not some chosen curse—
Some hidden thunder in the stores of heaven,
Red with uncommon wrath, to blast the man
Who gains his fortune from the blood of souls!"

'Bring out the dead, dying and damaged, an' we'll give 'em "a free an' quick passage" to kingdom come, in less an' no time. Out with 'em you black porcupines—out with 'em!' again roared the coarse American.

Then came a scene the most terrible. Men, women and children raging with thirst, famished, nauseated with sea-sickness, stifled for want of pure air, defiled and covered with loathsomeness, one by one were brought out, till the number of six hundred were thrown into the mighty deep, and sunk to rise no more till summoned by the trump of Heaven in the morning of the General Resurrection of all the dead, to appear before the Eternal Throne of God.

On casting them over, many of the sick and feeble begged in humble supplication to be spared, who, when clinging to the rigging or side of the vessel, had their hold broken by the foot of an officer, and when this was unsuccessful, a blow on the head with a handspike or capstan bar, sent the helpless victim trembling to a watery grave.

'Bear a hand at the pumps there—bear a hand!' ordered the surly Portugee, the water being directed in constant streams among them, when opening their mouths as before they caught at it to slake their parching palates and stay the perishing threat.

Among those remaining in loathsomeness was Abyssa, the Christian woman of Soudan, who so soon as the black seaman entered, burst into tears of grief, begging for relief from her disgusting condition.*

With glass in hand, standing upon the quarter deck, Royer declared in words of blasphemy and boasting, that the American flag, which had never grounded nor cowered before British colors, should not then become their prize. Before an event so humiliating should occur, he would consent to see her scuttled and all go to the depths of the ocean together. With lips pressed together, Blake looked on without an evidence of emotion, but a countenance and expression so determined, that Royer on passing turned about to look at him. Here, too, was Gascor as quiet as Blake was grave, but occasionally casting a look at Royer, which well might have caused him to suspicion the boy for some ill design toward him personally.

Meanwhile the Vulture dashed through the water at fourteen knots an hour, with American colors up and Spanish spirits down. All jesting among them had ceased, and even Gascor, who to them had always been a source of merriment, was now compelled to change his mood, which gave him the countenance of deep distress. Costello continued to pace the decks in silence, speaking only when spoken to, and though in reality the bravest man on board among the whites, submitted to his fate, though with grim reluctance.

The blacks were now under a new order of things, the destruction of the captives having frightened them, and all excepting Blake passed under the ordeal of Royer and Garcia's displeasure; with blasphemy ever on his lips, he was ready to abuse and insult the feelings of all to whom he spoke.

Calling them to duty, he abused them for delay in coming, and swore at them for coming when they knew that they had no duty to perform; this state of things continued till chance induced a change. The daring Briton seemed now to fall in the distance beyond the recovery of her former position, taking courage from which, Lawrence Spencer, on behalf of the Americans, raised a national air, joined by his party, to the words:

" The British shot flew hot,
But the Yankees answered not,
Till they got within the distance
They called handyo!
Says———"

'Three times three, for the American flag!' interupted Royer, when they became uproarous.

Thus escaping capture, by the speed of a superior Baltimore built slaver, rigged and fitted out in New York for the trade; with a favorable wind, on she sped, clearing the water, with nothing unusual occurring excepting every day to throw into the deep some half-a-dozen dead and dying captives taken from the hold, who had perished for want of sustenance in food, water, or air. The whites now were in high hopes and anticipation of a pleasant and profitable termination of the voyage.

CHAPTER XX.

STORM DURING MIDDLE PASSAGE.

The prospects of the day this morning at sunrise were promising, and the entire ship's company, black and white, were out upon the decks. The Spaniards still exhibited feelings of dissatisfaction, and Royer continued his overbearing assumption. On the quarter deck were standing the Americans, on the poop the Spaniards, the blacks occupying the forecastle.

While all thus positioned were enjoying the morning sun, looking out upon the ocean, a huge monster appeared in the water off the port bow of the vessel. The creature delighted in playing around and about the ship, diving on one side and coming up on the other, to the amusement and curiosity of the spectators. It was singular in shape, much larger than a grampus, and not so large as a whale. About it there was much cavil, some stating one thing, some another, when Garcia at once pronounced it a 'sign of trouble.'

The sky was clear—there were no fears of a storm; the cruiser distanced, no fears from her; they were approaching America, with no fears of the blacks. Then there was not to apprehend but the Spaniards, upon whom subsequently the eyes of the Americans were naturally turned.

But the weather suddenly changed; and the recently clear sky became decked with clouds and hazy, when the Americans more than ever became interested in the Spaniards. 'A sign of trouble' had impressed them, and kept ringing in their ears, till not but trouble could they imagine was before them. In the moment of a serious consultation among them, a voice was heard to cry 'a weather,' instantly succeeded by 'a sail.' Glasses were immediately leveled, when, just above the horizon, was a steamer to all appearance in direct pursuit. The prospect around had materially changed, the clouds gathered thickly and fast, lowering, seemingly, to the waters, while the steamer approached every minute nearer and nearer. Alarm now succeeded boasting; and fear, arrogant assumption. And whilst such was the case, on their part the Spaniards appeared unchanged by the surrounding circumstances.

This to the Americans was omenous, and caused them apprehension. The slaves at noon but the day before, had been well ventilated, fed and watered,* and the hatches ordered to be kept partially open, that nothing might occur to hinder their progress. But the steamer still advancing, was fast gaining upon them.

'Examine the hold, and see what them niggers is about!' commanded Royer with a stentorian voice.

'The slaves are restless, Mr. Royer,' replied Lawrence Spencer, who, to guard against the stench, had peeped into the hatch.

'What! I'll soon quiet 'em,' replied he, who, armed with sword and whip in hand, ordering the whites to follow him, entered the hold, commanding silence.

The slaves confined in the stalls, immediately turned their eyes toward Mendi, the athletic captive so abused by the mate, who then sat in the centre of the hold, loose and entirely out of place.

'I now see the cause of it,' remarked George Royer; 'he has worked himself out of place, and others want to follow.'

Mendi suddenly sprang to his feet, stood with eyes fixed, looking defiance at the whites, then casting a look around upon his fellow captives, he spoke to them in his native Congolese. Royer drew with a brandish his sword, shook with a threat his whip, then gave him a look of authority, and left the hold followed by his companions.

Gaining the decks, and looking up, the skies still angrily threatened a storm, but nothing in comparison with the angry threatening of the dusky faces below.

'Apprehend anything serious?' inquired Paul.

'No, not any,' replied Royer, supposing that the shake of his whip had intimidated the captive Mendi, though he, in reality, was alarmed.

'No danger of 'em gettin' loose, then?' continued Paul.

'None, sir, whatever. All the black rascals require to keep 'em in order is the shake of cowskin over 'em,' replied George Royer.

'I'm not so certain about that; but hark!' said Paul, as a crash was heard below decks, like the crushing of boxes.

'The slaves are dissatisfied, and in a muss below, Mr. Royer,' exclaimed Tom Hardy, an old American seaman.

'What under the sun is the matter with 'em?' replied the mate.

'They must want water, sir,' replied he, just returning from a peep where he saw them sucking the broken glass of wine bottles.

'Just as you might expect! a nigger is all'as after somethin' to eat or drink,' replied Royer in a passion. 'Give 'em water.'

Water was given which they drank, but still were thirsty; food they ate, but yet were hungry. They hungered and thirsted for liberty, heaven's great boon to man. Restlessness, with fierce demonstrations, pervaded the slave department, at which the whites becoming alarmed made serious suggestions to the commander.

'By the winds of Heaven, I'll subdue 'em or die! Follow me!' exclaimed Royer in a torrent of passion entering the hold, armed with sword and revolver.

Mendi on seeing him enter, advanced, stood boldly before him making gestures of the most serious apprehension.

'Rally, men, rally!' sternly commanded Royer, making a rush toward the unmanacled captive, when Tom Hardy stopping suddenly, shrugged up his shoulders and reached out his hand, which Mendi eagerly grasped.

'Are you dry, old fellow?' inquired the seaman, with suitable gesture, to which he shook his head. 'Are you hungry?' continued he, suiting an action to the word; when with a look of contempt the captive smiled. 'By daddy, cap'n, this chap seems bent on a muss, an' I'm kind a thinkin' he's able to get up one,' concluded he.

'Nonsense, nonsense!' contemptuously bellowed Royer; 'he's a nigger, an' I'll teach him his place.

'Ef 'e dont, cap'n,' comically replied Hardy, 'he'll mock devilish close the man that does.'

'Come, boys, come!'

'On deck!' was the stern command of Paul at the instant when the order was about to be given by Royer to rush upon the unmanacled bondman.

'Reef sails.'

'Aye, aye sir!'

'Lively, there, lively!' were commands, answers and orders given, all at the same time, by different voices, everything being in the utmost confusion.

A heavy sea now struck the vessel, followed by a blinding flash of lightning and deafening peal of thunder; the Vulture dashing, heaving, tossing, plunging, and again mounting the swells as if in defiance of the confusion, roaring of the storm and threatening danger around.

The contemplation of the scene had now become fearfully interesting. The black and frowning skies and raging hurricane above; the black and frowning slaves with raging passions below, rendered it dreadful without, fearful within and terrible all around. Whilst captain, mate, and crew were with might and main struggling against the fierce contending elements above, the master spirits of the captives seized the opportunity to release his fellow slaves from their fetters. Armed with a heavy weapon found in the hold, Mendi stood in readiness for the conflict; with which on crushing a box to pieces, bill hooks or sugar knives were strewn about the place. Arming his comrads they made ready for a charge.

Standing near to reconnoitre the hatch, an approach from above caused him to recede a pace or two from his position, as Spencer peeped down.

Here he descried the master standing in an attitude of determined resistance, boldly and fearlessly peering at the frowning clouds, as though to invoke the fury of the skies. A dreadful peal of thunder with a fearful flame of lightning just then burst in the elements, causing a glare deep down into the portentious dungeon illuminating his face, who starting stepped back a pace with face upturned to Heaven, falling upon his knees with hands extended in supplication to Jehovah, with great piercing eyes sparkling from under the heavy black brow, presented a sight which struck terror to the heart of the young American passed-midshipman.

Pale and trembling he turned away, with faltering speech to describe the scene. Terrible as they might have been, the storm and hurricane above, had not produded the trepidation in the young American, as did the storm of silent vengeance deeply concealed amidst the fires of the troubled soul of this outraged son of Africa.

'Heavens!' exclaimed Royer at seeing Spencer stand back from the hatch, pale and panic-stricken; 'What's the matter?'

'If the storm continues, we are lost!' replied Spencer.

'Death and destruction!' roared Royer; 'will you let a blast of thunder frighten you?'

'You don't understand me sir, the negroes, the negroes are' ——

'What?'

'Loose!' replied Spencer; when again the thunder pealed as if uttering Heavens indignation, while the lightning's forked streaks displayed the threatening of its wrath.

The storm raged, the waters dashed, while the vessel like a cork was tossed amidst the furies of the hurricane, and not a sound nor whisper heard but frightful antecedents. Then above the roaring storm might be heard the voice of Royer, with words of startling blasphemy, endeavoring to encourage on to battle, the seamen with the elements; when again it might be heard in tones of discouragement but not less blasphemous, calling upon the thunder and lightning to dash in pieces the vessel, rather than it should be taken by a gang of black devils.

'What did you see?' asked Royer when a moment again favored the enquiry.

'That big restless negro!' replied Spencer tremblingly.

'How did he look?'

'Like the devil just let loose!'

'Let us look again!' said Royer peeping into the hold; 'just as I expected! a nigger's always after something to eat or drink. See them drums of figs—yes, there's resons too, and look at the fruits and broken licker bottles scattered round. By the lightning its too bad!'

'Can you see nothing else? asked Spencer, closely peeping in.

'Stay!' whispered Royer, closely creeping up, laying down and peeping into the hold. 'Hark! still, still! Yes, there he is armed to the teeth, and all his niggers armed. See him, he peeps to see some one—only see his eyes!'

'The vicious devil!' added Spencer, 'that look!'

Dark and unearthly is the scowl.
That glares beneath his dusty cowl;
The flash of that dilating eye
Reveals too much of time gone by!
Though——

'Come, come, Mr. Spencer, this is no time for Shakespeare and nonsense! *I wish men was as good in showin' their bravery, as they is sometimes in showin' their learnin,' rebuked Royer. Spencer laughed at the mention of Shakspeare.

'Well, cap'n, 'bravery' or not, it aint no chile's play to go in the hold after yon black feller,' I'm told ye it aint,' suggested Tom Hardy.

Crash, again roared the thunder, as if shattering the skies to pieces, the lightning spreading flashes as though the clouds were in a flame. Startled at this potent mandate from above, captain, mate and all stood in silence at the scene.

'Yo ho! ho eyo!' could be heard above the winds and dashing spray, the seamen manfully contending against the tempest, being fearfully exposed to the raging, merciless blast above, and the restless and dangerous elements of passion below.

Such was the state of things, but twenty-four hour's sail from Matanzas.

Suddenly the winds changed, the clouds began to disperse, the thunder and lightning ceased to be seen and heard. Late in the afternoon a rainbow appeared above the horizon, telling in distant and silent eloquence as a harbinger of gladness, of a brighter prospect to all, as if conscious of the terror which pervaded the enslavers, and the future that awaited the enslaved.

The hatches being secured it was conceded that were it known that the slaves had been rebellious their value would be much depreciated, if not their sale prevented. The agreement was then made to suppress all information concerning their mutinous tendency, and dispose of the cargo as quickly as possible at the barracoons of Matanzas.

Blake during the entire troubles was strangely passive to occurring events below, strictly attending to the duties of his office in silence, except when speaking to a black, or spoken to by a white; but was suspicioned by the Americans as being the instigator of the plot, who under ordinary circumstances would have been executed at the yard arm of the vessel. But the Spaniards having accomplished their ends were satisfied, and showed pleasantness, becoming quite affable, they having at the start desired the cargo to be taken to Cuba.

Nothing could be seen of the daring British West India schooner, she having escaped the storm by putting into harbor. Nothing during the night occurred, and at daybreak next morning they hove in sight of the Island, and at six o'clock that afternoon the Vulture secured her moorings in the bay at Matanzas.

Scarcely had she landed than without waiting for the adjustment of his engagement, Blake went immediately on shore, and was soon lost among the gazing spectators who assembled on the quay at the arrival of the vessel.

---

* The coarseness and ruthlessness of these persons on slavers are indescribable. Imprecations, blasphemy and [illegible], they seem to delight in mocking and sporting over the distresses of their victims, even when themselves alike in danger.

* Native Africans are very cleanly about their persons, bathing generally several times a day.

* A fact worthy of note, is that the captives in a slaver are only fed once a day, and sometimes watered only once.

* Some young officers at sea are full of levity in times of the greatest danger.

SPEECH OF JOHN S. ROCK, ESQ.

At the Annual Meeting of the Massachusetts Anti-slavery Society, Thursday Evening, Jan. 23.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—I am here not so much to make a speech as to add a little more color to this occasion. (Laughter.)

I do not know that it is right that I should speak at this time, for it is said that we have talked too much already; and it is being continually thundered in our ears that the time for speech-making has ended, and the time for action has arrived. Perhaps this is so. This may be the theory of the people, but we all know that the active idea has found but little sympathy with either of our great millitary commanders, or the National Executive; for they have told us again and again, that 'patience is a cure for all sores,' and that we must wait for the 'good time' which, to us, has been long a-coming. (Applause.)

It is not my desire, neither is it the time for me to criticise the Government, even if I had the disposition so to do. The situation of the black man in this country is far from being an enviable one. To-day, our heads are in the lion's mouth, and we must get them out the best way we can. To contend against the Government is as difficult as it is to sit in Rome and fight with the Pope. (Laughter.) It is probable, that, if we had the malice of the Anglo-Saxon, we would watch our chances and seize the first opportunity to take our revenge. If we attempted this, the odds would be against us, and the first thing we should know would be—nothing! (Laughter.) The most of us are capable of perceiving that the man who spits against the wind, spits in his own face! (Laughter.)

While Mr. Lincoln has been more conservative than I had hoped to find him, I recognise in him an honest man, striving to redeem the country from the degradation and shame into which Mr. Buchanan and his predecessors have plunged it. (Applause.)

This nation is mad. In its devoted attachment to the negro, it has run crazy after him, [laughter,] and now, having caught him, hangs on with a deadly grasp, and says to him with more earnestness and pathos than Ruth expressed to Naomi, 'Where thou goest, I will go; where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.' [Laughter and applause.]

Why this wonderful attachment? My brother [Mr. Remond] spoke ably and eloquently to you this afternoon, and told you of the cruel and inhuman prejudices of the white people of this country. He was right. But has he not failed to look on the other side of this question? Has he not observed the deep and abiding affection that they have for the negro, which 'neither height, nor depth, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present nor to come, can separate from this love,' which reaches to their very souls? (Renewed laughter and applause.)

I do not deny that there is a deep and cruel prejudice lurking in the bosoms of the white people of this country. It is much more abundant in the North than in the South. Here, it is to found chiefly among the higher and lower classes; and there is no scarcity of it among the poor whites in the South. The cause of this prejudice may be seen at a glance. The educated and wealthy class despise the negro, because they have robbed him of his hard earnings, or, at least, have got rich off the fruits of his labor; and they believe if he gets his freedom, their fountain will be dried up, and they will be obliged to seek business in a new channel. Their 'occupation will be gone.' The lowest class hate him because he is poor, as they are, and is a competitor with them for the same labor. The poor ignorant white man, who does not understand that the interest of the laboring classes is mutual, argues in this wise: 'Here is so much labor to be performed,—the darky does it. If he was gone, I should have his place.' The rich and the poor are both prejudiced from interest, and not because they entertain vague notions of justice and humanity. While uttering my solemn protest against this American vice, which has done more than any other thing to degrade the American people in the eyes of the civilised world, I am happy to state that there are many who have never known this sin, and many others who have been converted to the truth by the 'foolishness of anti-slavery preaching,' and are deeply interested in the welfare of the race, and never hesitate to use their means and their influence to help break off the yoke that has been so long crushing us. I thank them all and hope the number may be multiplied, until we shall have a people who will know no man save by his virtues and his merits. [Loud applause.]

Now, it seems to me that a blind man can see that the present war is an effort to nationalize, perpetuate, and extend slavery in this country. In short, slavery is the cause of the war; I might say, is the war itself. Had it not been for slavery, we should have had no war! Through two hundred and forty years of indescribable tortures, slavery has wrung out of the blood, bones and muscle of the negro hundreds of millions of dollars, and helped much to make this nation rich. At the same time, it has developed a volcano which has burst forth, and, in less number of days than years, has dissipated this wealth and rendered the Governmen bankrupt! And, strange as it may appear, you still cling to this monstrous iniquity, notwithstanding it is daily sinking the country lower and lower. [Hear, hear.] Some of our ablest and best men have been sacrificed to appease the wrath of this American god. There was Fremont, God bless him! [loud applause]—who, under pretense of frauds in his contracts, to the amount of several thousand dollars, was set aside for a Hunker kidnapper. If Fremont made a mistake of a few thousand dollars—which no one claims was intentional on his part—what do you think of the terrible delay which has cost, and is costing us two millions a day? Who is responsible for this great sacrifice of treasure? [Hear, hear.] Then, there was Mr. Cameron, the hem of whose garment was not soiled with anti-slavery, except what he got from his official position, as it was forced upon his convictions. But, standing where he did, he saw the real enemy of the country; and because he favored striking at its vitals, his head was cut off, and that of a Hunker's substituted! There is a storm in that cloud which, to-day, though no larger than a man's hand, is destined to sweep over this country and wake up this guilty nation. Then we shall know were the fault is, and if these dry bones can live! [Loud applause.]

The Government wishes to bring back the country to what it was before. This is possible; but what is to be gained by it? If we are fools enough to retain the cancer that is eating out our vitals, when we can safely extirpate it, who will pity us if we see our mistake when we are past recovery? [Hear, hear.] The abolitionists saw this day of tribulation and reign of terror long ago, and warned you of it; but you would not hear! You now say that it is their agitation, which has brought about this terrible civil war! That is to say, your friend sees a slow match set near a keg of gunpowder in your house, and timely warns you of the danger which he sees is inevitable; you despise his warning, and, after the explosion, say, if he had not told you of it, it would not have happened! [Loud applause.]

Now, when some leading men who hold with the policy of the President, and yet pretend to be liberal, argue, that while they are willing to admit that the slave has an undoubted right to his liberty, the master has an equal right to his property; that to liberate the slave would be to injure the master, and a greater good would be accomplished to the country in these times, by the loyal master's retaining his property, than by giving to the slave his liberty,—I do not understand it so. Slavery is treason against God, man and the nation. The master has no right to be a partner in a conspiracy which has shaken the very foundation of the Government. Even to apologise for it, while in open rebellion, is to aid and abet in treason. The master's right to his property in human flesh cannot be equal to the slave's right to his liberty. The former right is acquired, either by kidnapping, or unlawful purchase from kidnappers, or inheritance from kidnappers. The very claim invalidates itself. On the other hand, liberty is the inalienable right of every human being; and liberty can make no compromise with slavery. The goodness of slavery to the master can bear no relative comparison to the goodness of liberty to the slave. Liberty and slavery are contraries, and separated from each other as good from evil, light from darkness, heaven from hell. (Applause.) We trace effects to their cause. The evils brought upon the slave and the free colored man are traced to slavery. [illegible] doomed to slavery with its indescribable category of cruelty and wrongs —

> "Some times loaded with heavy chains,
> And flogged till the keen lash stains."

It may be an easy matter to apologize for slavery; but after applying the great test, —the Golden Rule,—of 'doing unto others as we would have them do unto us,' we must admit that no apology can be made for slavery. And of all the miserable miscreants who have attempted to apologize for, and extol, the happy condition of the slave, I have never seen one of them willing to take the place of one of these so-called 'happy creatures.' (Loud applause.)

To-day, when it is a military necessity, and when the safety of the country is dependent upon emancipation, our humane political philosophers are puzzled to know what would become of the slaves if they were emancipated! The idea seems to prevail that the poor things would suffer, if robbed of the glorious privileges that they now enjoy! If they could not be flogged, half starved, and worked to support in ease and luxury those who have never waived an opportunity to outrage and wrong them, they would pine away and die! Do you imagine that the negro can live outside of slavery? Of course, now, they can take care of themselves and their masters too; but if you give them their liberty, must they not suffer? (Laughter and applause.) Have you never been able to see through all this? Have you not observed that the location of this organ of sympathy is in the pocket of the slaveholder and the man who shares in the profits of slave labor? Of course you have; and pity those men who have lived upon their ill-gotten wealth. You know, if they do not have somebody to work for them, they must leave their gilded, salons, and take off their coats and roll up their sleeves, and take their chances among the live men of the world. This, you are aware, these respectable gentlemen will not do, for they have been so long accustomed to live by robbing and cheating the negro, that they are sworn never to work while they can live by plunder. [Applause.]

Can the slaves take care of themselves? What do you suppose becomes of the thousands who fly ragged and pennyless from the South every year, and scatter themselves throughout the free States of the North? Do they take care of themselves? I am neither ashamed nor afraid to meet this question. Assertions like this, long uncontradicted, seem to be admitted as established facts. I ask your attention for one moment to the fact that colored men at the North are shut out of almost every avenue to wealth, and yet, strange to say, the proportion of paupers is much less among us than you! (Hear, hear.) Are the beggars in the streets of Boston colored men? (Cries of 'No, no!') In Philadelphia, where there is a larger free colored population than is to be found in any other city in the free States, and where we are denied every social privilege, and are not even permitted to send our children to the schools we are taxed to support, or to ride in the city horse cars, yet even there we pay taxes enough to support our own poor, and have a balance of a few thousand in in our favor, which goes to support those 'poor whites' who 'can't take care of themselves.' (Laughter and loud applause.)

Many of those who advocate emancipation as a military necessity seem puzzled to know what is best to be done with the slave, if he is set at liberty. Colonization in Africa, Hayti, Florida and South America are favorite theories with many well-informed persons. This is really interesting! No wonder Europe does not sympathise with you. You are the only people, claiming to be civilized, who take away the rights of those whose color differs from your own. If you find that you cannot rob the negro of his labor and of himself, you will banish him! What a sublime idea! You are certainly a great people! What is your plea? Why, that the slaveholders will not permit us to live among them as freemen, and that the air of Northern latitudes is not good for us! Let me tell you, my friends, the slaveholders are not the men we dread! (Hear, hear.) They do not desire to have us removed. The Northern pro-slavery men have done the free people of color ten-fold more injury than the Southern slaveholders. (Hear, hear.) In the South, it simply a question of dollars and cents. The slaveholder cares no more for you than he does for me. They enslave their own children, and sell them, and they would as soon enslave white men as black men. The secret of the slaveholder's attachment to slavery is to be found in the dollar, and that he is determined to get without working for it. There is no prejudice against color among the slaveholders. Their social system and one million of mulattoes are facts which no arguments can demolish. (Applause.) If the slaves were emancipated, they would remain where they are. Black labor in the South is at a premium. The free man of color there has always had the preference over the white laborer. Many of you are aware that Southerners will do a favor for a free colored man, when they will not do it for a white man in the same condition in life. They believe in their institution because it supports them.

Those who say that the air of Northern latitudes is not good for us, that we cannot withstand the cold, and that white men cannot bear the heat, evince their ignorance of the physical capacity of both races. To say that black men cannot bear the cold, or white men the heat, is to assert that which is at variance with the truth. I do not deny that black men from hot countries suffer much from the cold when they come here. But a black man who comes from Cuba suffers no more from the cold than a white man from that country. A colored man born in Boston bears the cold quite as well as a white man who is born here. There has not been a greater proportion of deaths among the white men who have gone from the Northern States to the West Indies than with the colored men who have gone there from the same States. There has been a terrible mortality among the colored people from the North who have recently gone to Hayti. The people from all tropical countries suffer when they come here. Even those white men who come from higher European latitudes suffer from our unequal temperature. It is said that white men cannot bear the heat of the tropics. My answer to this is that they do bear it. I do not deny that God may have made the negro out of a little better material than he made the white man. (Laughter.) Perhaps he is physically his superior. I think you must admit that he has more fortitude. One thing we do know, and that is, white men don't like to work and earn their own bread, and will not, if the blacks will earn it for them. (Laughter.) In the Gulf States the average life of a field slave is from seven to eight years. Do you imagine that white men, if obliged to work, would die off faster than that? (Hear, hear.) You have been used to hearing but one side of this question. The lions have had no painters. (Hear.) When black men write and speak, you must expect to see both sides and the edges. (Laughter.) My experience is, that white men can bear the heat of the South, and we know that in the North they are firemen in our steamers, and in our factories and founderies, where they undergo a heat to be found no where in the tropics—subject also to the sudden alternations from heat to cold—a variation at this season of the year of from seventy-five to a hundred degrees; and yet they bear it, and no one thinks for a moment that the life of a white fireman on a steamer or in a factory is less than that of a colored man in the same situation. (Applause.)

I have no word to say against Liberia or Hayti. The people of those countries will compare favorably with those of other countries in a similar situation. The tropics are not favorable to activity and enterprise. The labor of the tropics has been chiefly forced labor. Those who have not been forced to labor have remained idle. Indeed, idleness is the child of the tropics. Black men in the South are without doubt almost as lazy as the white men there, and you would probably witness their aversion to labor as you do that of the whites, was it not that their labor is forced from them at the end of the cat-o-nine-tails and the muzzle of the musket. All men are lazy. No class of men would labor was it not for the necessity, and the reward that sweetens labor. But few men can withstand a torrid sun—all shrink from it; and in a hot day a man, whether black or white, goes as instinctively to the shade as a rat to the best cheese. (Laughter and applause.)

Other countries are held out as homes for us. Why is this? Why is it that the people from all other countries are invited to come here, and we are asked to go away? [Hear, hear.] Is it to make room for the refuse population of Europe? [Hear, hear.] Or why is it that the white people of this country desire to get rid of us? Does any one pretend to deny that this is our country? or that much of the wealth and prosperity found here is the result of the labor of our hands? or that our blood and bones have not crimsoned and whitened every battle-field from Maine to Louisiana? Why this desire to get rid of us? Can it be possible that because the nation has robbed us for nearly two and a half centuries, and finding that she can do it no longer and preserve her character among nations, now, out of hatred, wishes to banish, because she cannot continue to rob us? Or why is it? Be patient, and I will tell you. The free people of color have succeeded, in spite of every effort to crush them, and we are to-day a living refutation of that shameless assertion that we 'can't take care of ourselves,' in a state of freedom. Abject as our condition has been, our whole lives prove us superior to the influences that have been brought upon us to crush us. This could not have been said of your race when it was oppressed and enslaved! Another reason is, this nation has wronged us, and for this reason may hate us. [Hear, hear.] The spanish proverb is, 'Desde que te erre nunca bien te quise'—Since I have wronged you, I have never liked you. This is true not only of Spaniards and Americans, but of every other class of people. When a man wrongs another, he not only hates him, but tries to make others dislike him. Strange as this may appear, it is nevertheless painfully true. You may help a man during his lifetime, and you are a capital fellow; but your first refusal brings down his ire, and shows you his ingratitude. When he has got all he can from you, he has no further use for you. When the orange is squeezed, we throw it aside. [Laughter.] The black man is a good fellow while he is a slave, and toils for nothing, but the moment he claims his own flesh and blood and bones, he is a most obnoxious creature, and there is a proposition to get rid of him! He is happy while he remains a poor, degraded, ignorant slave, without even the right to his own offspring. While in this condition, the master can ride in the same carriage, sleep in the same bed, and nurse from the same bosom. But give this same slave the right to use his own legs, his hands, his body and his mind, and this happy and desirable creature is instantly transformed into a miserable and loathsome wretch, fit only to be colonized somewhere near the mountains of the moon, or eternally banished from the presence of all civilized beings. You must not lose sight of the fact that it is the emancipated slave and the free colored man whom it is proposed to remove—not the slave: this country and climate are perfectly adapted to negro slavery; it is the free black that the air is not good for! What an idea? A country good for slavery, and not good for freedom! This idea is monstrous, and unworthy of even the Fejee islanders. All the Emigration and Colonization Societies that have been formed, have been auxiliaries of the Slave Power, and established for this purpose, and the grand desire to make money out of our necessities. [Loud applause.]

It is true, a great many simple-minded people have been induced to go to Liberia and to Hayti, but, be assured, the more intelligent portion of the colored people will remain here; not because we prefer being oppressed here to being freemen in other countries, but we will remain because we believe our future prospects are better here than elsewhere, and because our experience has proved that the greater proportion of those who have left this country during the last thirty years have made their condition worse, and would have gladly returned if they could have done so. You may rest assured that we shall remain here—here, where we have withstood almost everything. Now, when our prospects begin to brighten, we are the more encouraged to stay, pay off the old score, and have are construction of things. There are those of us who believe that we have seen the star of our redemption rising in the east, and moving southward. [Applause.]

The government is now trying to untie the knot which it must cut. Here you perceive it is mistaken. The North is in error. She has suffered the South, like a wayward child, to do as she would, and now, when she would restrain her, she finds trouble. If you wish to prevent a pending evil, destroy the source at once. If the first sparks were quenched there would be no flame, for how can he kill who dares not be angry? or how can he be perjured who fears an oath? All public outrages of a destroying tendency and oppression are but childish sports let alone till they are ungovernable. The choking of the fountain is the surest way to cut off the source of the river. The Government has not had the courage to do this. Having sown the wind we are now reaping the whirlwind; but in the end I think it will be conceded by all, that we have gathered in a glorious harvest. [Loud applause.]

I do not regard this trying hour as a dark one. The war that has been waged on us for more than two centuries has opened our eyes and caused us to form alliances, so that instead of acting on the defensive, we are now prepared to attack the enemy. This is simply a change of tactics. I think I see the finger of God in all this. Yes, there is the hand writing on the wall: "I come not to bring peace but a sword Break every yoke and let the oppressed go free. I have heard the groans of my people, and am come down to deliver them!" [Loud and continued applause.]

At present it looks as though we were drifting into a foreign war; and if we do have one, slavery must go down with it. It is not the time for me now to discuss the relation of the black man to such a war.—Perhaps no one cares what we think, or how we feel on this subject. You think yourselves strong now. The wisest man and the strongest man is generally the most ignorant and the most feeble. Be not deceived. No man is so feeble that he cannot do you an injury! [Hear, hear.] If you should get into a difficulty of this kind, it would be to your interest that we should be your friends. You remember the lion had need of the mouse. [Applause.] You have spurned our offers, and disregarded our feelings, and on this account we have manifested but little interest in, and have been apparently indifferent observers of this contest; but appearances are deceitful—every man who snores is not asleep. [Applause.]

I believe the conduct of both the bond and the free has been exceedingly judicious. It is times like these that try men. It is storms and tempests that give reputation to pilots. If we have a foreign war the black man's services will be needed. Seventy-five thousand freemen capable of bearing arms, and three quarters of a million slaves, wild with the enthusiasm caused by the dawn of the glorious opportunity of being able to strike a genuine blow for freedom, will be a power that "white men will be bound to respect." [Applause.] Let the people of the United States do their duty, and treat us as the people of all other nations treat us—as men; if they will do this, our last drop of blood is ready to be sacrificed in defence of the liberties of this country. [Loud applause.] But if you continue to deny us our rights, and spurn our offers except as menials, colored men will be worse than fools to take up arms at all. [Hear, hear.] We will, stand by you, however, and wish you that success which you will not deserve. [Applause.]

This rebellion for slavery means something! Out of it emancipation must spring. I do not agree with those men who see no hope in this war. [Hear, hear.] There is nothing in it but hope. [Applause.] Our cause is onward. As it is with the sun, the clouds often obstruct his vision, but in the end we find there has been no standing still. [Applause.] It is true the Government is but little more anti-slavery now than it was in the beginning of the war; but while fighting for its own existence, it has been obliged to take slavery by the throat, and sooner or later MUST choke her to death. [Loud applause.] Jeff. Davis is to the slaveholders what Pharaoh was to the Egyptians, and Abraham Lincoln and his successor, John C. Fremont, [applause,] will be to us what Moses was to the Israelites. [Continued applause.] I may be mistaken, but I think the sequel will prove that I am correct. I have faith in God and gunpowder, and lead, [loud applause,] and believe we ought not to be discouraged. [Applause.] We have withstood the sixth trial, and in the seventh our courage must not falter. I thank God I have lived to see this great day when the nation is to be weighed in the balance, and I hope not fonnd wanting. [Applause.] This State and the National Government have treated us most shamefully, but as it is not the first time, I suppose we shall live through it. In the hour of danger we have not been found wanting. As the Government has not had the courage to receive the help that has been standing ready and waiting to assist her, we will now stand still, and see the salvation of our people. Applause.]

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 22, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

The Doctrine of Limits.

There is an argument in favor of the existence of an omnipotent being—God—that we do not remember to have seen fairly urged. We mean the argument which may be drawn from the finite capacity or limits of the human intellect. In the overweening pride of his intellect, in his boastful comparison of his mind with that of the savage man or the brute, our christian philosophers are apt to hold up the human capacity as capable of infinite development, as of a material so like the Divine Soul as to present a difference in degree only, not in kind. Man is regarded—especially the Anglo-Saxon man—as having relations not to his planet only, not to the solar system only, but to the universe—relations in which he holds a dominant position.

Hence we find, not only in the pulpit of the ranting preacher but also in the closet of the speculative christian philosopher, a sort of hail-fellow-well-met-style of speaking of the Deity, which shows a puffed up and extravagant view of their own grace and accomplishments rather than an adequate conception of Him who is the Almighty. These men, whose knees would feel shaky in the presence of a great earthly potentate, speak of and call upon God quite as freely as if He were their neighbor and equal.

In the earlier and cruder states of society, reverence for the Deity, growing out of a conception of his relative greatness and power, is more frequently seen. What is grander than the noble sentiment of the Psalmist—"When I consider the Heavens which thou hast made," &c.

We do not propose now to state this argument, but simply to give one of to-day's illustrations of it. At Washington, until within eighteen months, men of ordinary capacity were quite equal to the labor of "handling the government." At Washington to-day, we firmly believe it is beyond human capacity to do the same thing. And this should be remembered in mitigation of the shortcomings of the men in power. The sturdy intellect of General Scott was soon used up. The vigor and endurance of the young and iron-framed McClellan was overcome and shattered more badly than the authorities are willing to admit. A few weeks work and Secretary Stanton is smitten down as a felled ox. Lincoln, the wiry and enduring, is worn to a mere shadow of himself. Seward is a mere receptacle of snuff and—it has been found necessary to relieve him of one of his most important duties. If the rebellion lasts a year longer, Chase won't.

In other words, the management of three quarter of a million of soldiers for a year, scattered over a region of two thousand miles, exceeds the limits of one, two or three human minds of beyond the average capacity.

Let us compare this shortcoming intelligence with the August Power which through untold myriads of ages has created, endowed with life, and governed and regulated in perfect order, untold myriads of worlds all peopled with living and intelligent beings as great if not greater than the dwellers upon our planet. "What is man that Thou art mindful of him?"

The Event of The Week

In our city, was the able and eloquent lecture of Frederick Douglass at the Cooper Institute. The evening was fine, the audience about one thousand five hundred strong, and in full sympathy with the lecturer. Theodore Tilton, a competent judge, was heard to declare this lecture to be the best of the Anti-Slavery course delivered this winter in the same place. As black men, we sincerely thank Mr. Douglass for so bold and adequate a statement of our "say" at the present crisis.

It was a full and elaborate statement of our position and of the reasons which should urge the powers that be to treat the black men found in the South as men. At the same time there were bursts of eloquence, keen bits of sarcasm, and well told anecdotes which vividly brought to mind the Frederick, Douglass of former years.

No one seemed more delighted, nor to applaud more frequently, than Superintendent of Police Kennedy, who, if rumor tells truth, sat directly in front of the orator to restrain his extravagances, but who, on this occasion—for once't—was "taken" himself. The superintendent has improved since he tried to break up the colored war meeting in May.

The lecturer was introduced to the audience by Rev. H. H. Garnet, in a few happy remarks.

At an allusion by Mr. Douglass to Fremont the cheers of the multitude threatened an upheaval of the building.

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

HEAD QUARTERS, HOOKER'S DIVISION. near Budd's Ferry, Md.,
Feb. 13th, 1862.

MR. EDITOR:—Doctor Bell the Division surgeon died in camp, the 11th inst., of pleurisey. His remains were conveyed with military honors to Rum Point for transportation eastward. Of the biography of Dr. Bell I know nothing. Last October when Gen. Hooker was assigned to the command of this Division, the Doctor received the appointment of Division Surgeon. At the time of his promotion he was Surgeon of the 1st Massachusetts Regiment, and was with this Regiment at the battle of Bull's Run, and gained the highest encomiums for his courage and attention to the wounded in that remarkable contest. It is related that a wounded rebel was brought into the hospital to have his wound dressed, when supposing that the doctors animositie's were as great as his own, plaintively cried, "Dr. I am your enemy, I am your enemy!" The Dr. straitened himself to the fullest extent of his lengthy proportions, looked on to the bleeding rebel benignly, and answered: "You were my enemy, you are now my patient." He was a man of large and varied information and stood among the highest in his profession. No man in the Division had a larger influence or commanded more respect in it than Dr. Bell.

While I write, the news of the capture of Roanoke Island by Gen. Burnside and the defeat and capture of the rebels is going around the camps. Ten o'clock tattoo has already sounded—the soldiers are in a delirium of joyful excitement—the bands are playing the National Songs. It does one's heart good to hear the Massachusetts boys cheer

I would give the world if I could cheer, if my heart unclouded by the thoughts of my bondage would be free and buoyant and swell with patriotic fervor. I cannot, I will not cheer at the success of any man or nation that sanctions human bondage. Suppose Belzebub and Belial should engage in mortal combat, which victor would Gabriel cheer? Would he not turn from the combatants and pray to that God against whose people they have jointly warred, and whose laws they have mutually violated; that they, these personifications of disorder and ruin, perfidy, and deceit, might like wounded and envenomed serpents sting each other to death!

Since my last the officers referred to by young Barnes in his statement, have both resigned. The first named is one of the most despicable scoundrels that ever disgraced human kind; the other cannot read or write, yet he was commissioned as 1st Lieutenant in company I, 26th Regt., P. V. The first named was a companion of Walker's in Nicarauga, as was also Lieut. Col. Vandyke, which recommendation, however potent in its claims upon the Federal administration, will not insure to the possessor of it an entrance into the third Heavens.

Here is a little circumstance to which I would call special attention. It is well known that there are among the officer's of the Excelsior Brigade as grand villians as ever went unhung, but little did I think that even the clergy were tainted with corruption and meanness. Of the five Regiments composing this Brigade, there is one that has a Roman Catholic Priest as chaplain. I do not know the reverend father's cognomen. A fugitive slave entered the camp where this notable exercised spiritual jurisdiction—the slave, like a great many in this region, was also a Roman Catholic. Well, true to the practice of the religion, he went to confessional, and while there the Reverend villian wrung from the slave the fact that he had left his master, and also the name of the master and where he lived, made the slave promise that he would return, and sent a letter to the master instructing him to come and get his slave. The poor fellow, when telling this, by his manner and tone, revealed the conflict that was going on in his mind between his religous superstition and his sense of right and justice. I asked him "why did you confess to a thing that should have been kept secret in your own bosom?" "My dear sir," said he "I thought it was a sin to tell a lie." "Yes it is a sin," said I, "to tell a lie; but when you found that the truth would harm you, why did you not refuse to answer?" "We are not allowed to keep any thing secret." I asked: "do you think you would have violated the laws of God had you refused to answer the priest?" "No sir, no sir!" But when this poor fellow found that the priest was about to sacrifice him he made good his retreat and I have no doubt that he is now convinced that a clerical garb does not always cover a pure, honest or christian heart. It is one of the most difficult things in the world to find a christian negro in the South. They go to church, participate in the excitement of their grotesque religious gatherings. But they have no ideas of the sublime principles of christianity and its bearings on human actions. Of course the master does not permit the christain religion to be preached to his slaves. I will guarantee that the bulk of the slaves in the Southern States are infidels—they believe that their freedom is to come. This is universal. The christianity they are taught teaches that slavery is their natural lot and condition, and that obedience to the master is obedience to God. Their liberty is first and their religion second, and sooner or later they will show to the world another lesson. Religion, if its advocates would have it cover the earth as the waters of the great deep, must be so comprehensive, so pure and unsullied, that liberty and justice can become its hand-maids. It is hard to be a christian if we stop to look around us and note to what infamous depths the expositors and representatives of religion sink themselves. If we we could find the majority of them on the side of truth and right, we might pass their great derelictions of duty by and hope for better things in the future; but the majority to-day of clergymen, if they are not on the side of slavery, they are not on the side of freedom, and this sin of omission at this moment of peril is as deep and damning as though they were on the side of slavery. It is not a difficult matter to convince men that religion is a farce, but it is impossible to convince men that liberty is a chimera and not worth loving above all else known to rational beings.

General Hooker is again at his post. The rumor is floating around that a movement will take place some time next week. The rebels are evidently frightened, they are firing continually. Five sloops ran the blockade the other night, and although twenty-five or thirty shot were sent after them they passed unharmed.

I see that Mr. Edward M. Thomas is still at work encouraging art and artists amongst the Anglo-Africans. I have the honor of an acquaintance with several gentlemen in Philadelphia, possessed of artistic skill of no mean order. Mr. Wm. Dorsey, Mr. A. Burr, one of the descendants of Aaron Burr of U. S. history, and Mr. David B. Bowser. There are others not now in my minds eye who are struggling manfully to become proficient with the pencil. Mr. Dorsey is now revolving in his mind the project of joining a company of young men in a business trip to Africa. He thinks that original sketches of life and landscape in that interesting country would be rare and valuable. Indeed I had myself some notion, if I could raise the "wind," to join the party, but my dear sir I find the "wind" to be the hardest thing in the world to raise. G. E. S.

LETTER FROM REV. J. T. HOLLY.

Rev. Mr. Berry has kindly sent us for publication the following affecting letter from Mr. Holly:—

Drouillard, Haiti, Jan. 15th, '62.

REV. S. V. BERRY—REV. AND DEAR BROTHER: I write now to say that on Christmas morning last, at half-past 4 o'clock, my dear wife went into the world of departed spirits. She was accouched Sept. 26th, when a son, Joseph Geffrard, was born. She continued in child-bed until death. Disease—consumption of the bowels, growing out of a diarrhœa that nursing may produce. She had calculated to receive communion on Christmas day, saying that it was the anniversary of her last communion which she received at your hands. But before preperation could be made God took her to drink the wine with His Son Jesus Christ, now in His Heavenly Kingdom. She passed from the communion of the Church Militant to the Church Triumphant.

The day that the Church Catholic celebrated the birth of Jesus Christ in the natural world, she was born in the spiritual world. Her last audible prayer was, "Oh, sweet Lord Jesus, come quickly and take my poor soul out of this suffering world."

Dec. 31st inst., not quite one week after the death of his mother, Joseph Geffrard followed his mother into the spirit world.

I have now lain four of my family in their silent graves: 1st, my venerable mother; 2d, my little Cora; 3d, my dear wife; and 4th, my little son. From out of seven, 3 remain: myself, Faustin and Augustine; and here we shall remain until the time of our sacraficial offering. I am resolved to die here, in obedience to my highest convictions of duty, and my clearest intuitions of the Divine will. Haiti is dearer to me than ever, because here repose the ashes of those nearest and dearest to me. I covet the happiness of laying my ashes beside them. Here God has afflicted me terribly to assure me how much he loved me; and here, according to his word, he must yet bless me as a proof of that love. I will hang on to the horns of the altar and wrestle there with the energy of a Jacob until he does bless me.

Mr. Lloyd Harris arrived here two weeks since in good health; he is preparing to take his sister home; she is not well. They will sail in a week or so; their vessel may carry this letter. J. W. Duffin, of Geneva, has arrived at St. Marks. George Carey, of Dresden, is here.

Your brother in Christ,
J. T. HOLLY.

FUNERAL SERMON OF MR. PETER WILSON.

The Abyssinian Baptist Church last Sabbath was packed to its utmost capacity by our citizens, to hear a discourse upon the life and character of the above named gentleman who departed this life recently.

The Rev. Sampson White opened the meeting by reading a portion of the Scriptures, and the hymn commencing "Why should we start and fear to die;" after which he made a short prayer.

The hymn "When I can read my title clear" was then sung; after which the Pastor of the Church, the Rev. Wm. Spelman, taking for his text the 7th verse of the 22d chapter of Genesis, preached a discourse which was listened to by that vast assemblage with the deepest interest. After calling attention to the unbounded faith which Abraham had in the promises of God, as illustrated in the case of his son Isaac, he proceeded to show the faith possessed by the deceased in his last illness. Mr. Wilson was, for a few days, greatly concerned about the temporal and spiritual welfare of his family; his affection for them making him rather tenacious of life; but God, in a vision, giving to him a sight of his everlasting resting place beyond the waves of Jordon, he quickly arose far above all fear concerning them, well-knowing that He who had promised so much to the widow and the fatherless is faithful to perform His vows. The speaker said that it was not without a great struggle that he had given Brother Wilson up, so strong was his love for him because of the beauty of his christian character. The Reverend gentleman closed his sermon by a few earnest remarks to both church and congregation, inviting the former to a closer communion with God, and the latter to "seek Him while He may be found," and to "call upon Him while He is near." The Rev. Mr. White made a few remarks, and closed with a prayer; after which the pastor called upon Deacon Asa Francis to sing the hymn, commencing

> "O! my Preacher, will you help me, help me to > watch and pray,"

and ending with the words

> "When my poor body lies mould'ring in the clay
> My soul is marching home."

This hymn being a favorite one with the deceased, everybody was invited to join in singing.

At the conclusion of this hymn, which was grandly sung, the congregation was dismissed.

Now although the presence of that vast assemblage was a sufficient testimony to the character of the deceased, yet the writer cannot close this article without testifying to the loveliness of his example as a christian and a man. His acquaintance with the colored people of this city has been, and he believes is, equal to that of any other person in it, and yet he has never heard one word uttered derogatory to the christian character of the deceased.

LETTER FROM BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 18, 1862.

DEAR ANGLO: Since we last wrote, there has been so little news of any interest that we write now more for the sake of showing that you are not forgotten than to tell of any news.

The prevailing bad weather has kept us completely under a cloud for some time, in fact almost the whole of this year. We have some such programme as this, with slight variations: Monday, snow; Tuesday, hail; Wednesday, drizzle; Thursday, rain; Friday, fog; and Saturday, a hash of the weather of the preceding days. Fine weather for young ducks! but we poor sinful mortals do not appreciate it as we should. Our Sabbaths, however, are generally clear and beautiful, for which we are duly thankful. Some three weeks since we were present at a pleasant little affair which took place in Davis' Hall, adjoining Bethel Church, Saratoga street. The occasion was a presentation by the choir of said church to Mr. Benj. Murphy, who has been for the last ten years, we believe, the leader of that choir, and is beloved and respected by all. The presentation address was delivered by Mr. Joseph Wheeler, assistant leader, on behalf of the choir, and responded to by Mr. Jas. R. Frisby on behalf of Mr. Murphy. Both gentlemen acquitted themselves very creditably, and were followed in speeches by other members of the choir; after which refreshments in abundance were handed around to the members, and to the favored few who were so fortunate as to have received an invitation, of which number we happily chanced to be.

On Monday evening, 10th inst., Mrs. Maria W. Stewart, well-known in New York, gave an exhibition of the pupils attached to her school, at St. Thomas Church, Chesnut street; during the course of which, Mrs. S. gave an interesting account of her early life. We believe she has now left for Washington. On the following evening we listened with much pleasure to a debate of a (to us) somewhat unusual character, between Miss Adelia Davidge and Mr. R. B. Throckmorton, both members of the Baltimore Lyceum. Question:—Have women a right to learn and practice the art of public speaking? Miss D., affirmative; Mr. T., negative. After a sharp and interesting discussion, the judges rendered a decision in favor of the affirmative.

On the same evening, the Lone Star Lyceum held a public demonstration at Murray's Hall, Forrest street, of quite an interesting character, there being quite a display of literary talent participating of their own members, and from the Galbreath and Excelsior Lyceums. Should our weather ever conclude to settle again, we propose making a tour of the various Lyceums in our city, and will send a slight report of the same.

As you have already been informed how the Sharp street Bull has been "goring" among his people, we need not refer to that. Having made such use of his horns in tossing out Nickerson, we may next look for a display of the cloven foot.

Rev. A. W. Wayman, widely and favorably known by all, is having a protracted meeting at Bethel Church with encouraging success. He has also introduced a series of afternoon prayer meetings for relatives and friends. His heart and soul seem to be in the work, and may God reward him by the conversion of his own children.

Having now written a much longer letter than we thought to on commencing, and not wishing to weary you, we bid you adieu. MAJOR.

AMUSEMENTS.

ONE WEEK IN NEW YORK.

On Tuesday evening of last week the Rev. H. M. Wilson's church was crowded by our citizens to listen to an exhibition and concert given by the Sabbath School attached to the church.

The vocal music was conducted by Mr. Thos. Williams, the instrumental by Mr. Bogert, the speaking by Mr. Samuel Vanhorn.

The pianists, Misses Johnson and Williams acquitted themselves with much credit, and were greatly applauded, as were also many of the children, but the gems of the evening were the singing of Miss Cary and one of Mrs. Caudle's lectures as recited by Miss M. Day. These performances were received with tremendous applause.

The whole perfomance passed off with much spirit, affording much satisfaction to the assembly.

At the conclusion of these exercises, we repaired to the Great Contraband Festival at Continental Hall. The number of persons present could not have been less than four hundred. The charge for admission was 10 cents, and the refreshments, of which a very large quantity were sold, brought the very best prices, consequently there must have been quite a respectable amount realized from the affair.

On Thursday evening we attended,

THE REUNION OF PURITY LODGE, NO. 3 D. OF S. I O. OF G. S.

This exceedingly pleasant assemblage of the members and friends of this Lodge took place on the evening of the 13th, in the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms, Prince street. The hall was very tastefully decorated with evergreens and miniature American flags. The music was under the direction of Mr. A. Hardy, whose fine playing and splendid selection of polkas, waltzes, &c., enticed many into the mazy dance. The floor was under the management of Mr. James Jordon, and so quietly was his duties performed that it was sometime before we discovered to whom this department had been confided. As our female friends always desire to know how their sex appear on these occasions, we would say that the ladies were fashionably clad.

Madam V. of Cornelia st., wore white skirt and black velvet Zouave Jacket; Madam K——g of 10th st., blue plaid silk, very neatly trimmed; Madam W——e, bride, wore a stone colored silk, pointed through the centre with black velvet and lace, her head being wreathed with flowers; Mad. S—n of Elizabeth st., white Mull, very neat; Mad. E. B—n, Houston st., black Barege; Miss E. D——s of West Washington Place, blue silk, infant sleeves, black trimming; Madam R——y of Broadway, green silk; Madam A——s of West 26th st., Ottoman plaid, new style; Miss C. C——o of Varick st., black silk, with lace trimming. The petite Madam J——n of Green st., black crape; Madam D. D——s of Sullivan st., blue silk trimmed with velvet; Madam H——s of Nassau st., figured lawn and bertha, exceedingly beautiful; Madam E——s of Thompson st., black silk, very rich; Miss G. P——e, dotted Taalton, puffed to the waist: Madam C——h of Park st., Brocade silk, very costly. There was a large number of finely dressed ladies present, but the above names are all we can give at present. Every thing being conducted with the utmost decorum, the time while we were there passed off very pleasantly. At 2 o'clock A. M., we took our departure for where a committee of ladies had gotten up a Tea for the benefit of the Pastor, Rev. J. D. S. Hall. As they had made large promises we were quite anxious to see how they had performed them, and we were pleased to have the testimony of those who were there early that they kept their word. The speakers for the occassion were the Revs. Messrs. H. H. Garnet, R. H. Cain and the Pastor. The singing was executed by a select choir, led by Mr. N. R. Ashby, and Madam Ashmore. The tables formed three sides of a square, while in the centre a small one was prepared for the ministers and their wives. They were supplied with a lavish hand, the ladies sending to them hot biscuit, and home-made cake of the most delectable kind. Our eastern belles, believing this to be a recherche affair, prepared themselves accordingly, and a more elegantly dressed company we do not remember to have seen any where. The committee have great reason to congratulate themselves on the success of their entertainment.

BETHEL CHURCH,

A GREAT SURPRISE BY THE MEMBERS AND CONGREGATION OF SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH NEW YORK.

At 10 o'clock on Tuesday night, the 18th inst, one-hundred and twenty-five ladies and gentlemen of Shiloh church, greatly surprised the Rev. Henry Highland Garnet and his lady, at their residence in 174 West 30th street. At that late hour, when the Reverend gentleman was about to retire, after a hard day's work, he was startled by a serenade in front of his "Pilgrim's Cottage"—the serenaders singing "John Brown's body lies moldering in the grave," while his door-bell was snatched to the time of the popular song. On opening the door, the joyful crowd rushed in, and in a few minutes every room in the house was jammed, all the guests' laden with baskets, or bundles. Mrs. Garnet had retired, but the ladie's finding her chamber, took her from her bed, and by gentle force compelled her to comedown. Messrs. Henry Montgomery, Wm. L. Thompson, Samuel Hardy, and I. D. Johnson, acted as secretaries, and the guests began to unburden themselves of their donations, consisting of mutton, hams, sugar, tea, coffee, confectionaries, fruits, stationery &c, to the amount of one $100, and forty-two dollars in hard cash. Speeches were then made by Mr. G. H Hurd, Henry Montgomery, Wm. L. Thompson, and Deacon Stackhouse, and a splendid address by Elder Jacob Butler; and also an address by Mrs. Caldwell. All of the speeches were enthusiastically cheered. Little Isaac Thompson, son of Mr. Wm. L. Thompson, a child of six years, said: "silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I unto thee," and presented the pastor with a large and valuable bundle of stationery. Besides the congregation of Shiloh church, there were present representatives of all the churches in New York.

The excellent music was conducted by the SAINT AUGUSTINE SOCIETY.

After the conclusion of the speeches Mr. and Mrs. Garnet returned their grateful thanks, and the ladies then served a most abundant supply of choice refreshments, and left many baskets full of fragments. Every age, and section of the church was represented, and the sons and daughters of Shiloh solemnly pledged themselves to stand by their pastor and to hold up his hands. The company enjoyed themselves, and held the fort until 1 o'clock A. M, when they retreated.

ONE OF THEM.

THE HERALD COME TO GRIEF.—It was hard enough on the "Herald" to have two of its Washington Correspondents (one of them an editor) sent to prison in one week. But the coup de grace came the same week, with the announcement—long since prophesied by Gerrit Smith—that Slidell and Mason had offered Emancipation of slaves as a bid for European interference in the war. No wonder Bennett says, with tears in his eyes—

"This rebellion is falling to pieces. The 'old Union' will be restored, and Southern Slavery will be left to take its chances under the pressure of free labor and the non-intervention guarantees of the Constitution of the United States."

He might as well have added—

"Farewell the negro boot, and the big lies Which made loud braying virtue!" * *
"Old Bennett's occupation's gone."

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE NEW YORK DISTRICT.

Poughkeepsie, Feb. 11th, 1862.

MR. EDITOR.—Pursuant to a call of Rev. W. H. Bishops, Supt. of the Frst District, the members of the official Board of the M. E. Zion Church, of this city, met for the purpose of giving the Superintendant an account of the temporal and spiritual condition of the the church, which was satisfactory to him; after which the question was asked, whether the Annual Conference of this District could be held in this city. The question being fully discussed by the members, it was resolved, that notwithstanding we would be pleased to have the Conference here, and would do all we could to sustain it, yet, under the present circumstances, we think it would not be advisable, as we have just finished our new church and arranged the financial affairs of the same, which leaves us a large amount of money to raise and pay this year. So that we fear we could not be able to bear the additional burden of the conference upon us this year.

Signed in behalf of the official Board.

JACOB THOMAS, Elder in charge.
JOSEPH P. THOMHSON,
Hudson, N. Y.

AN APPEAL.—Rev. John G. Urling on his passage from Nova Scotia, where he had labored as a Missionary for twelve months, to his church and family in Demarara, was shipwrecked in the Gulf Stream on Saturday Jan 18th. He was taken off the wreck by the American ship Calhoun, Capt. Trueman, and brought to this city. As Mr. Urling is in distressed circumstances, and is anxious to proceed to his destination, we trust a christian public will respond to this appeal and help him on his way.

Rev. Messrs. Christopher Rush, Wm. H. Bishop, David Stevens, and H. H. Garnet have joined in recommending Mr. Urling to the sympathy and benevolence of our christian churches.

LETTER FROM J. W. DUFFIN, ESQ.

We have been permitted to make the following extract from a letter from Mr. Duffin to a clergyman in this city. Our readers will recollect that Mr. Duffin left this city last fall for Hayti. His letter is dated "St. Mark, Dec, 16th 1861."

"We have been here two months, have got our land and are at work on it. We brought four children wiih us and left the three oldest boys in the States. I am not prepared as yet to say that our coming to this country is a good move for things work hard. My wife is sick a bed, and is very much dissatisfied with the country. Every thing being so new and strange and not having anything as yet growing for ourselves, she cannot feel contented. I hope, however, for the best. Hayti is a delightful country, but to us emigrants it seems hard to get a start. I was in hopes that you were coming here and I wrote to you to that effect We want you here for we have not a strong leading man here, not one. The emigrants here do not compare with our men in the States. They seem to be second rate colored men, hence the Agents of the Government do not treat them as I think men ought to be treated. A few leading spirits could reform many abuses of the agents. If you were here, I would join you in building up one of our old fashioned churches. I would go with you but would not with any one else that I know of. * * *

We want the men for the times. Hayti has once had her 'hour and the man.' God now wants the man for the hour. The moral desolation that reigns here is enough to make the christein's heart ache. Crime of every kind stalks abroad at noon day, and no one seems to care for any of these things."

A NEW BARBARIAN STATE. — "The Evening Post," announces, under the head of "A new Free State," that the Western Virginia State Convention has adopted as an article of its Constitution the following:

"No slave nor free person of color shall hereafter come into this State for permanent residence."

As slaves seldom come into a State, this clause is of little or no force against such as may be brought into the State. The barbarous exclusion of free blacks should bring a curse on the State, and all who aid and abet it by miscalling it a "free State!"

DIED.

BONNETT, THOMPSON.—In this city on Wednesday morning, Feb. 19th, by the Rev. Henry Highland Garnet, Mr. David J. Bonnett of New Rochelle, and Miss Sarah E. Thompson of New York.

LEWIS.—In Brooklyn, L. I, of old age, Mrs. Rosanna Lewis, aged 99 years and 6 months.

Mrs. Lewis was born in this city, where she reared a large family of children, all of whom now living are highly respectable. She died in full possession of all her faculties, conversing freely until she gave up the ghost. She leaves four daughters, Mrs. Rosanna Williams, of Brooklyn, at whose house she died, Mrs. Rebecca Conner of New York, Mrs. Rachel Thompson wife of Rev. Wm. Thompson, of Boston, Mass., and Mrs. Virginia Hewlet, the wife of Prof. Hewlet, of Cambridge College, Mass. She also leaves two sons, Messrs James and Lewis Barnett, the former of whom has long conducted the business of a [illegible] in this city, and the latter is now an officer in the Siloam church, Brooklyn.

Special Notices.

GRAND RE-OPENING
OF THE
CHELSEA MUSICAL CLUB,

On Tuesday evening, Feb. 25th, 1862, at Continental Hall, cor. 34th st., and 8th avenue. Music under the direction of Prof. Jno. Douglas. Admittance 25 cents.

J. H. WESTBROOK, Pres.
M. A. EDWARDS, Sec.
JNO. E. JESSOP, Treas.
J. E. SEAMAN.

A GRAND CONCERT AND EXHIBITION.

Will be given by the Shiloh Church Sabbath School, on Tuesday evening, March 4th, 1862, at the church, cor. of Prince and Marion sts. The music will be conducted by Mr. Ezekial Dias, Chorister of the church.

Tickets 12 cents, children 5 cents.

Doors open at 6½, to commence at 7½.

ELYMUS REEVE, Superintendant.

A CARD.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Highland Garnet most gratefully acknowledge the receipt of One Hundred dollar's worth of groceries, and Forty-two dollars in money,—the amount presented to them at the Surprise Party given at their humble cottage by the ladies and gentlemen of Shiloh church and other friends, on Tuesday evening, the 18th inst. They also thankfully acknowledge the kind assurances which they received of the determination of their friends to sustain them and our beloved church.

HENRY HIGHLAND GARNET.
JULIA W. GARNET.
174 West 30th st.

Grand United Order of Odd Fellows.

The Officers, and Members of Philomathean Lodge, No. 646, Hamilton Lodge, No. 710, and Terry Lodge. No. 900, of the above Order, have the pleasure of announcing to their friends and the public, that they will give a

GRAND PROMENADE CONCERT AND FESTIVAL,

On Monday Evening, March 10, 1862,

In the City Assembly Rooms, 446 Broadway

The Celebration is in commemoration of the 29th Anniversary of the introduction of the Order in America.

The Committee design making this entertainment equal to the Great Crystal Palace Celebration of the Order, of 1856; and with this view have, at very great expense, secured for their guests the CITY ASSEMBLY ROOMS. The Grand Ball Room is too well known to need recommendation, it stands unapproached for size and beauty; the DANCING FLOOR surpasses anything of the kind on this continent. The other conveniences are in every respect ample and beautiful. Connected with the Ladies' Cloak and Dressing Rooms, (which will be attended free of charge (is a magnificent Ladies' Parlor, illuminated by Chandeliers.

A FULL BAND of music is engaged and will be under the direction of Professor Oton.

The SUPPER will be provided by, and be under the exclusive management of the Maitre de Cuisine of the City Assembly Rooms, and will be furnished at 50 cents extra.

Tickets of admission 75 cents. Supper 50 cents.

Tickets of Admission can be procured of either of the Committee, and parties are requested to secure their tickets before the evening of the Festival, as only a limited number of tickets will be for sale at the door.

Doors open at 8 o'clock. No postponement on account of weather.

PATRICK H. REASON
Chairman, 353 Bowery.
JAMES H. LEWIS.
Secretary, 207 Wooster.
WM C. H CURTIS,
Treasurer, 153 Thompson.

For further particulars see Circulars enclosed in this week's Anglo-African.

CLEAR THE TRACK!

The parents of a number of the children of New York and Brooklyn having kindly consented to permit them to sing for the benefit of the

WEEKLY ANGLO-AFRICAN

they will on

MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 3d 1862,

GIVE

A GRAND CONCERT

IN

SHILOH CHURCH,

corner of Prince and Marion sts.

It will be impossible to publish a programme of the Concert, so numerous will be the singers and the selections of music for the occasion, but we have the pleasure of announcing the appearance of the

PRIMARY DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SCHOOL, NO. 2, also youth from

PUBLIC SCHOOL, NO. 1,

and a young lady from

PUBLIC SCHOOL, NO. 7.,

Young ladies and gentlemen from

PROF. WILSON'S SCHOOL IN BROOKLYN

will also be present. A portion of the subscriber's own family will take part in the exercises.

PROF. WALDRON will preside at the piano and organ, and some of the songs and choruses to be sung, will be of the most patriotic and soul-stirring character.

Single Tickets 15 cents; Two Tickets for 25 cents; Children under 12 years of age 10 cents.

Doors open at 7 o'clock. Concert to commence at 8 o'clock precisely.

ROBERT HAMILTON, Conductor.

☞ No postponement on account of the wther.

The FIRST ANNUAL CONCERT
OF THE
ST. PHILIP'S SUNDAY SCHOOL,

Will be given on MONDAY EVENING, FEB. 24th, 1862,

At the ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,

In Mulberry street, between Bleecker and Houston,

The proceeds to be applied for the benefit of the Sunday School Library.

The school will be assisted by the following ladies and gentlemen:

Miss Rebecca Wake, Miss Kate Bowers, Miss Victoria Price, Pianists.

Messrs E. and H. Dias, Basso.

W. F. Sturgis, Conductor.

Doors open at 6½, to commence at 8 o'clock.

Tickets of admission 15 cts., children 10 cts. to be had of Miss Ursie Parker, 90 Wooster st. Miss Selina Jackson, 68 Sullivan st., Miss Clara Bruce, 50 Laurens st., Miss Roach, 87 Sullivan st., Mrs. Peters, 77 Laurens st., Mr. Curtis, 135 Thompson st., Mr. Guignon, Williamsburg, and at the door.

The piano is from the celebrated warerooms of Horace Waters, Broadway.

GRAND OVATION
AND
RE-UNION DEMONSTRATION AND TEA,

BY FOUNTAIN UNION LODGE,
No. 1, I. O. of G. S. and D. of S.

The officers and members of Fountain Union, beg leave to inform the public, that they intend to celebrate their Second Anniversary in Zion's Church, corner of Church and Leonard sts., on

THURSDAY EVENING,
Feb. 27th, 1862.

The following Lodges have been invited, and are expected to be present in full regalia:

Phenix Union, No. 3, Hudson, N. Y.; Progressive, No. 4, Williamsburgh, N. Y.; Rebecca, No. 5, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Crystal Fount, No. 6, Newark, N. J.; Fidelity, No. 1, D. of S., N. Y.; Unity, No. 2, D. of S., N. Y.; Purity, No. 3, D. of S., N. Y.; Harmony, No. 4, D. of S., Newark, N. J.; Fountain Union of New Haven, No. 7, New Haven, Conn.; Representatives of Perseverance Lodge, No. 1, G. S., of Bermuda; Grand Degree Lodge of the City of New York; R. W. G. Lodge, of the E. District of the I. O. of G. S. and D. of S.; R. W. N. G. Lodge of the I. O. G. S. and D. of S. [First Branch.]

The following gentlemen have been invited, and are expected to be present:

Revd's David Stevens, J. D. S. Hall, R. H. Cain, H. H. Garnet, James Hamilton, Moses Manning, Daniel P. Seaton; John Peterson, Esq., Wm. C. H. Curtis, P. H. Reason, Dr. Martin R. Delany; Rev. Wm. H. Bishop.

Also the following Lodges, Tabernacles and Associations have been invited, and are expected to be present in full Regalia:

Grand Tabernacle of the State of N. Y., B. and S. of Love and Charity; Past Grand Masters' Council of the Grand United Order of O. F.; Hamilton Lodge, No. 710, United Order of O. F.; Terry Lodge, No. 900, United Order of O. F.; Philomathean Lodge, No. 646, United Order of O. F.; Sheba's Court, No. 1, Ancient Order of Heroines of Jericho; The Benevolent Daughters of Conference of Zion's Church; The United Daughters of Conference of Zion's Church; The United Sons of Conference of Zion's Church; The United Daughters of Bethel Church; The Female Haytien Society of the City of New York; The Sons of Morgan; The Sons of Wesley. Charles R. Hornbeck, G. Marshal.

Immediately after the exercises are over, a Tea will be given in the basement, to which the Societies will proceed en masse.

Tickets to the Anniversary, 12 cents; Tea, 38 cents; to Anniversary and Tea, 38 cents.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS—Ellen Stevens, 48 Leonard street; Julia Holmes, 80 Nassau street; Mary L. Place, 95 Crosby street; H[illegible] Miller, 343 West 26th street; M[illegible] Williamsburgh; John D. B[illegible] Suffolk street; Page C. [illegible] street.

[illegible] may also be had of Julia Dove, 3[illegible] street; Susan Church, 105 Park street; Mary Hopkins, 343 West 26th st.; George W. Spriggs, 17th street; Pleasant R. Smith, Ludlow street; Abram Jarvis, [illegible] Williamsburgh; Abram [illegible] street, Williamsburgh; [illegible] Wooster street, [illegible]

Doors open at 7 o'clock; Exercises to commence at 8.

For order of exercises see circular.

GRAND BANQUET

And Masonic Demonstration, under the auspices of the Right Worshipful Grand Lodge for the State of New York, for the benefit of

THE WIDOWS AND ORPHANS' FUND.

The members of the Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, working under the jurisdiction of the R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, respectfully inform their friends and the public that they will give a Grand Banquet on the Evening of he 27th of February, 1862,

AT MOZART HALL, 663 BROADWAY.

The following Lodges will be present on the occasion in full Regalia:

Widow's Son, No 1. Celestial, No. 2. Meridian, No. 3. King Solomon, No. 4. Covenant, No. 7. Widow's Son, No. 10. Mount Olive, No. 11. Mount Calvary, No. 12. North Star, No. 14. Eureka, No. 15. Excelsior, No. 16. Jeptha, No. 17. Mount Moriah, No. 18. And Representations from Western Light, No. 6, Mount Nebo, No. 8, and Evening Star. No. 9. Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, will grace the evening by their presence.

Sheba's Court, No. 1, Ancient Order of Heroines of Jericho, is invited, and will be present on the occasion in full regalia.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14, Knights Templars of the City of New York, will be present by special invitation, and display that Magnificent Standard recently presented by Sheba's Court No. 1.

Grand Marshal, J. W. BROWN.

The Music will be under the direction of Prof. W. F. Sturges. The Supper will be in the hands of a competent Committee, who will pledge that they will spare neither labor nor expense in the perfection of their work.

TICKETS, (which are limited,) $1 Each.

And can be obtained at the following places:—Jacob Vanderbeck, 193 Church and 73 Thompson street; Henry Skinner, Leonard street; J. L. Hudson, No. 4 East Houston street: Francis Thompson, 41 Hicks street, Brooklyn; Charles E. and George F. Hodges, 51 Boerum street, E. Brooklyn; John Johnson, 128 West Fifteenth street; Charlotte Thompson, 55 President street, South Brooklyn; Spencer's Bowling Saloon, 154 Church street; W. S. Woddrop, Melrose, and at the door on the night of the Banquet.

SONG FOR THE TIMES.

Written to be sung at the Concert to be given by the children of New York and Brooklyn, March 3d, 1862, for the benefit of the "ANGLO AFRICAN."

John Brown's body lies moldering in the grave,
John Brown's body lies moldering in the grave,
John Brown's body lies moldering in the grave,
His soul is marching on!
O glory hallelujah!
O, glory hallelujah!
O, glory hallelujah!
His soul is marching on!

On a gibbet high Virginia hung him,
On a gibbet high Virginia hung him,
On a gibbet high Virginia hung him,
His soul went marching on.
O glory hallelujah, &c.

His life was offered to redeem the hapless slave,
His life was offered to redeem the hapless slave,
His life was offered to redeem the hapless slave,
But freedom is marching on.
O glory hallelujah, &c.

When to death the tyrants led him,
When to death the tyrants led him,
When to death the tyrants led him,
His soul was marching on.
O, glory hallelujah, &c.

See that lowly mother weeping,
See that lowly mother, weeping,
See that lowly mother weeping,
When he was marching on.
O, glory hallelujah, &c.
His soul was marching on.

Her child, though black, he gently kissing,
Her child, though black, he gently kissing,
Her child, though black, he gently kissing,
His great soul marching on.
O, glory hallelujah, &c.

Fearless the scaffold he ascended,
Fearless the scaffold he ascended,
Fearless the scaffold he ascended,
For his soul was marching on.
O, glory hallelujah, &c.

Kagi, Copeland, Leeman, we'll remember,
Thompson, Leary, Hazlett, we'll remember,
Stevens, Green, and Coppoc, we'll remember,
Their souls are marching on.
O, glory hallelujah, &c.

God, now in majesty descending,
Speaks! and captives lowly bending,
Know their manacles are rending,
And that freedom is marching on.
O, glory hallelujah, &c.

BOARDING AND LODGING, at No. 3 Jersey street, by Mrs. Brown, (widow of the late J. W. Brown) who begs the patronage of her friends and acquaintances.
29tf.

PLANE ST. SELECT SCHOOL.
195 PLANE ST., NEWARK, N. J.
MRS. HARRIET E. ROGERS, PRINCIPAL.

The branches taught are Reading, Writin Arithmetic. Grammar, Geography and History.

Plain Sewing. Ornamental Needlework, Worsted Embroidery and Fancy Knitting.

Piano Forte, Melodeon, and Vocal Music by Prof. John H. O'Fake.

A limited number of Misses between the ages of ten and fourteen may be boarded in the house on moderate terms. Healthy location, and a fine yard for exercise.

REFERENCES.
NEWARK, N.J.
Rev. E. J. Adams, Jefferson Ellis,
Adam Ray, Abram T. Cook.
BROOKLYN.
Rev. J. N. Gloucester.
NEW YORK.
Rev. H. M. Wilson, Rev. H. H. Garnet.

All letters may be addressed to Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, 194 Plane st. Newark N. J.
27 6t.

Elizabeth City, N. J. Feb. 8, 1862.

This is to certify that I heartily approve of the effort of Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers to establish a Select School for young misses. I have been acquainted with her for over twenty-five years, and am happy to recommend her and her enterprise to the patronage of the public in general.

DANIEL H. VANDERVEER,
Pastor of the 1st Colored Pres. Church, Eliz. City

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND
BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC at the shortest notice.
MR. GEORGE OTON,
PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Piner, 39 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 361 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St., and with G. Oton.
19tf

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,
REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.

New York—corner of Prince and Marion street near Broadway.

Hours of Worship:—

Prayer-meeting, 10½	A. M.
3	P. M.
7½	P. M.

Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock,
Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.
Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,
(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. WM. J. ALSTON, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1 2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 58 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—

10½	A. M.
3	P. M.
7½	P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn.
13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

REV. ELI N. HALL, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:

10½ o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7½ "	P. M.

10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7½ "	P. M.

12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—

3 o'clock,	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

LECTURE every Wednesday evening.

Rev. CHAS. H. THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7 "	P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. HALL, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. JOHN T. RAYMOND, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

AGENT FOR WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

TROY AGENCY.—Mr. Henry Barke, 35 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

"O LET MY PEOPLE GO," and "THE NEGRO BOATMAN'S SONG," may be had of Miss E. H. Case, No. 174 W. 30th st., New York. Price 2 cents per copy.

THE HORACE WATERS PIANOS,
MELODEONS, ALEXANDRE ORGANS,
and
T. Gilbert & Co's. Celebrated Æolian Pianos,

are the finest instruments for Parlors and Churches now in use. A large assortment can be seen at the new Warerooms 481 Broadway, between Grand and Broome streets, which will be sold at extremely low prices. Pianos and Melodeons from sundry makers, new and second hand, to let, and rent allowed if purchased, as per agreement. Monthly payments received for the same. Also, second-hand pianos at great bargains, prices from $25 to $100. Sheet Music, Music Books, and all kinds of Music merchandise at war prices. A Pianist in attendance will try new music.

HORACE WATERS, AGENT.

BOSTON HOUSE,
MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-house in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

MRS. ELIZA LEWIS' SALVE,
ANDERSON'S HAIR RESTORATIVE.
(New London,)
SPANISH OIL, (For the Hair,)
WHITE'S VEGETABLE EXTRACT,
BRANDRETH'S SUGAR COATED PILLS.
For Sale at the
Drug Store 55 West Broadway
tf-47

SOMETHING NEW.

The best washing preparation in the world No boiling, pounding or rubbing required, but all done in simple warm water. Full instructions concerning its use and manufacture sent by mail on receipt of 25 cents

Address
RUFUS STRICKNEY,
[illegible], Mass.
26 4t

N[illegible]
[illegible]
including "Contraband's [illegible]"
HORACE WATERS, [illegible]
24 6t.

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a [illegible] well-fitted Splendid and Stylish Suit at a Much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS. WILLIAMSBURG

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS

of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOYS' CLOTHING.

DON'T FORGET,
168 EWEN ST.,
Williamsburg.
9 1y.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET.
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T. L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.
First Premium for Misses and Children's
HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.
The Clergy supplied at a discount.
KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y. 19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E. 13th St., on door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS
Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 74 Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMODATE a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 1[illegible] Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate. 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tt

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTEN, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 SOUTH STREET, N.Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

HENRY G. LEASH,
HATS. CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS,
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM, STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) Respectfully announces that she has opened a first-class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

MRS E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.
3tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING

By MRS. MARY JOHNSON, [illegible] West 30th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies	$2,50
" " Gents,	3,00
Lodging per week,	75

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER
219 CENTRE STREET NEW YORK.

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,
In all its branches, such as
BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH GUARDS, [illegible] ETC.
Residence 130 [illegible] 3d and 4th Ave[illegible]

POCKET WATCH [illegible]
[illegible]

Correspondence of the N. Y. Tribune.

CONTRABANDS IN KANSAS.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD REGIMENT K. V.,
CAMP DEFIANCE, Jan. 21, 1862.

The reluctance with which our military authorities touch the institution of Slavery cannot, I think, result from any peculiar love they have for the thing itself, but from an apprehension that no satisfactory disposition can be made of the slaves when freed. Having had a hand in the delicate business of procuring homes and employment for some hundred of them in Kansas, comprising all ages and conditions, I propose, with your permission, to give the results of my experience to the readers of the "Tribune"

The Kansas Brigade had not been long in the field before it became evident to Gen. Lane and in fact to the whole army, that the slaves had a practical knowledge of the object and tendency of the war. Scarcely a day or a night passed that one or more did not come to our camp, or to the command when on the march. All received the kindest treatment, and were made to feel that they were among friends and at home. Most of them brought valuable information to our officers, either of the enemy, or of the state of affairs in the neighborhood they left As many as were needed as cooks, teamsters, servants, &c., were employed in camp, and paid wages such as were mutually agreed upon by the parties. The remainder were allowed to go into Kansas and find employment for themselves. These things commenced immediately after the Brigade took the field in August last, and they were encouraged by Gen. Lane, Col. Montgomery, Maj. Williams, and others, not only from motives of justice and humanity, but as being the best war policy that could be adopted.

It was found that the killing of a soldier in arms had not half the effect upon the realm of Secessia that the escaping of a slave had. The case was reasoned thus: If restoring to slaves their natural rights, especially when they are making honorable efforts to attain these, deals the heaviest blows upon this hydra-headed rebellion, and at the same time saves life, also much property from destruction, does not every consideration of justice, humanity, and expediency require that such policy be adopted? The war was begun by the rebels to sanction, fortify, and extend slavery. As soon as it is effectually made the engine for slavery's destruction, the rebels, unless blinded and maddened by judicial wrath, will lay down their arms.

Wherever the enemy could be found we fought him. When no such work was on hand some little attention was given to the cause of the war and to its removal. If the campaign was a success—if we met with no disgraces or disasters—if it has made Gen. Lane one of the most trusted and popular officers in the army, the whole may be attributed to the policy adopted.

When near the border these self-freedmen were leaving camp every day, to begin on the free soil of Kansas their new life in the world. How many thus left I have no means of knowing, but probably some hundreds. Loyal citizens were allowed to come freely into camp, and persuade, if they could, their slaves to return with them. This was frequently attempted, but in no case with success. Had not the rebels run off large gangs of slaves to Arkansas and to the other parts of the South, the number that fell into our hands would have been largely increased. On the march from Kansas City to Oseola hundreds came within our lines. While the brigade was within striking distance of a place of safety they were allowed to go on and take care of themselves. On our arrival at Oseola, or what was once Oseola, udwards of a hundred refugees were connected with the command, and all their troop were gathered together, and, under the protection of a suitable escort, they were sent to Kansas.

It was not till we reached Lamar, on our return from Springfield, that I had anything to do in particular with this business. At Lamar, our camp was pretty well thronged with all sorts, sizes, and ages of colored refugees. Gen. Lane issued an order to Chaplain Moore, Fisher, and Fisto, to take them in charge, togethor with their property, conduct them directly to Fort Scott, and furnish homes and employment for them in Kansas. They were also ordered to make for them the best disposition possible of their effects. Their property, of all kinds, constituted a respectable outfit. It was generally acquired as follows: Slaves, with horses, mules, oxen, wagons, carriages, &c., in charge, were sent by their masters into the brush for safe-keeping. The slaves had been taught that the army was made up of Jayhawkers, and that they either killed or sold all the slaves they could get hold of. Their minds were filled with a multitude of bugbear stories of this kind. But the game did not win. Large numbers would come out of the brush as soon as an opportunity was presented, and bring their entire charge into camp. Many single men have traveled thirty, forty, and fifty miles, mostly by night, before reaching our lines. When, therefore, we got ready to leave for Kansas, our means of transportation was almost equal to the demand. About 4 o'clock p. m. the train was ready and in line. After leaving in camp all that were needed as laborers, we counted as pilgrims to a land of freedom 216, and the train was about one mile in length.

I venture to say, that so large a caravan of the kind had never been seen before in this land of mixed slavery and freedom. Could old John Brown have left Virginia as we left Missouri, his great heart would have beat with all the strength and vitality of youth. As the chief command of the Black Brigade (as it is called) was given to the writer, he felt that the honor more properly belonged to parties now sleeping with the dead.

No escort was allowed us, and we had a journey of 40 miles to make through the enemy's country. We formed our train on Main street in the village of Lamar, and as we had with us a small wagon-load of condemned muskets which Col. Nugent was forwarding to Fort Scott, I distributed them among the men to be carried, at least till after dark, that the maddened lookers-on might not be too strongly tempted to pursue us. Not a gun was loaded, nor had we a cartridge; but that made no difference, as the enemy did not know it. The young and single men, all mounted and thus armed, formed our rear guard.

That night we made about 17 miles and encamped, fed our teams from the cornfield of a Secesh who was wounded in the battle at Carthage, took supper or breakfast, or both, at 1 o'clock, and a few slept. That was one of the most pleasant journeys I ever made. The moon was just entering upon its second quarter, which gave sufficient light; the night was warm for November, scarcely a breeze was stirring, and for miles not a sound could be heard except the noise of the wagons, the tramp of horses, and, occasionally, the voice of a teamster. The tinge of melancholy which all nature wore that night was favorable to reflection, and seemed to hush to stillness our entire motley train, which only added to the enjoyment of all.

After the moon had gone down the darkness was such that we could not safely travel, and as patiently as possible we waited for the first approach of light. Our teams had been in readiness for starting at least an hour when one of our most intelligent women said to me, fronting to the east, "See there, the day is breaking, those are streaks of light." Not being so familiar with that early hour, I said, "Are you sure of it." Her emphatic reply satisfied me, not only that she knew what she said, but that a lively fear of pursuit by the Secesh was at work in her mind. An advance was immediately ordered, and about 8 o'clock we crossed the line into Kansas. When informed that they were truly in Kansas—a land of freedom, where human beings can't be held as slaves, such shouting, hurrahing, as came from men, women, and children along the whole line one may not expect to hear twice in a lifetime. Three cheers for Jim Lane, "The Liberator," wound up the grand chorus. What a contrast does this scene present to that which would have been witnessed had these same persons been on their way to the slave pens of New Orleans!

That night we reached Fort Scott and were kindly received by our military authorities and the citizens generally. Next morning villagers—men and women, and farmers from the country came in to see us. One wanted a family to occupy a vacant house; one a girl to educate and train generally, to her liking; another a boy to dress like her own; another a good farm hand, &c., &c. As Fort Scott is near the border, we complied with these requests very sparingly. About 40, however, of our charge were left in this place. In parting with one we gave him or her a surname, took the age, the name of the man to whom the party formerly belonged, and a written pledge from the ward or guardian that he or she should be paid for services a sum agreed upon, and be used well. In this way the rest were scattered throughout the country between Fort Scott, Lawrence, and Topeka. No difficulty was experienced in finding homes and ready employment for every one All, however, desired to go to Lawrence, but former trains had supplied the demand in that place. Most of them parted from the train with reluctance. We could not persuade parents to part with their children in any case. Indeed, the feeling of nationality was a bond which it was hard to break. Our train was disposed of in less than a week, and a thousand could have been provided for as well.

This was in November, and since then I have had an opportunity of seeing or hearing from nearly every family and every person. The reports are quite uniform that they are industrious, steady in their habits, and doing well. In Lawrence, two churches have been organized, two Sabbath-Schools, and a day-school of about ninety scholars. From citizens, we hear but very little complaint. We have, in fact, received applications for large numbers of colored people that we had not the means of filling.

A NOBLE ACT.

MR. EDITOR.—I feel it was due to Mr. Grinnell, and to Mr. Miller, to have published this letter sometime since. But your burdened columns I was unwilling to further tax, until you could well spare the room.

Please then to insert, and let me add my testimony to Mr. Grinnell's exceedingly christian liberality, for he has not only done what has been attributed to him by Mr. Miller, but much more has been his public and private benefactions.

He interred this young man handsomely at his own expense. Mr. Miller's funeral took place, Dec. 21st, from Shiloh church—Mr. Grinnell and lady attending. And then as a further evidence of his genuine sympathy sent me ten dollars, and it was received and thanked for as such.

May the prayer of our esteemed friend, Mr. Miller, be realised in the future, of this honorable and publicly esteemed family, for their christian efforts in behalf of the poor and the outcast. J. N. G.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21st 1861.

REV. JAMES N. GLOUCESTER.—DEAR SIR:—I address you in regard to the death of Charles J. Miller, a native of Ulster County, State of N. Y. The event took place at the residence of Henry Grinnell, Esq., No. 17 Bond St., N. Y. city, on Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock; his age we understand was 32 years. I have been personally acquainted with him for seven years, and as far as I know and heard, he was an exemplary young man, kind and respectful in his manners. His employers, Mr. and Mrs. Grinnell, had the greatest confidence in him. When they left home for the summer, they would leave the house in his charge, which unusual confidence they felt was due to his integrity. He lived with Mr. Grinnell five years. His health had been on the decline for the past year, so much so as to require assistance in the performance of his duty. Mr. Grinnell would not discharge him or cast him on the cold charity of the world, (for he had no relatives) but rendered him all the assistance required as cheerfully as though he had been his own son. Too much praise cannot be given to that family—they have been to him the good Samaritan.

This is not the first act of kindness of this noble family, for it has long been their custom to visit those who were in need. Scarcely two years ago Mr. Grinnell had in his employment a man by the name of Simmons who died while bathing. All the assistance that could be rendered was given to save his life, and his loss was much regretted. Whenever Charles Miller was with his associates and in conversation, he would speak in the highest terms of his employers. He regarded the house of Mr. Grinnell as his home—his heart was there.

May the blessing of God rest with that noble family who in the hour of trial and affliction stood by him and administered every earthly comfort, and paid their respect to his memory on his burial. May their names be recorded on the Lamb's book of life.

"In as much as you did it unto the least of these, my little ones, you did it unto me."

JAMES P. MILLER.

INQUEST.—Yesterday afternoon, Justice Johnson, for Coronor Woodward, held an inquest in view of the body of John Hughes, colored, whose sudden death at the corner of New Jersey avenue and L street was mentioned in the Star yesterday. The verdict of the jury was that he came to his death by intemperance and exposure. He was the father of several idiot sons. The youngest of them, about eleven years of age, was alone with him when he died, but being an idiot he was not sworn, though his statement, unexpectedly was intelligent, and corroborated by circumstances. He said that his father died about 4 a. m., and he sat by his body till the day broke and then aroused the neighbors. One of the jurors inquired "Bobby, what did your father say before he died?" The poor idiot replied, "He got up on his knees and said, 'Oh, Lord, Bobby, I'm gone!' and fell right over and died." The family were in the most abject poverty, and not a spark of fire or bit of candle in the house.

—Washington Star, Jan. 25th.

A CENTURION and a QUARTER.—Ohio papers announce the death of a negro named Micajah Philips, at the great age of 125 years. He came to the West in 1796 with Herman Blennerhasset, as his slave, and continued with him till he fled. He was never freed. He came to Ohio soon after, and resided in Harmar some years. He afterward came to Watertown, where he resided for over 50 years. Micajah (Cajoe) was the slave of Colonel Borrel, of York, Gloucester County, Virginia. At the death of Col. Borrel he went to his son-in-law, the Rev. Mr. Fountain, with whom he lived at the time of the battle of Yorktown, and was then a waiter in the army. His descriptions of the battle were vivid and are presumed to be true. There are persons living who have known him for sixty years, who place his age at fully the above. His exact age is not recorded. Micajah could read and write, having been taught by Mrs. Blennerhasset, of whom he always spoke in high terms of respect. He belonged to the Baptist church, and preached to the colored population of Parkersburgh in early times. He ever sustained a fair, consistent character, and was respected by his neighbors.

AN INFAMOUS PROPOSITION FROWNED DOWN.

The bitter prejudice against the blacks which prevails throughout the Western States has just had a striking manifestation in Illinois, in the form of a resolution, started in the State Convention, to banish all negroes from the State. The discreditable proposition was put down by a vote of 21 ayes to 46 nays; but that, in the Convention which is preparing the fundamental law that shall be to all the world the embodiment and the index of the civilization of Illinois, twenty-one men—the representatives of two-sevenths of her people—should be found willing to record themselves as favoring a decree driving from her soil the members of a wronged race, in face of law, Christianity and common humanity, is a notable example of how powerfully prejudices interfere with men's sense of justice. The noble, free State of Illinois already stands under the dishonor of having a series of despotic black laws on her statute-book; but the proposition which the Convention had the sense of morality to frown down, is more tyrannical than any despotic excess for which Austria or Naples has been held up to the execration of mankind. The proposed expulsion of all free colored persons from the State is the more disgraceful in that it has its origin in no danger present or prospective, public or private, to be apprehended from the black population—for Illinois happily has no slaves whose good manners might be corrupted by the presence of free individuals of their own race. It is, in fact, simply the offshoot of the bitter prejudice against negroes common in the Western States, arising from various geographical, political and social causes. The vote negativing the proposed measure is sufficiently emphatic to inspire hopes that a more tolerant spirit will ere long prevail.—N. Y. Daily Times.

ANGLO-AFRICAN EXHIBITION OF INDUSTRY AND ART.

MR EDITOR.—Seeing a communication in your paper of this week from Mr. Edward M. Thomas, of Washington city, in reference to an Anglo-African Exhibition of Industry and Art, brings to mind a conversation I had with a gentleman of Worcester Mass., and another one of Boston, upon the same subject something over a year ago. I promised then to write to your paper the next week, but about that time your paper changed editors, and not favoring the change I did not send the communication. Our proposition was that this Exhibition should be held on the 1st of August, and we should invite all the negro race to contribute without any geographical limits.

The gentlemen to whom I allude were Mr. Brown, machinist, of Worcester, and Mr. E. M. Bannister of Boston, photographist, and portrait and landscape painter, both of whom would be valuable contributors. I am happy to see this project coming before the public, and instead of our feasting and speaking on that day, let us come up and show our artistic and mechanical industry. I hope we shall as ladies emulate our white sisters of this country in producing works of art and industry.

We could also have some of our talented speakers present every evening to give us words of encouragement. I remember some years ago the Rev. Daniel A. Payne had such an exhibition, on a small scale, in Baltimore, which was very successful. There is a great deal of talent in that city among our people. Mr. Payne told me that he had no idea of the talent among them until that exhibition; so also of other places. I would have specimens of music and poetry contributed.

Your paper has again become a welcome visitor to our family circle; long may it continue to grow and thrive.

QUADROON.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 8th, 1862.

LETTER FROM MONTROSE.

Montrose, Pa., Jan. 28th, 8162.

MR. EDITOR.—"The Sundays of man's life when threaded on a string, make bracelets to adorn the wife of the Eternal King." Thus said an old prosy writer a long time ago, and we endorse it when those Sundays are well spent, but if not they are Bull's Run failures. Last Sabbath, when the rosy light streamed across the grey old mountains, making them look, we fancied, like indignant puritans, we obeyed the summons of the sacred chime and wended our way to a humble little church in the valley, where the "meted out" ones worship God according to the dictates of our own consciences. We listened to a most eloquent and touching sermon by Rev. Albert L. Post. In these times when most white abolitionists are strong Union men, and stronger haters of England, it is really refreshing to find staunch friends, even though they be "like angel's visits few and far between," who will speak to us words, words of sympathy—I had almost added of cheer—but there is little to cheer the observer of the national horizon, darkened as it is by the midnight pall of slavery, lighted by not a single fleecy cloud through which gleams of future light may shine.

Mr. Post took as the foundation of his address these words, "It is impossible but that offences come, but woe unto him by whom they come." He made such a clear, apt application of his text to to the American history, that we felt as if the inspired words were meant for us. He spoke of the slave power as that which in a biblical sense had offended "God's little ones," and of this war as a fulfilment of the prophesied "woe" upon the offenders. He has been firmly convinced, he affirmed, ever since the beginning of the contest that either slavery or this nation would perish." He concluded with a most touching appeal to his "trodden down brethren" to remain faithfully trusting in God; assuring us that all things will work together for good for those who love the Lord."

Mr. Post is perhaps too well known as a speaker, and as one who "lifteth up his voice for the oppressed, for us to begin to describe his style. He is naturally a slightly built man, and his ill health and financial reverses have tended to make his appearance more delicate, even spiritual, which impressed his auditors that his words came from the heart, and went to other hearts.

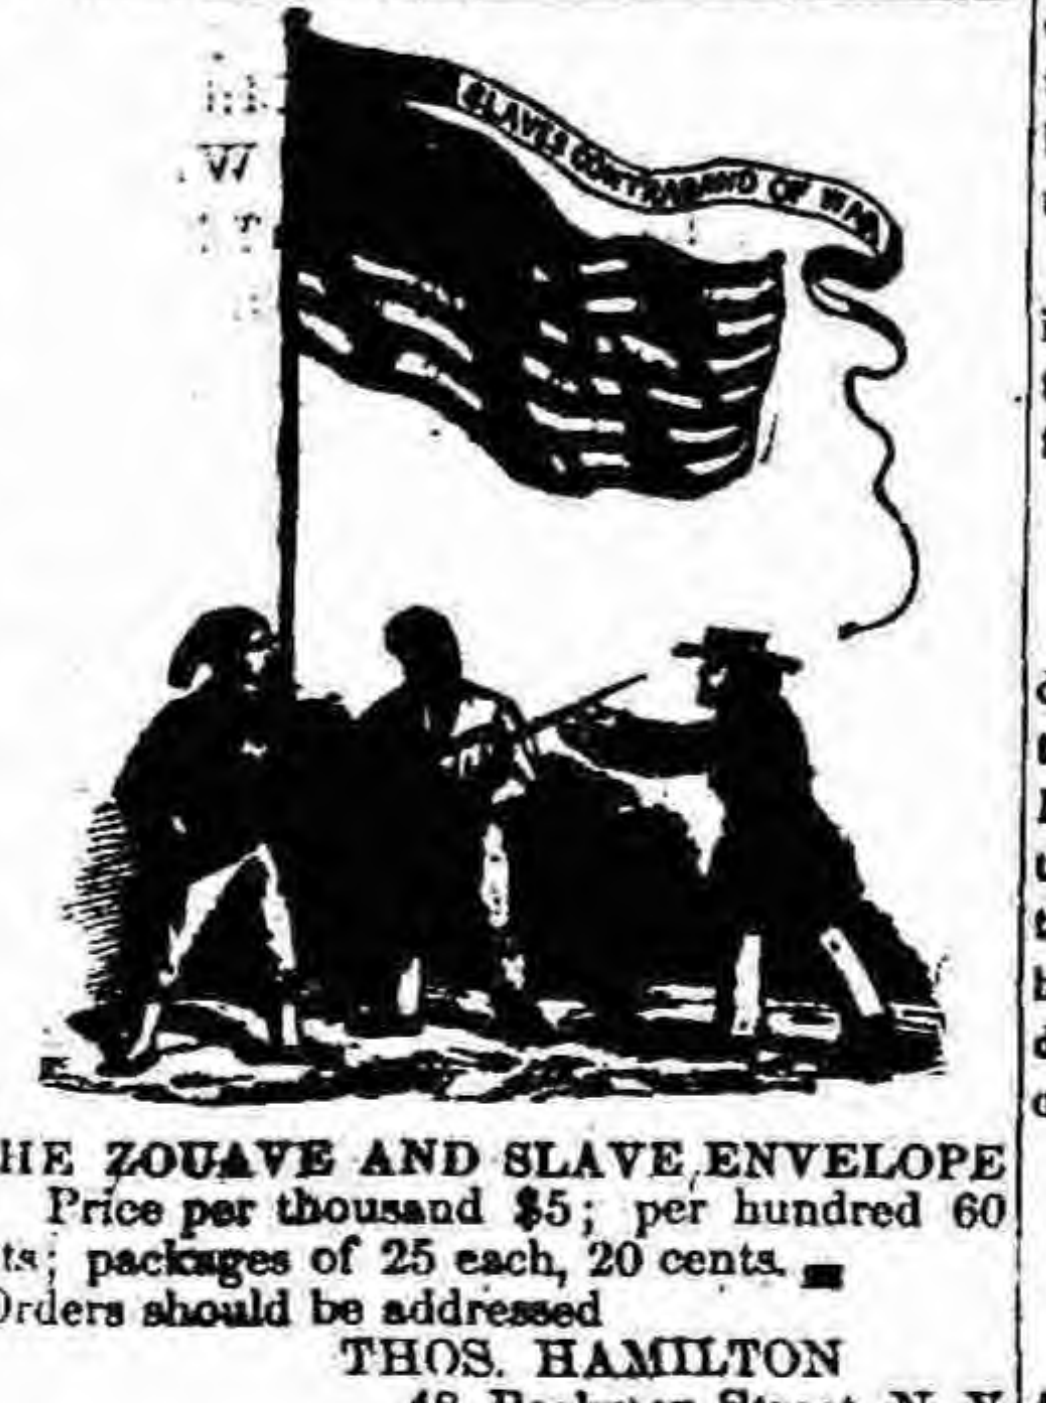
We have organized a debating society here, of which you may hear more "not a hundred years hence."

"JACKO."

"Is anybody waiting on you?" said a polite dry goods clerk to a pretty girl from the country. "Yes, sir," said the blushing girl; "that's my fellow outside. He wouldn't come in."

"Henrietta," said a landlord to his new girl, "when there's bad news from Washington, or any bad news, particularly private afflictions, always let the boarders know it before dinner. It may seem strange, Henrietta, but such little things make a great difference in eating in the course of a year."

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.

PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.

10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

THE
PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC,

Containing besides the Calendar and Copious Astronomical Statistics, a History of the Great Rebellion, Biographical Sketches of the Prominent Military Officers, a Dictionary of Military Terms, very full information relative to Military Matters of interest to the people at large, National Hymns, Incidents, Anecdotes, &c., &c.

Published and for sale by DEXTER & Co., 17 Spruce street. Newsboys and others wanted to make sales.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess or dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing; and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
THOS. R. CROCKER,
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol. D. W. INGERSOL,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 12th, 1855.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

JAMES EDWIN HALSEY,
193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Head ache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want and safe article.

ALBRO LYONS.
20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway; Mrs. Staat's, 78 Thompson St.; Chas. H. Ring's, 155 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

WM. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all; impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb hat grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Warranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equral in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangemen of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no il effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat o sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordiary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is erfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occasionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS:
Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS;
EMBELLISHMENT—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or he Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James McCune Smith.
Claude Brindas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Rober Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture—by Robert Gordon.
Is the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon.
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love
Poetry—Anony mous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James M. Cune Smith.
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J erce Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Horland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE. Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gordon Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs. M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. ell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo. 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen,
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

Th Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787-9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvery, annd the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 294 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 80 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorabas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 13 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe,
00 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pilan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 31 NEW YORK, MARCH 1, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENTS

The Weekly Anglo-African.

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY SATURDAY

BY ROBT. HAMILTON

NO 48 BEEKMAN STREET, N YORK

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery

RATES OF ADVERTISING

Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.

Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.

All communications for the paper must be addressed ROBT HAMILTON 48 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R DELANY

PART II.

> Hear the word:—who fight for freedom!
> Shout it in the battle van!
> Hope! for bleeding human nature!
> Christ the God, is Christ the Man!
>
> H. BEECHER STOWE

CHAPTER XXI.

THE CAPTIVES.

Next morning at the earliest dawn, when the song of animated nature, birds, reptiles and insects—which in Cuba generally enliven the night and cheer the spirits with varied tones of discordant harmony—gave way for the noise and clamor of the designing inhabitants of the port; among the first few who appeared on the quay was a mulatto gentleman.

There was nothing very remarkable about this, because were Cubans classified according to their complexion or race, three out of five of the inhabitants called white, would decidedly be claimed by the colored people, though there is a larger number much fairer than those classified and known in the register as colored. To this class belonged the gentleman in question.

Blake, regardless of the injunction of secrecy, had made known the mutinous spirit of the captives, which Placido managed to get into the hands of the hawkers and gossipers of news in Havana. The sales were delayed till late in the day, which brought a large number of human speculators, the design of which was to enhance the price by the competition on change.

To guard against all such contingencies, and prevent a recurrence of the scenes among them at sea, the most restless spirits among the captives were disposed of as soon as possible; the better to ensure which, a private sale had been effected, through a secret agent of Placido, affecting concern for the interest of the traders. But the poet still continued on the ground covertly depreciating the value of the slaves by the circulation of "postscripts" from the "press," giving full particulars of the mutiny at sea.

This reduced the captives to a minimum price, which placed them in the reach of small capitalists, for whom they were purchased by agents, who pretended themselves to be spectators. These agents were among the fairest of the quadroons, high in the esteem and confidence of their people, the entire cargo of captives through them going directly into black families or their friends.

The great scheme through this medium being much enhanced, though the mutiny was unsuccessful, with a cheerful heart and lively spirits, Placido with his choice two, Mendi and Abyssa, left Matanzas directly for Havana

CHAPTER XXII

THE SEELEYS.

Blake, from Matanzas, had gone directly to Havana, where to meet and greet his wife and little son, and the poet, his cousin, still concealing from his father's family his identity, all of whom gave him a hearty welcome

During his absence Placido had been busy, industriously disseminating the great principles implied in the silence, designed to be put in operation. Both tongue and pen in unison had been mutually engaged, eloquently impressing what the heart and mind conceived. Privately he whispered them in accents softly, meaningly, and continuingly. In poetry, he wrote them in sentiments of song, enigmatically, though comprehensively. These words, though softly and fearfully spoken—as if in thunder tones—were indelibly impressed on every heart, while the sentiments of song, like a lightning flash, ran through every mind the length and breadth of the Island.

The first care of Blake in his interview with the poet was the release of the captive Mendi, and Abyssa. Mendi was expected to be a powerful accession to their forces, as, being a native chief, he would meet with many of his race whose language he understood, and was thereby better suited to them than many others among them The mere slave, as such, was deficient in discipline, except that which unfitted him for self-reliance That was the curse which blighted his moral prospects, the blow which riveted upon him the links of an unyielding chain; the burden which, with mountain weight, pressed his mind to the earth, only to be thrown off by the force of an extraordinary self-exertion, verified the sentiment that—

> The day that makes a man a slave,
> Takes half his worth away

The Seeleys had returned from America, after faithfully discharging their trust, bringing with them Charles and Polly, little Joe Blake, and Tony. After his interview with Placido, taking his wife and child, Blake rode out to the residence of the Seeleys, situated some ten miles distant. Mr. Seeley had purchased a fine country seat called Homewood Grove, and entered in a lucrative shipping business in the city.

The shrubbery and grounds of the place were beautiful, affording ample residence for insects and birds The meeting and greeting also here were affecting, mutual tears being shed for each other, Polly fell upon her knees with outstretched arms to Blake, and Charles embracing Maggie, laughed and cried, while Tony alternately kissed little Joe and hugged his father around the legs. Nor was Madam Seeley a passive spectator to the touching scenes around her.

The little son of Blake on arrival was received and taken to his mother by Placido, the party who accompanied the Seeleys not having met them till then. Mr. Seeley on going out in the evening to his place, was not remiss in sympathy to the party; Charles, Polly, and the boy remaining with the Seeleys until duties required a change. Blake and family left the seat of Homewood Grove for their residence in Havana.

Tony was becoming a very useful boy as an aid to Madam Seeley, whose attention had been turned to animated nature; the securing of specimens for the cabinet, being the function assigned the boy. No naturalist was more assiduous than he, as far as his vocation extended; not a bird nor insect seeming to escape his notice, nor fail to receive his most earnest gaze; some of which underwent a much closer examination, by an almost unerring direction of a stone from his hand, or a crush under the weight of his great palmleaf hat.

The first day he started on his mission of research, two hours was the time assigned him, with the promise of reward for the faithful discharge of his duty. The time allotted him was now half an hour over due, but with the delinquency came Tony, who, as a proof of his claim to the reward and ample satisfaction for his tardiness, tumbled at the feet of Madam Seeley a hatfull of insects of every kind he met, and an orange sprig well strung with a variety of birds; many among them of the choicest warblers.

'Oh, cruel, cruel!' exclaimed Madam Seeley as the heap was placed at her feet; 'Tony, why did you do so? what made you kill so many? How did you manage to kill those beautiful birds—and oh! these lovely insects? Look, too, at the butterflies—poor little creatures!'

'Da was singin' an' did'n see me,' replied Tony, referring to the birds; 'an' I jis sneaked up an' popt 'em.'

'Oh, you cruel boy!' said the Madam.

'Oh, Miss Seeley, dat aint nothin' to kill a bird! an' dese bugs, I could jis' take an' mash 'em!' replied the boy, looking at the pile of insects, as though he was anxious to jump upon them with both feet.

Madam Seeley, as encouragement, admitted his dexterity and skill in the art of killing, when the boy sauntered away toward the pantry to refresh himself, being well satisfied with his reputation as a naturalist.

CAAPTER XXIII.

ANTICIPATION.

'Just in time Henry!' said Placido, as he entered the house of Junius Blacus the father of Henry, who had just come from Homewood Grove, taking him by the hand; 'I was fearful you would'nt get here!'

'Why Placido what is the anxiety?' enquired he.

'I will tell you—come aside—to-morrow is gala day, the celebration of the nativity of the Infanta Isabella, by a grand national Fete at the palace of the Captain General.'

'Thank God! Not only do the heavens, but the earth seems to declare his glory! How singularly He willed it, that I should return just at so auspicious a moment, to be with you in council Placido!'

'God wills what's best Henry!' said Placido.

'Then we would what God wills!' replied he.

'Let God's will be done then!' responded the poet.

'Can we not turn the day to our advantage Placido?'

'Certainly! there's wherein consists the importance of your return from sea at this time. Could we have had the appointment, it could not have been better suited.'

'Let us then get ready, the sooner, the better,' said Henry What have you done?

'Seeds have been planted in good ground, the hulls bursted, and kernels already sprouted!'

'Then but little time is required to mature the crop for the sickle of the reaper.'

'I hope much from to-morrow, suggested Placido.

'We must make much of to-morrow!' replied Blake.

'We can if we will!' added Placido.

'Then we will!' decisively concluded Blake.

'That's just what I desired to hear, cousin Henry I suppose I may now leave you, and repair to other quarters in the city, that they may be advised fully of the arrangements'

'Have you already made arrangements, cousin?'

'Certainly, did I not tell you?'

'Certainly, you did not! I was expecting to hear something of the kind, but was disappointed.'

'Pardon me General! I ——'

'Come, come, Placido! you should not deal in jests of that kind, the thing is too serious for merriment!' interrupted Blake as Placido was about to compliment him.

'I beg your pardon cousin Henry. I am not jesting, nor can I jest on such a subject, at such a time. And now let me inform you, that we have had our gatherings, held our councils, formed our legions, chosen our leaders, and made Henry Blake General-in-Chief of the army of emancipation of the oppressed men and women of Cuba!' explained Placido.

At the announcement, bracing his arms across his breast, dropping his head, looking down on the floor, Henry stood for some minutes, his wife who entered the room at the moment, throwing herself upon the poet's neck, weeping audibly

'I only wish I thought myself worthy and competent, but I much doubt my ability, cousin!' replied Blake with much depression of spirits.

'We have examined every point, and weighed the whole matter, cousin Henry Blake is the man!' rejoined Placido.

'In bondage again! Well I suppose those who are bound, especially when they seek it, must obey,' replied Blake.

'Indeed Henry, I would'nt undertake it, so I would'nt! I would leave that for cousin Placido or some other gentleman here to do. I'm sure you know nothing about such things!' advised Maggie, at which pressing his hand on her cheek, Placido laughed.

'Wife, I must in this, submit entirely to others,' said Blake

'I suppose then I may give up all hope of ever having you with me at all!' she replied with renewed sobs.

'Stop cousin!' admonished Placido; 'you must remember that there's a great difference between Frank's slaves and General Blake and wife. As the former, you were irresponsible, the latter responsible; that was a life of trouble and sorrow, this of care and pleasure. One shuns adventure, the other seeks it; the slave feels an issue, and the freeman makes it. A slave must have somebody to care for him; a freeman must care for himself and others. The position of a man carries his wife with him; so when he is degraded, she is also, because she cannot rise above his level; but when he is elevated, so is she also; hence, the wife of Henry the slave was Maggie the slave; but the wife of Mr. Henry Blake, will be Mrs. Maggie Blake; and the wife of General Blake, will be Mrs. General Blake. What objections have you to this cousin?'

'You must make every allowance for me cousin Placido, as I have net been long enough in the enjoyment of freedom to have considered these things but I do assure you, that I now understand and appreciate all that you say;' replied Maggie with a smile of gratification at the thought.

'Then cousin, grieve not!' solaced Placido, as he observed the tears stealing down her cheeks:' your husband is our leader, and as you see the Legions advancing, fear not, as you shall hear this song to comfort you, and encourage on the portentions Army of Emancipation:

> "Be patient in your misery, be meek in your despair,
> Be patient, oh be patient, suffer on, suffer on!
> We are all for freedom, we are all for feedom,
> We are for liberty and justice—
> And for freedom through the land!
> We have hatred dark and deep for the fetter and the thong,
> We bring light to prisoned spirits, for the captive wail a song;
> We are all for freedom, we are all for freedom,
> We're for liberty and justice,
> And for freedom through the land!
> We are coming, we are coming, and no league with tyrant man,
> Is emblazoned on our banner, while Jehovah leads the van!
> He is coming on to lead us,
> And he never means to leave us,
> Till he gains us our liberty,
> And freedom through the land!"

'God grant!' responded Maggie; 'that he may be equal to the task.'

'God grant it!' replied Henry.

'What is the policy among us to-morrow in assembling with the public?' enquired Blake.

'To assemble promiscuously among the whites, and segregate as usual in groups by accident.'

'That's the idea,' concluded Henry, who smiling explained it to his wife, who acknowledged that freedom developed many things she had never before thought of; when Placido hurriedly left them to send the tidings through the city.

CHAPTER XXIV

GALA DAY

This morning was ushered beautifully in, the West India sky being unusually clear, the morning star in its brilliancy adorning the cloudless horizon.

The evening before there was little rest, in consequence of the general noise, hum and din, by passing to and fro of the vehicles, and chatting of the busy people during the night. The hotels too were kept open for the accommodation of the officers of government, and the musicians from Moro Castle, and other bands of music, which from the porticos and corridors, almost incessantly assembled through the night, discoursed to the cheering crowds who continually in honor of the Infanta Sovereign of Spain.

The morning brought with it contemplated joy to the minds of the elevated, and sadness of heart to the crushed and oppressed people on the Island Business on such occassions is usually suspended, the soldiers parading with attracting display, are inspected and commanded by the Captain General in person, surrounded by a brilliant and haughty staff of cavaliers. Moro Castle was on this occasion proudly decorated with all the national colors: the Spanish Protective, merchantman, man-of-war, and Spanish flags. From the British and American flag-staff also waived their national pendants.

The Palace of the Captain General was richly decorated with many curious and highly ornamental designs, all having some allusion of historic or political import. The slaves throughout the Island were as is customary on such occasions, given a general holiday, and all within ten leagues of the city poured in from every direction, like the gathering of black and threatening clouds, necessary to a fearful storm; while the cannon from the castle roared in tones as thunder preceding a tempest.

Floating over the surface of the bay with liveliness and gaiety, were numerous pleasure boats kept in constant transit, and among the most exciting of the water pleasures was the regatta, when the quay was thronged with the multitude who bet and bantered various sums, much mony being lost and won. Sports of almost every description during the day occupied the attention of the people. In the courts, narrow alleys and byways, might have been seen squads of idle slaves, or trifling wayward creoles and Spaniards, playing at chicken-hazard, pitching quoits on bets, or betting silver at a toss. At many corners of the streets might have been seen crowds in the centre of which was a ring, surrounding a dog-fight on heavy bets The bull-fight too was in high requisition the day of this national fete.

The next amusement succeeding, was the sport of the chase, which consisted in training the bloodhounds exhibited on the parade ground. This sport is such that in the training the slave is sometimes caught and badly lacerated, which produces terror in the black spectators, theobject desi gned by the custom.

Never before had the African race been so united as on that occassion, the free negroes and mixed free people being in unison and sympathy with each other. During the sport of the chase, it was generally observed by the whites, that in the event of a slave being caught, instead of as formerly, indifference on the part of the blacks, or a shout from a portion of the free colored people present; there were gloomy countenances, sour angry, expressions and looks of revenge, with general murmuring, which plainly indicated if not a preconcerted action, at least a general understanding pertaining to that particular amusement. There was a greater tendency to segregation instead of a seeming desire to mingle as formerly among the whites, as masses of the negroes, mulattoes and quadroons, Indians* and even Chinamen, could be seen together, to all appearance absorbed in conversation on matters disconnected entirely from the occassion of the day.

The National Parade came next in order, being the only exhibition in which the African race took pleasure, they being desirious of winessing the display of the troops to learn something of the character of the soldiers that might be brought against them. Though not so exciting particularly to the blacks, this was the most grand and imposing scene of the day.

At the sound of the reveille, the troops assembled in military array presenting a formidable front, the field officers being richly dressed and elegantly mounted on splendid caparisoned, grand and dashing steeds. Here and there through the field they were flying, inspecting the lines without giving orders, intending it would seem to anticapate by intimidating the negroes from action. Now and again as though to show the blacks their chance of escape in an attempt at retreat, came an isolated soldier running at the best of speed, who had been loitering away his time in idle gossip, or in a booth regaling a whetted appetite, and thirst with ardent spirits.

In a short time after the reveille, every soldier was in his place, soon after which the salutes from Moro Castle caused every one to turn in the direction of the city. The Captain General and suit were now approaching, and the populace were frantic to get a sight of his Excellency. With pomp and splendor he entered the parade ground, amidst the deafening shouts of the multitude, his inspection and exercising of the troops consuming the time allotted for his stay.

The troops as an escort to the Governor, entered the city late in the afternoon, leaving his Excellency at the Government palace, the thousands who crowded the thorough fares dispersing in every direction, repairing to their homes early to return in the evening, many to gaze upon the splendid illumination by chandeliers of the interior of the residence, others to the Castle to witness a grand display of fireworks, and the various amusements and entertainments throughout Havana that night.

Of the thousands thus dispersing, various feelings existed. Some were merry, others sad—some joyful, others mad; some discouraged, others encouraged—some hopeful, others despairing. Among the disappointed should be considered the restless American part of the inhabitants known as 'patriots,' the sad and hopeful were the black and colored people who had determined to manage in future their own affairs; there were among this portion of the inhabitants those who determined that for the last time they had looked with passiveness upon the sad scene of training bloodhounds upon the living flesh of their kindred and sporting in luxury on the misfortunes of their race Whilst reflecting upon these scenes with a sad and heavy heart, they could only discern before them a dark and gloomy pathway, which but now and again was lighted up by the sudden outbursting of a concealed flame, deeply hidden in their breasts, flashing as they passed along But they had one encouragement—a faint, steady light away off in the distance—discernable through the obscurity of space—the Star of Hope—whose cheering rays had reached them, encouraging them onward in their slow but steady march.

To this end this portion of the population returning to their homes, prepared for an occasion quite different in its bearing to that which would call together the brilliant and imposing assemblage, soon to crowd the splendid apartments in the Palace of the Captain General.

CHAPTER XXV

NATIONAL FETE

The feature of attraction for the evening among the higher classes was the Palace of the Captain General, and while a selection from the elite were alone to be the guests, yet the avenue leading to, and the space in front of the mansion, were thronged by the common people who crowded the passes to get a peep at the rich costumes, and gaze in at the windows and doors of the brilliantly illuminated apartments.

At the hour of nine the company commenced to gather, when all that beauty and grandeur could effect, certainly was on the occasion accomplished; by ten o'clock the spacious apartments being crowded with an assemblage that might have graced the palace of an European monarch

The servants thronged not only their own, but lined the piazzas and walls around the dancing hall; and besides these, the visiting domestics about the palace were also numerous.

There was evident anxiety concerning absent guests, which seemed to be mutual through the assemblage; and the negro servants on this occasion appeared more than usually observing.

That day was seen on parade several fine looking mulatto officers, the confidants of the Captain General and incog. members of his staff; men upon whom he depended in the event of an outbreak of the American party in Cuba. Juan Montigo, Ferdinand Ricardo, Pedro Castina, Stephen Rivera, and the poet Placido were among the foremost of these persons. There were still others of the fairest complexion among the quadroons, who were classed as white, that faithfully adhered to the interests of the African race,* and were ready at any moment to join them. Of the delinquent guests at the Palace, besides the wives and female relatives of many of the gentlemen, there were other ladies expected who failed to appear, of whom may be named Madame Cordora and daughter; Madame Barbosa, and Madame Sebassian, educated, wealthy ladies.

Placido was Poet Laureate to His Excellency, and Pino Golina a black surgeon, the leading amateur musician, banjoist extraordinary, being the most accomplished banjoist and guitarist in the city.

In a group stood Count Alcora, the Captain General; Lady Charlotte, the Countess, and several foreign officials and their ladies, in close conversation. Presently a servant hastily entered, looked around the room in a meaning manner to others, then suddenly left. There being in this nothing to cause suspicion, as it might have been a summons to domestic duty, no particular attention was thereby elicited.

In the hall directly opposite this group stood the servant of an American, intently looking at the company; his wife, the maid servant to her mistress, standing at his side. A servant of the palace was observed to step up, tap him on the shoulder, and was off in an instant, the American servant following; when, after a short interview in the palace park with a concealed group of negroes, returned and took his wife from the room. At the head of this grave gathering stood the caterer of the police cuisane, Gofer Gondolier. This person was a black, who in boyhood had attended a Spanish grandee to Genoa, where during his stay, his principal recreation was aquatic sports on the gulf, the lad being his principal oarsman—hence the name of Gondolier. The Christian name of the lad was Godfrey, but by a singular corruption he was called Gofer—thence Gofer Gondolier became his fixed name. After a hasty counsel, the caterer returned to duty, and the rest of the servants to their places in the room.

Whilst the palace was the scene of life and gaiety, thronged with those in the highest enjoyment of their rights, free to go and come when and where they pleased, all fondly uniting in loyalty and deference to do homage to the sovereign demands of Spain, little dreaming of serious contingencies or trouble, there was at the same time, going on in another part of the city an affair, though if not so grand and potent, at least it may have been, equally as interesting, and in all probability much more portentious than the elevated assemblage at the seat of government of Count Alcora, the Captain General—the proud and hauty military Chief of Cuba.

---

*For many years the ucatan Indians taken in war by the Mexicans, were sold into Cuba as slaves.

* The term "African race" includes the mixed as well as the pure bloods.

Never judge altogether by appearances. The camel is a good-natured animal, though he has his back up pretty well.

For the Anglo-African

THE LESSON OF LIFE.

By J. H. B.

I have been looking at a small collection of flowers taken from the greenhouse; fresh from the nursery with their health and vigor perfect. They are beautiful to behold, with every little leaf symmetrically formed, and color that defies imitation. You are lost in admiration. You hesitate to touch their tender forms; admiration repels the thought—they are too frail, too pure and beautiful. You are happy and delighted to sit and dream in their beauty. I was delighted to sit admiring their beauty, and suck in their odor—yet they suggested even amid the pleasure, the "lesson of life."

The flowers have been carried away. I will no doubt see their beauty no more—no more! Is this not painful in itself? Does not the heart feel a sadness when we write? We are losing forever, and yet this is the "lesson of life." The flowers will soon fade; cold chills will steal through their arteries of life. The leaves will lose their beautiful symmetry and the bright pure color will fade away. This, too, is the "lesson of life." How true does the admiring heart compare its love, the object of its terrestrial adoration, to these beautiful flowers. Do we not see lovely woman, beautiful as the flower, as tender and pure, leave us in the same way? She blooms for her day, is plucked from her nursery, and carried away to fade and wither; and such is the "lesson of life." Oh what a lesson if learned! Should we not study it? The flowers are going, and I shall see them no more; a few hours and they will fade away; their little leaves droop, and their hearts, (if hearts they have) feel cold and strange. They have bloomed for their day, fulfilled their appointed lot, delighted our senses and left us the "lesson of life."

The flowers are gone, we are going too? They bloomed in purity and beauty, shall not we? They have faded and died in innocence, without fear—oh, shall not we also?

But we will see them again, when their leaves will be more perfect and their colors more bright. They will have learned the "lesson of life," and will fade and droop no more! We will then be home in celestial heaven, where we will be taught no more the "lesson of life," and will admire their beauty and even touch their leaves, for we will be alike, and glory in His wisdom who gave us to learn the "lesson of life."

LETTER FROM THE GULF OF MEXICO.

U. S. FLAG SHIP NIAGARA, OFF
SOUTH WEST PASS, MISSISSIPPI
RIVER, Monday, Feb. 3d 1862.

DEAR ANGLO:—We arrived here on Saturday afternoon, having left Ship Island Thursday night, stopping at Pass L'Outre and South East Pass. The U. S. steamer, Mereiditi, and Gunboat Winona, is blockading Pass L'Outre, and the Vincennes, South Pass. The French Corvette Lavoosire is at Pass L'Outre. The Vincennes has been quite unfortunate since her arrival on the blockade; her First Commander having disgracefully abandoned her at the memorable attack upon our fleet at the head of the Passes by the Ram Manassas, and Hollins fire ships. She has sustained, as well as the government and the Naval service, another loss that of her newly appointed Commander, Lieut. Samuel Marcy, of New York. He was wounded in an attempt to cut out a barque loaded with cotton, then lying in the Pass waiting an opportunity to run the blockade. Lieut. Marcy's wounds were of a very severe nature, having been struck by the gun, (a 12 pound boat howitzer) in its recoil, breaking his leg and otherwise injuring him internally. As a gentlemen, he was highly esteemed. In the service he was also almost universally known, and fewer men perhaps had a larger circle of friends. Since our cooperation with Fort Pickens in the bombardment of Forts McRae, Barrancas, and Warrington Navy yard, there has not been anything worthy of note. Very few contrabands make their appearance on board of any of the ships here, from the fact that the majority of them are carried far into the interior of the State. There are several however, on the prize steamer Lewis, where they are employed as firemen, oilers, &c. We have three on board that made their escape from Paseagoula in a small fishing-boat. They were two days getting to us, during which time they had nothing to eat. Their names are Edmund, William, and Alexander Capers. William and Alexander are much thought of by the officers of the ships. The former is a waiter for the Engineers steerage, and the latter for the ward room. Alexander is very intelligent, and often gives us a sketch of his life, when a slave, which in some points is quite interesting and amusing

Since our arrival here the Colorado has captured a very valuable prize The steamer Calhoun, in attempting to run the blockade, grounded. The officers and crew, after setting fire to her, abandoned her. A boats crew from the Colorado boarded her, and succeeded in extinguishing the fire. Her cargo consists of powder, jewelry, and dry goods. This same steamer was the flag-ship of Hollin's mosqueto fleet at the attack upon the Richmond, at the head of the Passes. How, or when she run the blockade we have not been able to ascertain, as all hands on board succeeded in making good their escape. Whilst I write there is a bark coming in with the United States flag at her fore, and the Spanish ensign at her peak, also a schooner with the U. S. Eusign at her main, and the rebel flag beneath it. The mail steamer leaves in a few moments. We leave this afternoon for Galveston, in the mean time, should any thing turn up, you shall be duly posted. G. W. S.

[We would be pleased to hear from this correspondent again. Ed.]

Statement of a Returned Emigrant to Hayti.

MR. EDITOR. I sailed on the 1st of May, 1861, from New Haven to Hayti with Mr. Holly's colony. We arrived at St. Marks on the 25th, and from there embarked for Port au Prince, reaching the Emigrant's House on the 27th. After remaining there five weeks we started for Drouillard, about three miles from Port au Prince. We had been there about five or six weeks, when our colony commenced suffering from the acclimating fever, which during the months of July and August reached its highest degree. The death of two or three persons within twenty-four or thirty-six hours was not an unusual occurrence. At one time there were only three males of the colony that were able to go about. Some may suppose that this suffering and death were the result of imprudence and exposure, but I will assure your readers that such was not the case. Many who emigrated to Hayti were persons of weak or sickly constitutions unable to withstand a tropical sun: beside, the water we were compelled to drink was very unclean. It was a common thing to see the Haytian women washing their clothes, men and boys bathing, and horses being washed, in the very stream that we drank from. This alone, was enough to create sickness, but we had in addition, during the aforesaid months, continual land breezes and constant rain. We were in contact with poisonous bushes, and were affected by the mineral substances of that tropical region. The manner in which the emigrants were made to live, also operated against us. The building that we occupied was about 300 or 400 feet long, and was made into apartments by canvass partitions running half way to the roof; it had no windows for ventilation. With this sugar house filled with sick persons and containing a large quantity of bilge water, you may judge whether their death was caused by exposure and imprudence or some other cause or causes.

It is true that some manifested great imprudence in venturing through the burning sun and eating fruit, but the number of such was small compared to that of those who died from the want of proper nourishments, care and attention: There were many of the emigrants too old to undergo the acclimating process, and many also who had heard so much of the island, that they left their homes with families and without means expecting to reap a great harvest, but on arriving there found that they had been deceived by lecturers who told them of great prospects to be realized in that distant country. I admit that the country is fine, rich, beautiful, but for all this I would say that I am not in favor of men going there who have passed the age of 36 or 38 years. I would not have women go there at all for reasons which I would prefer not giving in this communication. If men will emigrate I hope that they will be young men of means and possessing a good trade which they will find of great advantage to them.

In reference to President Geffrard I would say that he possesses a noble and generous character. All who come in contact with him, find him to be a gentleman in the strictest sense of the term. He has accomplished more for his country than any of his predecessors and the improvements made during his administration evinces that he loves his country better than he does his pocket.

In conclusion I would say that with all due respect for my reverend leader, I do not agree with his doctrine that we should be willing to sacrifice 400 out of every 1200 persons going to Hayti; neither do I wish them to die there that the soil may be enriched for the growth of cotton.

I would say to those who will emigrate, count well the cost before you start

JOHN C. SANCHEZ.

Fashion is the race of the rich to get away from the poor, who follow as fast as they can.

NEW YORK, MARCH 1, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

THE HANGING OF GORDON FOR MAN-STEALING.

The deliberate murderer of hundreds of his fellow men has met, in turn, with a violent death, and sleeps in a felon's grave. Had he manifested fortitude, courage, or even bravado in his last moments, the lesson of his life would have been less complete, and he would have found some of the sympathy which mankind are apt to accord to bold bad men in their extremity. But his life and the business of it had a fitting end. He lived a hired robber and assassin, he died a coward and a liar. The only parties who had any sympathy for him were they who had been his employers, they who had coined money out of his deeds of blood, who grew pale and terror stricken as his doom approached, and who in the endeavor to avert that doom poured forth from their strong boxes a stream of ill-gotten gold yet with the stamp of hell.

Had the public mind been less occupied with other events, it would have received a shock of surprise, to say the least, at the execution of Gordon. It would have felt, perhaps that the entire American people are not wholly guiltless of the crime for which he suffered. The American church too, and more especially that portion of it in which this pirate had been brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, would or at least, should have felt misgivings as to certain of its usages and ministrations. We are told that Gordon's mother yet lives in the State of Maine, an exemplary member of the Presbyterian church. Now do any accounts of his childhood or youth state that he was otherwise nurtured than are the children of evangellical parents in the New England States: his early prayers by his mother's knees, his Sunday School attendance were all gone through with, and his boy-hood listened to those doctrines, including the divinity wherewith Southern slavery is hedged about, where the hot blood and wayward impulses of youth carried him down to the sea in ships, and the sure and sudden gain of the slave-trade opened its golden opportunity, what barrier did his early religious culture raise up against it in his mind?

It was only by ranting abolitionists, the insidious meddlers with sacred rights guaranteed by the Constitution who had condemned slavery, what harm could there be in the slave-trade. His minister had told him over and over again that slavery was a blessing to the benighted Africans by bringing them under the happy influence of American christanity. Was not the slave-trade also a blessing? How could the means be accursed when the end was holy?

These were laws, to be sure, but they were a dead letter, and would never be enforced, because they were unjust inasmuch as they stood in the way of the African and his enlightenment. There were war-ships also on the coast, to prevent the slave-trade, the more merit in the daring cruiser who could outsail or elude them. As to the loss of life in the passage, why, did not the christian slave system decimate the slaves on the sugar plantations of Cuba and Louisiana? Did not christianity and the Constitution uphold these life-destroying plantations, why should they be hard upon the losses by his vessel for which also the ships of war and the governments which sent them to the coast of Africa were responsible?

We say therefore that the American church is responsible for the crime of Gordon. The church which in one and the same breath upholds slavery and condemns the slave-trade, is an active fomenter and encourager to the slave trade whose better logic can see no difference between the slave-trade in Africa and the slave-trade in Virginia. The doctrines of the American church, on this matter are thus set forth by Dr. Samuel Seabury, one of the ablest of our divines of the Episcopal church, in his essay on "American Slavery Justified by the Law of Nature:"

"But if the Constitution and laws of our common country are really founded, as I believe them to be, on the enduring principles of justice, liberty, and human rights; if they protect the limited slavery that is already established among us because it is consistent with these principles; and if they denounce the African slave-trade because it is a gross and wanton infraction of these principles, then indeed we may have faith in their permanance; for then the Constitution and laws of our Union are settled on foundations more durable than the everlasting hills; and all who live under them, North, South, East and West, may, as men, citizens and christians, unite as one man in their triumphant vindication and support.

"In all that I have advanced in defense of slavery, as it is established under the laws of our Southern States, I have regarded the slaves as men, made in the image of their Maker, and I have insisted on man's natural right to the use of his liberty, and on the injustice of depriving him of it by violence, and without some act* or acts of his own that involves a surrender of it. From this theory of slavery, it is manifestly impossible to draw any valid argument in favor of the violent seizure or purchase of native Africans with a view to their transportation, sale, and enslavement in other countries. The two things are utterly unlike; the one being, as I have endeavored to show, a fulfilment of the laws of nature, and the other being, as is plainly manifest, an unmitigated violation of those laws."—pp. 263—4."

Arch-bishop Hughes, better read than Dr. Seabury, in his letter to Dr. Brownson, affirms, "that the slaves shipped from Africa, were already enslaved before sold to the traders," and justifies the slave-trader on the African coast on grounds which logically follow Dr. Seabury's own views. If the teaching, the religious teaching of American youth are entrusted to men holding and avowing such doctrines, is not the American church responsible for the crime for which Gorden was hung?

But besides affixing the stigma where it belongs, there are other reflections growing out of this first effectual branding of the slave-trade as PIRACY. If infamy rightly attaches itself to the church for the commission of this crime, then merit should be awarded to those who have labored to secure condign punishment to the criminal. A few months ago we met accidentally a young man formerly a neighbor, now an assistant to the United States District Attorney. He had won his appointment by his eloquent and effective advocacy of the republican principles during the campaign of 1860. As he had not long since been married we congratulated him on that matter, but something else seemed to have entire possession of his mind: soon the case of Gordon came up and he fairly flashed out with earnest impetuosity, speaking of the hindrances which had been and might be put in the way of the prosecution, and he concluded with saying "we will and must have a verdict, and then, if the authorites interfere between him and just punishment, I will resign my office!" Such was the spirit which influenced the U. S. District Attorney himself, the U. S. Marshall and the entire prosecution. How it contrasts with the imbecile or guilty laugh with which the New York Diocesan convention welcomed or rather rejected John Jay's resolution about the slave-trade! These ministers of justice were infinitely truer to their abstract Goddess, than these ministers of Christ to the Living Jehovah! We do not know, and never will, the influences, the threats and the bribes brought to bear upon the prosecution, but we may form some faint idea of them from the fact that Governor Morgan was induced to blast what was left of his reputation by praying for a respite of Gordon on the very day of his execution.

The firmness of President Lincoln in this affair is the most solid indication of character he has yet manifested. Whatever, in the coming hours, he may do to put down slavery, it is enough for the present that he has planted his broad foot squarely down upon the slave-trade; he need not move that foot, but only heft it a little more, and slavery already pale and trembling and laboring under self-induced convulsion will be squelched out also. God give him the grace, and keep away Kentucky advisers from him. It has pleased God at this hour to take from his household one little one who was the light and life thereof. O may the same power grant him to see and feel and alleviate the multiplied agonies of the millions to whom slavery says "you have no rights—your children are mine!"

---

*One of these "acts" adduced by Dr. Seabury is the assumed contract made by a slave-baby just born, "that if his master will support him till he is big enough to work, he will work for master all his life time." This is the Doctor's own statement. God help him!

From the N. Y. Tribune.

AID FOR THE CONTRABANDS.

MEETING IN THE COOPER INSTITUTE.

The great hall of the Cooper Institute was densely filled last night by a gathering, the object of which was to inaugurate some measures for the benefit of the contrabands at Port Royal and Fortress Monroe.

The Hon. C. C. Leigh called the meeting to order at 8 o'clock. He said, on behalf of the Committee, that they had waited on the Mayor, who entered most cordially and sympathetically into the objects of the meeting as every generous man and woman could not but do, and he promised to be present and preside this evening. But late last night they received the following note from him:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, N. Y. Feb. 19, 1862.

C. C. LEIGH, Esq.—Dear Sir: As I shall be obliged to be absent from the city to-morrow (Thursday) evening, I will be unable to preside at the meeting then to take place.

Very truly, yours,

GEORGE OPDYKE.

But they had a gentleman with them who was familiar to New York, as well as to the nation and the world. He had the pleasure to introduce their beloved and honored and respected friend, Wm. Cullen Bryant. (Loud cheers.)

Mr. Bryant on taking the chair, said: I am sure that I share sincerely in the regret you must feel that our excellent Mayor has been prevented by an unavoidable engagement from presiding as was expected at this meeting, and that our philanthropic friend to whom you owe the erection of this hall is also prevented from presiding by indisposition, and that the committee called on me a little while since as a substitute. That, I hope, will not affect the object of the meeting. That object is to consider what we shall do for a multitude of blacks and colored people on the coast of South Carolina suddenly set free by the events of the war. (Applause.) The social structure, my friends, of which they formed a part, has been suddenly broken, and they find themselves in a condition to require our sympathy, our counsels, and our aid. Those, I am sure, will be freely given. A noble task is set before the lover of his kind to mold this mass of human beings, unformed and chaotic as yet, into a regular community, and impress upon it a character which shall call forth and cultivate and highten the better qualities of the African race. The story of their condition and their wants will be set before you by authentic witnesses. Before hearing them, the Rev. Mr. Sloane will offer a prayer.

The Rev. J. R. W. Sloane offered a prayer.

Letters from Gen. Sherman and Com. Dupont were read, indorsing Rev. Mr. French, and stating the great need of the work which he proposed to do.

The Rev. Mr. French then said that he first visited the contrabands at Fortress Monroe, who were much better cared for than those at Port Royal. There are now 10,000 ex-slaves within the lines of Gen. Sherman, and when Savannah was taken, which would be soon, there would be 10,000 more. The great mass of these 10,000 slaves were out on the plantations, living in cabins. With the agents of the Treasury Department, Prof. Lindsey and he went over some twenty plantations. Few of these cabins had more than one room. At one of these they asked for refreshments, and the generous old woman gave them a few sweet potatoes, and some hominy and meat, in three plates all of different sizes and colors. None of these people had more than one suit of clothing, and that was given them a year ago last Christmas. Those which had fled from the main land were still worse off. They had traveled so far through the bushes, hiding by day, that many of them had worn off their clothes, and could not appear. There was sickness among them. None of them could leave their plantation for a physician without a pass from headquarters, and a whole regiment of pickets were placed on Port Royal Island to keep them at home. At a meeting on Sunday a black man told him that there would be many more there but they could not come—they had not clothing. The reverend gentleman told an affecting story of a young woman who, in the Government house, where 300 women were kept, had given birth to a babe, which had died for lack of care and wamth. But he believed that cases of extreme suffering were rare. These people believed that the day of their deliverance had come. He saw a company of forty-eight who had been taken by their black driver in a flatboat from the main land, and rowing by night and landing and hiding in the woods by day. They were a picturesque sight as they met them, some six miles from the Government post. One little girl had her old master's hat on, one had three or four bedquilts on her head, two women had their babies in their arms. He asked the driver how he dare risk it. The answer was, "the Lord was our helper, and he 'sured us de time was come, and he'd take care of us." They had eaten nothing for a whole day. A little piece of a cracker he had given to one of them was immediately divided between two women, who were nursing their children. They had had an idea, in spite of the lies told them by their masters about the d—d Yankees, that we were all angels, and when they heard the profanity of our troops, and witnessed the terrible drunkenness of our army, and saw the frequent outrages upon their women, they were stupefied. It was said that the colored man could never be anything but a nigger. But now, in this new condition, they seemed to be reaching out after something more than they had been. Husbands were now hunting up wives, long ago sold from them, and they were finding them. So, too, parents were finding their children. Sacred sights he had seen of families long separated, and now reunited. If the Government thought of reconstruction, it would be one of the hard things to cut these knots; they would find God Almighty in the way. There was a disposition to learn. Dr. Peck had set up a school of 50 or 60 children, and they were smart children. At making cotton bags, at three cents each, the women employed by the Government earned 30 to 40 cents a day. The gentlemen who superintended that room held an evening school, and he himself had seen a class learn the whole alphabet in an evening. There was great need of aid. Our army had taken their corn and cattle. They needed clothing. Some asked, why do anything for these people; we do not know what their future status will be. He thought nothing better could be done to determine their futnae status than to feed, and clothe, and educate them. He was asked again, would it pay? He did not think that the Good Samaritan stopped to ask whether it would pay when he poured in the oil.

Prof. Lindsey was then introduced. He said that in their journey through these 20 plantations they did verily go to spy out the nakedness of the land. The condition in which they were was the best evidence of the disastrous effect of the system to which they had been subjected. But their answers were remarkably consistent and agreed very well on the aggregate with the statistics of the census. When they visited Dr. Peck's school he was astonished that he should defy the local law of the State of South Carolina. Dr. Peck had some assistants; he asked one of them if they ever thought that such a day as this would come. She answered, "Yes, if you could have seen the women cry when their children were sent away to Charleston to be sold, you would have thought so too," and she told him a very touching story of her own children. Those of the blacks who were employed by the General Government worked well; the others did not work at all now. The allowance of food, a peck of corn a week, was served out to them now as before. They received it cheerily. They asked them in one case to sing a song. They answered that they were church members, and did not sing songs, but they sung hymns. The Constitutional guardians of these people had abandoned them, and the commanding officers there looked to the philanthropy of the North to take care of them while they took care of the rebels. People might say, "I told you so; the negro can't take care of himself." Of course, he could not support his master and the army and himself too. The master had carried off the medicines, the army carried off the corn, the negro got but one cent a pound for putting the cotton in the bags. There was generous sympathy among the officers of the army and navy, but the problem was to be solved, as nearly all others were, in the city of New York.

Mr. Charles Gould read the following resolutions, and they were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That in view of the statements made this evening, it appears that the number of men, women and children recently in slavery, near Fortress Monroe and Port Royal, already amounts to about 15,000, and that a large portion of them, especially at Port Royal, are destitute of sufficient clothing and other necessaries; and in view of the facts set forth by General Sherman in General Orders of Feb. 6, that "the helpless condition of the blacks inhabiting the vast area in the occupation of the forces of this command calls for immediate action on the part of a highly-favored and philanthropic people," and that, "as the blacks are now in need of suitable clothing, if not other necessaries of life, which necessity will probably continue, and even increase," until a system of relief be organized under the authority of Government, "the benevolent and philanthropic of the land," to use the words of Gen. Sherman, "are most earnestly appealed to for assistance in relieving their immediate wants, as there never was a nobler or more fitting opportunity for the operation of that considerate and practical benevolence for which the Northern people have ever been distinguished."

Resolved, That a Committee of twelve citizens be appointed to make a special appeal for durable and cheap clothing, a fair proportion of the articles to be for women's and children's wear; also, for money to be expended for useful articles and for necessary expenses; that Joseph B. Collins, Esq., be requested to act as Treasurer of said Committee; and that, as Warehouse No. 320 Broadway has been offered for the reception of clothes, goods and other articles, the public be requested to send donations to that place.

Resolved, That it is earnestly desired that competent instructors be employed to teach the ex-slaves, both young and old, the common industrial and mechanical arts, the rudiments of education and the principles of Christianity, their accountability to the laws of both God and man, their relation to each other as social beings, and all that is necessary to render them competent to sustain themselves in social and industrial pursuits; and that the Committee to be chosen at this meeting be requested to ask permission of Government to co-operate with it in carrying out these wise and benevolent objects under the agency of discreet, upright, and faithful men.

Resolved, That the Committee above named be considered a National Committee, and that Committees, raised or to be raised in other cities and towns throughout the Free States, be invited to become auxiliaries to the Committee organized in New York, to correspond and co-operate with said Committee, and in all suitable ways to promote the important object in view by speedy and efficient action, and that the Committee have power to add to their number and to fill vacancies in their own body.

Resolved, That the thanks of this meeting be presented to the Societies, Churches, and individuals, that have interested themselves for the temporal and spiritual necessities of the ex-slaves at Fortress Monroe, Port Royal, and other places; also to the commanding officers, and other persons in the employment of Government, who have co-operated in carrying out these benevolent objects; and that the early and continued exertions of the "American Missionary Association," in sending missionaries, Sunday-School and week-day teachers, with suitable school books, &c., and large supplies of clothing, to the "contrabands," merit the approbation and support of the Christian community.

Mr. Richard Warren nominated the following gentlemen as the Committee called for in the resolutions, and the nomination was indorsed by the meeting:

Rev. S. H. Tyng, Chas. Gould, C. C. Leigh, Francis George Shaw, J. W. Edwards, Edgar Ketchum, Wm. Allen Butler, George Cabot Ward, William Cullen Bryant, B. C. Wandell, Rev. Mansfield French, Jos. B. Collins.

The Rev. Mr. French announced that the Secretary of the Treasury had made arrangements for a free passage of teachers and missionaries, and ladies who should go to superintend the distribution of the clothing; they would receive free passage there and back, and subsistence while there. They hoped to get the expedition ready within a few days. The Government agent, Mr. Pierce, was authorised to purchase plows and seed, and so put in the crop for the present year, and while this was done, the good work of civilizing these poor people should be going on.

The Rev. Dr. Bellows thought that we ought to deal with the negro as a man, and this should guide us through the difficulties and intricacies which seemed to perplex the negro question. Were these slaves white instead of black, and had they been living under the circumstances under which they had been living, we should have the same difficulties. They were like us less than a quarter of an inch down. The Government perhaps were anxious to evade this question, in order that they might not in any way recognize Slavery, even in ending it. He had in his hand a bill by Senator Foster which provided for the employment of the slaves on the plantations which their masters had left. It was a sneaking doctrine that the black man could not take care of himself. He honored Fred. Douglass for saying that the black man asked only to be let alone. He himself had lived in the South, and he knew that some of the best geniuses and best care-takers he had ever known were black men. Some of them took care of very large plantations. We must not suppose that they required very much care. If this Society would direct and guide these people for three months, as soon as they began to earn money, and trade was opened with the North, they would take care of themselves and build houses, and some of them would become well to do in the world. The simplest way to solve the matter was to plant ourselves on the principles of truth and rectitude. The exercise of justice and righteousness was the easiest thing to do in the world. Instead of speculating and doubting whether it was best or expedient to do what was right, let us do what was right, and trust the result with God. It was of the utmost importance that the 200,000 acres which we had now in our possession of the best cotton land on the globe should be cultivated. Give the negroes the natural stimulus and motive of being sure to eat the bread they earn, and that would settle the matter. Dr. Bellows concluded by reading a petition calling upon Congress to take immediate measures to secure the working of the agricultural lands which our arms have taken.

The Rev. Dr. Tyng was then introduced. He said that whether the blood of the negro came from Ham or from Japhet, he did not care; they all came from Noah. They were our black fellow-citizens immortal persons, made to live with God forever it they served him right. He did not know whether he was an Abolitionist or not, but he was an out-and-out defender of human rights. The earthquake which had come upon the South had made master and slave equal. You could more easily put a chicken back into the egg-shell than all the nabobs of South Carolina could catch one of these black men and force him back into Slavery. The question was, what should we do with these men? What did we do with our Irish fellow citizens, with our German fellow-citizens? We helped them when they needed it, and that was not often. And he thought the less help they could get along with the better. But all the suffering which was brought upon these suffering friends of the Goverment resulted from the Government having taken away the corn which they had raised. If we gave them half a chance, they would take care of themselves. Dr. Tyng concluded by reading the poem of Whittier in the Atlantic, which contains the song of the Contrabands. It was received with great applause. He said it was impossible to stem the avalanche of emancipation which was sweeping down from the Potomac and the Ohio to the Gulf. Let us no longer call them contrabands, call them freemen. [Loud applause.]

The meeting then, at 10 1-4 o'clock P. M., adjourned.

Personal.

The African Roscius, Ira Aldridge, K. S., has just finished an engagement at Odessa, where he played King Lear and other of Shakespeare's drama with an extraordinary success, and amidst showers of bouquets and articles of still more value.

Rev. J. Sella Martin reached this city on Saturday, Feb. 15, in the steamer Asia, from a short but successful tour through England. We had the pleasure of an interview with him, at which he informed us that he had addressed large and intelligent audiences, to the number of forty-seven, during his brief sojourn in aforesaid country. Mr. Martin remained here only a few hours, leaving for Boston in the afternoon of the same day. On the following Monday evening he was greeted by a large reception meeting at his church in Joy street, where interesting exercises were had. The Boston 'Traveller' says that Mr. Martin accomplished more for the Union cause in England than any white American.

The eloquent Wm. J. Watkins, in a circular to his friends and the friends of Haytian emigration, startles us with a declaration of his intention to leave this country. He says: "I propose to go to Hayti with my family in the early part of May next. It is my desire to go at that time as the leader of a colony of men and women of the right stamp." Before friend Watkins finishes the sentence, however, he gives us an opportunity to breathe freer by adding, "remain some six weeks in the Republic, and after visiting the various points of interest, return, God willing, to this country, and give the people who desire to hear the result of my experience and observation." Will Mr. W. promise to bring back the colony with him?

Dr. M. R. Delany is now on a lecturing tonr through New England. The 'Springfield Republican' of Feb. 19th, says:

"Dr. Delany's second lecture, delivered at the First church, Tuesday evening, was well attended, and afforded many new and valuable facts relative to the 'susceptibility of the African race to the highest civilization.' A vote of thanks was passed, on motion of Rev. Dr. Ide, and the speaker was invited to deliver at an early period, his lecture on the commercial relations and prospects of Africa. He is original, polished, and completely master of his subject, from extensive travel in interior Africa. His labors in behalf of the African civilization society, with those of Rev. Mr. Constantine, the secretary, are calculated to shed much light on the questions so vital to our Union, touching the lot of the 'contrabands.'"

Mr. Wm. Johnson, of Rhinebeck, and troupe are give concerts in the river towns. Of a recent concert in Poughkeepsie, the 'Telegraph' of that place says:

"Mr. Wm. Johnson and his vocal company, including three female voices, entertained a limited audience at the Universalist Church on Wednesday evening. It was one of the best Concerts we have listened to for a long time, and deserved a large audience. The misfortune of this company seems to be that they belong to the colored race. They had a right to suppose, even if their songs had been far less meritorious, that the professed sympathy for the colored people, in this latitude, would have drawn out some expression of interest. A 'burnt cork' troupe with their mountebank antics and stale jokes, find no difficulty in creating a paying sensation, while a respectable and intelligent party, to the color born, possessing good musical talent, are left to sing to an audience of less than a dozen white attendants.

"We are not informed what the future intentions of Mr. Johnson and his company are, in the Concert line, but wherever they do put out a card for that purpose, we can assure the community they will have a real satisfaction in listening to their well-timed, well selected and harmonious songs."

Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, we learn from the "Christian Recorder," delivered the fifth of the course of lectures, at the Institute of Colored Youths, on the evening of the 13th ult. We would be pleased to learn that an invitation had been sent to Mrs. D. to give one or more lectures in this city during the Spring.

Rev. Jeremiah Asher, pastor of the Shiloh Baptist Church in Philadelphia, is about to publish his autobiography.

[illegible]ETTER FROM [illegible]N.

BORDENTOWN, N. J., Feb. 25, [illegible]62.

MR. EDITOR: Knowing [illegible] feel a deep interest in anything [illegible] to the welfare of our abused race, I send you this little missive. In order to elevate ourselves, it is extremely necessary that we should lay a firm foundation, and to do this what better way could we choose than by social intercourse? The National Government owes its stability to harmony of all the minor parts of which it is composed; and why cannot we rear a monument that will gain for us that respect which we are now denied, if we commence properly? I have been prompted to these prefatory remarks by the fact of our having one of the pleasantest times in our borough that it has ever been my lot to witness. I refer to a party given by the "Lone Star Assemby, No. 1," of this place, which was numerously attended by persons from various places. The very best feeling existed throughout the evening; dancing, singing, playing, and everything else incident to such an occasion, were the order of the evening. Refreshments of the best quality were plentiful, and good use did the gay company make of them. Among those that attracted most attention because of their rich and tasty attire, were Miss J. B——n; Miss R. E——n, of this place; Miss E. T. W——y, Miss M. W——y, of Crosswicks; Miss M. B——n, Miss A. R——r, of Trenton; Miss M. F. H——y, of do.; Miss L. P——e, of Burlington; Miss M. C——n, of do.; Miss M. M——s, of do.; Miss R. J——n, of do.; Miss R. and M. D——s, of do. Hoping that I have not imposed upon your liberality, in thus intruding a notice of our happy affair, I remain yours, respectfully. MAHLON H. KENNARDS.

EMANCIPATING SLAVES.—A correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune, writing from Roanoke Island, Feb. 20th, says:—"The slaveholders in these eastern counties are, we learn, desirous of getting rid of their slaves; they will liberate them if the Government will only take them off their hands. With all the slaveholders with whom I have conversed, I find that they all recognize slavery as the real cause of the war, and the only bone of contention between the North and the South, and now the Union men who own slaves are anxious to set the example by liberating this troublesome property.

One extensive slaveholder living near Elizabeth city, who owns some 500 slaves, gave them all their freedom, I am informed, some time since, and told them to look out for themselves; all the slaveholders will follow suit all through this section of the country, for this war, says the slaveholders here, has entirely broken up the institution, and made the slave so insubordinate and ugly that they will never be brought back to subjection.' It is the only way to prevent an insurrection, and I am informed that planters are informing their slaves that they all shall be free, in order to prevent this very thing which they so greatly fear."

CLOSING OF THE EVENING SCHOOL IN SCHOOL NO. 7.

This school located in 17th st., closed for the season on Wednesday evening Feb. 19. The faithfulness of the teachers had brought it to a high state of prosperity, and they had the satisfaction of receiving the testimony of the trustees, that the average attendance had been as good as that of any school under their jurisdiction. The arrangements showed that the principal of the school, Mrs. Charlotte S. Smith and her assistants, Mesdames Williams and Douglass and Miss Ogden are fully alive to the requirements of the age. A large number of the scholars of the day school were present, and by their speaking and singing, together with the instrumental performances of Professors Brown and Waldron and Madam Williams, gave the audience a rare treat.

The average attendance has been between 70 and 80, and if the number of certificates given out be an evidence, then we must believe the scholars to have been very faithful in their attendance.

The evening was exceedingly stormy, the rain falling in torrents, making the walking very "slushy," nevertheless the Hall was crowded, many standing through the exercises.

THE PROGRAMME

contained some very fine selections which were well sung, especially the anthem, "O ye Nations," and the chorus "Beautiful Star." The Duett on the Piano by two young ladies; and the solo singing of Miss Emily L. Brant showed much latent ability which ought to be cultivated.

The appearance of the scholars was very neat, showing that they took great pride in the affair.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED!

"Words," said Mirabeau, "are things." They hold true to this definition, in the events now happening. The terminology applied to slaves indicate a daily advancing state of public sentiment. First of all—"Slaves." Then—"fugitive slaves" came within our lines. Next, thanks to bluff Ben. Butler—"contrabands:" his term, was marked and expressed the relation of slaves of rebels, as slaves, to the Federal Government. Then General Wool tried his hand calling them "vagrants;" this was ungracious in sound yet indicated that they bore [illegible] relation were somehow part and parcel of the American people. Last of all, the [illegible]ent highly respectable meeting at [illegible] Institute announces a still better [illegible]NATIONAL FREEDMEN."

[illegible] we have the complete history of the growth of an idea expressed in a series of terms. Ideas, in times like these do not grow backward. Hence that these men cannot become slaves again may be safely affirmed on the laws of ideaology.

These "national freedmen" fairly thirst for instruction. They wish to learn how to read and write. We believe they can best be taught how to read and write, as well as some other things by colored men and women. Who will volunteer, to go and teach them? It is a noble field of labor and of duty. If such as feel called to this labor, will send their application to this office, we will be happy to lay them with their certificates, before our old friend Joseph B. Collins, a leading member of the National Freedman's Relief Association, and who moreover from his long acquaintance with our colored schools and schoolmasters is able to judge of our ability to teach.

A SURPRISE.

MR. EDITOR: Next to the question, "Who struck Billy Patterson?" is the one, "Can a woman keep a secret?" to which I am happy to say she can. Here is the evidence:—For some time there had been much whispering among the ladies of Zion Baptist Church, the Rev. J. T. Raymond, Pastor—and bless their lovely souls! excuse me, Mr. Editor; but I know you will say Amen when I am blessing the ladies, on the night of the 20th of February we had a solution of the question, "Can a woman keep a secret?" for they met in the basement of the church, and had a table groaning with edibles of the choicest kind. A committee of one was sent to the pastor's residence to bring him to the church, but the call being so unusual that it was difficult to get him to go; but thinking that there might be a meeting, or some one to be prayed for, he started with the sister, and when he got in, being blind, he could not tell how many were there or who they were. The ladies seated him at a table, and then formed in single file and marched around him, and as they passed, the way the dollars rolled out was pleasant; it made me feel as if I should like to be a minister myself.

The ladies of the church deserve great credit for the surprise, and I am sure that there is none more deserving of their kindness and their liberality than the Rev. John T. Raymond. C. G. B.

A SUGGESTION.

MR. EDITOR: As I have heard many of my friends, who are church members express a desire to hear Miss Greenfield sing, but who are opposed to going to the house of God when it is desecrated by having a parquette and a gallery the same as a theatre, I hope that the lady will take this hint, and give a concert on her own account, and charge a uniform price, say 25 or 50 cents; for I hold that this is no time for colored men to be drawing a line of demarkation between themselves, but if any of us have more money than we know what to do with, and have a poor but honest neighbor, give him a helping hand, and try to stand him on the same platform with ourselves; in so doing we will not only command their respect, but all of those with whom we come in contact. O. B.

ASTOUNDING RUMOR!—It is said that General M'Clellan has ordered General Grant to be arrested for disturbing the quiet of the lines along the Potomac!

For the Anglo-African.

ODE.

By whom shall Jacob arise?

It may not be—it may not be
A marshalled world in arms shall rise;
Heaven marks its hour of destiny
With signs oft hidden from our eyes.
The whirlwind's sweep
Is hushed to sleep
Oft in the calm unclouded skies.

Say not in fear, "The broad Red Sea
Before us spreads impassable;"
Some unexpected rod shall be
The means its mighty waves to quell.
A pathway new
Shall open through
From thraldom into liberty.

Cheer on! the standard that ye raise,
Here, in the regions of the North,
Perchance shall float where Afric's rays
Send all their genial fervor forth;
The song ye sing
Shall onward bring
The day that gives a nation birth.

What though no bard embalms to thee
The name of Anglo-African?
The smallest cloud thine eye can see
May swell beyond the broadest scan,
And trumps of fame
May yet proclaim
Thee, "Champion of the rights of man."

Jacob shall rise, but not by might,
But by the Spirit of the Lord;
As to the dark of Egypt's night
The first-born fell beneath His sword.
Cheer on! each chain
Shall snap in twain,
By His unchanged, almighty word.

Let children in prophetic glee
Chant the hymn of Africa;
Let aged Simeon bow the knee
And all the prophets of the day
Proclaim the hour
Of Afric's power
Hath dawned, and who its course shall stay

H.

For the Anglo African.

THE EDITORIAL REGATTA OF 1862.

BY MELVIN F. JACKSON.

A gallant craft is on the sea,
The breeze is fresh and fair;
And banner's brave are waving free
As autumn leaves in fall.
The veteran Godey leads the way,
With Bonner following near;
And Harper strives to win the day,
So bravely does he steer
Leslie, with flowing sheets and sail
Holds gaily in the race:
And Peterson, who's just in hail,
Comes dashing on apace.
A hundred craft of lesser note
For public suffrage strive,
And rare's the prize to favored boat,
That shall the first arrive.
Sail ho! look out to windward there!
A gallant craft's in view;
Her clipper rig is rich and rare,
Her helmsman bold and true.
'Tis "Hamilton," with his noble craft—
His "ANGLO," sure to please,
Her silken sails are fore and aft,
Flung boldly to the breeze.
From every bark a welcome comes
"God speed her onward!" all repeat,
A voice from many thousand homes
Welcome the favorite of the fleet.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE GRAND CONCERT given by Miss Greenfield, the Black Swan, and Madam Brown, the Nightingale, in the Abyssinian Baptist Church, on the 20th inst. was an affair of the most agreeable kind. The singers were in splendid voice, and having the assistance of a master of the piano, in the person of Prof. Cook, could not well fail to render that unalloyed satisfaction which they did on the occasion.

We have had the pleasure of listening to the singing of the "Swan" on various occasions during many years, and we must say that we cannot perceive the least diminution, either in the purity of tone, or volume of her voice. Her singing is more like the floating of some water-fowl down a placid stream, than anything else it could be compared to; and if it may not be considered superserviceable in us, we would advise her to leave the placid stream as seldom as possible, for we do not believe it possible for a Swan ever to become a Nightingale. We may be entirely mistaken, but, judging from what we have heard, we are inclined to the belief that she is incapable of either very rapid vocalization or of sustaining a long trill. But all this is more than compensated for in the wonderful purity of her voice and in her ability to sing in the baritone key.

Barnum lately had a woman at his Museum who could sing both soprano and tenor. This the public thought was wonderful; but this woman's performances fell infinitely short of those of the "Swan." We believe that in this respect Miss Greenfield stands alone. The singing of Mrs. Brown was very much admired; indeed there were those present who preferred her singing to that of the "Swan." It was in fact more elaborate than that of the latter, but her voice is neither as sweet or as full as that of Miss G.; nevertheless the songs selected for this occasion were most exquisitely rendered, and her trilling and chromatic passages were all that could have been desired by the most fastidious.

The programme consisted of some of the most celebrated songs extant, many of which were honored with an encore, which the "Swan" kindly acknowledged. We trust that Mrs. B. may be induced to do as much when she next appears in our city. We were sorry to see so few persons present. The gallery of the church was crowded, but there were but few persons on the first floor. This may have been owing to the price charged for admission (50 cents) to that part of the house; or it may have been caused by bad policy of changing the concert night in consequence of the storm; but be the case what it may, we trust they may have a better house when they next appear, for we know they deserve it.

THE CONCERT OF THE SABBATH-SCOOL ATTACHED TO ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Notwithstanding the violence of the wind, an immense audience assembled on Monday evening last to witness the performance of the children of the above named school. From the fine appearance and spirit of the assemblage, it was manifest that they expected to spend a pleasant evening, and be richly compensated for their trouble in coming out on such a night.

A stage of ample dimensions was erected in front of the pulpit, giving the conductor a good opportunity to make a proper disposition of the children.

The appearance of the scholars was all that could be desired, most of the young ladies being clothed in white, and wearing wreaths of flowers on their heads.

Before the commencement of the concert the Rev. Mr. Alston made some remarks, reminding the audience that that was a house of prayer; and that, therefore, any outward manifestation of approbation would be improper; but no more respect was paid to his request than if he had not made it.

The programme was a very good one, and showed good judgment; and the performance of the children reflected much credit on their instructor and conductor, Mr. W F Sturgis The pianists, Misses Victoria Price, Kate Bowers, Rebecca Wake, Virginia Magnan, and Master Robert Williams performed their parts admirably, and were loudly applauded. The solos and duetts were also much applauded, those of Master Edward Thorne and Miss Lydia Dangerfield being honored with an encore. We believe we but give utterance to the general judgment when we pronounce Miss D.'s singing to be the best of the evening. We think that the determination manifested by this child was as pleasing to the public as her singing. Master Wm. Ball will make an excellent singer if he will but persevere to become such. The Misses Hageman sang the duett, "Murmuring Sea," in excellent time; as did also Misses Rodgers and Dangerfield the duett, "Sadly Now." The chorus, "Evening Bells," was very beautifully sung, and was encored with great applause.

The solo of the chorus, "Why have my loved ones gone," was sung by Mr. E. Dias in proper time; but the chorus was entirely too rapid. We offer our congratulations to our friend Mr. Sturgis on the success of his efforts, and trust that it may inspire him with renewed courage to persevere in the pleasant path which he has chosen.

DIED.

BURNETT.—In this city, Feb. 22d, of consumption, Wm. Burnett, aged 47 years.

An immense congregation assembled in Zion Church, corner of Church and Leonard streets on Tuesday last, to pay the last tribute of respect to the memory of the above named deceased, who had been a member and trustee in said church for many years. The Society of the "Benevolent Sons of Wesley," of which he was a member, had their banner draped in mourning, and hung before the pulpit. The corpse was laid before the altar in a splendid silver mounted mahogany coffin, having a silk collar with the silver shield of the above Society on his left breast. The body of the church was occupied by the following: The family of deceased; the "class" of which he was leader; "The Sons of Conference;" "The Benevolent Daughters of Conference,"

Fidelity Lodge,	No. 1,	Daughters of Samaria
Unity "	No. 2,	" "
Purity "	No. 3	" "
Fountain Union,	No. 1	Good Samaritans.
Rebecca "	No. 5.	" "

Right Worthy Grand Lodge, E. D., and the Sire and Secretary of the National Grand Lodge.

Mr. Burnett was a past Worthy Chief of Fountain Union Lodge, and Treasurer of Grand Lodge. His Regalia for the offices were placed upon his coffin.

THE FUNERAL SERVICES

Were opened by the Rev. David Stevens, who read the hymn "How happy every child of grace," the singing of which was followed by a prayer by the Rev. Christopher Rush. The elder of the church then made a few very feeling and pertinent remarks to the church, the Societies and the widow of deceased. He said he would not say anything at that time, but would at some future time try to do justice to the memory of deceased. He would say, however, for the gratification of the church, that the last words of Br. Burnett were "Glory to God," After singing the hymn "Rejoice for a brother deceased," the elder resigned the concluding ceremonies into the hands of the "Samaritans." The burial service of this Order, which is very beautiful, was conducted by the G. W. C. Moses B. Coss, assisted Br. Marrs, the responses being made by the whole Order. After this the body, surrounded by the trustees of the church, as pall bearers, was borne away to its last resting place in Greenwood Cemetry

DOWNING.—At Providence, R. I. on 26th inst. Caroline, daughter of Peter W., and the late Caroline Downing.

Her funeral will take place on Sunday, the 2d of March, at 1 o'clock, P. M. from the residence of her grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. Halleck Green, 54 Johnson street Williamsburgh. The friends of the family are invited to attend.

Special Notices.

THE LAUNDRESS' SECRET.

The most Invaluable Preparation known for rendering clothes white and clean, without rubbing or injury to the fabric.

The above recipe, together with over one hundred other items of information, sent free on the receipt of 5 red stamps.

A liberal discount to peddlers. Address,
JOS. ADAMS,
83 Nassau street.

"HELP THOSE WHO STRIVE TO HELP THEMSELVES."

GRAND CONCERT IN AID
OF THE
"ANGLO-AFRICAN."

The proprietor of the Weekly Anglo-African, having laid his plans for the establishment of a printing office in connection with the paper, where colored youth may be instructed in the Art of Printing, before the children of New York and Brooklyn, is happy to announce that they will assist him in this object by singing at

A GRAND CONCERT,

Which will be given on MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 3d, in

SHILOH CHURCH.

Corner Prince and Marion streets, New York.

Professor Waldron will preside at the Organ and Piano, and the following young Ladies and Gentlemen, whose singing has been received with rapturous applause, will appear.

Miss Caroline Brown,	Brooklyn,
" Pauline Green,	New York
" Sarah E. Cary,	" "
" Letitia Smith,	" "
" Alice Taylor.	Brooklyn,
" Cynthia Wilson,	"
" Bertha Burnett.	Freehold, N. J.,

and Master Wm. Bronaugh, of Brooklyn,

He has also the pleasure of announcing that through the kindness of Miss Sarah Ennals, Principal of the Primary Department of Public School, No. 2, and Mr. John Peterson, Principal of Public School No. 1., upwards of ONE HUNDRED SCHOLARS from the Schools will sing on this occasion. A portion of the subscriber's own family will take part in the exercises.

The subscriber finds it impossible, in consequence of the many singers offering, to publish a programme, but trusts that the songs to be sung may be satisfactory to the public.

Fellow citizens, at the earnest solicitation of many of you, but without adequate funds, I commenced the publication of the paper, and, through many privations, I have thus far kept it afloat. I am happy to inform you that its success is now certain. It can be sustained under present arrangements; but by the completion of the plan indicated in the former part of this circular, we will not only save greatly, but be enabled to carry out an object long desired by us. Will you not lend us your aid?

The price for admission will be 15 cents for adults,—and for children under twelve 10 cents.

Doors open at 7 o'clock. Concert to commence at 8 o'clock.

No postponement on account of the weather.

SOMETHING NEW.

A GRAND JUBILEE.

The Ladies of the Sinking Fund Association, attached to the Zion Church, (Branch) situated between 7th and 8th Avenues, will give a Grand Jubilee on Wednesday evening, March 5th, 1862, at the above place. The Ladies assure the public that this will be one of the most agreeable REUNIONS of the season. Madame Green has kindly volunteered and will sing some of her choicest songs. She will be assisted by others.

Several distinguished speakers will be present.

Come one, come all! Come and see!

Tickets only 20 cents.

For full particulars see small bills.

Office of the R. W. G. Sec.
70 Grove st., N. Y. C.

The officers and members of the R. W. E. D. Grand Lodge of the I. O. of G. S. and D. of S. together with the subordinate Lodges, under its jurisdiction, are hereby notified to meet on Sunday, March 9th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., in the basement of Zion Church, corner of Church and Leonard streets, in full regalia, for the purpose of attending the funeral sermon of sister Adrine Ferguson, member of Fidelity Lodge, No. 1, D. of S. and representative in the E D Grand Lodge.

By order of the Chief.
John R. Porter, G. S.

PROCLAMATION.

To the Colored People of North America:

The colored people of this country, knowing that we cannot take any part in this war under the issues waged, and believing that the time has come when we must act within ourselves, taking God alone as our helper, would call upon every sound hearted man to respond to the call when given. Let the army of the living God come forth! God will lead His army on.

GEO. P. SMITH.
Major in Command of the Colored Military in Wilkesbarre, Pa.

31 1t

ATTENTION!

The members of the N. Y. African Society for Mutual Relief, are earnestly requested to attend the regular monthly meeting of the Society on Monday, March 10th, at their Hall, 42 Baxter street, for the purpose of making preparations to celebrate the Fifty-first Anniversary of the Society.

J. J. Zuille, Secretary.

ZION CONFERENCE.

☞ Notice is hereby given to the Members of the Annual Conference of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion, that the Annual Conference of the New York District will meet in Zion Church, corner of Church and Leonard streets, New York city, on the Third Saturday in May, 1862.

WM. H. BISHOP,
Superintendent of the 1st Dist of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion.

Grand United Order of Odd Fellows.

The Officers and Members of Philomathean Lodge, No. 646, Hamilton Lodge, No. 710, and Terry Lodge, No. 909, of the above Order, have the pleasure of announcing to their friends and the public, that they will give a

GRAND PROMENADE CONCERT AND FESTIVAL,

On Monday Evening, March 10, 1862,

In the City Assembly Rooms, 446 Broadway

The Celebration is in commemoration of the 20th Anniversary of the introduction of the Order in America.

The Committee design making this entertainment equal to the Great Crystal Palace Celebration of the Order, of 1856; and with this view have, at very great expense, secured for their guests the CITY ASSEMBLY ROOMS. The Grand Ball Room is too well known to need recommendation, it stands unapproached for size and beauty; the DANCING FLOOR surpasses anything of the kind on this continent. The other conveniences are in every respect ample and beautiful. Connected with the Clo and Dressing Rooms, (which will be attended free of charge) is a magnificent Ladies' Parlor, illuminated by Chandeliers.

A FULL BAND of music is engaged and will be under the direction of Professor Oton.

The SUPPER will be provided by, and be under the exclusive management of the Maitre de Cuisine of the City Assembly Rooms, and will be furnished at 50 cents extra.

Tickets of admission 75 cents Supper 50 cents Tickets of admission can be procured of either of the Committee, and parties are requested to secure their tickets before the evening of the Festival, as only a limited number of tickets will be for sale at the door.

Doors open at 8 o'clock. No postponement on account of weather.

PATRICK H. REASON
Chairman, 353 Bowery.
JAMES H. LEWIS.
Secretary, 207 Wooster.
WM C H CURTIS.
Treasurer, 153 Thompson.

For further particulars see Circulars enclosed in this week's Anglo-African.

A GRAND CONCERT AND EXHIBITION.

Will be given by the Shiloh Church Sabbath School, on Tuesday evening, March 4th, 1862, at the church, cor. of Prince and Marion sts. The music will be conducted by Mr. Ezekial Dias, Chorister of the church.

Tickets 12 cents, children 5 cents.

Doors open at 6½, to commence at 7½.

ELYMUS REEVE, Superintendant.

HELP! HELP WANTED

At Tilmon's Agency, No 70 East 13th st., one door East of the 4th Avenue. Spring is here and now is the time. Never was there a greater demand for all first class colored help than now Remember that this is the oldest and most responsible office in the city for colored help. Situations constantly on hand for both city and country. Terms cash and strict attention paid to business. All persons coming to this city and wishing to save board will do well to call during Office hours, from 7 A. M. to 5 P. M.

31tf L. TILMON, Proprietor.

WANTED, a neat, tidy colored woman to do general housework—one that understands baking and cooking.

Apply at No 7 Nassau street, Room 8.

MASONIC DIRECTORY, FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R.W.G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons. ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No. 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st, the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co. State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star, No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka, No. 15, Norwick, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz. March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14, Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 East Houston Street, N. Y. City.

TO LET.—Apartments, in house 253 Thompson Street. A few gentlemen can be furnished with lodging also. Inquire of Mr. Jer. Bowers on the premises.

315t.

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate LADIES and GENTLEMEN with FIRST CLASS BOARD, on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. 13 Sheriff Street, a few doors north of Grand. 16 13t

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated Hoagland Patent, equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

GLASS, CHINA, AND EARTHENWARE MENDED,

BY A. ROBERTS,
120 Clinton Court, 8th st. New York.

A Supply of the EGYPTIAN CEMENT, for the above purpose constantly on hand Price cents per bottle

29tf

WORLD'S FAIR AGENCY.—The undersigned are acting as Agents for Merchants and Manufacturers to Exhibit at World's Fair, and to introduce into England, France and other European countries, articles of American Invention, Procuring Patents, making Sales, or in any way promoting their interests.

DEXTER & CO 17 Spruce st. N. Y.;
86 Milk street, Boston; 149 S. Fourth st., Philad
1m3ap.

dian, No. 3. King Solomon, No. 4. Covenant, No. 7. Widow's Son, No. 10. Mount Olive, No. 11. Mount Calvary, No. 12. North Star, No. 14. Eureka, No. 15. Excelsior, No. 16. Jeptha, No. 17. Mount Moriah, No. 18. And Representations from Western Light, No. 6, Mount Nebo, No. 8, and Evening Star, No. 9. Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, will grace the evening by their presence.

Sheba's Court, No. 1, Ancient Order of Heroines of Jericho, is invited, and will be present on the occasion in full regalia.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14, Knights Templars of the City of New York, will be present by special invitation, and display that Magnificent Standard recently presented by Sheba's Court No. 1

Grand Marshal, J. W. BROWN

The Music will be under the direction of Prof. W. F. Sturges. The Supper will be in the hands of a competent Committee, who will pledge that they will spare neither labor nor expense in the perfection of their work.

TICKETS, (which are limited,) $1 Each.

And can be obtained at the following places:—Jacob Vanderbeck, 193 Church and 73 Thompson street; Henry Skinner, Leonard street; J. L. Hudson, No. 4 East Houston street; Francis Thompson, 41 Hicks street, Brooklyn; Charles E. and George F. Hodges, 51 Boerum street, E. Brooklyn; John Johnson, 128 West Fifteenth street; Charlotte Thompson, 55 President street, South Brooklyn; Spencer's Bowling Saloon, 154 Church street; W. S. Woddrop, Melrose, and at the door on the night of the Banquet.

SONG FOR THE TIMES.

Written to be sung at the Concert to be given by the children of New York and Brooklyn, March 3d, 1862, for the benefit of the "ANGLO AFRICAN"

John Brown's body lies moldering in the grave,
John Brown's body lies moldering in the grave,
John Brown's body lies moldering in the grave,
His soul is marching on!
O glory hallelujah!
O, glory hallelujah!
O, glory hallelujah!
His soul is marching on!

On a gibbet high Virginia hung him,
On a gibbet high Virginia hung him,
On a gibbet high Virginia hung him,
His soul went marching on.
O glory hallelujah, &c.

His life was offered to redeem the hapless slave,
His life was offered to redeem the hapless slave,
His life was offered to redeem the hapless slave,
But freedom is marching on.
O glory hallelujah, &c.

When to death the tyrants led him,
When to death the tyrants led him,
When to death the tyrants led him,
His soul was marching on.
O, glory hallelujah, &c

See that lowly mother weeping,
See that lowly mother, weeping,
See that lowly mother weeping,
When he was marching on.
O, glory hallelujah, &c.
His soul was marching on

Her child, though black, he gently kissing,
Her child, though black, he gently kissing,
Her child, though black, he gently kissing.
His great soul marching on.
O, glory hallelujah, &c.

Fearless the scaffold he ascended,
Fearless the scaffold he ascended,
Fearless the scaffold he ascended,
For his soul was marching on.
O, glory hallelujah, &c.

Kagi, Copeland, Leeman, we'll remember,
Thompson, Leary, Hazlett, we'll remember,
Stevens, Green, and Coppoc, we'll remember,
Their souls are marching on.
O, glory hallelujah, &c.

God, now in majesty descending,
Speaks! and captives lowly bending,
Know their manacles are rending,
And that freedom is marching on.
O, glory hallelujah, &c.

BOARDING AND LODGING, at No. 3 Jersey street, by Mrs. Brown, (widow of the late J. W. Brown) who begs the patronage of her friends and acquaintances.

29tf.

PLANE ST. SELECT SCHOOL.

195 PLANE ST., NEWARK, N. J.
MRS. HARRIET E. ROGERS, PRINCIPAL.

The branches taught are Reading, Writing Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography and History, Plain Sewing, Ornamental Needlework, Worsted Embroidery and Fancy Knitting.

Piano Forte, Melodeon, and Vocal Music by Prof. John H. O'Fake.

A limited number of Misses between the ages of ten and fourteen may be boarded in the house on moderate terms. Healthy location, and a fine yard for exercise

REFERENCES.

NEWARK, N J

Rev. E. J. Adams.	Jefferson Ellis.
Adam Ray,	Abram T. Cook.

BROOKLYN.

Rev. J N Gloucester.

NEW YORK

Rev. H. M. Wilson, Rev. H H Garnet.

All letters may be addressed to Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, 194 Plane st, Newark N. J

27 6t.

Elizabeth City, N. J. Feb. 3, 1862.

This is to certify that I heartily approve of the effort of Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers to establish a Select School for young misses. I have been acquainted with her for over twenty-five years, and am happy to recommend her and her enterprise to the patronage of the public in general.

DANIEL H. VANDERVEER,
Pastor of the 1st Colored Pres. Church, Eliz. City.

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND

BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,
PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St John's Lane; J T Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St., and with G. Oton.

18tf

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,
REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.

New York—corner of Prince and Marion street near Broadway.

Hours of Worship;—

Prayer-meeting,	10½	A. M.
	3	P. M.
	7½	P. M.

Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock,

Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.

Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,
(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. WM. J ALSTON, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP

10 1 2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—

10½	A. M.
3	P. M
7½	P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn.

13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

REV. ELI N HALL. Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:

10½ o'clock,	A. M
3 "	P. M.
7½ "	P. M.

10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue. Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7½ "	P. M.

12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—

3 o'clock,	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

LECTURE every Wednesday evening.

Rev. CHAS. H. THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

0 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
"	P. M.
1 "	P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. HALL, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. JOHN T. RAYMOND, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.

Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.

Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

AGENT FOR WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

TROY AGENCY.—Mr. Henry Burke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

"O LET MY PEOPLE GO," and "THE NEGRO BOATMAN'S SONG," may be had of Miss E. H. Case, No. 174 W. 30th st., New York. Price 2 cents per copy.

THE HORACE WATERS PIANOS,
MELODEONS, ALEXANDRE ORGANS,
and
T. Gilbert & Co's. Celebrated Æolian Pianos,

are the finest instruments for Parlors and Churches now in use. A large assortment can be seen at the new Warerooms 481 Broadway, between Grand and Broome streets, which will be sold at extremely low prices. Pianos and Melodeons from sundry makers, new and second hand, to let, and rent allowed if purchased, as per agreement. Monthly payments received for the same. Also, second-hand pianos at great bargains, prices from $25 to $100. Sheet Music, Music Books, and all kinds of Music merchandise at war prices. A Pianist in attendance will try new music.

HORACE WATERS, AGENT.

BOSTON HOUSE,
MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

MRS. ELIZA LEWIS' SALVE.
ANDERSON'S HAIR RESTORATIVE,
(New London.)
SPANISH OIL, (For the Hair,)
WHITE'S VEGETABLE EXTRACT,
BRANDRETH'S SUGAR COATED PILLS.
For Sale at the
Drug Store 55 West Broadway
tf-17

SOMETHING NEW

The best washing preparation in the world No boiling, pounding or rubbing required, but all done in simple warm water. Full instructions concerning its use and manufacture sent by mail on receipt of 25 cents Address

RUFUS STICKNEY,
28 4t Templeton, Mass.

NEW MUSIC—"The Lord doth now to this Nation Speak," "O, Let my People Go," Parody on "Song of the Contrabands," words by Moses, music by Baker. Price 25 cts including "Contrabands' Song," or 4 pieces for $1, mailed free. Just published by HORACE WATERS, 481 Broadway.

24 6t.

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen it you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS

of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.

DON'T FORGET,
168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET.
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms,

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.

The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y. 19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St.,
on door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS

Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMODATE a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tt

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTES, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 SOUTH STREET, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help; and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

HENRY G. DEASK,
HATS. CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS,
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN,

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) Respectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

MRS E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.

Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.

3tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING

BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladi	$2,50
" " Ge es,	3,00
Lodging per week;	75

JAMES E. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER
219 CENTRE STREET NEW YORK

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,

In all its branches—such as

BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.,

Residence—120th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.

18 26t

POCKET WATER-FILTER
AND
DRINKING TUBE.

Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. Weighs one ounce. Can be carried in the vest pocket. Send it to your friends. Agents wanted. Samples mailed on receipt of 50 cents, by addressing

DAY & CO.
3-13t Box 464 P.O., Newark, N.J.

From the N. Y. Tribune of Feb. 22d.

A DEATH BLOW AT THE SLAVE-TRADE.

EXECUTION OF GORDON.

HIS ABORTIVE ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE.

Yesterday, Nathaniel Gordon, the slave-trader, was hanged in the City Prison. The enormity of the crime for which he suffered was justly characterized by Judge Shipman of the U. S. Circuit Court, before whom he was tried, in pronouncing upon him the sentence of the law which he had violated. "Do not imagine," said he, "that because others shared in the guilt of this enterprise yours is thereby diminished; but remember the awful admonition of your Bible, 'Though hand joined in hand, the wicked shall not go unpunished.'" On the same occasion the doomed slave-trader was reminded of the horrid character of his crime in the following language:

"Do not attempt to hide its enormity from yourself; think of the cruelty and wickedness of seizing nearly a thousand fellow-beings, who never did you harm, and thrusting them beneath the decks of a small ship, beneath a burning tropical sun, to die of disease or suffocation, or be transported to distant lands, and be consigned, they and their posterity, to a fate far more cruel than death.

"Think of the sufferings of the unhappy beings whom you crowded on the Erie; of their helpless agony and terror as you took them from their native land; and especially think of those who perished under the weight of their miseries on the passage from the place of your capture to Monrovia! Remember that you showed mercy to none, carrying off, as you did, not only those of your own sex, but women and helpless children.

"Do not flatter yourself that because they belonged to a different race from yourself your guilt is therefore lessened—rather fear that it is increased. In the just and generous heart the humble and the weak inspire compassion, and call for pity and forbearance."

The condemned, for the last few weeks, was attended by the Rev. Dr. Camp, who was unceasing in his care for the spiritual welfare of the prisoner. The gallows had been prepared for the execution previous to the 7th of February, the day on which Gordon was sentenced to be hanged by the Court. Owing to the threats that a rescue would be attempted, the United States Marshal obtained from the Marine Barracks, at the Navy Yard, a sufficient force to protect the prison in any event. About 80 marines, under the command of Captain Cohen, were in attendance. They were drawn up in line, and ordered to load with ball-cartridge and put caps on their muskets. This done, with fixed bayonets they marched into the yard of the prison, and the main body were drawn up in double file, fronting the gallows.

The gallows was a new one, originally made for hanging the three murderers of Capt. Pyke of the ship General Parkhill. It was not used, however, at that time, as the sentence of these men was commuted by the President to imprisonment for fifteen years.

Although the execution had been announced for half-past 2 o'clock, crowds of people began to assemble in the immediate vicinity of the Tombs at an early hour. An ample police force under the command of Capt. Dowling of the Sixth Precinct, guarded the entrance to the prison, and kept the way clear for the approach of persons who had been authorized to be present at the execution. Hundreds sought the loftiest positions which could be obtained on the buildinds outside the prison, all anxious to get a last glimpse of the dying slaver.

About 200 spectators, including members of the State Legislature, city and county officials, and representatives of the press, made up the assemblage in the prison. The gallows was erected in the grand central square, in full view of the marines and the spectators.

After parting with Marshal Murray on Thursday night, Gordon occupied himself in writing letters to various friends, especially to his wife and to his son, a boy about five years of age. The letter to the boy was directed to be presented to him when he should come to the age of discretion. Although he seemed careworn, the prisoner did not express himself as if anxious or uneasy as to the solemn circumstances which marked his quickly-fleeting hours.

At 1 o'clock yesterday morning, evidently exhausted from the labors of the night, and the cares for the coming morrow, Gordon retired to bed, and slept soundly till about 3 o'clock, at which time he awoke and expressed his astonishment that he had been asleep so long.

At about 11 o'clock, a youth came rushing into the prison, carrying in his hand a telegraphic dispatch from Albany, which he had been instructed to read in the hearing of Marshal Murray. Having gained his ear, he read the telegram, as follows:

POUGHKEEPSIE, 21st February.

"Governor telegraphed President to respite Gordon. See Murray. Received from Albany at 10 A. M."

To which the Marshal replied that his arrangements with the President were such that he would disregard any telegraphic communication, from whoever it might come. The message referred to was from Ex-Judge Beebe, who went to Albany on Thursday night, to endeavor to induce the Governor to interfere in Gordon's behalf.

Shortly after, ex-Judge Dean arrived, bearing the same missive, and presented it to Mr. Murray, who told him that he appreciated his position, but was unable to regard anything that did not emanate in regular documentary form from the President of the United States.

As has been stated, the prisoner retired to bed at 1 o'clock A. M. As he afterward explained to Deputy-Marshal Borst, who had the prisoner in charge the latter part of the morning, his object in retiring at 1 o'clock was to elude the vigilance of his keepers, by pretending to be asleep; but nature asserted its claims, and he fell into a sound slumber, which lasted him till 3 o'clock, at which time, waking up and looking at his watch, he was amazed that by his own exhausted condition he had been outwitted. His plan was not to be baffled, however. He was desperate, and he at once, by some mysterious sleight of hand, succeeded in swallowing a quantity of poison.

Shortly before 4 o'clock the Deputies in charge of Gordon observed him act in a very curious manner, and soon the fact disclosed itself that their ward was in a spasm, from which he did not recover before half-past 4 o'clock. By that time the prison physician had been summoned to his side, and when he recovered from his first spasm he was astonished to see the doctors, and quietly answered their questions as to what he had been taking, by saying that he did not thank them for interfering with him. He looked up in their faces and gnashing his teeth said, "I've cheated you; I've cheated you!" The doctors immediately proceeded to administer such antidotes as they deemed necessary although they had to work in ignorance of what kind of poison he had taken.

At length the matter became known to the U. S. Marshal, who immediately dispatched a messenger for Dr. James R. Wood, who arrived at the prison at 8 1-4 o'clock. He immediately learned that the prisoner had taken strychnine and applied himself to the case accordingly. Copious drafts of strong whisky were administered to the patient which had the effect of gradually restoring him to consciousness. Shortly after 9 o'clock he became aware of what was going on around him From that time however, he continued very feeble, and made his responses to all questions asked in writing.

At about 11 o'clock the prisoner wrote a note to Simeon Draper, in which he said "I hope I will die before 12 o'clock."

The first note that he wrote to Deputy Marshal Borst was, "Did you give me the whisky to keep the spasms off?"

He then followed that by another note, saying, "I wish I might die, and end my suffering."

Mr. Simeon Draper, on entering the cell of the prisoner, said to him, "Do you know me, Gordon?" to which he replied in writing, "I do. Mr. Draper is a very good man, and I thank him for what he has done for my wife and child."

Deputy Marshal Borst then asked him what kind of poison he had taken? to which he replied in the same manner as before Strychnine. A good many may accuse my wife of a hand in this affair I have only to say that in time of peace prepare for war. The little bench you sit on, if it was examined and could speak, could possibly tell some tales about it." Here he directed the bench to be turned up, when he pointed to a crack on the lower side of it in which he intimated that the strychnine had been secreted for a long time.

He added, in writing, the following intimation that nothing relative to the slave-trade should ever escape his lips: "I shall never let mortal man know anything."

In reply to the question, "Why did you want to commit suicide?" he said, "I wanted to spare my wife and child the disgrace of being hanged."

He stated in writing that he had had the strychnine given to him on the second day of his trial.

He also stated his plan of intending to pretend to be asleep at 1 o'clock, and how it failed him.

The last note he wrote to Deputy Marshal Borst was: "Tell my wife and child that my last thoughts were of them."

At 12 o'clock, United States Marshal Murray and Deputy United States Marshal Thompson, with their deputies, proceeded to the cell of Gordon, and announced to him that the hour had arrived when the execution must be carried into effect. He was pinioned by Dupety Sheriff Isaacs, and brought from his cell to the corridor, where was he set down on a chair. His appearance was feeble and haggard, and presented a strange contrast with the once lordly Captain, who gave his orders from the quarter-deck as to the disposition of helpless human beings imprisoned in the hold of his slave ship.

The United States Marshal then read, slowly and solemnly the death warrant of the culprit, also the respite granted by the President of the United States.

After a brief pause, Capt. Gordon delivered, in a deliberate tone, the following speech.

"My conscience is clear. I have no fault to find with the treatment, I have received from the Marshal and his Deputy, Mr. Thompson; but any public man who will get up in open court and say to the Jury, 'If you convict this prisoner, I will be the first man to sign a petition for his pardon,' and will then go to the Executive to prevent his commuting the sentence, I say that man is a man who will do anything to promote his own ends—I do not care what people say."

[We are assured that the officer referred to never said anything of the kind.—ED. TRIB.]

The procession then moved from the prison to the gallows, the culprit being supported between Deputy Sheriff Isaacs and Deputy United States Marshal O'Keefe. He was deathly pale with terror, his head hung over his shoulder, and his limbs almost refused their office. He tottered as he stood beneath the fatal beam, and had to be supported to the instant of the falling of the weight which drew him into mid-air. At a given signal the cord was snapped asunder by the executioner's broad-axe, and Nathaniel Gorden, the slave-trader was launched into the presence of the Great Judge of all the Earth.

Immediately upon the hoisting of the body a few convulsive twitches followed, the veins of the neck and hands swelled and stood out like cords for a brief while, then the limbs lost their rigidity, the blackened flesh assumed a livid hue, and the slave-trader, now a lump of dishonored clay, swung slowly to and fro in the frosty air.

After being suspended the usual time, the corpse was lowered upon a bier, and conveyed into an unoccupied room in the prison, where Coroner Collin proceeded to hold an inquest on the body.

Two witnesses to the hanging of deceased testified to the manner of his death; and Dr. Thos. Robinson, who held a post mortem examination of the body, testified that death was caused by asphyxia, and the Jury rendered a verdict to that effect. It appeared that the neck of the deceased was not broken.

The body of the hanged man was then given over to the friends, residing in Williamsburgh, where it will be taken previous to interment.

Such was the end of the first slaver fairly punished for his crimes in the United States of America.

Letters From Paterson.

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 12th, 1862.

MR. EDITOR: The Young Men's Course of Lectures, previously mentioned in my correspondence, was continued with an address by the Rev. Mr. Scudder, of Passaic, on Wednesday evening, 6th inst. Subject: Wealth and Labor. In the course of his remarks, the Rev. gentleman spoke of the great advantages a power wealth confers upon its possessor, of the great efforts made for its acquisition, and of the grinding despotism it exercises over the laborer. He also spoke of the diffiulties capital interposes in the way of the laborer seeking wealth—of a party in this country that speculates on the laboring man, &c. &c. It is impossible, however, to do justice to the lecturer in this brief sketch. Suffice it, therefore, to add that the subject, which as sometimes presented is rather abtruse for a popular audience, had been carefully studied, and was ably handled by the worthy speaker.

I take pleasure in informing you that "Hightie" and her claims are receiving recognition in Paterson, New Jersey. For instance, a dealer in coffees, &c., who has entered the business lately, discarding the old term St. Domingo, labels some of his goods "Haytian coffee," &c.

Honor to Hayti, and to Prof. Faatz, the gentleman referred to. OCCASIONAL.

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 17th, '62.

MR. EDITOR: Having missed the presence of your correspondent "Occasional" from his comfortable pew in Zion M. E. Church, I presume his too attentive attendance to the Saturday evening soirees has incapitated him for the ensuing day, so allow me to indite you a few lines on church matters. The preacher in charge of Zion Church, Rev. L. C. Scudder, is laboring assiduously for the spiritual welfare of his little flock. Peter Jackson, recently licensed to exhort, is also creating a favorable impression by his genial disposition and pleasant manners. Last Friday evening the members of the church to the number of eighteen, of both sexes, paid their pastor, who resides at Passaic, a visit. The sleighing being excellent we soon arrived there. One of the young gents of the party having given the pastor a hint of our coming, the party was welcomed in true country style by the worthy Domine's lady who spread a repast, to which the party did ample justice. After leaving our little donations with the pastor, the party returned to the city highly delighted with their sleigh ride. Mr. Wm. Van Renselaer with his usual modesty has declined to give his lecture in the young men's course.

YOUNG HICKORY.

SOUTHERN PHILANTHROPISTS.

A correspondent of the N. Y. 'Tribune,' writing from Cincinnati under date Feb. 3d, furnishes the following statement:—

"A gentleman and his wife recently arrived in this city from New Orleans were recognized by many of our colored population as persons who had for many years devoted themselves to the interests of the colored people in that city. They were compelled to leave the scene of their labors. They will renew them here, and are now maturing a plan for a Colored Children's Aid Society in our city. Will not the friends of humanity in other cities see if they cannot do something for colored children, so as to have them grow up living arguments of that race's fitness for freedom? Jefferson said that he who made two blades of grass grow where only one grew before was a greater benefactor of his race than the greatest conqueror. And would it not be well that the speculations to which this race has usually given rise, as to how the growth of cotton, rice and sugar may be enlarged, should for a while be superseded by the question how to make two thoughts grow in their brains where only one grew before?

NEGRO MELODIES.—Mr. Cuthbert, one of the Beaufort planters, who, we see told by the papers, is the father of Rev. Mr. Cuthbert, late of Philadelphia, was seized by the Federal forces on his plantation; and while he was being rowed on board a ship, a prisoner, on his own boat, and by his own slaves, they burst out into singing, to the tune of one of their rude hymns, making the versicles as they went along:

De Norfmen dey's got massa now,
De Norfmen dey's got massa now,
De Norfmen dey's got massa now,
Hallelujah.
Oh! massa a rebel; we row him to prison.
Hallelujah.
Massa no whip us any more.
Hallelujah.
We have no massa now, we free.
Hallelujah.
We have de Yankees, who no run away.
Hallelujah.
Oh! all our old massas run away.
Hallelujah.
Oh! massa going to prison now.
Hallelujah.

THE SLAVES AND THE WAR.—It is often asked what the Southern slaves think of the war, and the following from a gentleman recently from New Orleans, will be interesting as indicating their position. He says:—

"The blacks have been educated fast within the last six months. They are a different race from what they were. Their docility is a thing of the past and their masters stand appalled at their transformation. In several of the parishes about New Orleans, what were believed to be the germs of dangerous insurrections have been several times discovered within the past few months. In St. Mary's thirteen slaves were shot at one time. The South have thought it would aid their plans by telling the slaves that the enemy of the Union was the 'army of freedom,' and the blacks believeit.

COLORED SOLDIERS IN NEW ORLEANS.—The N. O. 'Picayune' of Jan. 10, gives an account of a grand review of the rebel troops in that city on the previous day, from which we copy the following significant paragraph:

"We must also pay a deserved compliment to the companies of free colored men, all very well drilled, and comfortably uniformed. Most of these companies, quite unaided by the Administration, have supplied themselves with arms, without regard to cost and trouble. One of these companies, commanded by the well-known veteran, Capt. Jordan, was presented, a little before the parade, with a fine war flag, of the new style. This interesting ceremony took place at Mr. Cushing's store, on Camp, near Common street. The presentation was made by Mr. Bigney, and Jordan made on this occasion one of his most felicitous speeches."

It is evident that the rebels at least have no tender sensibilities on the score of employing colored men as soldiers.—Brooklyn Star.

AN AFRICAN GOVERNMENT IN BETTER CREDIT ABROAD than the Southern Confederacy.—It is well known that on the first breaking out of the rebellion, the confederates sent several agents abroad to implore their recognition, and to negociate bonds with European capitalists. The principal agents were W. L. Yancey, Dudley Mann, Thos. Butler King, and Judge Rost, (of Louisiana.) Thus far they have not succeeded in obtaining the sought for recognition, or in raising money abroad on their cotton loan bonds. European capitalists would not touch these bonds at any price. So much for the boasted credit of the Southern Confederacy abroad.

Now mark the difference. A few weeks ago, the Emperor of Morocco, through his agents, offered a new Moorish loan on the London Stock Exchange for twelve hundred thousand pounds sterling, equal to six million of dollars, bearing seven per cent interest, and running thirty years, for which the revenues for customs were pledged.—The loan was offered to raise money to pay the Spanish indemnity, to procure the evacuation of the fortress of Tteuan.—This loan was received with extraordinary favor, and all taken on the first day. A London telegram received at Liverpool and published in New York, on the arrival of the City of Washington, says: "The Moorish loan was regarded with so much favor that the bids had reached ten times the amonnt needed."—St. Louis Democrat.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coshocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhera.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED, BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.

2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.

3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.

4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.

5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.

6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.

7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

THE
PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC,

Containing besides the Calendar and Copious Astronomical Statistics, a History of the Great Rebellion, Biographical Sketches of the Prominent Military Officers, a Dictionary of Military Terms, very full information relative to Military Matters of interest to the people at large, National Hymns, Incidents, Anecdotes, &c., &c.

Published and for sale by DEXTER & Co., 17 Spruce street. Newsboys and others wanted to make sales.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess or dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing: and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefitted by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
THOS. R. CROCKER,
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.
D. W. INGERSOL,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 12th, 1855.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,
JAMES EDWIN HALSEY,
123 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Headache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want and safe article.
ALBRO LYONS.
20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway; Mrs. Staat's, 78 Thompson St.; Chas. H. Ring's, 155 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,
WM. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.
Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rhenbarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb hat grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Billious Stomach, Billious Bowels, Billious Colic, Billious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a billious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver-Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Warranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangemen of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat o sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply be cause they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat all.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occassionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK.
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Product
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions.

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St., N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin $1.00

CONTENTS:

EMBELLISHMENT—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Conner.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or he Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James McCune Smith.
Claude Brindis De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Meal Buckingham.—Anon.
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend,
the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson
Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James McCune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Mercer Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Garry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W. Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs. M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Garry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. Nell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo., 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

Th Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S. H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on slavery, and the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp. 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 294 pp. 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 88 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler,
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel, between decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses, viz., 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed.
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz. or $8 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland.
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859–60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
60 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pilan. Price, 25 cents, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 32 NEW YORK, MARCH 8, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENTS

The Weekly Anglo-African.

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY SATURDAY

BY ROBT. HAMILTON

NO. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.

Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.

All communications for the paper must be addressed
ROBT HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, New York

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY

PART II

> Hear the word!—who fight for freedom!
> Shout it in the battle van!
> Hope! for bleeding human nature!
> Christ the God, is Christ the Man!
>
> H. BEECHER STOWE

CHAPTER XXVI.

GREAT GATHERING AT MADAM CORDORA'S

But a peep in at this unsuspected gathering would give an idea of its designs and general character.

Among the leading persons were Juan Montego, Ferdinand Ricardo, Pedro Castina, Stephano Revira, and other noted gentlemen; Madam Cordora and Ambrosina, the wife and daughter of a deceased wealthy mulatto merchant; Madam Cordelia Barbosa, a wealthy young quadroon widow; Madam Evelina Sebastina, a refined wealthy mestizo lady; Carolus Blacus, a wealthy black tobacco dealer; Madam and Senorita Seraphia, his wife and daughter, both accomplished black ladies; Andro Camina and Madam Tripolia and Tripolina, his lady and daughter, a refined family of wealthy blacks, retired on a great fortune; and Justin Pompa, a distinguished black artist of rare accomplishments, composed a part of this unique gathering, many of whom till a late hour at night had been anxiously looked for and expected at the palace of the Captain General to complete the assembly at the national fete.

Among those of note, but humble pretensions, were Mendi, the captive chief; and Abyssa, the trading woman of Sondan.

During the evening a general privilege was extended to any of their race in the confidence of a Seclusion, to pass and repass during the gathering. Nor were they in the least slighted. Everything was systematically arranged, the organization being complete. Juan Montego was head of the occasion, and where he presided nothing was neglected; consequently every guest and visitor went through an ordeal of the closest possible inspection.

Abyssa, who had for a long time set closely eying the entire company, involuntarily gave vent to an exclamation of prayer.

'Is she crazy?' inquired Louis Chevora, a wealthy quadroon planter from Principe, who, unaccustomed to such promiscuous mingling with people of every complexion of his race, laughed in ridicule.

'No, she's not crazy; her head is as clear as a sunbeam,' tartly replied Montego, who was a great admirer of the simple but great and good hearted female African captive.

'You will know before we separate the meaning of that prayer,' whispered Castina in the ear of Chevora, who had attended but one gathering, and knew nothing of the Seclusions.

It was full the eleventh hour before the gathering was complete, and except at intervals a ballad and guitar accompaniments by the voluntary offering of some young lady present, there had been no music during the evening.

All were now seriously silent; every one no doubt deeply reflecting on the great event and momentous occasion which had brought them together.

Suddenly, as if by magic, the whole company simultaneously rose to their feet. With silent and suppressed demonstrations, men and women waved hand and handkerchief, Blake and Placido entering at the instant when the amateur orchestra, instrumental and vocal, commenced in strains most impressive:

> "All hail thou true and noble chief,
> Who scorned to live a cowering slave:
> Thy name shall stand on history's leaf,
> Amid the mighty and the brave!
>
> Thy name shall shine a glorious light
> To other brave and fearless men,
> Who like thyself in freedom's might,
> Shall brave the robber in his den:
>
> Thy name shall stand on history's page
> And brighter, brighter, brighter glow,
> Throughout all time, through every age,
> Till bosoms cease to feel or know
>
> Created worth or human woe!
> Thy name shall nerve the patriot's hand,
> When mid the battle's deadly strife,
> The glittering bayonet and brand
>
> Are coming with the stream of life:
> When the dark clouds of battle roll,
> And slaughter reigns without control,
> Thy name shall then fresh life impart
> And fire anew each freeman's heart
>
> Though wealth and power their force combine
> To crush thy noble spirit down,
> There is above a power divine
> Shall bear thee up against their frown."

The effects of the reception ballad was electrical—every kind of demonstration, indicating the soul's deep sympathy and heartfelt hatred to oppression, with cautious suppression, was made in silence. There stood Abyssa bathed in tears, moaning with joy in African accents, while Mendi with outstretched arms fell upon his knees in thankfulness to God for what he had witnessed. Louis Chevora, the quadroon planter, unprepared to see a negro chosen leader of the great scheme of Redemption, was singularly embarrassed and awkward.

'Why I didn't know it was you! I am glad to see you! I wasn't expecting to meet you here!' confusedly expressed the almost bewildered man on being introduced to Blake, whom he had never before seen nor even heard of, as entering the city the evening before and attending but one gathering, he knew nothing of the seclusions, to whom alone the hero was known.

A general rush was made each seeming to envy the other who succeeded before him in getting a grasp of the hand of Henry Blake the Leader of the Army of Emancipation and originator of the scheme to redeem them from slavery and an almost helpless degradation. On this occasion Pino Golina proved himself master of the favorite instrument of his father land, the African bango. In solos of strains the sweetest the Spanish guitar proved but a secondary instrument compared with the touching melodies of the pathetic bango in the hands of this negro artiste.

This instrument heretofore neglected and despised by the better class among them, at once became the choice and classically refined, by the nearest and dearest historic reminiscences among them, by an association with the evening of the great gathering from a seclusion of which, the momentous question of immediate redemption or an endless degradation and bondage was to be forever settled. From these associations and remembrances, the Nigration bango could thenceforth be seen in the parlors and drawing rooms of all of the best families of this class of the inhabitants.

The demonstrations to Placido were only less than those given to the Chief, and could they have but given expression to their feelings, a shout would have rent the air for 'Blake and Placido,' such as never before had been heard in Havana. Singing and executing of the guitar and bango by the Misses Seraphina Blacus and Ambrosina Cordora, both young handsome and accomplished, were very much appreciated by the delighted assemblage. These young ladies were great favorites at the Palace of the Captain General, where the piano-forte and their favorite stringed instruments seldom had their equals to execute upon them. The black surgeon Pino Golino, was their only rival and superior on these instruments.

Madam Cordora on this occasion was particularly happy, aided in her untiring efforts to make others so, by the generous great hearted Montego. All that wealth and refinement, modified by simplicity and an entire absence of ostentation and display—except indeed the richly furnished mansion and valuable table plate and jewelry so much in taste with Spaniards, could accomplish was contributed. Her own exemplary deportment and high toned conversation, the edifying discourses of Montego, the elevated influence and domeanor of the Blacus family and such persons, made the assemblage one that bore no disparaging comparison with the splendid fete then being held in guilded drawing rooms of the Government Palace.

To complete the portentious gathering and crown their hopes with the highest expectation, there were Placido the cousin, adviser and counsellor, and Henry Blake, the master spirit of the occasion.

The refreshments were simple, mainly consisting of fruits, biscuit, cheese, chocolate, coffee, and cool drinks with no virious beverage at all. There were no empty parade and imitative aping, nor unmeaning pretentions observed in their doings, but all seeming fully to comprehend the importance of the ensemble. They were earnest, firm, and determined; discarding every thing which detracted from their object, permitting nothing to interfere. Thus intelligently united, a dangerous material existed in the midst of such an element as Cuba.

In the midst of their enjoyment a person made his appearance at the main door of the drawing rooms causing no little alarm, though they knew he must have been a seclusionist to have passed the scrutiny of Montego and reached where he was. This person was a black a little above medium height, strong physical conformation, with fine expression of countenance, attired in blue nankin pantaloons, buff vest, white linen jacket, collar of shirt turned over the jacket collar, tied with a broad black ribbon, white half hose, long low quartered black morocco slippers tied with narrow black ribbon, his right hand in which he held a black slouch silk cap, carelessly akimbo, leaning with left shoulder against the door casing. His dress being that of a domestic, heightened the suspicion, as he might have been a spy sent by the whites. For this reason he was closely reconnoitered by many who designedly positioned themselves near him.

'This beats the alabasters over yonder, all to pieces!' he was heard to say to himself, comparing the gathering with the fete at the palace, as with a bland smile he stood gazing in upon such an assemblage of his own people, as he had never before witnessed.

'Who is that suspicious looking person peeping into the drawing room?' enquired Julia Chevora, the wife of the Principe planter, addressing herself to Ambrosina who hastily cited her mother to the supposed intruder.

'Why that is Gofer Gondolier the caterer of the Palace,' replied Madam Cordora, calling the attention of Montego to him.

'Come in Gofer, come in!' invited Montego approaching were he stood near the door.

'Things look too warm in there for me colonel,' replied he with a slow and meaning shake of the head, when pointing at a bango lying upon a pier table he continued 'but ef you han' me that thing out here, ef I don't make 'er hum I wouldn't tell you so!' Laughing Montego turned away relating to the ladies his short interview with the caterer, speaking highly of his integrity as a man though humbly positioned in life.

'Come in Gofer Gondolier—feel yourself at home, as I'm sure you are welcomed by every body here,' insisted Madam Cordora; 'this is not the Palace of the Captain General filled with whites. Come in and take a seat!' Gofer acknowledged the honor, bowed himself quite into the drawing room.

'Now Gondolier,' said Castina who sat as guard at the door, on resigning his seat and handing him the sword 'I leave you my post in charge, see that you do your duty!'

'I will sir, and ef a candle face gits by me, it'll not be tel' after I knock the light out of it!' drolly replied he, referring to the gens d'armes or such other whites as might be out on espionage. 'But I got a better thing than this!' he said, holding out and looking at the sword, with a wag of his head.

'What is that curiously constructed instrument you have there Gofer; will you show it to me?' asked Castina, on seeing under his jacket on the left breast, a large weapon.

'Oh, nothing, sir, but a knife. I thought as you had a gathering to night that you might have some carving to do, an' as I just finished that business at the Palace, I thought I'd come over and help here,' replied he.

'Carving! Do you call that a carving knife?' earnestly enquired Castina, as Gondolier handed him the formidable instrument.

'I do sir!' replied Gofer.

'Where did you get it?'

'I made it sir.'

'You made it!' with surprise enquired Castina.

'I did sir, I cut the pattern out of a barrel stave, and had the knife manufactured to order.

'What motives had you in doing so?'

'That on a general rising the blacks in every house might have good weapons without suspicion.'

'I can't see how this could be effected without detection, as they must be made and sold by the whites,' judiciously replied Castina.

'If you can't, I can sir, because anything originating among the people about the Palace, the Captain General always receives with favor, giving orders to be supplied; and I being his butler and chief caterer, these orders go through me. So you see sir, by making a carving knife, I present something that comes in general use as a domestic and family convenience, with which every person may supply himself without suspicion, especially the blacks who are not only great imitators of the whites as they say we are, but also great eaters as we know ourselves to be,' intelligently explained Gondolier.

'Gracious!' exclaimed Castina, examining the weapon; 'what a formidable thing it is to be sure! You must be a man Gondolier to have conceived such an idea.'

'If I wasn't I wouldn't be here sir,' promptly replied Gofer.

'I mean sir, that you are worthy to be here!' explained Castina.

'That is just what I mean sir,' continued he. 'If the poet hadn't known me to be such, as I was only a domestic in the palace where he and the colonel were visitors, he never would admitted me to the gatherings, nor took me into the seclusions.'

'You are right Gondolier, you are right, and shall hence forth hold a place among us higher than the position of caterer at the National Palace; it shall be here!' said Castina, placing his hand upon his breast over his heart.

'Noble fellow!' said Montego to Madam Cordora; 'he's worthy of a better position than his former one, and he shall have it.'

'Noble fellow!' simultaneously uttered the vast gathering who during the colloquy had their attention turned in that direction.

Madam Cordora herself served up refreshments which were borne to him by her daugher Ambrosina, who with her hand gently resting on his shoulders, sat supporting in her lap a silver plateau, from which he was supplied. These marks of kindness quite surprised Gondolier, who not expecting such notice and attention rising to his feet, bowing expressed acknowledgments for the honor recived at their hands.

'But your knife Senor Gondolier, on this occasion will be of no use to you; there being no meats to carve,' said Madam Cordora.

With a significant shake of the head, Gondolier implied that the carving he had reference to was quite of a different kind.

The weapon from its original peculiarity excited much interest and no little alarm among the novices and less experienced among them, especially the female portion. Its breadth was that of the widest common carving knife. He simply called it the 'Cuban Carver,' ort 'Gondolier's carving knife.'

About the first watch of the morning—the hour of one—the Seclusion met, holding a Grand Council, consisting of Henry Blake, Placido, Montego, the Blacuses, Carolus and Antonio, Castina, Ricanda, Revira, Camina, the Captive Chief, Madam Cordora, Maggie Blake, Madam Barbosa, Madam Blacus, Madam Sabastina, Abyssa Sondan, and Madams Camina, the Misses being admitted by courtesy, they having the confidence of the Seclusion. Gofer Gondolier stationed on the outside of the door, desired, as he said, no better weapon of defence than his own carving knife.

The Seclusion was held on the South West corner of the mansion in an airy attic room, reserved for the purpose, where subsequent to the maturest deliberation, the most concise measures were entered into—Henry Blake presiding, and Placido secretary, completed the organization for the evening. Preliminaries were fully decided on, and a time specified for holding the Grand Official Council of the Seclusion, when officers both civil and military for their future government were to be appointed.

At the third watch of the morning as the great bell told three, the Seclusion arose, when a social company, unknown to their superiors in society, separated; more portentous to the political interests of Cuba, than any similar gathering in the history of the colony.

From the Independent.

THE LAST DAYS OF TOUSSAINT L'OUVERTURE.

A VISIT TO THE FORT DE JOUX.

BY JOHN BIGELOW.

Returning to Paris by way of Lausanne from a hurried trip to Geneva last winter, I took the somewhat unusual route over the mountains to Pontarlier. I wanted to get a view, if possible, of Mont Blanc from the heights of the Jura; to become better acquainted with the people of this department of France, whom of all the French I most admire; and, above all, to visit the famous Chateau de Joux, where Mirabeau was confined at the time he contracted his scandalous engagement with Madame de Monnier, the "Sophie" of his Vincennes correspondence, and where Toussaint L'Ouverture died, a victim to the treachery of the French Government and the severity of an Alpine climate.

* * *

As the dilligence passed under the Fort de Joux, the chief object of my pilgrimage before reaching Pontarlier, I dismounted, allowing my baggage to go on to the bureau de post. The fort, now more than seven centuries old, stands upon the very summit of a solid rock about five hundred feet high, which descends very abruptly on all sides, and by its position at a defile in the mountains, commands the approach from every direction. With three hundred men it was impregnable in former times, notwithstanding which, in consequence of its great value as a frontier fortification, it has changed hands more frequently than almost any fortress in France outside of Paris.

I found a small garrison at the fort, consisting mostly of soldiers just returned from Italy, who were lounging about in the last stages of disgust with the monotonous perch to which they were condemned. A chatty old woman, who acted as concierge, promptly responded to my request to visit the Castle, by running for her keys. She then led me over the portcullis, the ornaments of which showed that it was built before battle axes and bows and arrows went out of fashion, into the court-yard where the Commandant resided. The first curiosity to which she invited my attention was the well of the Castle, dug through the solid rock, down to the level of the little river Orbe, which winds along the base of the hill, a depth of at least five hundred feet. My cicerone, to give me some idea of the depth of the well, threw in some stones, from which no sound or echo of any kind came up. This well was built for the use of the garrison during a seige, though in ordinary times they are supplied with water caught in cisterns. It has not been used for many centuries, if ever; the citadel, when it has changed hands, having generally been betrayed, or shared the fate of battles fought elsewhere.

The well was built, my guide told me—and her information I have confirmed from other sources—by the serfs and vassals of the feudal proprietor of the fort, in the ninth century. She lowered her voice when she added that multitudes who went down to work in the abysses never returned to the light of day. Indeed, the tradition is that they were told when they were sent to their work that they were not to return till it was finished. They were obliged to dig large recesses at regular and convenient distances in the sides of the pit, as their excavations progressed, and these were their homes during their frightful imprisonment, from which most were relieved only by death.

Of all the dreadful shapes which "man's inhumanity to man" has ever taken, there are few which feed the imagination with more fearful visions of misery and despair than were reflected from this dark, impenetrable mirror, framed five hundred feet deep in granite. When I considered that all the enormities of which this structure had been the occasion and the theatre, were perpetrated in the quest of water, in all ages and countries the consecrated emblem of truth, I was struck for the thousandth time with the resemblance which runs through all the forms of human perversity.

While pondering the question whether France had gained any more substantial advantage from her endless and sanguinary ecclesiastical wars than from the sinking of this dismal pit, which the dews of heaven, that fall alike upon the unjust and the just, made superfluous, my guide led me to another part of the fort, where she showed me an opening like a closet in the wall, about three feet deep and high, and, perhaps, four feet long. Here, she informed me, Amaury, one of the earliest proprietors of the chateau, confined his wife, a young woman of only seventeen years, for infidelity to him during his absence with the Crusaders in the Holy Land in 1170. He hung her suspected paramour upon the mountain immediately opposite, and confined Bertha—that was her name—in this mural sepulcher, which was too small to admit of her standing erect or lying prostrate, or indeed of stretching her limbs in any direction. The only view of the outer world that she could get, was through a little window, cut so that she could see the remains of her lover dangling from a distant tree. After some ten years of indescribable misery, death released her from her prison and from her brutal jailer.

The good old woman who related this legend tearfully—although I have no doubt she had told it a thousand times before—gave great force to her denunciation of the cruel crusader by adding that, "after all, Bertha was innocent." I fear, however, that this was a slight rhetorical embellishment, which, as a woman and a sister, she felt at liberty to indulge me with, for I have since seen a historical sketch of Pontarlier and its neighborhood, made by M. Girod, the librarian of the city and a most diligent and faithful archivist, in which Bertha's frailty is conceded. This fact, however, does not in the least diminish the horror which such a monument of cruelty and brutality inspires in our day.

Crossing the court and passing along the gloomy corridor of stone, I was next led to a door which, as my companion proceeded to unfasten, she informed me was occupied by the "naygre." It was the dungeon of Toussaint, first called "L'Ouverture" by a French officer, because of his military prowess in opening the ranks of the English soldiers with his sword during some engagement. Though of African origin, and forty-eight years a slave, he took advantage of the revolutionary troubles in France, and subsequent hostilities between France and England, to make the blacks of St. Domingo independent, and himself President for life. Bonaparte, who approved of the lead he took in saving the colony from the English, was solicited to approve the action of the Central Assembly which made him President. Toussaint's letter bore the following somewhat memorable but not altogether conciliatory superscription, "The first of the blacks to the first of the whites." Bonaparte's answer was taken out by Leclerc, his brother-in-law, and thirty thousand of the best troops in France, who issued a proclamation apprising the islanders that the French General had been sent out as the first magistrate and captain-general of the colony. Toussaint bade him and his master defiance, set fire to the Cape, retired to the mountains, and resisted the invaders with such success that at the end of eight months Napoleon's brother-in-law had but three thousand effective men out of the thirty thousand that had landed with him. Finding it impossible to conquer Toussaint, Leclerc invited him to a conference, under the usual pledges for his safety, and when in his power, regardless of his own honor or that of his master, or of the nation so gravely compromised by his conduct, he hustled the too confiding negro on board of a ship and sent him to France. After a brief continement in the Temple at Paris, Napoleon ordered him to the Fort de Joux. The room which he occupied, and to which I was now introduced, is some twenty five or thirty feet long, by, say, twelve broad. There was a fire-place on one side near the middle, but no furniture of any kind. Its walls were all of stone, and arched with stone overhead. Near the ceiling one end was pierced by a small window which admitted what light and air the inmates were expected to enjoy, but which seemed enough to keep the place sufficiently dry for habitation. On the mantel over the fire-place was the lower half of a skull, most of the brain-cover having been taken off, and resting on what remained, was the following avis, which my guide forbade my copying, as contrary to the orders of the commandant, and for a transcript of which, as for many other gratifying attentions, I was indebted to M. Girod, to whose archeological and historical labors I have already made allusion:

"Toussaint L'Ouverture, who effected the enfranchisement of the negroes of his country, and in the day of his prosperity designated himself as the Bonaparte of St. Domingo, and who wrote to Napoleon, 'The first of the blacks to the first of the whites,' terminated his career in this casement of the donjon of Fort de Joux. It is pretended that he answered an aid-de-camp of the First Consul, who came to ask him where he had concealed his treasures: 'Say to your master that I will die before he shall know anything from me.'

"The Chef de Bataillon Amiot, commandant of the Place du Fort de Joux, found him here in a corner of his fire-place struck with apoplexie foudroyante, the 17th Terminal, the year 11. Some days before his death he declared that he had buried 15,000,000 in the mountains by slaves whom he had destroyed."

I felt indignant at finding such a gross calumny as this upon the character of one of the bravest, and, according to his opportunities, one of the most remarkable men of his day, perpetrated by the authority of the Government; and when I was refused permission to take a copy of it, my inference was that those who placed it there knew that it was one of those lies that would not bear ventilation, and therefore kept it from the public, but left it to do what it could quietly to poison the minds of all who made the pilgrimage to his tomb. I was afterwards satisfied by M. Girod that I did the French Government injustice, at least in one respect, for he assures me that no orders to prevent copies being made of the paper on the mantel, had ever been given to the concierge.

It is a shame, however, for the Government to perpetuate such an absurd scandal upon the memory of Toussaint, as that he destroyed the slaves who helped him hide his treasures; for the story not only is supported by no evidence, but it lacks the first element of plausibility. That he may have said he had treasures buried in St. Domingo, and that he may have added, for the purpose of being sent back to find them, that there were no living witnesses of their burial, is not impossible; but it is preposterous to suppose that such a man as Toussaint would have perpetrated such a gratuitous crime, or, if he did, that he would have told of it, without any apparent motive.

This story is the prejudice of "the first of the blacks" is as unfounded as another which has been current ever since Toussaint's death, and which is generally credited in Hayti now; that he was poisoned by the orders of Nepoleon, or at least upon the supposition that his speedy demise would gratify the Emperor. Even supposing there was some motive for getting Toussaint more completely out of the way than he was, which is hardly credible, the circumstances of his death are not matters of conjecture or suspicion, but of public record, and exempt the authorities of that day from any other responsibility for his sudden death than naturally attaches to his treacherous arrest and removal in mid-winter from the climate of the tropics, in which he was born and had lived sixty years, to a bleak Alpine region more noted than any other in France for the severity of its winters.

The day after his death two physicans of Pontarlier made an official examination of his remains, and certified that he died of apoplexy and pleuro-pneumonia. Their certificate, or proces verbal, as it is termed, is filed among the archives of the Hotel de Ville in Pontarlier, from whence M. Girod was kind enough to procure for me a copy duly authenticated, under the seal of the Mayorality of Pontarlier. As this certificate has never been in print, and as it finally disposes of a very painful suspicion which is still widely credited, I give it to you entire.

COPY OF THE MINUTES OF THE POST-MORTEM EXAMINATION OF TOUSSAINT L'OUVERTURE.

'We, the undersigned, Doctor of Medicine and Surgeon of the city of Pontarlier, pursuant to the invitation of citizen Amiot, Commandant of the Fort de Joux, and of Renaud, Justice of the Peace of the canton of Pontarlier, have gone to the said Fort de Joux, when, in their presence, we have proceeded to the opening and the examination of the body of the negro Toussaint L'Ouverture, prisoner, whose death yesterday we have verified.

POST-MORTEM EXAMINATION.

A little mucus mixed with blood in the mouth and on the lips, the left lateral sinus, the vessels of the pia-mater gorged with blood, serious effusion in the lateral ventricle same side the choroid pleurus infiltrated and strewed with hydatides, the pleura adhering almost entirely to the substance of the lungs; sanguineous engorgement of the right lung, as well as of the pleura, corresponding, but of a purulent nature in this viscera; a little fatty polypus in the right ventricle of the heart, which otherwise was in a natural state; emaciation of the epiploon—pathologicial state of this membrance such as it presents after a long sickness. The stomach, the intestines, the liver, the spleen, the veins, the bladder, exhibited no alteration.

In consequence, we declare that apoplexy, pleuropneumonia, are the causes of the death of Toussaint L'Ouverture.

Made, and certified to be true, at the Fort de Joux, the 18th Terminal, An. XI. of the French Republic.

(Signed)

TAVERNIER, Doctor of Medicine.
Surgeon-Major GRESSET.

Certified to conform with the original by us, the undersigned Secretary of the Mayorality of Pontarlier.

Pontarlier, 5th Dec., 1859.

(Signed) JACQUIT, etc

Through the kindness of M. Girod I was enabled to derive from the archives of Pontarlier some further particulars respecting Toussaint's condition and treatment during his confinement here, which seemed worthy of exhumation. They are embodied in documents, the originals of which I inspected, and of which I inclose to you copies.

The first simply acknowledges the notice sent to Prefecture of the Department by the Sub-Prefect, that Toussaint had arrived, and informs that functionary that the arrangements for the security of the prisoner are to be under the exclusive direction of the General in command of that division.

The second notifies the Prefect that the Minister of War had given orders that Toussaint should receive healthy and suitable food, and that he should be clothed suitably for the season, with the understanding that he must not wear a General's uniform.

The estimation in which their prisoner was held by the French Government, and the rigor of treatment to which they deemed it necessary to subject him, are revealed in the third letter from the Prefect of the Department to the Sub-Prefect at Pontarlier. The following extract from it might have been clipped, mutatis mutandis, from one of Governor Wise's heroic appeals to the chivalry of Virgina against John Brown:

"I recommend you," he writes, "not to lose sight of this important object. If any man imprisoned for the rest of his days, whatever the degree of his guilt, did not appeal to our humanity, I would say that this person, who is known only by his repeated perfidy, murders, pillage, incendiarism, and the most frightful cruelties, did not deserve any. But whatever be the opinion we ought to entertain of him, the orders of the Minister are precise. Toussaint must not see any person, nor must he be permitted to leave the chamber in which he is confined under any pretext whatever. The guard of the fort should be set with the greatest exactness, and without the relaxation of vigilance. The General of Division only can modify the rigor of these orders, and I know he will not do it without being authorized by the Minister. The commandant must sleep at the fort, unless specially authorized to the contrary by his superiors. The supplies of the prisoner have been prescribed. They must not be exceeded upon any pretext. Every excess will be stricken off from the account."

The next letter, No. 4, was written immediately after receiving intelligence of Toussaint's death. In it the Prefect says:

"You will also please, on the receipt of this letter, make an inventory, in the presence of the Commandant d'Armes, of all the effects used by the prisoner, and sell them at auction to the highest bidder, after the customary notices. You will prepare a report of the sale for me, and remit the proceeds of it to the widow Benedict upon her receipt, deducting the sums due her for her supplies."

From these documents and the other inclosed, of which I will not trouble you with an analysis, it appears, if the facts are reported faithfully—

1st. That Toussaint was guarded with unusual, if not excessive, rigor, and that the view taken of his character and career at that time by the War Department, whose agent declared that if there was an exception to the rule that pity was due to the unfortunate, Toussaint was the exception, was very different from that which is taken of him now by the world, and indeed by the French themselves, who through the mouth of the most inspired of their modern poets, have said of him, "Cet homme est une nation," and within fifty years after his cheerless death, accepted the lesson of his life by striking the chains off every slave held under a French title.

2d. They show that he was not poisoned, but that he died in all probability of a disease contracted in consequence of his involuntary removal to a colder and more intemperate climate than at his age—over sixty—his constitution, used to the warmth of the tropics, could endure.

3d. It appears that he was abundantly supplied with fuel and artificial light, for in two months these supplies cost one hundred and fifty-six francs, which, M. Girod assures me, is a very large allowance, for wood then was much cheaper, he says, than at the present day; and now several lights and two fires could be sustained six months for ordinary necessities at an expense not exceeding two hundred francs.

4th. That he had a servant for a while after his arrival, whether a negro or a Frenchman does not appear. From the general character of the instructions in reference to him, and in the absence of any special provision for the access to him of one of his own color, it is to be presumed that it was a Frenchman.

5th. That he was allowed to write and have some luxuries, such as nutmegs, sugar, bath, etc. These, I presume, came out of the four frances a day allowed him from the first for board, washing, and mending.

6th. It is apparent, unfortunately, suggests M. Girod, that the moderate sum of 128fr. 70c., which the effects supplied by the Government brought after only seven month's use, that his wardrobe was not probably supplied as it should have been for such a severe climate.

7th. And finally, it appears that a woman was provided to keep his apartment in order.

The order forbidding Toussaint to see any one not attached to the service of the garrison seems to have been unnecessarily rigorous, but it was probably aimed at Rigaud, Toussaint's ablest and most trusted aid in St. Domingo, who was captured very soon after his Chief, and sent to the Fort de Joux, where he remained until after Toussaint's death, when he was released. They never saw each other, though sleeping so near together, after they separated in St. Domingo.

Upon the walls of Toussaint's apartment I was surprised to find but one inscription from the hands of visitors; that was the name of Cataline Nau, a man whom I remember to have met at Port au Prince in 1854, where he discharged the functions of an Assistant Secretary of State, in the Department of Foreign Affairs, under Soulouque, and who had the credit, which I do not doubt he deserves, of having written the telling and statesmanlike dispatches of the Haytian Government in reply to the agents sent out by Fillmore and the English and French Governments many years ago, to compel the Emperor to acknowledge the independence of the Spanish or eastern part of the island. M. Nau is probably the only Haytian who has ever made this pious pilgrimage to the prison and tomb of the most renowned of African statesmen. M.

Nau I understand died within the last year much regretted by his countrymen whose interests he carefully watched and tended during his life.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, MARCH 8, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

A CARD.

To the friends of the Weekly "Anglo-African" in New York and vicinity.

Fellow Citizens:—When I announced through the columns of this paper, that some of the children of this city and Brooklyn would sing at a concert to be given last Monday evening, for the benefit of the paper, I expected a most generous response from you; knowing, as I did, your sentiments toward the enterprise. I accordingly secured the largest and most central place that could be found, believing this to be necessary for the accommodation of the dense mass that I knew would attend. And when I stated that the performance would take place regardless of the weather, I could not have anticipated such a night—a night of thunder, lightning and floods of rain. To think that six hundred of you should have left your comfortable homes to attend the concert on such a night, fills my heart with emotions of the liveliest gratitude. But what shall I say to the parents and guardians of the children that sung on the occasion?

My dear friends, regardless of the peltings of the pitiless storm—regardless of the health of the dear little ones, you brought them there to do their part toward laying sure and firm the foundations of this paper; for doing this I return you, in the first place my individual thanks, but as the representative of an enterprise which the spirit of the age, and the needs of the colored people demand should be made permanent; I return you ten thousand thanks. I would have accomplished all that was desired, had it not been for the storm; but it is a great satisfaction to know that our failure to do so was owing to a cause beyond our control.

But although it was, in the pecuniary sense a partial failure, my expenses for the concert, and my indebtedness to my printer being quite heavy; yet in a social and political point of view, it was the grandest success ever witnessed in New York.

Fellow citizens, you meant to say by your presence on that dreadful night, that the colored people of this country should have one weekly paper devoted entirely to their interest, and by God's help they shall have it. In order to keep the paper alive, I have for the last six months, wandered through the dark paths of poverty and want: and I suppose that I shall be obliged to continue to do so for sometime to come. But darkness and doubt have left those paths forever. The rememberance of that night shall be my "pillow of cloud" by day and my "pillow of fire by night," to guide me into the haven of perfect success.

To Miss Sarah Ennalls, principal, and Miss C. Harley, Miss Dawley, and Miss A. E. Symonett, assistants in Primary Department of Colored Public School No. 2 in Laurens street, and Mr. John Peterson, principal of Colored Grammar School No. 1 in Mulberry street, for invaluable aid rendered; also to the youth from their schools, and to Messrs. Thomas R. Williams and Hannibal Ritter, Misses Caroline Brown, Pauline Green, Letitia Smith, Burtha Burnett, Cynthia Wilson, Alice Taylor and Sarah E. Cary, and William Bronaugh, I tender my most grateful thanks.

Believing that the attendance on Monday last to be but an indication of the manner in which my next appeal shall be answered,

I remain your humble servant,

Robert Hamilton.

THE HISTORIAN BANCROFT ON JUDGE TANEY.

From Mr. Bancroft's oration at the Corporation Banquet on Washington's birthday, Feb 22d.

"The only ground of hope for the perpetuity of our unity, you will find, men of New York, in the words of Washington, spoken in this city. When, in the presence of your fathers, Washington standing under the canopy of the sky, took the oath to support the Constitution, he returned into the Senate Chamber to interpret to the 1st Congress the principles of our great charter, and the fit policy for the nation to pursue. Then it was that he laid down as their rule "the pure and immutable principles of private morality," and "the eternal rules of Order and Right which Heaven itself has ordained." And the House of Representatives, using the pen of Madison to frame its answer, accepted his enlightened maxims, and owned the obligation to "adore that invisible hand, which has led the American people through so many difficulties, to cherish a conscious responsibility for the destiny of Republican liberty." On these principles, the Government, which makes us one people was put in motion, while the foundations of monarchy in France were crumbling away, and the beams that upheld the civilization of the middle ages were falling in. During the half century which succeeded, France underwent more revolutions than I can readily count up; Spain had many forms of government in rapid succession: the dynasty of Portugal was driven for refuge to South America; the empire of Germany went down in the whirlpool of revolution; Russia has been convulsed by a fearful plot for insurrection; Italy was many times reconstructed; the Pope lost and won temporal power, and has been almost shorn of it again; the institutions of Great Britain have been thrice essentially modified by the annexation of Ireland, by the reform of Parliament—which was in fact a revolution—and by opening the doors of its two houses to its men of all creeds. During all these convulsions the United States stood unchanged, admitting none but the slightest modifications in its charter, and proving itself the most stable Government of the civilized world. But at last "we have fallen on evil days." "The propitious smiles of Heaven"—such are the words of Washington—"can never be expected on a nation that disregards the eternal rules of order and right." During eleven years of perverse government those rules were disregarded, and it came to pass that men who should firmly avow the sentiments of Washington and Jefferson and Franklin and Chancellor Livingston were disfranchised for the public service; that the spotless Chief-Justice whom Washington placed at the head of our Supreme Court, could by no possibility have been nominated for that office or confirmed. Nay the corrupt influence invaded even the very home of justice. The final decree of the Supreme Court in its decision on a particular case must be respected and obeyed; the present Chief Justice has on one memorable appeal accompanied his decision with an impassioned declamation, wherein with profound immorality, which no one has as yet fully laid bare, treating the people of the United States as a shrew to be tamed by an open scorn of the facts of history, with a dreary industry collecting evidences of cases where justice may have slumbered or weakness been oppressed, compensating for want of evidence by confidence of assertion, with a partiality that would have disgraced an advocate neglecting humane decisions of Colonial Courts and the enduring memorials of colonial statute books in his party zeal to prove that the Father of our Country held the negro to have "no rights which the white man was bound to respect;" he has not only denied the rights of man and the liberties of mankind, but has not left a foothold for the liberty of the white man to rest upon. That ill-starred disquisition of Taney, who, I trust, did not intend to hang out the flag of Disunion, is the fountain-head of this rebellion; that offence to the conscious memory of the millions convulsed our country with the excitement which swept over those of us who vainly hoped to preserve a strong and sufficient, though narrow isthmus that might stand between the conflicting floods. No nation can adopt that judgment as its rule and live; the judgment has in it no element of political vitality. I will not say it is an invocation of the dead past; there never was a past that accepted such opinions. If we want the opinions received in the days when our Constitution was framed, we will not take them second-hand from our Chief Justice; we will let the men of that day speak for themselves. How will our American magistrate sink when arraigned, as he will be, before the tribunal of humanity; how terrible will be the verdict against him, when he is put in comparison with Washington's politcal teacher, the great Montesquieu, the enlightened magistrate of France, in what are esteemed the worst days of her monarchy. The argument from the difference of race which Taney thrusts forward with passionate confidence, as a proof of complete disqualification, is brought forward by Montesquieu as a scathing satire on all the brood of despots who were supposed to uphold Slavery as tolerable in itself. The rights of mankind, that precious word which had no equivalent in the language of Hindostan, or Judea, or Greece or Rome, or any anti-Christian tongue, found its supporter in Washington and Hamilton; in Franklin and Livingston; in Otis, George Mason and Gadsden; in all the greatest men of our early history. The one rule from which the makers of our first confederacy and then of our national Constitution never swerved is this: to fix no new constitutional disability on any one; whatever might stand in the way of any man from opinion, ancestry, weakness of mind, inferiority, or inconvenience of any kind, was itself not formed into a permanent disfranchisement. The Constitution of the United States was made under the recognised influence of "the eternal rule of order and right," so that as far as its jurisdiction extended, it raised at once the numerous class who had been chattels into the condition of persons: it neither originates nor perpetuates inequality.

John Clancy on George Bancroft.

The editor of the N. Y. "Leader," dreadfully exercised by the remarks made at the Corporation dinner on Washington's Birth-day by Mr. Bancroft on the Dred Scott Decision as delivered by Judge Taney, attempts to 'write down' that historian and orator, in an elaborate leader in the paper of that name, for March 1st, from which, the following is an extract:

"Now, who is George Bancroft? An effete member of the Mutual Admiration Society of Boston. An author, who has written a history of the United States, which, though not without merit, has, nevertheless, left a vivid impression upon the public mind, that the history of this country is yet to be written. As a professional literary man, he was unjustly favored by President Van Buren, with a high official position, it having been an amiable weakness of that distinguished statesman, which his true friends regretted at the time, to heap honors upon so-called literary men. Having finally sunk to his proper level at Boston, and his drafts upon the common stock being no longer honored at the exchange of the Mutual Admiration Society, he removed to this city. Here he has been almost unheard of, except now and then, at periods of public excitement, he has made desperate attempts to attract attention. The only really good chance he has had, was on Saturday last, and he made such a lamentable failure then, that his retirement is probably final."

As the "Leader" professes to be the mouth-piece of all that is left of the once powerful Democratic party, it is quite inexcusable for withholding, either through ignorance or malice, the facts in the life of George Bancroft which should answer the question "Who is George Bancroft?" and which prove him to have been, from his youth up, a main pillar and the most ornate column which gave support to the democratic party from the early days of Andrew Jackson until now. No man could be selected from all this land with better right to speak out and be heard as a democrat of the strictest sect, as to party, and more especially, as to principles.

Born in the last year of the last century, in 1813 George Bancroft entered, and in 1817 graduated from, Harvard University. In 1820 he went to Germany and completed a most thorough education at the best Universities of that land of various and profound learning. Then, and subsequently, he made the acquaintance and secured the friendship of such men as Eichorn, Schleiermacher, Bunsen, Guizot, Cousin and Benjamin Constant. His tastes led him especially to the Greek literature, and he drew his democracy from the writings of Plato. On his return home, in 1823, he founded the famous classical school of Round-Hill at Northampton in Massachusetts. But with all this learning he had not forgotten that he was one of the people; and in the teeth of the wealth and respectability of all Massachusetts, he formally identified himself with the democratic party in 1826 by an oration in favor of Universal Suffrage and uncompromising democracy. He made converts, and was twice elected to the general Court of Massachusetts, but in both instances declined. He was subsequently nominated for Governor of Massachusetts by the democratic party, and was difficultly defeated after a close and severe contest.

In 1838, as a recognized leader of the democratic party, in a Whig State, and according to the principles and precedents of the party, and not, as the "Leader" falsely states, for literary merits, he was appointed Collector of the port of Boston; and justified the appointment by a wholesome reform in the Custom House which saved to the Government millions of dollars in cash for what had hitherto been paid in bonds of doubtful value. From this point in his history the "Leader" is entirely oblivious of Bancroft's history; and for a good reason: to have published it would have been to acknowledge the great debt the party owes him, for, until its final dissolution, he was all that remained of its pristine principles and current respectability. For years past, old Tammany has been withheld from outer-darkness by the light which shone from his face and the eloquence which flowed from his lips; and we often think that the only stain which really rests upon his character, is, that he allowed party fealty so long to commit him to the odious task of holding together by the strength of his arm, and the purity of his character a political cabal far gone into decomposition by inly gathered corruption and venality. In the frightful orgies held in the old wigwam, in the midst of the dawdling sentimentalities or criminal obeisances to the slave power, there would ever shoot forth in some of the resolutions a flash of the old fire or a gleam of the ancient faith which would betray the practiced pen and pure mind of George Bancroft.

In 1845, Mr. Polk called Mr. Bancroft to the Cabinet as Secretary of the Navy. During his short incumbency he founded and organized the United States Naval School, which is the West Point for our Navy. In deference to Southern jealousy he established this school in the waters of the Chesapeake, whence Southern treachery has forced it into the ancient harbor of Newport. In 1846, Mr. Bancroft was appointed minister to Great Britain; whilst he held this office, graced by his genial manners and scholarly fame, he performed a duty which last of all men should be forgotten by the Irish-American John Clancey. A number of Irish-Americans were arrested in Ireland for complicity with the rebellion of 1848. Mr. Bancroft exerted all his power and abilities in their behalf, and did not cease until he secured their release as American citizens.

From 1826 until the present date, a period of thirty-six years, Mr. Bancroft has been constantly engaged in preparing and publishing a history of these United States, the merit of which is attested by the fact that it has been translated into most of the European languages, and has passed through no less than four editions in Germany. To this last fact, is due, in no small degree, our copious German immigration, as well as the real democracy of our German-American citizens. This work is tersely characterized by a competent critic as "a copious philosophical treatise tracing the growth of the idea of liberty in a country designed by Providence for its develeopement."

In regard to competency to criticise the historical portions of Judge Taney's ill-starred decision in the Dread Scott case, there is no living man who can compare with George Bancroft. A democrat by choice, he fraternised in sentiment with Judge Taney as to party. Moreover, he has devoted the best part of a long life to the study of those very opinions of the fathers of the republic and of the Christian world in relation to the nature and universality of the idea of Liberty for mankind. Not only public speeches and documents, but private memoirs and correspondence have been faithfully studied by this faithful historian. And the result is given, in the memorable condemnation of Judge Taney, which we give in another column. We can compare it to nothing else than the affixing to the traitor judge that punishment in this world which the ordinary course of Providence had reserved for him in the next; for which young democrats of the John Clancey school have a short and expressive phrase.

Having to some extent, answered the question of the "Leader," "Who is George Bancroft?" we hope it will not be taken amiss if we should, in turn, ask "Who is John Clancey?"

That portion of the city of New York infested by the "Dead Rabbits" claims the honor of his birth and the merit of his early culture. He was a good judge of whiskey before he was three days old. By the time most youngsters can say "mam-my" and "dad-dy," he could say "dam-de nagur" with a precociousness which set his parents wild with joy. He graduated at a roosterfight in Little Water street, and made advanced studies in dog-fights under the renowned Capt. K——n. A priest, who was "a friend to the family," having succeeded in bringing him to his first "confession," is alleged to have turned gray in horror at the boy's cool manner of detailing his attrocities. So far as was possible, young John reformed, took to learning, and in due time rose to "run wid-de-machine." And yet this reform—although all which his nature was capable of—wrought little improvement in the kernel of John Clancy. He could not rise beyond the besetting proclivities of his race, and hence was forced to find a master to worship and a fellow-man to beat and kick. These he found in the slaveholder and the negro.

We glean these traces of John Clancy not from the New American Encyclopedia—where we do find the names of George Bancroft and Frederick Douglass, of Benjamin Franklin and Benjamin Bancker, of Julia Ward Howe and Philis Wheatley—but from internal evidence contained in his paper, the "New York Leader." From the very sheet, nay in the very part of that paper, where we find the assault on George Bancroft we extract the following morsel:

"I really believe that many readers of the "Leader" are under the impression that none but those who delight in sparring exhibitions, prize-fights, bull-dogs and game-cocks take interest in what I say in my reports and reviews of pugilistic encounters."

"At the cockney sporting clubs, like Izzy Lazarus, &c. &c., the visitors are * * a different breed of dog. They are your skye and bull-terriers, while the others are jet black and tan, or Italian grey-hound."

In a previous number of the "Leader," the same distinguished contributor "Tom Quick," elaborately writes a column to show that the late Pat Mathews and Paudeen were martyrs to public opinion.

Need we add that the "Leader" is bitterly opposed to Fremont for trying to do something, and magnifies McClellan for doing nothing, against slavery in putting down the rebellion. The "Leader" is appropriately nourished in its vampire character by advertisements sucked out from the Surrogate's office. Such is John Clancy!

LETTER FROM HARTFORD.

Hartford, Ct., March 2, 1862.

Mr. Editor: It is some time since a letter appeared in the columns of your paper from Hartford. This city has been a great depot for soldiers for the last eleven months, and it has made things very lively. The streets have been thronged with sleighs, day and night, for three months and over, and the people have enjoyed themselves by exchanging visits with our Middletown brethren and sisters, by sleighing parties.

The ladies of the A. M. E. Z. Church, under the pastoral charge of Rev. G. H. Washington, have just closed a fair, at which they cleared $128 42. The choir attached to the same church gave an Old Folk's Concert at Turo Hall, Main street, a few evenings since, which was well attended. The object of this concert was to purchase a melodeon for said church. This church cost $6,000, and the Rev. G. H. Washington has just paid the last dollar on the property, and on the 14th of March we expect to hold a jubilee, at which time the Right Rev. Wm. H. Bishop, Superintendent, and Rev. Messrs. G. A. Spywood, Williams, Jones and Butler are expected to be present. Preaching afternoon and evening. The ladies will also give a festival in the vestry on the 17th of March. The Congregational Church, under the pastoral charge of Rev. A. N. Freeman, is in a very good condition; Mr. Freeman is very much beloved by his church and congregation.

D. P.

Sudden Death.—On Thursday morning of last week, the 13th inst., Jeremiah Buffett, a colored man residing at Sunk Meadow, started with a sleigh to bring Henry Treadwell (who had been staying with him some time and chopping wood in that neighborhood), to the poor house in this village, as Treadwell had been sick for several weeks and unable to work. On arriving at the house the keeper, not being authorized to receive any person into the house without an order from a Justice of the town, sent them to Justice Wood's; on arriving there the Justice was absent from home. Treadwell proposed to go to his sister's, who resided near by, and stay until the return of the Justice the next day. On arriving there the sister declined to take him in and sent him to his brother's. On turning from the house to go to the sleigh he said he would rather be dead than alive, and after walking a few steps toward the sleigh he fell down dead. The body was brought to Coroner Shepard, and by his direction taken to the house of Chas. Treadwell, brother of deceased, where an inquest was held. No special cause appearing for his sudden death, the verdict was that he came to his death by the visitation of God.—Huntington L. Islander.

AMUSEMENTS.

GRAND DEMONSTRATION OF FOUNTAIN UNION LODGE NO. 1 I. O. OF G. S. AND D. OF S.

This affair came off on the evening of the 27th Feb., at Zion Church. The attendance at the literary exercises was not very numerous, owing, doubtless, to the Grand Masonic festival given elsewhere on the same evening; but those who attended were highly delighted. A number of our popular speakers, including the Rev. H. H. Garnet, John Peterson and Wm. C. H. Curtis, Esqs., were present; but owing to the lateness of the hour (10 1-2 o'clock) when the exercises commenced, they could not speak.

The order of exercises were commenced by an eloquent prayer by the Rev. Moses Manning, followed by an ode which was sung by the societies.

Mr. P. H. Reason, after some introductory remarks, addressed the assemblage on the object of societies and the relation of woman thereto. As Mr. R. never speaks in public without having previously given his subject much thought, it is hardy necessary to say that his address did credit to the occasion. The lodges then sung another ode; after which a splendid Bible was presented to the Grand Lodge, E. D., by a committee of ladies, accompanied by some feeling remarks by Mr. Wm. R. Johnson in their behalf.

Mr. Geo. W. Hicks, National Grand Sire, made quite lengthy, but deeply interesting remarks concerning the Order generally. The Order then sang another ode; two of the three sung during the evening being original, having been composed expressly for the occasion, by Mr. John D. Bagwell. At the conclusion of these exercises the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. J. D. S. Hall and many of the audience retired to the basement of the church where a large number of ladies and gentlemen had already assembled to enjoy the repast there prepared. When we entered we found the company, which consisted of a very large number of "Good Samaritans," both colored and white, and many other persons, enjoying social chit-chat, which was continued through the night.

The "creature comforts" prepared for the occasion afforded ample satisfaction, and the company retired about 5 o'clock A. M., well pleased with the evening's enjoyment.

Wanderer.

THE MASONIC BANQUET.

The protecting arm and open hand of the Masonic brother hood were extended in behalf of the Widow and Orphan's Fund, at Mozart Hall, Broadway, on Thursday last, under the auspicies of the Right Worshipful National Grand Lodge for the State of N. Y. The prospects of the weather during most of the day awakened sad misgivings as to its influence upon their success, but toward evening the sun brightened hope, throwing off the dull veil of clouds, as though anxious to remove this obstacle to the success of the heaven born principle of the occasion. At 12 o'clock the Grand Lodge entered the ball room with her subordinate representatives and accompanied by Mount Calvery Commandery, with their banner bourne by Sir ——— Simmons, under the the Grand Marshal-ship of Sir John Brown. The pomp of the fraternity impressed the company deeply, and involuntarily the guests arose to their feet in deference to the oldest and loftiest institution known amongst men. As they paraded the room, we noticed in the procession the R. W. Grand Master Paul Drayton, whose imposing presence gave additional dignity to the occasion. We noticed, also, the venerable Geo. W. Hilton, Grand Master of the 95th degree of the Grand Orient of France, in the procession. After parading the room three times, the music suddenly changed from the Grand March to the gay dance, and the knightly feathers floated with charming damsels in the maze. The floor was fortunate in its consignment to the polished and (of course) gentlemanly management of Mr. Jas. Harding, whose extreme grace in this department, kept singing continually in our ears, the stereotyped expression, "polite as a dancing master." A contrast here imposes upon us, a duty never agreeable; we do not of all things else relish the duty any more than the cause of complaint, but public enjoyment requires scrupulous care and jealous circumspection in the management of a public entertainment, otherwise the effort fails, and the guests instead of being entertained may become disgusted and reflect unjustly upon the well designing. We have particular reference to the floor.

Mr. Voorhees who assisted in the management of the floor, quite surprised us, by his seeming utter contempt for the above quotation, "polite as a dancing master." To show how ungenteel we can be to those who decline to dance is unbecoming a respectable company, under respectable auspices, particularly, pulling and bellowing, and no one is better aware of this truth than] Prof. Voorhees. We ascribe this strange digression to the absence of the restraining and refined influence of his excellent lady who was not present.

The display upon the floor was bewildering, the ladies excelling in taste and beauty he general degree. As set after set formed and re-formed, we noticed Madam D——n of York st., straw colored Tarlton, flounced; Madam H——g of Bond st., stone colored silk and wreath; Madam M——n of Sullivan st., blue silk tissue, flounced; Miss M——n, book muslin, very neat; Madam T——n of Grand st., Lavender silk and wreath; Miss R——n of White st., white Tarlton, red, white and blue flounce; Madam F. R——n of [illegible] st., embroidered lace over blue silk; Miss T. [illegible]n of Bergen, white [illegible], black velvet bodice; Mrs. P——ge of Green st., pink Tarlton flounced; Miss S. C—s of 52d st., Organdie plaid, flounced; Miss R——s of 7th st., white figured muslin over pink skirt; Miss S——h of 15th st., figured brocade. A lady in black velvet, with pearl dress attracted much attention. Miss B——n of Jersey city, black silk, trimmed with roses, white lace cape; Miss A. W——ll of W. 15th st., stone colored silk, white lace bertha, rose buds; Madam F——n of 15th st., watered silk; Madam M. V——s of 7th st, figured lilac silk, lace bertha; Miss A. D——s of 20th st., black silk, dark purple trimming; Miss L——e of Flushing, black silk, velvet bask; Madam C——ll of Jersey city, green plaid silk, black lace bertha; Madam McC——ll of W. 27th st., drab figured poplin; Madam K——x of 52d st., black silk, white lace cape; Madam M——ll of Church street, figured lace over blue silk. The pretty young lady with coronet, black velvet jacket, white satin skirt and satin boots, whose name we did not learn, should wear green specks as a shelter to the susceptible from the luster of those eyes, for their brilliancy, together with those crimson dewey lips is rather subduing to young bachelors. What say you Mr. H—d—n?

The honor of the brotherhood was more than sustained by the magnitude of the promised banquet, which overdazzled the most delicate arrangements it has been our privilege to witness during the season. Beside the great profusion of turkies boned and otherwise, pigs, &c., with towering pyramids of maccaroni and ice cream the, "White House" graced the middle of the table, protected at either end by two forts, together with a man-of-war. The names of the Forts and vessel we did not learn, the committee in their industrious occupations having overlooked this matter until the work of demolition had too far advanced. Great quanties remained untouched. Fruits, Jellies, Blanc Mange, Oysters, &c., untouched were deserted with the Banquet Hall.

The Ball room was extensive and convenient, being nearly square and we should think capable of accommodating four sets. It was tastefully decorated with the banners of the order, but that of the Heroines was not there nor were the ladies. The band was under the leadership of Mr. Wm. F. Sturgis, a young man, pronounced by old masters to possess great musical genius, in which opinion the guests generally shared. We rejoice in the encouragement and success of the young talent represented by Messrs. Sturgis and Brown.

The exceeding vigilance in behalf of the guests exercised by the committee in the supper, hat, and dressing rooms, and by Mr. Harding in the Ball room, and in fact throughout, has established the well merited confidence of all admirers of taste and beauty.

Types.

The Children's Concert in Aid of the Weekly Anglo-African came off as per announcement, last Monday evening at Shiloh Church. It was under the management of Mr. Robert Hamilton, proprietor of this paper. As, of course, the result of such efforts depends much upon the state of the weather, the attaches of this office felt and looked blue as the lowering clouds in the morning, together with the chilly damp winds from the north-east, foretold the unfavorable termination of the day. A gleam of sunshine opened a spring of joy; but, like Macbeth's witches, it but "held the word of promise to our ears (eyes) to break it to our hope." At 8 o'clock P. M., the very hour for the test, we had a regular old fashioned spring shower, as though the elements were determined to test to the fullest extent our interest in the work. Those who ventured out, did so, more, of course, as a matter of duty than of pleasure, determined that if there was but one present there should be one conscience clear. The surging rain made them fleet of foot; and there being about one hour that people generally congregate on such occasions, the door-keeper became a subject for interesting contemplation, as suddenly, to his great and agreeable disappointment, a regular sortie took place upon his stronghold, threatening at one time to make him, involuntarily, a guest inside. At half-past 8 o'clock the house contained about five hundred persons. The children, numbering fifty or sixty, were arranged upon the platform, John Peterson, Esq., officiating, assisted by Miss Sarah Ennalls, Miss A. Harley, Miss A. Dawley and Mrs. Symonett; at said hour the exercises commenced with a piano solo by Miss Virginia Magnan, which received the applause of the audience; as did solos sung by Miss Caroline Brown, Pauline Green, Bertha Burnett, Letitia Smith, Alice Taylor, Cynthia Wilson, Sarah E. Cary, Addie Hamilton, and Masters Wm. Bronaugh and Jas. M'Cune Smith Hamilton. The exercises closed with singing the song of the contrabands, "Oh, let my people go," in which the audience joined, when the great gathering dispersed with the pleasing consciousness of having discharged a duty which was well repaid with a pleasant evening's entertainment.

Types.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF THE PROCEEDS OF THE LADIES CALICO DRESS BALL AT MOZART HALL ON THE EVENING OF FEB. 6.

New York, March 4th, 1862.

Mr. J. H. Jackson:—The Home Committee of the National Freedman's Relief Association take great pleasure in acknowledging the receipt of a large amount of second-hand clothing, and two pieces of unbleached muslin, eighty two yards; two pieces satinet, fifty-four yards; two striped shirtings, seventy-one yards; two pieces Manchester dimity, one-hundred and sixteen and a half yards; one piece unbleached muslin, forty yards; half piece Grier's check, thirty-six yards; three doz. head hankerchiefs; one lot Madder print calico; one dozen men's woolen shirts; one doz. brown hose; two doz. white cotton hose; one pound brown thread; two doz. spools of cotton; two doz. tapes; six papers needles; one-hundred and ninety-two yards gingham; twelve yards delaine; one lot Merrimac calico, thirty-nine yards; six yards checks; twenty-four pair men's brogands; twenty-four pairs women's lace boots; five gross buttons; one half pound black thread; one gross pins; half gross thimbles. All the above are from the colored people of this city, and are a donation made to the suffering Freedmen at Port Royal S. C. The value of the above cannot be less than three hundred dollars, but to your brethren at the South it cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. It is to them the first tangible expression of your ability to aid, and your sympathy in their distress. To the Nation it is an evidence of your frugality, prudent forethought, and benevolence, that you are willing and able to help the nation in their efforts to deal justly with those who in great need are within the lines of our armies, and must be saved from nakedness and starvation. The goods by your people thus donated are now on their destination to Port Royal, on board the steamer Atlantic, with more than a hundred packages of similar goods; but what is it all to clothe so many? It is like the barly loaves and fishes to feed the multitude. Hoping that our cause in the hands of the benevolent may be so multiplied as to clothe the millions in distress.

I remain your friend, C. C. Leigh,
Of the Home Committe.

OUR SOLDIERS NOT TO BE USED AS SLAVE HOUNDS.

In the House of Representatives, Tuesday, February 25th, Mr. Blair, of Missouri, from the Military Committee, reported a bill establishing an additional article of war for the Government of the United States Army.

All officers in the military service are prohibited from employing any of the forces under their respective commands for the purpose of returning fugitives from service or labor, escaping from those who claim such service or labor to be due to them; and any officer found guilty by Court-martial of violating this article shall be dismissed from service.

Mr. Bingham, of Ohio, (Rep.) moved an amendment so as to include not only officers but any person in the naval or military service of the United States.

Mr. Mallory looked upon this as an effort to repeal the Fugitive Slave law, and as a denial of the right of States to claim their property. He moved the postponement of the bill.

Mr. Blair, of Missouri, thought officers could be engaged in better business than returning fugitive slaves.

Mr. Bingham was against postponement.

Mr. Wickliffe, of Kentucky, (Union,) mentioned the fact that after the capture of Fort Donelson, Gen. Grant caused twelve slaves forced into the rebel service from Kentucky, to be returned to their masters. Did the proposition pending prohibit the Government from returning such property?

Mr. Gride opposed the bill, looking upon it as an indirect way of repealing the Fugitive Slave law.

Mr. Bingham replied that the bill was intended to confine officers to their legitimate duty, and prohibit them from interfering with the civil law. Such practices should not be tolerated for a single moment by the American people. He would not only punish those who would kidnap, but have them shot.

Mr. Mallory said that Kentucky had as stringent laws against kidnapping, as any other State.

Mr. Bingham had read in the newspapers a case of a fugitive who had, at the risk of his life, swam the Ohio River into Indiana. He should think when under the Stars and Stripes he should be protected. But it was said he was suspected of the crime of running away, when a company of soldiers was detailed and he was escorted to his master. If that was the practice to be pursued by the army and navy under the flag of the Republic, it would be better to cover with midnight blackness every star that floats upon its azure field. The practice was enough to consign to eternal infamy the man who dared to perform it. What are we fighting for? For the administration of justice, and among other things for the principle that no man will be condemned or deprived of his liberty without due process of law.

Mr. Diven.—I want the gentleman from Ohio to specify where any military officer has hunted down any fugitive slave for the purpose of returning him to his master.

Mr. Bingham.—The very case I referred to is enough to bring the blush of shame to the face of every American.

Mr. Diven—It is a matter founded on falsehood.

Mr. Bingham—How do you know that?

Mr. Diven—I have just as much reason to believe it untrue as you have to believe it true.

Mr. Bingham—The statement which has received credence all over the land is characterized by the gentleman as a falsehood. I know the fact because it has been published in the newspapers and I have never seen it contradicted.

Mr. Diven was understood to say that that was because the gentleman never read only one-sided newspapers.

Mr. Vallandigham, of Ohio, (Opp.,) moved to lay the bill on the table. Not agreed to—43 against 87.

Mr. Wright moved to adjourn. Disagreed to—27 against 95.

The question for postponing the bill till the first Wednesday in March was disagreed to—51 against 73.

The main question was ordered, when Mr. Johnson moved to adjourn. Negatived—41 against 78.

Mr. Bingham introduced an amendment, which was agreed to, prohibiting any person connected with the army and navy from returning fugitive slaves.

Mr. Crittenden, of Kentucky, (Union,) wished to occupy two minutes in remarks, but Mr. Lovejoy persisted in his objection, unanimous consent being necessary for further debate.

Mr. Steele, of New York, objected to third reading of the bill, on the ground that it had not been engrossed.

Several ineffectual motions were made to adjourn by the opponents of the bill.

Mr. Vallendigham raised a point of order, which the Speaker overruled.

Mr. Hickman vainly endeavored to offer an amendment.

The bill finally passed, 83 to 42.

SLAVE CATCHING IN WASHINGTON.

A FREE COLORED WOMAN SEIZED AS A SLAVE.

The Washington Republican publishes documentary evidence bearing upon the case of Julia Blackwell, a free colored woman, who was arrested in Washington last week as a slave. The following is the girl's statement:

"My name is Julia Blackwell. About half past nine o'clock on Tuesday night I was going on an errand to a grocery store. I had got but a short distance from Dr. McConnel's door, when two men came up to me, one of whom caught hold of me and shook me, threatening if I made a noise to choke me to death. The man was the same one whom you [meaning the reporter] saw with me in the office (which was Keese) of Justice Donn. He said that he was going to take me to jail; that I was a runaway slave. I began to cry, and told him that I was a free woman, begging him all the while to let me go. He cursed and swore at me, and again threatened to strangle me if I made a noise. I then stopped crying.

"Both the men were together. I was then taken to a magistrate's office (or as I first supposed from seeing bars at the window, to the guard-house). They put me in a back room, and Keese asked me where I was born, where my parents lived, and if I was a free woman. I told him that I was free. He [Keese] then said that it was a lie, that he knew my master, and that he had sold my brother Daniel. I again began to cry, and begged him for God's sake to let me go. He then gave me a Bible and told me that if I would swear I was a slave he would set me free, and would give me my free papers. I refused to swear, when he told me that I would have to go to jail. Several gentlemen then came into the office and asked him (Keese) what was the matter. I saw you [meaning the reporter,] look into the room. He refused to let any one come into the back room. Soon after the gentlemen had left the office I was taken, as I supposed to the jail by the two men. He (Keese) spoke to several men inside of the jail. They asked me if I was free and where I lived. I told them that I was free and lived with Dr. McConnell, on the avenue. One of the men in the jail said, 'I believe she tells the truth and is a free girl.' The man who arrested me then told me that I could go home, for which I thanked him. One of the officers went with me as far as Trinity Church, and asked me if I could then find my way home. I told him I could, and he left me. I was very much frightened. It was near 12 o'clock when I returned home.

"The statement of the girl was made in our presence, H. E. Hawley. W. H. Mitchell, John M. Johnson, Wm. P. McConnel, Frank Henry."

A communication in 'The Republican' from a respectable resident of Washington, says:

"The girl, who is free, was sent on an errand by the persons with whom she lives, and, as she was returning home, was seized by this officer and taken to what she calls the guard-house, from there to the magistrate's office, and this officer kept alternately cursing and threatening the girl to get her to say that she was a slave, telling her he knew her master, her sister, and others, whom he did not, and telling her he only wanted her to swear that she was a slave, and he would set her free; and when the girl would not, he told her that he would be d—d if he would not make her, &c. The girl steadily refused, and to this she owes her escape from jail, as the justice would not commit her, feeling satisfied that the girl was free, which she is, and has been for years."

From the N. Y. Tribune.

A FAITHFUL PUBLIC SERVANT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20, 1862.

Francis Datcher, a colored man by birth, a French nobleman in manners, honorable, faithful, intelligent and respected, died last week in the 43d year of his service as a Messenger in the War Department. A part of his property was a parchment covered thickly with the autograph records of the approval of his official conduct by the several Secretaries of War under whom he served in that long period of time. A month since, a friendly compact was made between Francis and myself, that when Death should discharge him of his duties to the Government, this parchment record of honor should be published to the world in the journal which he honored for its love of his race. I esteem it a privilege to be permitted to fulfill this promise.

Francis Datcher has served during the last six years as Assistant Messenger in the War Office, and I have pleasure in certifying that he has performed the duties assigned him with zeal, intelligence, attention, and integrity, and is entitled to the approbation of the Department.

Given this 3d day of March, 1825.

[Seal.] J. C. CALHOUN.

May 24, 1828.

I with pleasure bear testimony to the good qualities of F. Datcher stated in the above during my administration.

JAMES BARBOUR.

I heartily concer in the above testimonials to the good conduct and faithful service of Francis Datcher.

P. B PORTER.

I concur with my predecessors in the opinion they express of the character and conduct of Francis Datcher, having found him obedient, and faithful in the discharge of his duties. J. R. PONSETT.

The conduct of Francis Datcher as assistant Messenger during my administration of the War Department has met my entire approbation. His capacity for the performance of his duties, and his zeal and fidelity in their execution have not, in my opinion, been exceeded by those of any other person of my acquaintance.

LEWIS CASS.

F. Datcher has continued to act as Messenger during the time I have been in the War Department (two years), with a fidelity that has met my entire approbation. He is an honerable and honest man.

JNO H. EATON, 3 May, 1831.

I have found Francis Datcher to be all my predecessor represent him, and cheerfully bear testimony to his uniform good conduct and his great tact and ability as a Messenger.

My only complaint against him is, that he would not leave the War Department and follow me in the Treasury Department at a higher salary. J. E. SPENCER.

March 17, 1843.

Francis Datcher has officiated as Assistant Messenger of the War Department during my administration of it. I have found him attentive, obliging, and polite. Have never in any instance had occasion to find fault with him, and esteem him as a man of integrity and intelligence. I cheerfully join with my predecessors in the commendations they have bestowed upon him.

J. M. PORTER.

I cannot sufficiently recommend the faithful conduct and excellent behavior of Francis Datcher. WM. THILKINS.

March, 1845.

My predecessors seem to have exhausted the language of praise in their testimonials of the merits of F. Datcher, Assistant Messenger in the War Department; but after four years acquaintance with him, I can truly say that they have done only bare justice to his character and accomplishments. As a man, he has my sincere respect; as an officer, my high commendation. W. L. MARCY.

March 3, 1849.

I cheerfully add my evidence to the admitted excellent qualities of Francis Datcher, Assistant Messenger of the War Department. GEO. W. CRAWFORD.

July 20, 1850.

It affords me pleasure to express my hearty concurrence in all that is said in the foregoing certificates in regard to the zeal and fidelity with which Francis Datcher has discharged his duties.

March 6, 1853. C. M. CONRAD.

Though the language of commendation has been somewhat exhausted, four years of daily intercourse assure me the merit of the subject has not declined. In Francis Datcher I have found what Mr. Pitt is said to have declared he had, through his long public life, sought for in vain—a man exactly suited to the place he held. It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to that of so many illustrious predecessors in his favor, and to commend him to the most respectful consideration.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

War Office, March 3, 1857.

I perform only a duty in bearing my cheerful and sincere testimony to the high character of Francis Datcher, the Assistant Messenger of the War Department. With a perfect knowledge of all the duties of his place, he discharges them with a fidelity, sagacity, and perfectly well-bred courtesy worthy of all praise. He is, and deserves to be, the object of respect with all strangers visiting the Department, and of sincere regard to all its inmates. I commend him heartily to those who may hereafter preside over the War Department.

JOHN B. FLOYD.

Dec. 29, 1860.

More than forty years ago I came to Washington a boy, on business connected with the War Department, and was kindly and courteously received by Francis Datcher, a colored man, having the manners and deportment of a gentleman, who ushered me into the presence of Mr. Calhoun, then Secretary of War. Almost every year since, in passing through the various grades of life open to every American, I have had occasion to visit the War Department, and I have always found Datcher at his post, as courteous and civil as when I first saw him. When I entered upon my duties as the Head of this Department, I was glad to have the opportunity to say, "Francis, while I am here, you will do me a great favor if you will remain, and extend to me the treatment which I have received at your hands during the long years of our acquaintance." SIMON CAMERON.

War Department, Jan. 18, 1862.

CONCERT OF THE SHILOH CHURCH SABBATH SCHOOL.

On Tuesday evening, 4th inst., the Sabbath School attached to Shiloh Church held their Annual Exhibition and concert in their building cor. Prince and Marion sts. The overwhelming attendance at a similar entertainment on the evening previous, in the wet and rain, made us somewhat fearful that this affair might suffer, but the established reputation of the school was sufficiently potent and the response was flattering.

The singing, recitations, addresses and instrumental performances, were highly creditable to the school, and to Mrs. Wm. H. Carney, learning as we have, that the whole labor of their preparation and selection was (we think rather unfairly) left entirely upon her hands. Mrs. Carney was assisted at the melodeon by Misses Ellen Clow, Mary Stackouse, and Mary Garnet, one of whom we understand to be her pupil. The exercises were enlivened during the evening by the appearance of a young 'Nut,' 3 years old, who stuck out his stomach, stamped his feet, shook his fists, and said "unutterable things." We are pleased with the growing importance among us of the cultivation of the musical art. The young ladies who performed surprised us with the readiness with which they performed their parts, giving delight to the audience. And among children, too, it is the mallet which hews off and smooths around the rough edges of their dispositions, creating a refinement of passion, and harmonizing the discordant elements of our natures. Masters Webber, Ranson, Garnet, Reeve, the four little vocalists and Miss Rebecca Anderson, are particularly entitled to praiseworthy mention. Mr. Ezekial Dias conducted the musical department, and Mr. Elymus Reeve, Superintendant, the exercises in general.

TYPES.

From N. Y. Tribune.

ORDER FOR NEGRO HUNTING.

With the accompanying order verbal instructions were given to Col. Cowdin of the Massachusetts 1st Volunteers to have the negro taken by the guard and given to his owner, and, in case the guard should prove unequal to the task of securing one black man, to call out the whole regiment; and if that failed in the noble enterprise, the entire brigade should be put under arms and organized as "nigger catchers." Notwithstanding this enormous display of strategy and servility, the slave got off, owing, probably, to an untimely muscular paralysis of the right arm of the officer of the guard.

Head-Quarters 1st Brigade Hooker's Division, March 1, 1862.

Special Order No. 24.—Samuel W. Adams a citizen of Maryland and loyal subject of the United States, complains that he is informed and believes that his boy, Martin Tolson, is harbored, and is within the limits of your regiment. You will ascertain whether that is the fact, facilitate him in finding his slave, and permit no one to interfere with him in the repossession of his property. By order of Brig. Gen. HENRY M. NAGLEE.

George H. Johnson, A. A. General.

THE STING TAKEN OUT.—Since the incarceration of Dr. Ives, the "Herald" has lost its "snap." It is so feeble-fumble that its very foes condole with it. Poor Ives! Where are his jokes? His negro-hates? What a shame, in the government to take this man, who called for the imprisonment of the abolitionists, and put him in prison "his-self!"

DIED.

HARRIS.—At Inagua Island, Feb. 7th, where she was wrecked on her passage home from Hayti, Almira Crandall, youngest daughter of the late William and Sally P. Harris, of Canterbury, Ct. Though of a colored complexion, she was very kindly taken care of by an English lady; but neither this care nor the best medical skill could save her from the grasp of the fell destroyer. She lingered three days, and then expired.

SCHUYLER.—In Poughkeepsie, Febr. 5th, of diphtheria, Emeline Schuyler, aged 20 years and 4 months. Also on the 9th of Feb. in the same city and of the same complaint, Sarah Ann Schuyler, aged 24 years and 7 months. Both of these were daughters of Philip and Martha Schuyler of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

HALL.—In Barrington, Mass. Febr. 8th, of bleeding of the lungs, Joseph M., son of Sylvia and the late John Hall, aged 17 years and 8 months.

"Dearest brother thou hast left us,
Here thy loss we deeply feel,—
But, 'tis God that hath bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.
Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life has fled.
Then in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed."

REX.—In Williamsburgh, Sunday morning, 2d of March, of inflammation of the bowels, Sarah Rex, aged 27 years.

Special Notices.

ATTENTION, ODD FELLOWS!

☞ Please assemble in

MASS MEETING,

Friday Evening, the 7th inst. at the corner of Broome and Forsyth streets, at 8 o'clock.

By order of
P. H. REASON, Chairman,
JAS. LEWIS, Secretary,
W. C. H. CURTIS, Treas.

GRAND UNITED ORDER OF ODD FELLOWS.

In behalf of the Committee of Arrangements of the ODD FELLOWS' PROMENADE CONCERT, which is to take place on MONDAY EVENING,

MARCH 10th,

at the

CITY ASSEMBLY ROOMS,

446 BROADWAY,

The undersigned have the pleasure of informing the Order and the public generally that Professor Oton has composed expressly for the occasion a Grand March, which he has dedicated to the Order, and which will be performed during the second part of the exercises by the full Band, assisted by Professors O'Fake and Douglass.

☞ The public are cautioned from placing any reliance in the various reports which are being circulated in regard to the above entertainment; they are without the least shadow of truth, and the public can rest assured that the Festival will take place according to the full arrangements expressed in the circulars. The 50 cents for supper is optional with the guests. ☜

Ladies unattended by gentlemen will receive the attention of the Reception Committee.

PATRICK H. REASON, Chairman,
353 Bowery.
JAMES H. LEWIS, Secretary,
207 Wooster st.
WM. C. H. CURTIS, Treasurer,
153 Thompson st.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Use Dr. CLARKE'S

SHERRY WINE

BITTERS!!

Composed of

Dock Root,	Wild Cherry,
Sarsaparilla,	Prickly Ash,
Thoroughwort,	Poplar Bark,
Rock Rose,	Rhubarb,
Wintergreen,	Dandelion,

&c. &c.

For Weakness, Loss of Appetite, Sour Stomach, Jaundice, Headache, Piles of long standing, Humors,

And all Diseases which arise from an unhealthy state of the Stomach, Bowels, and Blood.

PRICE ONLY 25 CENTS A BOTTLE.

For Sale at the office of the Anglo-African, 48 Beekman street.

THE LAUNDRESS' SECRET.

The most Invaluable Preparation known for rendering clothes white and clean, without rubbing or injury to the fabric.

The above recipe, together with over one hundred other items of information, sent free on the receipt of 5 red stamps.

A liberal discount to peddlers. Address,

JOS. ADAMS,
83 Nassau street.

NOTICE. Office of the R. W. G. Sec.
70 Grove-st., N. Y. C.

The officers and members of the R. W. E. D. Grand Lodge of the I. O. of G. S. and D. of S. together with the subordinate Lodges of its jurisdiction, are hereby [illegible] Sunday, March 9th, at [illegible] P. M., in the basement of Zion [illegible] corner of Church and Leonard streets, in full regalia, for the purpose of attending the funeral sermon of sister Adrine Ferguson, member of Fidel[illegible] and representing [illegible] lodge.

[illegible], G. S.

ATTENTION!

The members of the N. Y. African Society for Mutual Relief, are earnestly requested to attend the regular monthly meeting of the Society on Monday, March 10th, at their Hall, 42 Baxter street, for the purpose of making preparations to celebrate [the Fifty-first] Anniversary of the Society.

J. J. Zuille, Secretary.

ZION CONFERENCE.

☞ Notice is hereby given to the Members of the Annual Conference of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion, that the Annual Conference of the New York District will meet in Zion Church, corner of Church and Leonard streets, New York city, on the Third Saturday in May, 1862.

WM. H. BISHOP,
Superintendent of the 1st Dist. of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion.

PHILADELPHIA AGENCY.

Wm. H. De Cordover, 418 South 7th st. is authorized to receive subscriptions and advertisements for the Anglo African. All orders left with him will receive prompt attention

---

A. ROBERTS,

120 Clinton Court, 8th st., New York, agent for the Weekly Anglo-African. Copies may be had of him at an early hour after its publication

---

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

HELP! HELP WANTED

At Tilmon's Agency, No. 70 East 13th st., one door East of the 4th Avenue. Spring is here and now is the time. Never was there a greater demand for all first class colored help than now. Remember that this is the oldest and most responsible office in the city for colored help. Situations constantly on hand for both city and country. Terms cash and strict attention paid to business. All persons coming to this city and wishing to save board will do well to call during Office hours, from 7 A. M. to 5 P. M.

31tf L. TILMON, Proprietor.

MASONIC

DIRECTORY,

FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No. 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka, No. 15, Norwick, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 29, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14, Knights Templars, meets at No 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 East Houston Street, N. Y. City.

TO LET.—Apartmets in house 153 Thompson Street. A few gentlemen can be furnished with lodging also. Inquire of Mr. Jer. Bowers on the premises.

615t.

PETER S. PORTER.

GENERAL AGENT FOR

HOUSE LETTING,

170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

---

PLANE ST. SELECT SCHOOL.

195 PLANE ST., NEWARK, N. J.

MRS. HARRIET E. ROGERS, PRINCIPAL.

The branches taught are Reading, Writing Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography and History. Plain Sewing, Ornamental Needlework, Worsted Embroidery and Fancy Knitting.

Piano Forte, Melodeon, and Vocal Music by Prof. John H. O'Fake.

A limited number of Misses between the ages of ten and fourteen may be boarded in the house on moderate terms. Healthy location, and a fine yard for exercise.

REFERENCES.

NEWARK, N. J.

Rev. E. J. Adams, Jefferson Ellis,
Adam Ray, Abram T. Cook.

BROOKLYN.

Rev. J. N. Gloucester.

NEW YORK.

Rev. H. M. Wilson, Rev. H. H. Garnet.

All letters may be addressed to Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, 131 Plane st. Newark N. J.

27 6t.

Elizabeth City, N. J. Feb. 8, 1862.

This is to certify that I heartily approve of the effort of Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers to establish a Select School for young misses. I have been acquainted with her for over twenty-five years, and am happy to recommend her and her enterprise to the patronage of the public in general.

DANIEL H. VANDERVEER.

Pastor of the 1st Colored Pres. Church, Eliz. City.

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated "Hough[illegible] Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate LADIES and GENTLEMEN with FIRST-CLASS BOARD on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. 13 Sheriff Street, a few doors north of Grand. 16 13t

---

GLASS, CHINA, AND EARTHENWARE MENDED, BY A. ROBERTS.

120 Clinton Court, 8th st. New York.

A Supply of the EGYPTIAN CEMENT for the above purpose constantly on hand. Price 25 cents per bottle.

29tf.

WORLD'S FAIR AGENCY.—The undersigned are acting as Agents for Merchants and Manufacturers to Exhibit at World's Fair, and to introduce into England, France and other European countries, articles of American Invention, Procuring Patents, making Sales, or in any way promoting their interests.

DEXTER & CO. 17 Spruce st. N. Y.; 86 Milk street, Boston; 149 S. Fourth st., Philad

1m3ap.

GEORGE OTON'S

QUADRILLE BAND

BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,

PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St, and with G. Oton.

18tf

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,

REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.

New York—corner of Prince and Marion street near Broadway.

Hours of Worship:—

Prayer-meeting,	10½	A. M.
	3	P. M.
	7½	P. M.

Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock,

Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.

Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,

(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. WM. J. ALSTON, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for Interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—

10½	A. M.
3	P. M.
7½	P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn.

13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

REV. ELI N. HALL, Pastor. Residence—180 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:

10½ o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7½ "	P. M.

10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7½ "	P. M.

12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—

3 o'clock,	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

LECTURE every Wednesday evening.

Rev. CHAS. H. THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3½	P. M.
7½	P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. HALL, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. JOHN T. RAYMOND, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 o'clock,	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.

Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.

Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr. Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

AGENT FOR WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions of advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

TROY AGENCY.—Mr. Henry Burke, 36 Fulton St, Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

MRS. ELIZA LEWIS' SALVE,
ANDERSON'S HAIR RESTORATIVE,
(New London,)
SPANISH OIL, (For the Hair,)
WHITE'S VEGETABLE EXTRACT,
BRANDRETH'S SUGAR COATED PILLS,
For Sale at the
Drug Store 55 West Broadway

BOARDING AND LODGING, at No. [illegible] late J. W. [illegible] her friends and [illegible]

29tf.

SOMETHING NEW.

[illegible] No [illegible] done in [illegible] warm water. Full [illegible] concerning its use and manufacture sent by mail on receipt of 25 cents. Address [illegible]

Templeton, Mass.

23 4t

BOSTON HOUSE

MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,

105 Park Street, near Mott

NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

---

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,

BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS, WILLIAMSBURG

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTING

of every description. Also constantly on hand well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.

DON'T FORGET,

168 EWEN ST.,
Williamsburg

9 1y.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,

EMPIRE STATE HOTEL

AND

UNION HOUSE,

541 BROOME STREET

Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T. L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS

IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premium for Misses and Children's

HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.

The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.

10 1y.

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 23 Nassau St., N. Y.

19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,

EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.

RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.

26 26t

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St., on door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.

10 5t

MRS. ANDERSON,

CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS

Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn.

10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street.

11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMODATE a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate

9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding.

8 tt

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTES, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 SOUTH STREET, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate.

31y

HENRY G. LEASK,

HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS

AND FURS,

COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.

Shipping Furs Bought.

12-tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) RESPECTFULLY announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

MRS E. LEONARD,

FASHIONABLE

DRESS MAKER,

25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.

Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.

30.

BOARDING AND LODGING

BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in a very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies	$2,50
" " Gents,	3,00
Lodging per week,	75

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,

CARD AND JOB PRINTER

219 CENTRE STREET NEW YORK.

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,

FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,

In all its branches—such as

BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHAINS, ETC.,

Residence—120th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.

19 26t

Poetry.

For the Anglo-African.

COME ANYTHING, IF BUT THE SLAVE GO FREE.

BY A. P. SMITH.

Rage War, thou scourge, attended dire,
Pour on our land thy hottest ire,
If but the slave go free.

Make Egypt's fields a smouldering waste,
Where Famine howls o'er wealth displaced,
If but the slave go free.

Her first born sons in death lay low,
Make fount and stream with blood o'erflow,
If but the slave go free.

In every vessel give us gore,
Let wailing rise at every door,
If but the slave go free.

God's will be done; content we'll share
The worst our guilty land may bear,
If but the slave go free.

Yet Heaven avert the sacrifice,
If less, if milder means suffice.
To let the slave go free.

Come, Peace, descend, and break the sword,
Join every state in sweet accord,
If but the slave go free.

From the Atlantic Monthly.

BATTLE HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC.

BY MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE.

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord;
He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored;
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of His terrible swift sword:
His truth is marching on.

I have seen him in the watch-fires of a hundred circling camps;
They have builded Him an altar in the evening dews and damps;
I have read His righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps:
His day is marching on.

I have read a fiery gospel writ in burnished rows of steel:
"As ye deal with my contemners, so with you my grace shall deal;
Let the Hero born of woman crush the serpent with his heel,
Since God is marching on."

He hath sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before His judgment seat.
Oh, be swift my soul to answer Him! be jubilant my feet!
Our God is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in His bosom that transfigures you and me:
As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free.
While God is marching on.

NO RETALIATION.

It has been the history of nearly all great revolutions, that reformers have followed out the doctrine of returning evil for evil. So soon as the oppressed have found the opportunity and the power, they have retaliated upon the oppressor with a similarity of oppression. They have returned evil for evil. We are destined to show the infinite superiority of returning good for evil. Even at this hour, bound with bands of iron at the South, and the fetters of prejudice at the North, scorned, jeered at, tortured with the fangs of ferocious and malignant slanders, and with the merciless lash of the slave-whip, we have refrained from deluging our country in blood. The beautiful edifices of our oppressors spring up on every side, gathering into villages, towns and cities, and the broad rivers run by them, swollen with the tears of the oppressed, but untinged with the blood of the oppressors. They drive us from the magnificent temples which they erect for the worship of the Most High, as if He were a "respecter of persons." In our humble way we raise humble tenements in which we approach the footstool of our common Father, and we pray, not for vengeance, but for mercy on our oppressors—and we throw open the doors that all, even those who exclude us, all who thirst may come in and drink, that all who are heavily laden may unburthen themselves before altars erected to the Living Lord; in a word, in our every act, and all our relations we are already rendering good for evil, and what can be more glorious in the destiny of any people.

[JAMES M'CUNE SMITH.]

LETTER FROM BETHLEHEM.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Feb. 25, 1862.

MR. EDITOR:—Sleighing in Northampton County has been excellent since New Year's, and the people for miles around seem to be crazed on account thereof. Every kind of vehicle convertible, has been metamorphosed into a something with runners. Every kind of quadruped, hitchable, drivable, or to which a piece of harness could be attached, has been brought into requisition. Horses and mules, to form teams, are hooked together without uniformity or taste. Taste! I cannot say that it has been ascertained that a Pennsylvania Dutchman has any, except for lager or "sour-krout and specht."

Things strange and irregular I have witnessed within the month. A new feature in the way of sleighriding comes from Easton and South Easton, the Sodom and Gomorrah of the State. Parties of women numbering, forty, fifty, more or less, charter a sleigh or sleighs according to the company, and then go in for a general breaking up or tearing loose of things.

Four weeks ago a party from Easton, (all ladies,) stopped at one of our principal hotels for supper, and to have a gay time generally; after supper—whiskey punch which seems to be a favorite drink, flowed freely, and it followed as a natural consequence that some acted strange and altogether indifferent as to results.

When getting ready to leave one of them got in her head along with the exhilarating influence, a desire to drive. Although it is no easy matter to rein four horses, and especially of a cold winter night: she declar that she had done it and could do it again. Still not being satisfied with the expostulations of her comrades, she seized the whip and commenced lashing the horses, at the same time whooping and yelling equal to a savage on the frontier, which so infuriated the driver that he struck at her, and with such precision as to seriously disarrange the lady's equipoise. Reinforcements coming to the rescue, the poor fellow was about to be surrounded and captured, which, however, was prevented by a musical, though somewhat quavering voice crying out from the hall—"more whiskey!"—"more whiskey!" causing a universal stampede, and a rushing pell-mell in a general anxiety to be in the advance, at the saloon.

Three weeks ago a party from Allentown, bringing with them musicians and other etceteras by way of adding to the nights enjoyment, stopped at the W——n hotel. Previous to supper there was noticed a competition between two of the gentlemen for the honor of a particular lady's company. The gentlemen respectively designated: dark hair, and fair hair, but dark hair seemed to enjoy the advantage, and in fact escorted the lady to the supper room, which proceeding as a matter of course, put fair hair in a rage. At the table it so happened that the gentlemen antagonists became seated opposite each other: when of course, daggers, bowie-knifes, and all kind of unutterable things were looked. But no remark passed until after the ladies had retired to the parlor, when one word caused fair hair to spring from his seat, seize a chair and with it make a furious though inglorious attack upon his rivals cranium. Soon after one of the employees, (a New Yorker,) in conversation remarked that if those little fighting arrangements would come off oftener, country life would not be so unendurable; when some one—it were supposed—with malignant intent, threw a broken champagne bottle through the open door, carrying away some of the flesh appertaining to that gentleman's proboscis.

The snow has lasted so long that sleighriding and row making have become contagious. Last week a colored party from Easton to Sallsbury by the way of Bethlehem, must follow suit to, the dominant race, and have a dance and a disturbance. After reaching Sallsbury, the solitary musician who accompanied them getting filled with the indispensable, must challenge a superfluous arrangement from Allentown, commonly called Tiger, to mortal combat. Tiger considering himsely grossly insulted, rushed upon his antagonist—knocking the hot water off the stove, inundating the floor, and causing fandagoes and pigeon-wings to be executed extemporaneously. However, the affair was amicably adjusted by one of the dark amazons present, who fortunately has the grace and muscle of a Heenan. She seized the refractory musicien suspending him in space for an instant, then hurling him headlong upon the coal scuttle completely annihilating that very useful appendage.

S. E.

Letter From Paterson.

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 24th, 1862.

MR. EDITOR: The concluding lecture in the course before mentioned, was given by Mr. Wm. H. Hopper, Wednesday evening, 12th inst. Subject: Toussaint L'Ouverture. The lecture evinced considerable talent, and was very creditable to the speaker. Mr. Hopper is one of the most useful of our young men, proving himself what we may call "a chip of the old block."

In ordinary times I might have told you about our good sleighing, and the trip of a party of fourteen to the sister city of Newark; attendance at an exhibition there and the inevitable ball; the sojourn of the Misses P., of that city, with some friends here; the party mentioned having a "surprise" at Paramus, &c.; but forbear, knowing you want your space for more important matter.

INDEX.

Letter From New London.

NEW LONDON, Ct., Feb. 24, '62.

MR. EDITOR: Washington's birthday was very appropriat celebrated in this city on Saturday, by ser in the various churches at 3 o'clock, and the reading of Washington's Farewell Address. The Masonic Fraternity celebrated the day with a demonstration at Lawrence Hall. The Farewell Address was read there by the Hon. J. N. Harris, Mayor of the city. The band of the 3d U. S. Artillery, which is stationed at Fort Trumbull in this harbor, was present, and at intervals discoursed some very fine music.

A surprise party came off in this city on the evening of the 13th inst. at the residence of Mr. Aaron Bush. The company consisted of about 40 ladies and gentlemen, mostly from Norwich. The company came the entire distance, about 14 miles, in carriages. They arrived in the city about half-past 10 o'clock P. M., and proceeded directly to the residence of Mr. Bush, who with his family were actually taken by surprise. The company enjoyed themselves until about 5 o'clock the next morning, when they dispersed and went their way rejoicing.

Another of those brilliant affairs similar to the one I had the pleasure of reporting to you some time since, came off in this city last Thursday evening. Having received a billet doux I repaired to the hall at a suitable hour, which I found very brilliantly illuminated, and with a gay company already assembled. The ladies on this occasion were very beautifully attired; and for the benefit of our New York lady friends I will subjoin a list of the style of dress worn by some of the ladies present. The beautiful Madam P——m, who was, in my opinion, the best looking lady present, wore white, trimmed with black; Miss C——n wore a pink tarleton elegantly puffed, with pink sash and an ornamental wreath, very beautiful; the sweet Miss E. H——n, white, with black velvet trimming and pink wreath, very neat; the petite Miss M. S——h, white, blue sash, exceedingly beautiful; Miss E. G——s, blue silk, black velvet sash, white wreath, very tasty; Miss J. N——y, varigated barege, spangled, lace trimming, pink wreath; the delicate but sweet Miss W——s, blue tarleton, trimmed with blue satin. There was a very large number of elegantly dressed ladies present, but the above names are all I can recall at present. The beau monde were represented in very large numbers. It was indeed the finest entertainment ever given in this city. The department "de musicale" was under the superb direction of Mr. Phillip Harris, formerly of New York, ably assisted by Prof. J. J. Brayton, and others of this city. Messrs. J. Clark, J. Brayton, E. Jamerson, J. Anderson, and the rest of the Committee are deserving of great praise for the able manner and decorum in which everything was conducted. The company dispersed about half-past 5 o'clock the next morning much pleased with this, the second sociable given by the young men of New London.

"WIDE AWAKE."

P. S.—Since writing the above I understand that a wedding came off in this city last Saturday, the happy couple being Mr. John Clark and Miss Francis Brayton, both of this city.

"W. A."

LETTER FROM BINGHAMTON.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Feb. 26, '62.

MR. EDITOR: You must excuse the liberty I take in writing to you. The Rev. J. W. Loguen, our elder, has made me, with others, promise to subscribe for the 'Anglo-African'; and he also said that you would like to hear, now and then, how we, as a people, are getting along in Binghamton. I am an obscure working man, but I wish much the success of anything that is doing good for our long neglected people; and I find the Rev. Mr. Loguen speaking so highly of the "Anglo-African," that I am persuaded it is doing good for our enslaved and outraged people—for if any man in the West understands our wants, as a people, it is the Rev. J. W. Loguen. He is one of our working men, and a true friend of his people. He is not merely a worker as an underground Railroad Superintendent—for he attends to that with as much delight as any man that I ever saw—but he is also a preacher for us; yes, a real missionary, working day and night for the good of his people. He is now engaged in holding a protracted meeting in Zion Church in our village. It is now on the third week; a good work is being done; we, as a people, need much work done for us in this place. We have two churches and one school among the colored people; the school is taught by a white lady. I send my name and money as a subscriber for your paper. The Rev. Mr. Loguen will, no doubt, have others in the notion of sending for it soon, for he has them all right at present, but he is waiting for the "tin." I will pledge myself to help him all that I can for the good of your paper and the cause of our down-trodden people. I feel that we should be up and at work, for God is doing a mighty work for us in the present war. I am for the war until Slavery is used up in this land. I hope our elder will get us all right and at work for God and humanity.

HENRY C. JONES.

LETTER FROM NEWARK.

NEWARK, N. J., March 1st, 1862.

FRIEND ANGLO:—As an occasional chronicler of doings in this city, I am impelled to mention one of the most recherche affairs that has occurred here this season, being a surprise party to Miss Mary R. Ellis, eldest daughter of Mr. J. and Mrs. Serena M. Ellis, No. 32 Bank st.

On Wednesday evening, 26th ult, about eight o'clock some forty or fifty ladies and gentlemen principally belonging to Plane st., Presbyterian and St. Philip's (Episcopal) congregations, called at the residence of the young lady, and after exchanging salutations with the family, proceeded to present the Miss E. an elegant silver cake basket and tea-pot, the presentation address being delivered by Mr. D. Jennings and responded to by Mr. J. H. O'Fake on behalf of Miss E. After which Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers presented the young lady a beautiful Bible and an ambrotype of the donor, whose presentation address was a very appropriate and beautiful composition.

On the tea-pot was inscribed the name of the estimable recipient, the date of the presentation, and by whom given, and also accompanying the same was an elegantly printed card containing the names of the donors, and an embodied sentiment of their respect and esteem.

After these ceremonies were concluded the large assemblage partook refreshments which were bountifully provided by the ladies, and then entertained themselves until near midnight with music plays, ect.

Mrs. Ellis's two daughters and youngest son, expect to sail for Kingston, Jamaica, on the 8th inst., where they have long been desirious of living; and after their departure the Plane st. choir and congregation will greatly feel the absence of Miss Mary, whose efficient services as organist for a long term of years have been so appropriately appreciated by her friends in this marked manner.

Considerable disappointment prevails here on account of the non-appearance in last week's "Anglo" of a report of the "Mozart Club Exhibition."

The able "leader" in this date's issue, on the execution of Gordon, the infamous slave-trader, calls forth encomiums from your numerous readers.

So mote it be.

SKIMMER.

LETTER FROM CHATHAM.

CHATHAM, C. W., Feb. 24, 1862.

MR. EDITOR: On last Sabbath, in the village of Buxton, Canada West, I had the pleasure of hearing a discourse delivered by a young man by the name of Mr. Jeremiah H. Turpin, son of the Rev. N. H. Turpin, of Toronto, from the 7th chapter of Eccl., 28th verse. I never in all my life heard a young man deliver such a discourse. He held the congregation in breathless silence for about three quarters of an hour, and, as far as I could see, the tears were streaming down the cheeks of mothers and fathers, sons and daughters. The church was crowded to hear so young a man, only 22 years old, as I have learned. Now, Mr. Editor, I do boldly say that such a young man is a great credit to our people, and he is worthy of the title of Reverend. My prayer to God is, that the young men that read this may consider that a great deal depends upon themselves. Now imagine the gladness of the father of such a son, who is an honor to him in his old days. May the Lord crown him with success for raising such a dutiful child. The young man has charge of the largest colored church in Canada, under the direction of Rev. W. H. Jones.

A FRIEND.

The "Christian Recorder" will please copy.

We copy the following from a Binghamton, N. Y., paper:

The colored people of Binghamton, under the pastoral care of the Rev. J. W. Loguen, of Syracuse (the well-known fugitive), are having a good Revival in their Church on Whitney street. They have been holding meetings for the last few weeks Mr. Loguen is doing a good work with the colored people of our village, as well as with others; and it is much needed. We hope the Christian part of our community will so appreciate the labors of this working minister among the poor; that they will see to it that he is sustained with his people, for they are poor and cannot pay him half enough to sustain his family, and yet they much need his labors. We hope the rich will not forget the poor in this case, for they want the Gospel preached to them. Mr. Loguen has a thrilling narrative of his life as a slave. Buy that, and you will get the worth of your dollar, and help much to sustain him with a poor and well meaning people, that are trying hard to do good; but they are few and cannot do much.

The Washington Star of Feb. 25th says: "A colored man, named Thomas Dalcher, was knocked down at the corner of Pa. avenue and First street west, yesterday evening between 6 and 7 o'clock, by some soldiers, who stamped upon his prostrate body and broke his leg, and inflicted other injuries. The wounded man was taken to his home by Policeman Conway. No arrests have been made.

FOUR GOOD RULES.—First do all the good you can; secondly—in all the ways you can; thirdly—to all the people you can; and fourthly—just as long as you can.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbia, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.

PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.

10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,

BY USING

B. T. BABBITT'S

SUPERIOR FRENCH

CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric will tend to set the colors, and wash o aner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

THE
PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC,

Containing besides the Calendar and Copious Astronomical Statistics, a History of the Great Rebellion, Biographical Sketches of the Prominent Military Officers, a Dictionary of Military Terms, very full information relative to Military Matters of interest to the people at large, National Hymns, Incidents, Anecdotes, &c., &c.

Published and for sale by, DEXTER & Co., 17 Spruce street. Newsboys and others wanted to make sales.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess or dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing; and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1851.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
THOS. R. CROCKER,
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 20th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.

D. W. INGERSOL,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 18th, 1855.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,
JAMES BROWN HARVEY,
109 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Headache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want and safe article.

ALBRO LYONS.

20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway; Mrs. Staat's, 78 Thompson St.; Chas. H. Ring's, 155 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

WM. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of

THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c. they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb hat grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Warranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat o sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occasionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK.

REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY EXPLORING PARTY;

BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Product
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions.

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 75 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS.

EMBELLISHMENT—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
Music.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or the Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihndas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture,—by Robert Gordon.
Is the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freelington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James M. Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S. Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G. B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Mercer Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY THOMAS HAMILTON,

48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. ell. Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass. One vol., 12 mo. 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

The Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S. H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1.00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787-9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on slavery, and the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights. Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory; also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1.00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 294 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 88 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 6cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x21, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel between decks, regulation deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo pages, and is published at a price which places it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1.25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed.
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1.25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die." A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches deliver ed in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 90 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream:
Or, the true history of Deacon Giles's Distillery and Deacon Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz. or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by [illegible] William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.00.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland.
An Account of a Journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia, and Member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 62 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton; its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
100 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Ellen [illegible]. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of articles made, in various materials, upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 33 NEW YORK, MARCH 15, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY SATURDAY

BY ROBT. HAMILTON

NO. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.

Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.

All communications for the paper must be addressed ROBT. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE; OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

PART II.

Hear the word!—who fight for freedom!
Shout it in the battle van!
Hope! for bleeding human nature!
Christ the God, is Christ the Man!
H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE GRAND COUNCIL.

A rain—a gust, a thunder-storm most loud—
Is indicated by this gathering cloud!

It was Sabbath—a beautiful day—the sun bright and cheering; the air cool and refreshing, and the fragrance and odors of flowers, fruits and spices, seemed more exhilirating than at any time before during the season.

The countenances of the inhabitants generally wore a cheerful expression, and though throughout the day the streets were literally crowded, there were less of sports and amusements than usual on this day of the week. The evening was also beautiful, and whilst there was nothing unusual to note its general character, yet to one portion of the inhabitants at least, it became a memorable period in the history of their existence.

This evening, according to appointment, the Seclusion met in grand council at the house of Madam Cordora. But instead of the attic story, the drawing rooms were occupied, each member in his place—Gofer Gondolier post guard, stationed at the door in the hall.

The provisional organization consisted of: Placido, Director of Civil Government; Minister of State, Camina; Minister of Justice, Carolus Blacus; Minister of Foreign Affairs, Castina; Post-Master-General, Antonio Blacus; Minister of War and Navy, Montego.

The Army regulations were, Henry Blake, Commander-in-Chief of the Army of Emancipation; Juan Montego, General of First Division; Pedro Castina, General of Second Division; Ferdinand Recand, General Third Division; Stephanus Revira, General of Fourth Division; Gofer Gondolier, Quarter Master General. Thus organised, the oppressed became a dangerous element in the political ingredient of Cuba.

Already the atmosphere of sentiments began to change, the weather of prospects to alter, the sunlight of promise grow dim, the day of anticipation darker, and clouds of the heretofore "were seen in specks," to gather throughout the Island. The signs of the public zodiac were alarmingly significant of an approaching storm, though a great way off, yet the calculation of the political calender, paid no attention to it.

Moved by a solemn sense of the import of the momentous subject before them, and the great responsibility of the undertaking, Blake in a few words, thus impressingly addressed them:

'Brethren, sisters, men and women of Cuba!—The like of to-night's gathering, save in a neighboring island years before any of us had an existence, in this region is without a parallel; and as the Lord lives, and my soul bears witness that he does, I will do all that in my power lies to carry out the decrees of this council.'

'Amen!' responded Placido.

'God grant it!' added Gondolier, who had gone inside to hear the address of their Chief.

'Arm of the Lord awake!' cried Abyssa Soudan.

'With strength and power!' responded the Council.

The female members of the Council instantly commenced whispering among themselves, all except Abyssa seeming earnestly engaged. The captive woman noticing them with some embarassment, which the ladies observed, Madame Cordora rose to ask an explanation.

'I should like to be relieved of a difficulty,' said this highly intelligent woman, 'not only for my own sake, but that of my female colleagues of the Council as well as the general cause in which we are engaged. We have all or most of us been bred Catholic, to believe in the doctrines of the Romish Church. I perceive, however, that a portion of our ceremonies consist of prayers and other formalties, objectionable to us as such. Can we as Catholics, with any degree of propriety consistently with our faith, conform to those observances? I ask only for information, and hope for reasons stated, to receive it.'

'A word of explanation addressed to your intelligence, Madam Cordora, will suffice I know to set the matter right,' said Blake. 'I, first a Catholic, and my wife bred as such, are both Baptists; Abyssa Sondan once a pagan, was in her own native land converted to the Methodist or Wesleyan belief; Madam Sabastina and family are Episcopalians; Camina from long residence out of the colony, a Presbyterian, and Placido is a believer in the Swedenborgian doctrines. We have all agreed to know no sects, no denomination, and but one religion for the sake of our redemption from bondage and degradation, a faith in a common Savior as an intercessor for our sins; but one God, who is and must be our acknowledged common Father. No religion but that which brings us liberty will we know; no God but He who owns us as his children will we serve. The whites accept of nothing but that which promotes their interests and happiness, socially, politically and religiously. They would discard a religion, tear down a church, overthrow a goverament, or desert a country, which did not enhance their freedom. In God's great and righteous name, are we not willing to do the same?'

'Yes!' was the unanimous response.

'Our ceremonies then,' continued Blake, 'are borrowed from no denomination, creed, nor church; no existing organization, secret, secular, nor religious; but originated by ourselves, adapted to our own condition, circumstances and wants, founded upon the eternal word of God our Creator, as impressed upon the tablet of each of our hearts. Will this explanation suffice, women of Cuba, sisters in oppression with us? Are you satisfied to act and do our own way regardless of aping our oppressors indiscriminately?'

'We are, we are!' cried out they.

'Amen!' exclaimed the woman of Soudan.

'Amen!' responded the poet.

'Amen!' cried out Madam Cordora.

'Amen!' concluded Montego, and the Council, amen!'

'Thank God for this interchange of sentiments!' exclaimed Blake, 'thank God! A word more and I have done. In regard to the justice of our course: if we are to consult our oppressors our very assemblage is in violation of the laws of God, because they tell us that the powers that be are ordained of God; hence our Council sitting contrary to the will of these powers, therefore must be against the ordinance of God. Do you see it?'

'We do, we do!' responded many voices.

'And we want no more of their gospel neither,' cried out Gofer Gondolier to the amusement of the entire assemblage.

'I rise simply to observe,' said Madam Cordora, 'that I and the other female members of the council are satisfied and that henceforth we are willing to go and do our own way, and let our oppressors go and do theirs.'

'Then, by God's help, we must succeed,' said Blake.

The general interest and anxiety manifested throughout the evening in the multitude of sentiments and opinions interchanged was beyond description. The greatest emotions were frequently demonstrated, with weeping and other evidences of deep impressions made.

'Everything being now settled,' said Montego, 'I now suggest that the Seclusion be formally closed.' * * * * * *

'I now remind the Chief that the poet will give the dismissing prayer prepared expressly for the occasion,' added Montego, after the ceremony of closing had been gone through with.

At the signal of the Chief, the poet stepping upon the elevation on which were seated the orchestra, amidst a deathlike silence of anxious listeners and fond admirers read in a loud, impressive, and solemn manner:

Oh Great Jehovah, God of Love!
Thou monarch of the earth and sky,
Canst thou from thy great throne above
Look down with an unpitying eye?
See Africa's sons and daughters toil,
Day after day, year after year,
Upon this blood bemoistened soil,
And to their cries turn a deaf ear?
Canst thou the white oppressor bless,
With verdant hills and fruitful plains,
Regardless of the slave's distress—
Unmindful of the blackman's chains?
How long, Oh Lord! ere thou wilt speak
In thy Almighty thundering voice,
To bid the oppressors fetters break,
And Ethiopia's son's rejoice?
How long shall Slavery's iron grip,
And prejudices guilty hand,
Send forth like bloodhounds from the slip
Foul persecutions o'er the land?
How long shall puny mortals dare
To violate Thy just decree,
And force Thy fellow men to wear
The galling chains by land and sea?
Hasten, Oh Lord! the glorious time
When everywhere beneath the skies,
From every land and every clime
Peans to Liberty shall rise!
When the bright sun of Liberty
Shall shine o'er each despotic land,
And all mankind from bondage free,
Adore the wonders of thy hand."

'Arm of the Lord, awake!' cried out Abyssa Sondan.

'Amen!' replied Gondolier.

'Ah ha! dat's de talk!' exclamed an old domestic, whose head that moment had been thrust in from an adjoining room, where he sat in waiting on Montego.

'I do not wish to be troublesome,' interrupted Madam Cordora, rising to her feet, 'but I must here ask another explanation. Engaged as we all are in a common cause for liberty and equality, I would not have a difference to be made at the start. The poet in his prayer spoke of Ethiopia's sons; are not some of us left out in the application, as I am sure, although identified together, we are not all Ethiopians.'

'No,' rejoined Placido, 'we are not; but necessarily implied in the term, and cannot exist without it.'

'How so; I'm sure I cannot understand you?' replied the Madam with surprise.

'I'll explain,' said Placido. 'I hold that colored persons, whatever the complexion, can only obtain an equality with the whites by the descendants of Africa of unmixed blood.'

'You surprise me Senior Placido! I certainly cannot comprehend you. That is a positive admission that the mixed bloods are inferior to the pure blooded descendants of Africa. I did not expect it to come to this, I think the acknowledgement of an equality of classes is sufficient for any purpose, without having to regard ourselves as inferiors—just what we are all contending against.'

'I see you do not understand my position Madam Cordora; let me make it plain to you,' further explained the poet. 'The whites assert the natural inferiority of the African as a race; upon this they premise their ojections, not only to the blacks, but all who have any affinity with them. You see this position taken by the high Court of America, which declares that persons having African blood in their veins have no rights that white men are bound to respect. Now how are the mixed bloods ever to rise? The thing is plain; it requires no explanation. The instant that an equality of the blacks with the whites is admitted, we being the descendants of the two, must be acknowledged the equals of both. Is not this clear?'

'I certainly see it Senior Placido, as I never saw it before, and you have given me a greater idea of the relation we sustain to the African race, than I ever had before: and the same certainly obtains in regard to Africa as a country, and her people as a nation or nations.'

'Of course it does. Heretofore that country has been regarded as desolate—unadapted to useful cultivation or domestic animals, and consequently, the inhabitants savage, lazy, idle, and incapable of the higher civilization and only fit for bondmen, contributing nothing to the civilized world but that which is extorted from them as slaves. Instead of this, let us prove, not only that the African race is now the principal producers of the greater part of the luxuries of enlightened countries, as various fruits, rice, sugar, coffee, chocolate, cocoa, spices, and tobacco; but that in Africa their native land, they are among the most industrious people in the world, highly cultivating the lands, and that ere long they and their country must hold the balance of commercial power by supplying as they now do as foreign bondmen in strange lands, the greatest staple commodities in demand, as rice, coffee, sugar, and especially cotton, from their own native shores, the most extensive native territory, climate, soil, and greatest number of (almost the only natural producers) inhabitants in the universe; and that race and country will at once rise to the first magnitude of importance in the estimation of the greatest nations on earth, from their dependence upon them for the great staples, from which is derived their national wealth."

'How surprising! What a different relation this places us in to the whites. And are there really hopes of Africa becoming a great country, Colonel Montego?'

'Nay Madam, not only "hopes" but undoubted probabilities, and that too, at no distant day. The foundation of all great nationalities depends as a basis upon three elementary principles: first, territorial domain; second population; third, staple commodities as a source of national wealth. The territory must be extensive, population numerous, and the staple such as the world requires and must have; and if the productions be not natural, they must be artificial. This will be seen in the case of Great Britain, which being but a small island, extended her dominions by conquest, thus adding an immense population, and taking advantage of her coal, established manufactories to supply the world with fabrics, in addition to her natural mineral productions, also made available by art. Africa, to the contrary, has five thousand miles of latitude, and four thousand longitude, with two hundred millions of homogenious population, all of whom readily assimilate themselves to civilized customs, and their continent, as shown before, producing the greatest staples of wealth to the world. Do you now understand it Madam Cordora?'

'Indeed I do, Senior Placido; and although I thought I had no prejudices, I never before felt as proud of my black, as I did of my white blood. I can readily see that the blacks compose an important element in the commercial and social relations of the world. Thank God for even this nights demonstration, if we do no more. How sensibly I feel, that a people never entertain proper opinions of themselves, until they begin to act for themselves.'

'This is true Madam,' added Placido, 'and I might call your attention farther to the fact that by a comparison of the races, you may find the African in all parts of the world readily and willingly mingling among and adopting all the usages of civilized life, attaining wherever practicable, every position in society, while those of the others, except the Caucasian, seldom acquire any but their own native usages.'

'And these are really the people declared by American laws, to "have no rights that a white is bound to respect?" Why have we so long submitted to them?' said the Madam with a burst of indignation, taking her seat amidst demonstrations of intense emotion.

'It is indeed a sad reflection,' said Blake, 'to contrast the difference between British and American jurisprudence. How sublime the spectacle of the colossal statue (compared with the puppet figure of the Judge of the American Supreme Court,) of the Lord Chief Justice when standing up declaring to the effect: that by the force of British intelligence, the purity of their morals, the splendor of their magnanimity, and aegis of the Magna Charta, the moment the foot of a slave touched British soil, he stood erect, disenthralled in the dignity of a freeman, by the irresistable genius of universal emancipation.'

'Let us then,' said Placido, 'make ourselves respected.'

'So far as Cuba is concerned, we are here for that purpose,' replied Blake.

'And if we say it shall, it will be so!' added Madam Cordora.

'Then it shall be so!' declared Blake.

'Then,' concluded the Madam, 'it will be so!' when the Council closed its grand and important session of several hours, to meet again at the residence of Carolus Blacus, father of Blake the leader of the great movement.

For the Weekly Anglo-African.

THE BLACK PUPIL;

OR THE SCHOOL-MASTER OUTDONE.

BY OMEGA.

The village of old S——d in the State of Connecticut is replete with reminiscences, many of an instructive and jocund nature, and which have left lasting impressions. One of these incidents, which will no doubt prove interesting as well as amusing to the reader, I will relate. Somewhere about the close of the year 1820, during the season when, in the New England States, the robust farming lads apply themselves to the studies of the school-house, a lad of some 14 or 15 years made bold to present himself to the village master as a pupil for the term. Although having stamped upon his features the lineaments that betokened one of that outraged race so feared and spurned in this land of 'free institutions,' he felt himself a lad among lads, and a desire for improvement prompted him to make the attempt, even if he failed. On entering he found he was quite early, the master not having arrived. He was heartily welcomed by a host of boys of the town with whom he had romped and toyed in infant sports, many of whom being educated up to the idea, 'a boy is a boy whatever his color,' and others no doubt whose parents had not considered them of a ripe age to be made known the necessary distance to be kept from one of his complexion. All were in an uproar and happy to see him.

'Hello, there, John Denby,' a bright eyed lad exclaimed, 'come and play ghost with us; we want one more; come before Sour Krout comes.'

'With all my heart, Calvin,' our hero replied, 'if it is agreeable to all.'

'Neouw deont put on airs,' exclaimed a tall specimen of a Yankee Doodle,' you knoew we want yer.'

'Yes, yes; come,' chimed in a dozen voices.

John eagerly joined them, and the first proposition was, he must be the 'ghost.' Accordingly one little girl's shawl was produced and wrapt around his head and shoulders, covering his body, in which manner he was to catch his comrades, similar to the play of blind-man's buff. In the midst of their sports the new school master arrived somewhat stealthily, supposing he would find his pupils in 'Bedlam.' He was in stature rather short but thick, apparently about 24 years of age, with an aspect that denoted a firm and decisive character. He was a native of New Jersey, and being raised in one of its most conservative sections, he looked upon a negro with contempt, and thought him an object of sufferance. As the top of his hat was discerned passing the windows the scholars flew to their seats, leaving John to feel around for his companions; he imagining nothing wrong exclaimed: 'You need not be too still, I can get one of you;' when in his eagerness, mistaking the master for 'a little one,' shouted 'I have you! I have you!'

'Tell me who it is,' replied the master in a disguised voice.

Supposing it to be a fat little boy named Green, John exclaimed 'Tis you, you Green Monster.'

Here quite a tittering prevailed, for he had touched the master's feelings, he being rather partial to that color in his apparel, and besides either carrying or wearing a pair of green goggles, his eyesight being defective.

'You impudent scamp!' exclaimed the master somewhat enraged, 'after professing goodness, and now being caught acting in this disorderly manner, to insult me. Take off that shawl, George Jones, and apologise for your conduct.'

Here the master had been mistaken, believing he had caught a pupil, long suspected of hypocrisy; but John, who began to realise the precariousness of his situation, and who it was he had to confront, hugged himself closer in concealment.

'Take it off,' reiterated Mr. Morton, when seeing no desire on John's part to obey the order, commenced pulling it off, during which time quite a ridiculous scene ensued: benches being overturned amid the delight of the laughing scholars, and the cries of the little girl to whom the shawl belonged, which were no doubt prompted from fear of punishment at home, for the use being made of it. At last John suffered the shawl to be removed, when, judge the amazement and disappointment of the master in not beholding George Jones—but what his Jersey prejudices and feelings prompted him to hate, the head of a negro.

At this juncture all was merriment; and Morton paralized to the spot, forgetting all decorum among his pupils, voluntarily exclaimed—

'Great heavens! a nigger!'

Here was fresh merriment for all, and which enraged the master to such a degree that he fairly yelled aloud for order; and looked savagely enough to frighten a bull.

'How dare you,' he continued; 'how dare you, you black villain, to come in this school—this white school—and conduct yourself in this manner! Be off as quick as possible, but first get upon your knees and apologise.'

John, in a very unconcerned manner, at the last sentence, threw back his head, and with a meaning half-wink, plainly replied: 'I bend my knees to no one but my Maker.'

Judging from the stern look and excited manner of the master at the last remark, it would be easily imagined what would have happened if little Calvin Judson had not interposed, by saying—

'Hold on, Mr. Morton, I have something to say in this matter;' and with the honesty and boldness of a hero explained the whole transaction. Still the master was not satisfied, so eager was he to whip the negro.

'What business have you here, darkey?' he exclaimed.

'Before answering, as I have never been used to vulgarities, I would require a gentlemanly and civil mode of interrogation,' replied John.

'Ah! ha! a colored gentleman,' the excited but abashed master ironically replied. 'What is it the gentleman wishes?'

'Well sir,' replied John, straightening and placing himself in a dignified postion, 'having heard of your reputation as a teacher, and beside your school house being as near as I desire, upon deep reflection, I have concluded to place myself under your charge for the winter.'

Morton could no longer restrain himself, and hastening to the door in a manner denoting fury, opened it and turning to John, exclaimed: 'Now, Mr. Nigger, walk out of that door!'

John stood mute not heeding his remark, until the master placing his hand upon his shoulder, thundered in his ear

'Did you hear me, sir?'

'I heard you ask some nigger to walk out of that door, and I am waiting to see who it is;' remarked John.

'Then know I mean you,' replied the master.

'I have come as an applicant for instruction,' replied John. 'I do not wish to be insulted, and being in a public school, I claim the right.'

'I do not teach Niggers, so go,' replied the master pushing him toward the door.

'Neouw Mr. Morton, darned if that's fair,' exclaimed tall Mell Curtis, 'I know that ere chap, and he's a darn sight better than I be.'

'He's a fine feller,' said Tom Jones and a host of others.

'Hold your tongues and mind your business, or I will thrash you all;' replied Morton, 'I'll teach you your business.'

In spite of all protestations, John was forcibly ejected from the school house. Being of a determined spirit, he did not let the matter rest, but calling upon his friends, many of whom were influential and wealthy farmers in the town, he related the incident of his application and ejection from the school house, which resulted in a caucus of the intelligence of the place, and finally John's safe entree within the school. Here was torment for the Jerseyman, which increased as John induced his relations and other colored friends to enter the school, who were, notwithstanding the keen prejudices of the master admitted. After a while a black class was instituted, to vent his spleen upon; and after hearing the white children recite their lessons, the pusillanimous voice of 'Old Jarsey' was heard to exclaim

'Now let the black snakes come forward.'

It is almost useless to say, that nearly all the children, although quite young, condemned the treatment toward the few colored pupils, some even going so far as to threaten to leave the school. Mell Curtis, John's old friend, would often say:

'Neouw John, darned if I wouldn't be square with that ere chap.'

John nothing daunted, made rapid progress, forcing a promotion in a class among his white schoolmates, which tended the more to irritate the master, who seeing the resoluteness of his black pupil, determined to teach him as little as possible and make his path full of obstacles. One day as John was poring over the studies of 'the double rule of tree,' in which he had just entered, a problem was presented rather difficult to solve. He applied to the master who was all stubbornness, having shown the white scholars, and prohibited them under the penalty of a severe castigation from assisting their black schoolmate; John was excited to anger, and in a little while a close conversation was observed going on between the black scholars. Morton suspicioning something wrong, stepped toward John with his rod of correction, and enquired if he was ready to solve the problem.

'No sir,' replied John, 'but when you have the manliness to assist me as you did others, I am at your service.'

'Then take that you impudent nigger,' exclaimed the master, at the same time lifting his hand to give a severe blow; but John was prepared, and in a moment the master was on his face, biting the dust, the black pupils keeping him in position, while John administered as severe a correction as a master could bestow on a pupil. The master was forced to promise that 'he would not do so any more.'

The laughing in the school-house was intense, and the black pupils being fearful of consequences, left the school, overjoyed at having taught a lesson to a tyrant. As for Morton, so mortified did he become from the just treatment by his black pupil, particularly when 'Madam Gossip' went her rounds, that in a few weeks he departed for parts unknown.

Sometime after the above incident occurred, about the year 1849 or 1850, a lecturer on 'the destiny of the black race on this continent,' was announced in the above named village, which created quite a sensation, the orator being an old acquaintance of many heads of families in the place, and of a different complexion to those whom they were used to listening. The old town hall when the evening arrived was full to overflowing, young and old, great and small, rich and poor were present; and amid the enthusiasm, and plaudit of friends and strangers, John Denby was welcomed to his native town, away from which he had been many years, and the eloquence, wit, and judgment of the black orator was the topic of conversation for some time. After the evening's entertainment friends flocked to offer congratulations, and lo! and behold! who should appear but the old Jerseyman, Master Morton, of the 'olden time;' who had again ventured in the town for the purpose of instructing 'the young idea how to shoot,' and offering his hand to John exclaimed

'John how do you do, this is my old pupil, one of whom I am proud; John you are the first colored gentleman that ever spoke in this hall.'

Very courteously receiving his hand, John replied:

I am happy to see you sir, and glad to find more reciprocal feelings existing, as when last we met.

'Well John,' remarked Morton, 'times have changed, let us forget the past, looking only at the present; I suppose experience has taught you it is often necessary and beneficial, for a master to exercise severity to a pupil.

'True, I agree with you Mr. Morton," John replied with his amendment, 'and often a little correction is beneficial to the master.'

A few winks from John's friends, and a perception of a blush on the part of 'Old Jarsey,' indicated that the master felt within himself, that by a black pupil he had been outdone.

From the Independent.

THE BLACK SCHOLAR.

What can the negro learn?

We have on our table three private letters giving some facts on this point. One is by a missionary returned from West Africa; another by a traveler in the island of Jamaica; another by a Professor at Oberlin College.

Our first correspondent's testimony is that African black children learn as readily as American white children. For instance, six years ago twenty young children of the bush, running naked and wild, were formed into a missionary's school. They had not a civilized idea. They knew no scrap of a civilized language. But they have already learned to speak, read, and write English, and have made good headway in grammar, geography, botany, and natural philosophy. "About a year ago," says our friend, "when I had set up our printing-press at Mount Hope, I took two of these boys into the office. They had never seen a press or a type. But in a few days they learned to set type with great readiness. When I left Africa they were able to read any ordinary MS. with ease, and 'set up' with remarkable rapidity." Speaking of another school of native black children, he says: "I oftentimes was surprised at the depth of thought exhibited in the compositions which they were accustomed to write once a week."

Mr. Blyden, of Monrovia, in charge of the Alexander High School, a negro with no white blood in him, is said to be the best linguist on the West Coast; and the grammar-school at Freetown is conducted by a native possessing many varied acquirements which would do honor to the whitest of white men.

The friends of missions to black men have not forgotten a remarkable instance that occurred years ago, showing the intellectual power of a native African. A chief's son of the tribe called the Vey, in the region about Sherbro, having when a boy heard of the White Man's Book, formed a design to make a Black Man's Book; for which it was first necessary to create for his tribe a written language. Walking up and down the sand-beach, he drew in the sand with a stick the models of his letters, until he had satisfied himself with their shapes, and so invented a complete alphabet for the sounds of his dialect. Such was his assiduity and success, that even in his own lifetime a portion of the Word of God was printed and published in his own language in the characters which he originated.

Do such instances demonstrate for black men an inferiority of race or of mind?

Our correspondent who writes of Jamaica, informs us that in the mission-schools where the black children are taught, the teachers give uniform testimony that no scholars anywhere are more quick or apt to learn, or more fond of knowledge, or of more retentive memory. "They acquire," he says, "the elementary branches of an English education quite as readily as the white children. They may not be able to grapple as successfully with the abstruse problems of the higher mathematics; but in history, geography, reading, spelling, and writing, they stand an equal test. If there be a constitutional difference in the mental calibre of the two races, it is no greater than is observable between the two sexes. I think the mental characteristics of the colored race more nearly resemble the French than the English type."

Some beautiful manuscripts were lately sent to "The Independent," written in Arabic by black men's fingers in Africa. They seem to be as dexterously done as the fine workmanship of the Chinese. Our Jamaica correspondent mentions the following instance of Arabic knowlege among negroes. "A young lawyer," he says, "of my acquaintance, residing in Spanishtown, told me that he chanced to be looking over an Arabic Testament one day, in the street, when a negro man, who had come up unobserved behind him, commenced reading it aloud. My friend turned around with surprise, and asked, 'How came you to know that language?' He replied, 'I learned it in Africa many years ago.' It seems that his parents had been Mohammedans, and in accordance with Mohammedan custom had taught their children Arabic; and though long years of servitude and degradation had since passed, he had not forgotten it."

"A class of twenty black persons, full grown, began the alphabet under Rev. Mr. Olds, and in a few months had read the New Testament. A little boy in Spanishtown, who came from one of the most degraded of the African tribes, could read the New Testament at four years, and at six could write well, and was struggling with Colburn's arithmetic."

Rev. Mr. Phillips of Spanishtown says: "The black population are just as capable of being conducted through every stage of mental discipline, and of arriving at as great a hight of social and intellectual improvement, as has ever been attained by the most privileged Europeans."

In Oberlin College, Ohio, in which black students are admitted and treated, without distinction from whites, the class-rolls show that the scholarship of the one is of equal merit with the other. "The colored people," says one of their instructors, "are as to mind and capacity to learn, just like white folks; when a black man has a certain opportunity, he will improve it as fast as his paler neighbor who has the same opportunity."

Have these instances any moral? If these negroes—native Africans, British Islanders, free Americans—with all the disadvantage of being blacks and with none of the compensating benefit of being slaves—have nevertheless such eminent capacity for the attainment of knowlege, and for usefulness in life, what are we to expect from the minds of those more fortunate negroes who for long years have been growing ripe under the highly-praised benefits and blessings of the civilizing and Christianizing institution of American Slavery? If the native children of the bush, who first have to learn civilized language in order to be taught anything, have brains enough left to become good scholars afterward, what may we look for from those to whom English is their native tongue, and who by birthright are nursed in the lap of that fostering mother whom they gratefully call Slavery!

The schoolmaster is abroad among them, with epauletts on his shoulder. Wherever the soldiers go, there follow teachers to the untaught. The army carries the school-house in its rear, like a baggage-wagon. When was there ever such another spectacle in history? Instructors are already busy among the contrabands at Fortress Monroe and Port Royal. What will come of their primers and blackboards? Will they prove that God has created a race born to be ignorant, and with no capacity for knowledge? We know of a little class of young Virginia contrabands who learned the alphabet in a single evening, so that no child missed a letter. Will white children do better? There are high hopes for the Black Scholar! God speed the twenty-six letters into every state where there are dusky men waiting to learn! They are the enchanted keys which are to unlook the house of bondage.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, MARCH 15, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

CROWDED OUT.—We purposed giving our readers this week some comments on the President's Emancipation Message, and a brief review of the Haytian emigration movement, but owing to a pressure of other matter, we are compelled to defer their publication until our next issue.

"STRIPES AND DEATH FOR THE LOYAL."

In the "N. Y. Tribune" of the 4th inst., under the above caption, appeared without the proper credit, an extract from a letter of our own correspondent in Gen. Hooker's Division, accompanied by pertinent editorial comments. In the issue of the 6th is published the following communication, in which the writer denies the truthfulness of our correspondents statements. Now, as we have unbounded confidence in the veracity of the latter, we will not be in haste to believe that the "Tribune's" correspondent is right but will wait until we hear further from our own:

To the Editor of the N. Y. Tribune:—

"SIR: Under the above caption in your daily edition of the 4th inst., I noticed a letter from Gen. Hooker's division, dated Jan. 10th, which is wholly incorrect in its statements, and does great injustice to Col. Dwight, who is one of the most gentlemanly and able officers in the United States service.

The facts of the case are briefly these: Col. Dwight of the 1st Regiment Excelsior Brigade was informed not by a slave named Jacob Scroggius or any other negro, that arms and ammunition were secreted in the house of Samuel Cox, and in an adjoining marsh. He ordered a search made, but neither arms nor ammunition was found in the house or in the marsh. Cox never came to the regiment to claim Jacob Scroggins nor any other negro, so that if said negro was cruelly murdered by Cox, neither Col. Dwight nor any officer in his regiment was aware of or is to blame in the matter. The writer of the letter above mentioned has been misinformed either by some malicious person, or else, supposing the whipping and death of the slave Scroggins to be true, he has got two stories mixed together in such a way as to (perhaps unintentionally) entirely pervert the facts of the case. Neither Col. Dwight nor any of his officers have any desire to be used as 'nigger-catchers,' but are anxious to put down this wretched rebellion by using all the means that circumstances and usages of war allow. Hoping you will have the justice to allow this communication to appear in your columns, I am yours truly.

AN OFFICER 1st REGT. EXCELSIOR BRIG.

LATER FROM HAYTI.

Mr. Edmund B. Molson who went from Lewistown, Pa., on the 22d Oc: last to Hayti, has just returned in the brigantine Isabella Bauman. He says he is well satisfied that Hayti is not the place for a colored American, unless he is a capitalist, and it is utter folly for a poor man to go there and expect to make money or even procure as decent a living there as can be easily obtained here. The majority of emigrants that he saw were not doing well, earning but little money, enjoying miserable health, generally dissatisfied with the country, its prospects, its climate, soil, and the "old fogy' modes in which business of all kinds are carried on.

A great many of the respectable portion of emigrants with whom he had intercourse are virtually government pensioners, recieving a stated per diem sum from the government, which must be reimbursed as soon as they commence work or business, ere they will ever be permitted to leave the island.

Mr. Molson went out expressly to see, and observe and then upon his return report to his friends in Pa., his observations and impressions, which are so decidedly unfavorable, that his friends will no doubt be content to prefer as yet America to Hayti.

He saw a few emigrants doing comfortably well, but the most of these were in the employment of white persons as menials and laborers.

Mr. Hez. Grice also arrived in the Isabella Bauman.

From the N. Y. Herald.

INTERESTING FROM LIBERIA.

The American schooner Thriver, of Boston, arrived here on the 8th inst. in a very unfortunate condition. She had been in the vicinity of Goree, where her captain ran her into one of the rivers and hove her down to copper her bottom. The result was that very shortly after she returned to sea nearly all hands on board were severely attacked with the African fever. Capt. Leonard Small, of East Boston, died on the 2d inst., and the second mate and two sailors (all Portuguese) have since died. The second mate was buried here.

The Legislature convened in this city on the first Monday in December. It is composed of honest men. Though some of them are talented and some possessed of a little general information, most of them are wholly unqualified for the discharge of legislative duties. It is the most uninformed of all deliberative bodies among negroes either in this country or the States; none can take a higher rank in unenlightened understanding than the Legislature of Liberia. The present one, however, is above the average. It is not because there are no able men in this country; but the standard of our law-makers has been regulated by political chicanery.

The message of President Benson was moderate in length; but the accompanying documents protracted it to an almost unprecedented length.

Under date of July 1 I informed you of the unpleasant feelings existing between this government and England. The people assembled in a public meeting to deny it when they saw it in the "Herald." The message, however, showed very plainly that our relations with her Majesty's government were in a very unsatisfactory state. Questions of jurisdiction are now under consideration, and the naval flag officer of England on this station is daily expected here to examine the validity of the political jurisdiction which we claim over the Gallinas country. Some reference is made to the Congo question. He promises to furnish satisfactory information of their condition. Of course all that you may hear from the President or the physicians in reference to the recaptured Africans will be favorable. These Congoes here are under the care of the government and its officers, and of course the only report that goes abroad is a favorable one; but if the facts were really known to the United States government how little care and consideration are given to Congoes by government officers, how they have been half starved, and how little medical attention is bestowed upon them, coupled with the indifference, neglect and contempt with which the Benson government regards everything connected with the Congoes, always excepting the $100 allowed by the United States government, President Benson would be held to a severe accountability for not fulfilling his part of the compact on behalf of Liberia.

Whatever may be said of the members of the present Legislature, they can never be seduced into the support of the President's policy on the Congo question, though they are every one of his party. The management of the Congo money has been so palpably wrong that not even his own party in the Legislature will endorse it. By the next mail I shall be able to inform you of great estrangement between the Executive and the House on this question. The storm is now gathering.

The natives in the vicinity of the settlements on the St. Paul river are still engaged in warring against each other. The country is kept in a state of great excitement, and trade is seriously impaired. The government has not taken any action in behalf of the natives who are under her protection, who are attacked by plundering tribes that are in no way connected with Liberia.

The inaugural address of President Benson was given in the Government square to a large assembly of ladies and gentlemen. The only thing of any importance which it contained was an emphatic assertion not to be a candidate again.

Chief Justice Drayton is now mentioned as one every way qualified for the duties of that high position by the Benson party. He is worthy, and, if nominated, will be elected.

LETTER FROM RAHWAY.

RAHWAY, N. J., March 6th, '62.

MR. EDITOR: By long silence and seeming neglect, you will probably be led to conjecture that the people in Rahway have forgotten you, but this communication will prove to the contrary.

Thinking that you would like to know how we are progressing, and also desiring to inform those of the public who pretend to be our superiors what we are doing, through the columns of your periodical, I send you this letter to show that Rahway is capable of producing a society of energetic colored men and women, as much so as any other place.

We have here a fine Society of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion, which is at present in a flourishing condition, now under the charge of Rev. William H. Pitts. He is the father of the flock; and a man that is doing the will of his Divine Master wherever he may be found.

A tea was given here by the ladies of the society for the benefit of the elder, on the 26th and 27th ult. Addresses were given by two young gentlemen; one from the City of New York, the other belonging in Rahway. The choir was also in attendance, and was highly commended. Everything passed off in the most pleasing style.

P. P.

LETTER FROM KEY WEST.

U. S. SCHOONER PARA,
KEY WEST, Feb. 26th, '62.

DEAR ANGLO: I embrace this opportunity to pen a few lines to inform you of the doings of Porter's Mortar Flotilla since our departure from New York. We are quietly lying at anchor now at this port waiting very patiently for the arrival of D. D. Porter, who is to take charge of the expedition; after which time we expect to make an attack on Mobile or New Orleans. The inhabitants of this isle, though formerly Secessionists, seem now to be strong Unionists. The Stars and Stripes may be seen waving from most all the principal buildings throughout the place. The colored people seem to be in excellent spirits, and almost anticipate immediate freedom, which, God grant, they may receive. I have nothing more at present that will interest you, but you will hear from me again quite soon, when I expect to apprise you of our departure from this place.

[illegible] H. L.

LETTER FROM NEWARK.

NEWARK, N. J., March 10, 1862.

MR. EDITOR: The [illegible] war continues to rage in this city and is severely felt by everybody, not excepting the colored people, who are beginning to taste the bitter pill; but we hope that it will continue to rage until every yoke is broken and every bondman permitted to go free.

By request the Mozart Club repeated their exhibition on Tuesday evening last at the Oraton Hall. This club consists of some ten or twelve young men, under the direction of the following officers: G. Francis, President; J. G. Ewens, Secretary; and M. T. Roberts, Treasurer. The exercises consisted of declamations and dialogues, and were well performed. The affair wound up by a "hop."

Mr. Parker, an ex-slave, lectured last Wednesday evening in the lecture room of the Plane street Church. He gave an interesting sketch of his life, and a brief account of the battle of Bull Run, he being an actor in it.

Mrs. Jefferson Ellis and family will sail for Kingston, Jamaica, on Thursday, 13th inst. The loss of Miss Mary will be deeply felt by the members of the Plane street Church, as she has served a long term as organist. She will be succeeded as such by Miss Hagar Elizabeth Hedges, a young lady possessing the requisite qualifications.

Protracted meetings have been held for two weeks past in the Zion A. M. E. Church, and are still in progress, under the superintendence of Rev. Wilbur G. Strong. On Sunday evening last sixteen persons were admitted on probation, among whom was Mrs. S. Strong, who is the daughter of Superintendent Ross of the 2d District of the A. M. E. Z. Connexion.

ISAAC TEMBROOK.

"WE ARE BUT HUMBLE SINGERS."

The Song of the Hamilton Family.

Written to be sung at the Grand Concert at the Cooper Institute, March 31st, 1862.

MUSIC AND WORDS BY ROBERT HAMILTON.

Solo No. 1.—to be sung by James M'Cune Smith.

If I were a speaker,
And ready with the tongue,
I'd raise my voice in every land
To deprecate all wrong.
Like Brougham and O'Connell,
Or he of silvery voice,
Our Phillips, or great Cheever,
Would freemen's hearts rejoice.

Chorus by the Family.—

We are but humble singers,
But to the world we'll go,
And tell to men of every clime
Poor Afric's talk of wo.
And then we'll chant the blessings
Fair Liberty doth bring,
This glorious strain of freedom
Is now the first we'll sing.

"Viva l'America."—In which the audience will please join.

Solo No. 2.—To be sung by Robert Ezekiel.—

If I were a soldier,
Call'd to the battle field,
To fight our country's direst foes,
My sword I'd never yield
Till every infamous Southron
Who, steep'd in infamy,
Would sell us to aristocrats,
Were driven in the sea.

Chorus.—We are but humble singers,
But to the world we'll go,
And tell to men of every clime
Poor Afric's tale of wo.
And then we'll chant the blessings
Fair Liberty doth bring,
This second song of Freedom
We'll now begin to sing.

Chorus for the audience:—

"My country 'tis of thee," &c.

Solo No. 3.—To be sung by Fanny Jane.

If I were a teacher,
To gentle youth I'd turn,
And on their bright green memories
The words of Freedom burn.
To each her glorious standard,
In God's great name would give,
That they in coming manhood
Might bear it high, and live.

Chorus:—

We are but humble singers,
But to the world we'll go,
And tell to men of every clime
Poor Afric's tale of wo:
And then we'll chant the blessings
Fair Liberty doth bring:
This is the third glad pæan
We now begin to sing.

Chorus for the audience—

"The Marseillaise Hymn."

Solo No. 4.—By Mary Adelphine.—

If I were a writer,
With ready thought and pen,
In words of burning eloquence
To all the hearts of men,
Would call in accents gentle,
O'er woodland, lake, and sea,
Rise! strike the chain from every slave!
Let man o'er earth be free!

Chorus:—

We are but humble singers,
But to the world we'll go,
And tell to men of every clime
Poor Afric's tale of wo:
And then we'll chant the blessings
Fair Liberty doth bring:
This is the fourth grand chorus
Which now we'll try to sing.

Chorus for the audience:—

"O Columbia! the gem of the ocean."

Solo No. 5.—By Adeline Matilda.

If I were a player,
Alive to glorious fame,
I would perform those characters
Where Freedom hath a name.
I'd cull from our own author,
Whose flowers forever bloom;
And hold to nature's mirror
The home of "Uncle Tom."

Chorus:—

We are but humble singers,
But to the world we'll go,
And tell to men of every clime
Poor Afric's tale of wo:
And then we'll chant the blessing
Fair Liberty doth bring:
And this the fifth sweet melody
Triumphant we'll sing.

Chorus for the audience:—

"The star spangled banner."

Solo No. 6.—By Olivia Augusta.

If I were a preacher,
In Christ's great name I'd stand,
And tell my erring countrymen
That guilt is on our land!
But since I am a mother,
My child's first thoughts I'll crown
With memories of our warrior saint,
And sing of old John Brown.

Chorus:—

We are but humble singers,
But to the world we'll go,
And tell to men of every clime
Poor Afric's tale of wo.
And then we'll chant the blessings
Fair Liberty doth bring;
And now our sixth in harmony
We'll all begin to sing.

Chorus for the audience:—

"John Brown's body lies," &c.

Solo No. 7.—By the father.

If I were the President,
And had but legal power,
I'd end this blasting mildew
Now resting on our dower.
I'd call to every sire
To pass the vow to son,—
"That never more shall slave's foot tread
The land of Washington."

Chorus:—

We are but humble singers,
But to the world we'll go,
And tell to men of every clime
Poor Afric's tale of wo.
And then we'll chant the blessing
Fair Liberty doth bring,
Closing with Doxologies
To Heav'ns eternal King.

Chorus for all:—

"Praise God from whom all blessings, &c."

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, Thursday,
March 6, 1862.

The President to-day transmitted to Congress the following message:

Fellow-citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives.

I recommend the adoption of a joint resolution by your honorable bodies, which shall be substantially as follows:

Resolved, That the United States ought to co-operate with any State which may adopt a gradual abolishment of Slavery, giving to such State pecuniary aid to be used by such State in its discretion to compensate for the inconveniences public and private produced by such change of system.

If the proposition contained in the resolution does not meet the approval of Congress and the country, there is the end; but if it does command such approval I deem of importance that the States and people immediately interested should at once be distinctly notified of the fact, so that they may begin to consider whether to accept or reject it.

The Federal Government would find its highest interest in such a measure as one of the most efficient means of self-preservation. The leaders of the existing insurrection entertain the hope that the Government will ultimately be forced to acknowledge the independence of some part of the disaffected region, and that all the Slave States north of such parts will then say, "The Union for which we have struggled being already gone, we now choose to go with the Southern section."

To deprive them of this hope, substantially ends the rebellion, and the initiation of emancipation completely deprives them of it. As to all the States initiating it, the point is not that all the States tolerating Slavery, would very soon, if at all, initiate emancipation, but that, while the offer is equally made to all, the more Northern shall, by such initiation, make it certain to the more Southern, that in no event will the former ever join the latter in their proposed Confederacy.

I say "initiation," because, in my judgment, gradual, and not sudden, emancipation is better for all. In the mere financial or pecuniary view, any Member of Congress, with the census tables and the Treasury reports before him, can readily see for himself how very soon the current expenditures of this war would purchase, at a fair valuation, all the slaves in any named State. Such a proposition on the part of the General Government sets up no claim of a right, by Federal authority, to interfere with Slavery within State limits, referring, as it does, the absolute control of the subject in each case to the State and its people immediately interested.

It is proposed as a matter of perfectly free choice with them. In the Annual Message, last December, I thought fit to say: "The Union must be preserved, and hence all indispensable means must be employed." I said this not hastily, but deliberately. War has been and continues to be, an indispensable means to this end. A practical reacknowledgment of the national authority would render the war unnecessary, and it would at once cease.

If, however, resistance continues, the war must also continue, and it is impossible to foresee all the incidents which may attend, and all the ruin which may follow it. Such as may seem indispensable, or may obviously promise great efficiency toward ending the struggle, must and will come.

The proposition now made, though an offer only, I hope it may be esteemed no offense to ask whether the pecuniary consideration tendered would not be of more value to the States and private persons concerned, than are the institution and property in it, in the present aspect of affairs.

While it is true that the adoption of the proposed resolution would be merely initiatory, and not within itself a practical measure, it is recommended in the hope that it would soon lead to important results. In full view of my great responsibility to my God and to my Country, I earnestly beg the attention of Congress and the people to the subject.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

FORT DONELSON CAPTURED THROUGH THE AGENCY OF A COLORED MAN.—People at a distance have been at a loss to know how it happened that 15,000 of the rebels were captured at Fort Donelson. Of course, that number of resolute men, well armed, well-disciplined, and well-officered, ought not to be taken by any force, however large. Why the rebbels surrendered, when they might have made a much longer fight or broken through our lines and escaped, is as much a mystery to our commanders as [illegible] on Saturday night, at the close of the fourth day's [illegible] they had no suspicion that the [illegible] was over, but supposed the hard, decisive fighting remained to be done the next day. But during the night came Gen. Buckner's 'chivalrous' proposition for commissioners to decide upon terms of capitulation. While this was pending, the negro servant of one of the rebel officers in Floyd's Brigade made his escape from the Fort and came into our lines with intelligence that a portion of the rebels were leaving upon steamboats. This news was of the utmost importance; for Gen. Grant, learning that a part of the enemy were decamping, was encouraged to demand immediate and unconditional surrender much more confidently than if he had supposed there were still 22,000 rebels within the Fort. Afterward, while the negro was on his way down the river, an attempt was made at one of the landings in Kentucky to reclaim him as a fugitive slave, but our officers refused to give him up against his will. He is still within our lines, of course, in direct contravention of General Order No. 3, which requires that he should be kicked out. As Gen. Halleck has announced that any officer disobeying that order will be summarily punished, this seems to be a fine opening for him to begin. Whenever he does, however, either in this case or any other, some new light on the subject of public sentiment in the North-west will be likely to penetrate even to his brain.—Cor. of N. Y. Tribune.

SUPERINTENDENT BISHOP'S REPORT.

To the Ministers of the New York Annual Conference of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion—Dear Brethren: Having just returned from a tour up the Hudson River on my pastoral visits, viz., Troy, Hudson, Poughkeepsie and Newburgh, I am happy to say that the churches on the Hudson River appear to be in a prosperous condition. While in the city of Troy I had the pleasure of attending an Anniversary of the United Daughters of Williams, at which a number of other associations were present. I travel and have the opportunity of seeing and knowing something in regard to the condition of our people; and must truly say that the people of Troy are not behind in their moral nor mental improvements; I was truly delighted with aforesaid demonstration. In the City of Hudson there seems to be a good and glorious revival in Zion—Jos. P. Thompson, Pastor. Also in Poughkeepsie—J. Thomas, Pastor. I spent the Sabbath (March 2d) in Newburgh, and had a good time. Elder J. B. Trusty was absent I believe on a visit to his family. I did not stop at Kingston, Fishkill, nor Baxtertown, but intend doing so, by Divine permission, and will give notice by letter. I expect to be in Sag Harbor, L. I., on the 2d Sabbath, the 9th inst.; on the 11th, at Greenport: from which place I will notify the brethren in the district at least one week previous, so that they may be prepared for my reception, &c.

WM. H. BISHOP,
Sup't of the 1st District of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion.

N. B.—Conference will convene at Zion Church, corner of Church and Leonard sts., New York, on the third Saturday in May next.

REPORT.

The Festival given at Continental Hall on the evening of Feb. 11th, by a committee of colored ladies and gentlemen, was pronounced by all who had the good fortune to be present, to be a perfect success, particularly as far as good speaking was concerned, of which Mr. John Parker, the colored soldier from Bull's Run, took the most conspicuous part. Taking the grand object, the general management, and the extreme good temper of the hundreds present, it certainly was a complete success Notwithstanding the low price of the tickets, (ten cents) and the moderate price of the excellent refreshments, the clear profits after all expenses were paid amounted to sixty five dollars and seventy-eight cets. ($65,78.) This amount was carefully expended by a committee of five who took time to test the sympathy of many store-keepers for the suffering contrabands—resulting in the purchase of dry goods, shoes, books, and other articles at great advantage. A large amount of clothing was sent to the house of the treasurer, Mrs. Martha Ann Porter 170 West 29th street, from different quarters of the city, from Brooklyn and even from Morristown, New Jersey—the whole being valued at two hundred dollars. ($200.) The articles were examined with great satisfaction by numerous persons. The Missionaries and some of the Teachers for Port Royal also saw them. This effort of ours seemed to give them more zeal for the cause.

Sixty persons sailed on the Atlantic steamer on Monday, as Missionaries, Teachers, &c., among whom was Mrs. Nicholson. She being well known to some of the committee, they took the opportunity of consigning the goods to her charge as were the whole of the donations of the church to which she belonged. This will give the committee direct communication with the Freedmen. Since the sailing of the steamer there have been different articles sent to the Treasurer, and it has been suggested by the committee to form a permanent association, so as to continue aid whilst aid is needed.

WM. ANDERSON, Chairman.
[illegible] PORTER, Secretary.

NO MORE SLAVE CATCHING IN THE ARMY.

In the U. S. Senate, March 10th.

Mr. Wilson, (Rep.) of Mass, moved to take up the bill from the House providing a new article of war.

It provides that no officer or soldier of the army of the United States shall return fugitives, &c.

Mr Davis, (Union) of Ky, offered an amendment, that all officers, &c. shall neither detain, harbor or conceal any such fugitives.

Disagreed to, as follows:

YEAS.—Bayard, Carlisle, Davis, Henderson, Latham, McDougall, Powell, Rice, Saulsbury and Wilson of Mo.—10.

NAYS.—29.

Mr. Saulsbury, (opp.) of Del., offered an amendment that the article shall not apply to Maryland, Delaware, Missouri, Kentucky, or wherever federal authority was recognized.

Disagreed to—yeas 7, nays 30.

Mr. Carlisle, (Union) of Va., asked if, in case the President should at any time call out the militia to enforce the law for returning fugitive slaves, which constitutional provision would this bill interfere with?

Mr. Wilson, of Mass., said that would be enforcing a judicial decision, as the question of returning slaves was a judicial and not a military one.

Mr. Saulsbury offered an amendment so as to prevent officers and soldiers enticing or decoying any person held to labor or service from the service of loyal masters.

Disagreed to—yeas 10, nays 20.

The bill then passed—yeas 20, nays 9.

THE TREATY WITH ABBEOKUTA.

We find the following in the London "Cotton Supply Reporter." of Feb. 15th.

"The 'Gardiner's Chronicle' publishes a letter from Brass River, which has been received by a gentleman connected with one of our public offices. It is dated December 1. The following is an extract: Since writing to you I visited Abbeokuta, in company with——, and the following letter is the result. American colonization has been projected. Messrs Campbell and Delany, (colored men) have been sent out, and the report has been started that the land is in common. Mr. Campbell has had a kind of book written for him. I observe, too, that Sir C. Eardley has been informed that the land is in common. Nothing can be further from the truth. The most powerful chief cannot alienate land in perpetuity; even building ground is only granted on the implied, if not expressed condition, that when vacated it reverts to the original owners. Sir C. Eardley does not, I presume, wish to give rise in West Africa to the agrarian quarrels of New Zealand: but his ideas if carried out certainly will. The chief of Abeokuta has denied his treaty with Messrs. Campbell and Delany, declares that he will receive writing subject to English law, but that he will have nothing to do with men who come to his country independent of all contract. This is surely reasonable. Don't believe the fine reports about Abeokuta. It is a filthy hole. The Alatu, who calls himself king, receives you in a shed well plastered with horse-dung and indigo leaves: he has not the state of an Hindoo Banyan. The converts are about 800 in number, and the people generally are most pragmatical pagans. There is no humbug, however, about cotton growing. The whole of Zambu, which in its extensive sense means the land bounded north and east by the Niger, south by the sea and west by the Volta, would be one vast cotton field."

SHOCKING CASE.—Early this morning a hack drove up to the stand at the National Hotel, and the driver told roundsman Turner and patrolman Thompson that a colored woman had died in his carriage, and the corpse was still there. The roundsman at once began to inquire into the matter, and was informed that the deceased, a woman named Bryan, had been living for two years past with a colored woman named Sophia Harvey, in the Seventh Ward. She was taken sick recently, and being enciente at the time, a miscarriage was the result. She sent for her mother, Josephine Bryan, who lives in the First Ward, and the mother came and procured the hack to take her dying daughter home. When they arrived in front of the house, she told her mother that her disease was small-pox. Her mother having other children, declined to take her in the house. She was then taken to the First Ward Station, and the officers would not receive her there. The hackman then drove to the hack stand where he met the roundsman, but the woman had died in the meantime. The roundsman set to work with patrolman Thompson, to arrest all the parties, and seized Josephine Bryan, the mother; Sophia Harvey, the woman with whom the deceased had lived, and two men, J. Bennett and J. Green, who were supposed to know something of the case. The matter was laid before Justice Walter, at the Fourth Ward Station, by whom the prisoners were all dismissed. The body was taken to the house of the mother, in the First Ward.—Washington Star, March 1.

THE LOYALTY OF THE BLACK MAN.—The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune in his letter of March 3d says:

"Gerrit Smith brought down the house by the following passage in his lecture at the Smithsonian on Saturday: 'In fighting against negroes you are fighting against the country, against the purest loyalty. The loyalty of a Garrisonian Abolitionist may be suspected, but that of the negro never. What is to be done to save the country? Stop all [illegible] but fighting the Rebels; stop taking counsel of Kentucky, and take counsel of the whole country.'"

LETTER FROM BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, March 11th 1862.

ANGLO:—We again have the pleasure of addressing to you a few lines regarding the affairs in Baltimore, though we have but few incidents to relate.

Since we last wrote, has come and passed the natal day of George Washington which was celebrated in this city as it never fell to our lot to see it celebrated here before. The military stationed around were out on parade, at noon guns were fired and the bells of the city were rung, Washington's farewell address read, and the shaft which bears his name was most beautifully decorated with flowers and evergreens; the illuminations and fireworks in the evening closed the celebration of the day.

On Tuesday night last Mr. T. S. Boston, Mr. Luca, Madam Hill, and others from Washington, favored us with a concert at the Baptist Hall, which was well attended by a delighted audience. Mr. Boston's performance upon the piano and melodeon was particularly admired, and all of the performers acted well their several parts.

On Thursday night the Galbreath Lyceum, the oldest in the city, celebrated their annual anniversary, at Zion Church, and was one of the best affairs of the kind that we ever had the pleasure of witnessing.

The principal features of the performance were an eloquent and able address by the President of the body, Mr. Jas. H. Jordon, and an exhibition and presentation of numerous articles or specimens of shells, stuffed birds and snakes, minerals, eggs, fishes, &c. After which an amusing party, but interesting and instructive debate took place between the distinguished gentlemen, Messrs. John H. Butler, and the Rev. Wm. Williams. Question: "Do geological discoveries present greater wonders than does animated nature?" After the question was submitted to the umpires to decide upon, Mr. Butler phrenologised the head of his antagonist, which was quite an amusing feature of the performance.

After which came the lecture of Mr. Jas. H. A. Johnson, upon the subject of "National Strength," which was one of the most powerful and able lectures that we have ever heard, and is well worthy of publication for the perusal of our people. The closing address was to have been delivered by the Vice-President of the body, Mr. Wm. E. Matthews, but owing to the lateness of the hour, it was omitted. We may, perhaps, be able to enclose you a copy of it; and if it can be procured, will do so. The proceedings were interspersed with excellent music by the Lyceum, and responses from the choir of the church, constituting of itself quite a concert, exclusive of the literary part of the programme.

There were several visitors from Washton; one of whom, Mrs. Solomon G. Brown, we regret to learn, had her pocket picked whilst in the depot on her way home.

Last night the Black Swan again sailed down upon us on the wings of song, accompanied by a little "cygnet," Miss Davis, and the Nightengale, Madame Brown. In our opinion the concert was poorer than any we have heard from the Swan, but still was very good; and the little cygnet was deservedly applauded, and bids fair to rival the Swan.

We are glad to be able to chronicle a change for the better in the state of our weather since we last wrote. We have actually had as many as three or four clear days in one week.

Adieu. MAJOR.

A PRAISEWORTHY PROPOSITION.—Some friends who were present at the Children's Concert on the evening of the 3d inst., were so pleased with the performances that they have offered to donate a painting of Toussaint L'Ouverture worth $50, to be given to the person obtaining the largest number of 200 additional yearly subscribers within a given time. We will say more of this proposition in our next.

A LOVE STORY, truthful and thrilling will be found embodied in the letter of our army correspondent, "G. E. S." on the fourth page of this week's paper.

THE GRAND PROMENADE CONCERT AND FESTIVAL

Of the Grand United Order of Odd Fellows on Monday evening, March 10th, at the City Assembly Rooms, Broadway, was without exception the most brilliant affair that ever came off among our people in this country.

In our peregrinations through the city during the week, we witnessed the manipulations of our dexterous dress makers in silks, satins, laces, tarletons, bareges, organdies, &c., to be worn by our belles on said occasion, and believing that a flood of beauty would commence setting into the hall at an early hour, in spite of the malicious report that the committee's arrangement would be interfered with, we were not dilatory in getting there.

On arriving we found a large number of persons on both sides of Broadway in the immediate vicinity of the hall and, as carriage after carriage rolled up to the door, many of [illegible] would form a passage, through which the guests were obliged to pass, subject to the severest scrutiny.

On entering the first thing that struck our attention, was the magnificence of the Hall.

This room is the best in the city. Its size being 100 by [illegible] feet. The ceiling, which we should judge to be about [illegible] feet high, is elaborately painted, a portion of it being done in Fresco. At each end of the hall there is a gallery [illegible]. One of these was used by the band, the other by invited guests. We found Prof. Oton, who had charge of the music, surrounded by the following gentlemen, as well as others whom we did not know: Messrs. P. and D. O'. Fake, Snyder, Flow, Latham, Hardy, Curtis, and Douglass. From this array of talent the public can judge what the music was.

A view of the room and company from the orchestra was very fine; the light emitted from ten chandeliers brought out the painting and fresco above, and the variegated columns and colors that were forever, changing below, in beautiful relief, made it a scene long to be remembered.

The Grand Marshal, P. G. M., Bro. P. H Reason had laid out the following as the PROGRAMME,

and it was, with two exceptions, closely adhered to.

1st. Exercises by the Petersonian Association, which consisted of recitations, songs and choruses, and which were much applauded.

2d. The marches of the Odd Fellows, who on their entrance, were commanded by Bro. Geo. King. These marches or evolutions were quite difficult, but were well performed.

This was to have been followed by addresses from Messrs. W. C. H Curtis and John Peterson, but owing to the lateness of the hour the former did not appear, and the latter was compelled to stop speaking because of the interruptions.

The following gentlemen composed the

FLOOR COMMITTEE

William H. Jackson, J. M. Butler, Jr., J. Neal, William H. Stevens, and John F. Jackson; but one would have supposed that the company were professional dancers, so quietly did the committee perform their part.

THE LADIES.

As the interest of the affair centeres in the appearance of the ladies we are fearful that we shall fail to do them justice, so great was the amount of loveliness displayed.

The first that attracted our attention was the Misses H——y, of City Hall Place; one of whom appeared in dark silk; while the other two were clothed in dark plaid silk, with head-dress of white feathers and corals. Mad. J——n, of Green street, appeared in black silk with purple silk flounce. The Misses W——s, of Sullivan street, wore white tarleton flounced to the waiste, with black trimming. Miss S——n, of East Houston street, white tissue, trimmed with pink, with black lace flounce about 12 inches wide. Miss J——n, of 46th street, white tarleton and pink bertha with white roses for trimming and wreath. Mad. L——n, of South Brooklyn, light cherry silk, with dark head-dress. Miss of 46th street, dark purple silk, with heavy black lace flounces looped with pink roses. Mad. H——s, of Broadway, Williamsburgh, heavy blue silk, head trimmed with gold pins and flowers. Miss F——r, of Williamsburgh, white tarleton trimmed with flowers. Mad. J——n, of York st., white tarleton trimmed with cherry. Miss J——n, of 8th street, green figured silk, white waste with wreathe. Miss B——n, of Jersey City, white tarleton flounced and trimmed with white satin. Mad. S——e, of Monrovia, Liberia, figured silk berage, very pretty. Miss P——r, of Broome street, straw colored tarleton puffed to waiste. Mad. W——n, of Laurens street, heavy plaid silk. Mad. S——t, of Thompson street, white tarleton flounced and trimmed with cherry. Miss J——n, of Sullivan street, pink tarleton puffed to the waiste, with pink head-dress. Mad. F——s, of Sullivan street, white silk under skirt, with blue silk trimming carried from the waiste in front to within 6 inches of the bottom in the rear, with white lace over skirt. Miss N——n, of West 16th street, straw colored tarleton, green leaves and green silk bodice. Mad. J——n, of Prince street, white tarleton with pink and white flounce alternating, with wreath of white flowers. Miss A——n, of East 18th street, green brocade silk, lace bertha trimmed with flowers, with head wreathed in green flowers. Mad. C——s, of Thompson street, black silk, very heavy. Mad. P——k, of Morton street, figured silk, flounced. Miss M——s, of East 18th street, lavender colored silk. Mad. W——s, of Brooklyn, figured silk with flounces. Mad. W——d, dark pink silk with bertha, very pretty. Mad. J——s, of Newark, polka muslin, with figured opera cloak. Mad. D——n, of York st., white liece with pink trimmings and single white rose on forehead—exceedingly pretty. Mad. V——s, of Cornelia street, green silk, with white lace opera cloak. Mad. R——l, of Mott street, plaid silk with lace bertha. Mad. O——l, of Mott street, black silk, very heavy white lace trimming. Miss B——m., of White street, corn colored satin trimmed with swansdown. Miss B——e, of West 22d street, white tuille tucked to the waiste; head wreathed with white roses. Mad. C——r, of King street, striped silk, white crape shawl. Mad. C——b, of Park street, figured brocade, very heavy. Miss W——e, of West 16th street, stone colored silk flounced, white lace bertha trimmed with pink rose-buds. Mad. M——y, of East 37th street, white liece, deep flounce, with wreath of white roses on head. Mad. O'F——r, of Broome street, light brocade silk, with head wreathed with white roses. Miss M——r, of Elm street, white tarleton with pink trimming, and bertha. Mad. F——n, of 10th street, polka muslin flounced. Mad. S——y, of 10th street, corn colored tarletone. Mad. M——h, of Sullivan street, blue tarleton flounced, with blue head-dress. Mad. M——s, of Pine street, white tuille with pink trimming. Mad. Y——y, of West 17th street, brocade silk with white lace bertha. Mad. J——n, of Sullivan street, white tarleton with black lace shawl. Miss D——r of E. Houston st., white liece, trimmed with pink and rosebuds; Madam McD——l, and Madam A——y of Jamaica, L. I., the first clothed in plaid silk, and the latter in white tarleton, with pink trimming; Miss P——y of Boston, blue silk with swans-down, and lace trimming; Madam M——y of White st., white tarleton, spangled with silver, and flounce trimmed with silver tinsel; Madam L——n of Corenlia st., dark cherry colored silk, black lace shawl figured; Miss B——n of 2d Avenue, black silk, trimmed with pink rose buds; Madam S——n of 29th st., rose pink tarleton, trimmed with roses; Miss F——ss of Williamsburg, white tarleton, spangled, head wreathed with white roses; Miss R——n of 5th Avenue, brown brocade silk, flounced to the waiste with black lace; Madam M——s of Crosby st., pearl colored brocade silk; Madam D——t of Wall st., striped silk, very heavy; Miss E——y of 9th st. pink silk, with crown of roses; Madam B——n of Marion st., and Madam H——y of Sullivan st., stone colored watered silk; Madam D——e of Pell st., striped silk, black lace flounces, very neat, Madam L——e of Flushing, black velvet waiste body with maroon velvet silk, Madam M——o of Flushing, striped silk; Madam D——e of Bayside, brocade silk; Madam M——l of Flushing, white tarleton; Miss M——t of East 32d st., lilac tarlton, with crimson bodice; Madam A——s of West 27th st., figured silk, very neat; Madam N——n of Williamsburg, white liece, tastily trimmed; Miss De——s of West 29th st., white tarleton, maroon colored flounces and bertha; Mad H——y of Bridgeport, Conn., white liece with blue trimming; Madam C——e of Dominick st., plaid silk; Madam J——n of Grand st., stone colored silk with black lace trimming; Miss E. J. J——n of Elizabeth st., corn colored silk skirt with black velvet bodice; Madam A——s and sister of West 42d st., white tarleton with pink trimming; Madam S——d of 6th Avenue, brocade silk, lace cape, and wreath. These are but a few of the many beautiful forms that were continually crossing the vision, and confusing the mind with ever changing variety. Now reader, we rather think that it would have greatly troubled you to select the "belle" from these mentioned; or from the great multitude whose names we failed to secure; but we will here confess that we had no trouble in doing so. Now picture to yourself, a young lady of the medium hight, light sambo in complextion, dark eyes beaming with affection, with hair silken in its softness, but as black as a ravens wing; clothe her in a skirt of the ridiest black silk, put upon her a infant waiste of white, and crown her with a wreath of white Coral, and if you will give her little feet in the dance, her hands in conversation, and her every movement the power of speech, (for alas dear reader she could not speak) you will have our "Belle" of the Ball, our dumb "belle" of 80th street.

The gentlemen were all fashionably dressed, and their conduct was in keeping with their appearance. Nothing occured to disturb the pleasures of the evening, save the attempt on the part of a stupid biped to interfere with our duties, and the company numbering over six hundred persons, retired about six o'clock, A. M., highly delighted with the nights entertainment.

WANDERER

MARRIED.

FISHER—WILLIS.—In Rahway, N. J. Feb. 26, 1862, by Rev. William H. Pitts, Mr. William H. Fisher of Rahway, to Miss Charlotte Ann Willis, of New York.

HOLMES—BAILY—In Stapleton, Staten Island, Feb. 6th, by Rev. Isaac Colman, Samuel Holmes, to Miss Margaret Bailey, all of said place.

DIED.

MAGRUDER.—In Washington, D. C. Feb 11th, John T. Magruder, aged 27 years.

IN MEMORIAM.

At a Stated communication of the Eureka Lodge No. 15, A. Y. M., held in the city of Norwich, Conn., Monday evening, March 3d, A. D. 1862, A. L. 5862, the following preamble and resolutions were passed:—

Whereas the mighty hand of death has taken from our midst one of our first and much beloved brothers,—therefore be it

Resolved, That we the members of the Eureka Lodge No. 15, A. Y. M., of the city of Norwich, State of Connecticut, do deeply deplore the loss of our late treasurer and brother, John T. Raymond, but are fully convinced that our loss is his eternal gain.

Resolved, That we mourn his loss as an energetic, active and arduous lover of our most ancient Institution. And we do hereby tender to his widow our strongest sympathy and condolence in her great affliction, but believing that the great Architect of the Universe, under whose Almighty Eye the sun, moon, stars, and other luminous bodies of the universe obey his mandate, saw fit to remove her partner of this life for a high and noble purpose, and we trust the same Almighty power may ever guide and direct her, and soothe her every sorrow.

Resolved, That we as a Lodge do tender to our late brother's widow our whole energies in discharging any duties within our power she may desire.

DAVID GORDON, W M.

Attest, J. A. DAVIS, Sec'ry.

LEWIS.—In Bath, Me., on the morning of Jan 27th, 1862, Miss Rachel Z. Lewis, daughter of the late R. B. Lewis, aged 22 years.

Miss Lewis was a member of the First Freewill Baptist church of Bath, Me., and was a young lady of high Christian character. She was honored in society for her integrity and usefulness, and was regarded as a young lady of much promise. Six months ago her appearance was healthy and beautiful, but a slight cold unchecked by medical skill, indicated that she would soon be summoned to the spirit world. This she well comprehended, and with christian resignation awaited the messenger of death. In her dying moments she desired her mother to sing the hymn commencing with the expressive lines, "Oh! when shall I see Jesus?" and also "We are passing away." After the completion of these songs, the spirit of this fond daughter and sister stepped from the margin of life into the great ocean of God's eternal love.

Miss Lewis was a sister of Mrs. Prof. Wm. F. Johnson. Her death is lamented by a large concourse of relatives and friends.

Special Notices.

I. O. OF G. S. AND D. OF S.

New York, March 10th.

Notice is hereby given that the Officers and members of the G. Lodge, and Subordinate Lodges, will meet on Sunday, March 23, at 1 o'clock P. M. precisely, in the Basement of Zion Church, for the purpose of attending the Funeral Sermon of the G. Treas., brother Wm. Burnett.

JOHN B. PORTER, G. Sec.

A

GRAND

CONCERT,

OF

One Hundred and Fifty Juvenile Singers,

WILL BE GIVEN AT THE

COOPER INSTITUTE.

On Monday Evening, March 31st,

IN AID OF THE WEEKLY ANGLO-AFRICAN,

And an effort to establish in this city a

Mechanical School for Colored Youth

of both sexes.

TICKETS 25 Cents. Children under 12 years of age 15 cents.

☞ Further particulars will be given in Circulars and in next week's paper.

EXHIBITION.

Colored Public School No. 1, Brooklyn,

Will give an Exhibition in the Polytechnic Institute, in Livingston street, between Court and Boerum streets, Brooklyn, on Friday Evening, March 21st, instant, commencing at 7 o'clock,—doors open at 6 o'clock. Admission 15 cents.

No postponement on account of the weather.

TO LET.—Apartments in house No. 148 Jay street, Brooklyn. At these apartments are within five minutes walk of Fulton and Catharine Ferries persons desiring a residence in Brooklyn will find them desirable. Apply on the premises after 1 o'clock, P. M.

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

DISTRICT GRAND LODGE, No. 2, OF THE INDEPENDENT ORDER OF GOOD SAMARITANS AND DAUGHTERS OF SAMARIA.

In accordance with previous arrangements, Thomas Lodge, No. 35, of Good Samaritans; Smith Union Lodge, No. 13, of Daughters of Samaria; Van Brakle Lodge, No. 4, of Good Samaritans; Olive Union Lodge, No. 27, of Daughters of Samaria; Prudence Lodge, No. 30, of Daughters of Samaria, and Perseverance Lodge, No. 42, of Daughters of Samaria, were reinstated to fellowship with the Right Worthy National Grand Lodge, of the I. O. of G. S. and D. of S., First Branch, on Tuesday evening, March 4th, A. D. 1862. A dispensation having been granted, the Right Worthy National Grand Sire, Bro. Geo. H. Hick, organized the above named Lodges into a District Grand Lodge, to be known by the name, style, and title, of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, of the Independent Order of Good Samaritans and Daughters of Samaria, and installed the following named Brothers and Sisters into their offices respectively, viz.:

Bro. J. T. Robinson, R. W. P. Grand Chief.

Sist. M. E. Ashton, R. W. P. Grand Presiding Daughter.

Bro. H. Brooks, R W G Chief.

Sist. S. Davis, R. W G Presiding Daughter.

Bro. R. H. Gleaves, R. W. D. G. Chief.

Sist. M. Parker, R. W. D. G. P. Daughter.

Bro. N. L. Durham, R W G V Chief.

Sist. M. Highgate, R. W G. D. of the Fountain.

Bro. J. H. Smith, R. W. G. Prelate.

Sist. J. Pharis, R. W. G. D. of Lessons.

Bro. P. C. Revels, R. W. G. Orator.

Bro. W. H. Longfellow, R. W. G. R. Secretary.

Sist. S. Jenkins, R. W. G. D. of Records.

Bro. J. Davis, R. W G. F Secretary.

Sist. C. E. Gilbert, R. W. G. F. Daughter.

Bro. J. Dolphin, R. W. G. Treasurer.

Sist. E. Master, R. W. G. D. of Treasurer.

Bro. H. H. Gilbert, R. W. G. Conductor.

Sist. E. Briant, R. W. G. D. Conductor.

Bro. W. Cooper, R. W. G. I. Sentinel.

Sist. S. Young, R. W. G. D. of the Key.

Bro. G. Murry, R. W. G. O. Sentinel.

Sist. S. Fauset, R. W. G. D. of the Pass.

After the installation ceremonies the R. W. National Grand Sire declared District Grand Lodge No. 2, I. O. of G. S. and D. of S. to be a regular organized body, under the Jurisdiction of the R. W. National Grand Lodge.

On motion, it was resolved: That a list of the officers be published in the Christian Recorder, and the Anglo African.

WM. H. LONGFELLOW, }
JONATHAN DAVIS, M. D. } Committee.

LECTURES.

MRS. R. LEE, a student of the Female Medical College, Boston, will deliver a Lecture on Tuesday evening, March 18th, at the Siloam Church, Prince street, Brooklyn. Subject: "Our neglect of science." Lecture to commence at 8 o'clock. Admission free.

She will also deliver a Lecture at Shiloh Church (Rev. Mr. Garnet's) cor. Prince and Marion sts, New York City, on Thursday evening, March 20th, at 8 o'clock. Subject: "What is woman worth." Admission free

MASONIC NOTICE.

The members of the Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, working under the jurisdiction of the R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, are hereby notified to meet at Masonic Hall, No. 231 West Sixteenth street, on Monday evening next, 17th inst., at 8 o'clock.

By order of R. W. G. Master.

JOHN L. HUDSON, Grand Sect'y.

ARRIVALS

At Mrs. PLANT'S Boarding House.
Mrs. R. Lee,—Boston,
Mr. Lewis Ward, Maryland,
" Wm. Brooks, Washington, D. C.

THE HORACE WATERS PIANOS, MELODEONS, ALEXANDRE ORGANS,

T. Gilbert & Co's. Celebrated Æolian Pianos,

are the finest instruments for Parlors and Churches now in use. A large assortment can be seen at the new Warerooms 481 Broadway, between Grand and Broome streets, which will be sold at extremely low prices. Pianos and Melodeons from surdry makers, new and second hand, to let, and rent allowed if purchased, as per agreement. Monthly payments received for the same. Also, second hand pianos at great bargains, prices from $25 to $100. Sheet Music, Music Books, and all kinds of Music merchandise at war prices. A Pianist in attendance will try new music.

HORACE WATERS, AGENT.

32 13t.

TO LET.—Two furnished Rooms in Mrs. Plant's Boarding House suitable for a gentleman and wife, or for single gentlemen or ladies. Apply on the premises.

MEDICAL.

MRS. R. LEE, for several years Practising Eclectic, and at present Student of the N. E. F. Medical College of Boston, is now in Brooklyn at 97 High street, where she will take great pleasure in giving medical advice to any who may wish it while she remains in the city.—Charges very moderate. Hours 10 to 2 A. M. and 3 to 8 P. M.

32tf.

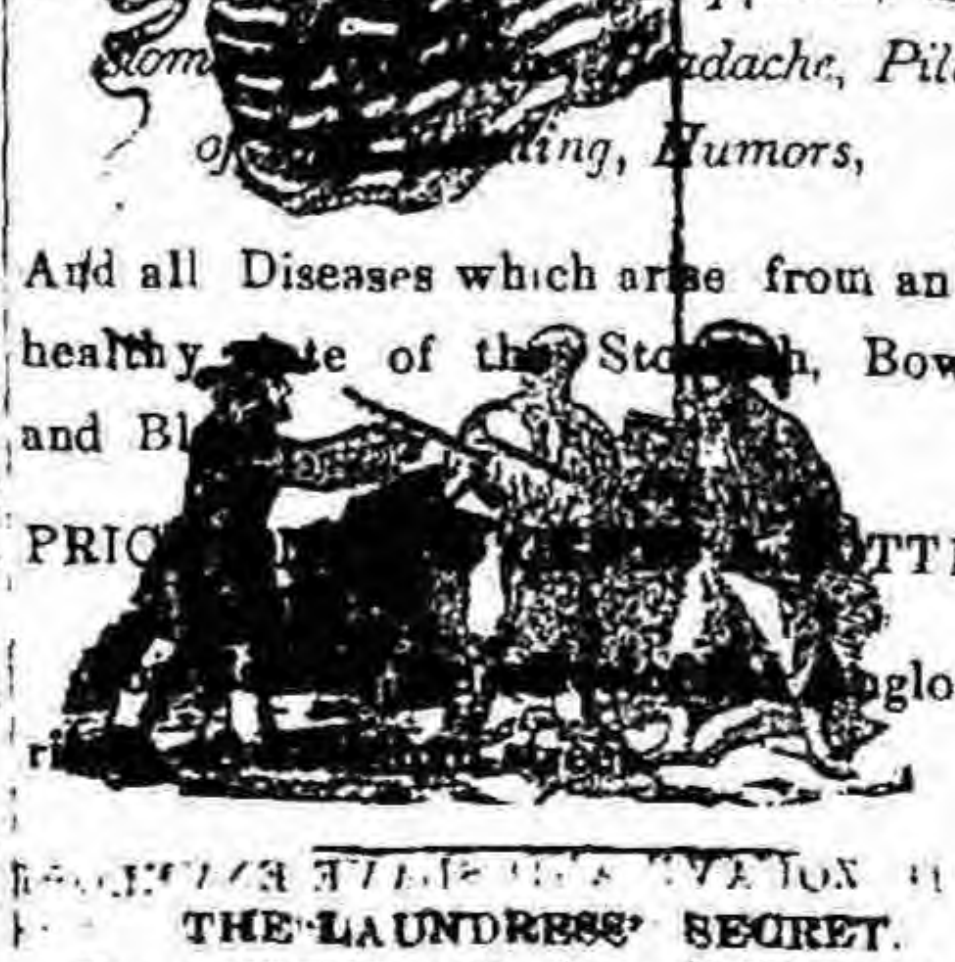
NOW IS THE TIME

To Use Dr. CLARKE'S

SHERRY WINE BITTERS!!

Composed of

Dock Root,	Wild Cherry,
Sarsaparilla,	Prickly Ash,
Thoroughwort,	Poplar Bark,
Rock Rose,	Rhubarb,
Wintergreen,	Dandelion.



For Weak ... Appetite, Sour Stom... Headache, Piles o... ing, Humors,

And all Diseases which arise from an unhealthy state of the Stomach, Bowels, and Bl...

PRIC... BOTTLE!

...nglo-Af...

THE LAUNDRESS' SECRET.

The most Invaluable Preparation known for rendering clothes white and clean, without rubbing or injury to the fabric.

The above recipe, together with over one hundred other items of information, sent free on the receipt of 5 red stamps.

A liberal discount to peddlers. Address,

JOS. ADAMS,
63 Nassau street.

A. ROBERTS,

120 Clinton Court, 8th st. New York, agent for the Weekly Anglo-African. Copies may be had of him at an early hour after its publication

TO LET.—Apartments in house 153 Thompson Street. A few gentlemen can be furnished with lodging also. Inquire of Mr. Jer. Bowers on the premises.

315tf

ZION CONFERENCE.

☞ Notice is hereby given to the Members of the Annual Conference of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion, that the Annual Conference of the New York District will meet in Zion Church corner of Church and Leonard streets, New York city, on the Third Saturday in May, 1862.

WM. H. BISHOP,
Superintendent of the 1st Dist. of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion.

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

HELP! HELP WANTED

At Tilmon's Agency, No. 70 East 13th st., one door East of the 4th Avenue. Spring is here and now is the time. Never was there a greater demand for all first class colored help than now. Remember that this is the oldest and most responsible office in the city for colored help. Situations constantly on hand for both city and country. Terms cash and strict attention paid to business. All persons coming to this city and wishing to save board will do well to call during Office hours, from 7 A. M. to 5 P. M.

31tf L. TILMON, Proprietor.

T NE SQUARE LODGE NO. 6, A. Y. M, under the jurisdiction of the M. W. United Grand Lodge of the State of New York, meet every Friday Evening at 8 o'clock, at their Hall 399 Grand st., Williamsburg, Brooklyn, E. D.

J. H. DAVIS, Sec'ry.

MASONIC

DIRECTORY,

FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No. 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka, No. 15, Norwick, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

(The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14, Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 East Houston Street, N. Y. City.

PETER S. PORTER,

GENERAL AGENT FOR

HOUSE LETTING,

170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City.

17 13t

PLANE ST. SELECT SCHOOL.

195 PLANE ST., NEWARK, N. J.

MRS. HARRIET E. ROGERS, PRINCIPAL.

The branches taught are Reading, Writing Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography and History.

Plain Sewing, Ornamental Needlework, Worsted Embroidery and Fancy Knitting.

Piano Forte, Melodeon, and Vocal Music by Prof. John H. O'Fake.

A limited number of Misses between the ages of ten and fourteen may be boarded in the house on moderate terms. Healthy location, and a fine yard for exercise.

REFERENCES.

NEWARK, N.J.

Rev. E. J. Adams, Jefferson Ellis,
Adam Ray, Abram T. Cook.

BROOKLYN.

Rev. J. N. Gloucester.

NEW YORK.

Rev. H. M. Wilson, Rev. H. H. Garnet.

All letters may be addressed to Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, 194 Plane st. Newark N J.

27 6t.

Elizabeth City, N. J. Feb. 8, 1862.

This is to certify that I heartily approve of the effort of Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers to establish a Select School for young misses. I have been acquainted with her for over twenty-five years, and am happy to recommend her and her enterprise to the patronage of the public in general.

DANIEL H. VANDERVEER.

Pastor of the 1st Colored Pres Church, Eliz. City.

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated "Hoagland Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

PHILADELPHIA AGENCY.

Wm. R. De Cordover, 419 South 7th st. is authorized to receive subscriptions and advertisements for the Anglo-African. All orders left with him will receive prompt attention

GLASS, CHINA, AND EARTHEN-WARE MENDED,

BY A. ROBERTS,

120 Clinton-Court, 8th st. New York.

A Supply of the EGYPTIAN CEMENT, for the above purpose constantly on hand. Price 25 cents per bottle.

29tf

WORLD'S FAIR AGENCY.—The undersigned are acting as Agents for Merchants an Manufacturers to Exhibit at World's Fair, and to introduce into England, France and other European countries, articles of American Invention, Procuring Patents, making Sales, or in any way promoting their interests.

DEXTER & CO. 17 Spruce st. N. Y.; 86 Milk street, Boston; 149 S. Fourth st., Philad

1m3ap.

GEORGE OTON'S

QUADRILLE BAND

BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,

PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St., and with G. Oton.

18tf

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.

New York—corner of Prince and Marion street near Broadway.

Hours of Worship;—

Prayer-meeting,	10½	A. M.
	3	P. M.
	7½	P. M.

Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock,
Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.
Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,

(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. WM. J. ALSTON, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1 2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.

Lect ure every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—

10½	A. M.
3	P. M.
7½	P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn.

13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

REV. ELI N. HALL, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:

10½ o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7½ "	P. M.

10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:

10 1-2 o clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7½ "	P. M.

12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—

3 o'clock,	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

LECTURE every Wednesday evening.

Rev. CHAS. H THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3½ "	P. M.
7½ "	P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. HALL, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. JOHN T. RAYMOND, Pastor. Residence—No. 78 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

AGENT FOR WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

TROY AGENCY.—Mr. Henry Burke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

MRS. ELIZA LEWIS' SALVE,
ANDERSON'S HAIR RESTORATIVE,
(New London.)
SPANISH OIL, (For the Hair,)
WHITE'S VEGETABLE EXTRACT,
BRANDRETH'S SUGAR COATED PILLS,
For Sale at the
Drug Store 56 West Broadway

tf-47

BOARDING AND LODGING, at No. 3 Jersey street, by Mrs. Brown, (widow of the late J. W. Brown) who begs the patronage of her friends and acquaintances.

29tf.

SOMETHING NEW.

The best washing preparation in the world No boiling, pounding or rubbing required, but all done in simple warm water. Full instructions concerning its use and manufacture sent by mail on receipt of 25 cents. Address

RUFUS STICKNEY
28 4t Templeton, Mass.

BOSTON HOUSE

MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of al the principal colored Churches.

19 26t

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,

BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTING

of every description. Also constantly on hand well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.

DON'T FORGET,
168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,

EMPIRE STATE HOTEL

AND

UNION HOUSE,

541 BROOME STREET

Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T. L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS

IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.

The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 331 Canal St., N. Y.

10 1y.

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal-oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y.

19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,

EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.

RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.

26 26t

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St., on door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.

10 5t

MRS. ANDERSON,

CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS

Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 74 Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn.

10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street.

11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMOdate a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate.

9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding.

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTES, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 SOUTH STREET, N. Y. Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate.

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS,
AND FURS,
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.

Shipping Furs Bought.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) Respectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

MRS E. LEONARD,

FASHIONABLE

DRESS MAKER,

25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.

Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.

BOARDING AND LODGING

BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in very healthy and convenient the city.

Boarding for Ladies	$2,50
" " Gents,	3,00
Lodging per week,	75

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,

CARD AND JOB PRINTER,

219 CENTRE STREET, NEW YORK.

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,

FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,

In all its branches—such as

BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.

Residence—120th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.

18 26t

Poetry.

THE TRIUMPH OF LIBERTY.

[The words of this song were written in 1843, by Henry Ware, Jr.: the tune, familiar to many, is said to have been first played on the entrance of the Allies into Paris.]

Oppression shall not always reign;
There comes a brighter day,
When Freedom, bursting every chain
Shall have triumphant way.
Then right shall over Might prevail,
And Truth, like hero armed in mail,
The hosts of tyrant Wrong assail,
And hold eternal sway.

E'en now that glorious day draws near;
Its coming is not far.
In heaven an earth its signs appear,—
We see its morning star,
Its dawn has flushed the evening sky;
The Western hills reflect it high;
The southern clouds before it fly—
Hurra! hurra! hurra!

What arm shall check its onward way?
Hurra! hurra! hurra!
What voice arrest the growing day?
Hurra! hurra! hurra!
What dastard soul, though stout and strong,
Shall dare bring back the ancient wrong.
Or Slavery's night of guilt prolong?
Hurra! hurra! hurra!

The day has come: the hour draws nigh—
Hurra! hurra! hurra!
Send forth the tidings far and high—
Hurra! hurra! hurra!
From every hill, by every sea,
Its shouts proclaim the great decree:
"All chains are broke—all men are free!"
Hurra! hurra! hurra!

Then shout! the hour comes on apace—
Hurra! hurra! hurra!
The hour of glory for the race—
Hurra! hurra! hurra!
Ring, Liberty, thy glorious bell;
Bid high thy sacred banner swell;
And trump on trump thy triumph tell—
Hurra! hurra! hurra!

For the Anglo-African.

LINES ON THE DEATH OF WILLIAM BURNETT

BY JOHN D. BAGWELL.

Our brother has fallen, his spirit has fled
To God who gave it. He sleepeth—not dead
He liveth in Heaven the city of God,
Forever redeemed through Jesus the Word.
He's fallen—weep not,—how happy his lot!
Though fallen, yet risen—with us he is not.—
He is not, yet he is,—the Lord hath thus said,
"He that believeth shall live, though dead."
We see him no more, yet we shall behold
Him in Heaven, in glory untold!
In glory ineffable, in bliss and in peace.
In peace essential and righteousness
His voice it is hushed—yet he speaketh to-day,
Immortal his tongue, no more to decay.
Before the throne of Heaven's great King
He chanteth the song no angel can sing.
'Tis the song of redemption, "Glory to God
And to the Lamb, who with his blood
Washed and cleansed and made him pure,
Be glory forever and evermore."
He tuneth his harp, in triumph he sings,
And shouteth "O death where is thy sting!"
"Glory to God—to the Lamb who gave Over thee the victory, boasting grave."
Weep not but resolve we shall see him again,
If faithful, in heaven eternally reign
With God the Father, and Spirit and Son
The one in three and three in one.
Rejoice and be glad, give thanks and praise
To God everlasting, the "Ancient of Days."
All honor all power, all glory to Thee,
Thy mercy has triumph'd—another is free.
New York March 3d, 1862

A COLORED ORATOR.

One of the features of our Queen City is the Sunday Night Discussion held at our Unitarian Church in this city. All sides are invited to attend, and all views are heard thereat. The church is every Sunday evening crowded to its utmost capacity, listening now to a warm debate upon the right and propriety of unconditional emancipation. A queer scene occurred there not long ago. An Englishman had sustained the negative of the question, arguing with great vehemence against emancipation. He had a great many figures, &c., about emancipation in the British West Indies and, of course quoted largely Anthony Trollope (whose book on the West Indies is the most complete romance ever imagined by that professional writer of fiction.) When he had spoken and various others, the best speakers of our city, perhaps, had responded or sided with him, and the meeting had reached its hour of adjournment, a colored man arose, and asked the meeting to listen to what he had to say a few moments. The novelty of the thing startled every one. It was manifest that a large number of those present were pro-slavery, not a few being from Kentucky. But the majority demanded that he should be heard, and so he came to the stand. But how shall I express to you the power and effect of this colored man's speech? Never were a set of white faces so completely eclipsed before. Any one speech that had been made was conceded by all to be to this only as a boy's debate compared with Webster's reply to Hayne. Such elegance of expression; such absolute mastery of his subject; such complete acquaintance with all the facts and figures; such perfection of style and pronunciation; such serenity and self possession, which could not be betrayed into any violent remark; such wit, felicity and vigor carried the audience by storm. The negro tried to stop; but though the hour of adjournment had passed when he began, the large audience would not permit him to stop, but sat breathlessly listening to his every eloquent word, and would have so sat an hour longer. When he ceased round after round of irrepressible applause, in which even the pro-slavery men united, told that this eloquent speech had told upon the hearts and heads of all present.

The man who had been criticising the Africans severely turned pale, then purple, then red; for the power of the colored man's first five minutes had laid his fabric in ruins. Every heart in the audience had whispered, "THAT is one of the race of which we are here considering whether it shall be treated as cattle." It was a triumph which the anti-slavery men of this city will long remember. The name of the young colored man was Peter Clark and I trust the friends of the slave in the East will one day hear him for themselves. —Cincinnati corr. spt. of the Anti-Slavery Standard.

DR. PENNINGTON ON SLAVERY.

From the Manchester, (Eng.) Examiner, of Feb. 20th.

Last evening there was a very numerous and fashionable audience assembled in the the upper schoolroom of Dr. McKerrow's church, to hear a lecture by Dr. Pennington (a colored gentleman) on slavery. The chair was occupied by Dr. McKerrow, who said that on Wednesday evening next Dr. Pennington would deliver a second lecture in the schoolroom of the Rev. R. S. Scott, Greenheys.

Dr. Pennington said he was before them to vindicate the cause of his race. The political aspect of the question of slavery he was not going to touch upon; that was a question which belonged to his audience and those on the other side of the waste of waters. What he intended to do was that for which he had been laboring for the last thirty years, to take up the negro question as a question of humanity and of the high providences of God, and of the ultimate destiny of the race. It was the experimental view of the slavery question that he was to take up; and he should carry his audience further on with the question on the following Wednesday. He had been enslaved at the South and oppressed at the North; and in each of these relations he had been deeply grieved and dissatisfied with his treatment as an African negro. He was born a slave in the State of Maryland. His mother was the property of one of the most powerful slaveholders on the western shores of Maryand. From his earliest recollections there were things about slavery which he did not like and could not like, and could never become reconciled to. It was sometimes said that the negro was better off in slavery, and would be perfectly contented were it not for busybodys and abolitionists. In his early childhood he never heard the word abolition, yet he felt when the merest child, that there was something abhorrent in slavery, and which was not in consonance with his feelings. Whenever he made a toy and one of his master's children came by and took it from him, he dared not ask for it again. When he grew up he was put to the trade of a blacksmith, because he was considered a sharp fellow; and he was valued at £200. The nigger overlookers were generally white men of the lowest class. These men were called "white trash" by the slaves, and were bitterly hated by all the blacks. Masters sought to keep their slaves in the most abject state of slavery; they never allowed them to learn to read or write. His strongest hatred of slavery was called forth by the floggings to which his fellows and the members of his family were subjected. He described with vivid power the terribleness of the lash inflicted upon negroes. Though a father saw his son taken away to be flogged he dared not speak a word. At length he determined to escape. After traveling for about a week, chiefly by night, he arrived in the State of Pennsylvania, where he was received in the house of a Quaker family, and remained there for some time. Here he commenced to study, and afterwards went north to pursue his studies. On arriving in the Northern States, however, he found that the slaves there had to suffer a very great oppression. If a black man had not a mind well balanced, and a good amount of common sense, he ran the risk of being driven out of his mind by the persecutions to which he was subjected. He was not allowed to join any school or college for a considerable period: and when at length he did enter Yale College, he had even there to put up with a great deal of persecution. The persecution was extended also to those whites who were supposed to be abolitionists. He had faith, however, that the day would come when all the slaves of America would be emancipated. He believed that God had now taken hold of the helm of the American state ship, and would work it into the harbor which he listed, which would be that of liberty for the slave. [Applause.)—Dr. McKerrow said it was a difficult thing to say what would be the direct issue of the struggle in America; but he thought they would see ultimately a great movement towards the abolition of slavery. He had no doubt that many of the Northerners were very anxious and ready to enter into a compromise about this question. There was a strong prejudice in England against the men of the North, and he would confess that he shared this prejudice very strongly. As a people they were as little desirous of accomplishing the freedom of the slave as those of the South, and if the Northerners were, in the place of the Southerners, the English would see just as much intolerance and cruelty practised by them. In those States in the North where they might expect to find the greatest amount of civilization, progress, education and Christian power, there the black people were branded as belonging to a different race, and were not permitted to sit at the same seat with a white man, nor ride in the same cars. Those of the North used the scorpion whip which entered into a man's soul, as cruelly as the whip of the Southerner did the flesh of the unfortunate slave. [Applause.] It was more than probable before the conflict came to a close there would be a great number of slaves in the hands of the North who had escaped from the South. The North would be under the necessity of providing for them in some way. He was sorry to say that many of the Northerners were favorable to sending the slaves away, and, said "God forbid they should live as free men to share our privileges among us."

But he held that America had become now as much the property of the black man as of the white man. He believed that they who had in their sorrow dropped so many tears and shed so much blood, would be placed, intellect by intellect, industry by industry, with the white man, to vindicate God's natural laws, his providence, and the great powers of the gospel, by showing that the black intellect was as powerful and as capable of producing important results as the intellect of the white man. (Applause.) If the Americans wanted to send their black population back to Africa, he hoped they would enter their protest against it as Englishmen. It was not to be expected they would sympathise with the Northerners because they did not throw any spirit into the question of slavery. He thought the Union must be dissolved, and if that took place they would see how the freedom of the slave would be quietly and peaceably accomplished. (Applause.) He approved of the objects which Dr. Pennington had in view by lecturing—that of providing funds for carrying on the instruction of men of his own race for missionary purposes among the population. The meeting closed with pronouncing the benediction.

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

HEAD QUARTERS, HOOKER'S DIVISION, near Budd's Ferry, Md.,
March 2d, 1862.

MR. EDITOR.—We have had high winds for the last two or three days, interspersed of course with rain, but if the rain would cease these driving March winds would soon dry up the roads, and the grand army of the Potomac would be able to walk dry shod over into the unhappy land of Canaan, (Dixie's land.)

The rumor has reached us that Gen. Banks has been defeated, and his forces completely routed on the upper Potomac.

Professor Lowe has been unable to make his usual daily balloon reconnoisance on account of the high wind. The wind blew so violently on Tuesday last that he was compelled to disinflate his balloon, but will reinflate it as soon as the winds subside.

We are reliably informed that the rebels immediately in front of us have received large reinforcements; they evidently anticipate an attack.

Brigadier General Naglee, of Pennsylvania, arrived in camp on the 17th ult., and took command of 1st Brigade, in place of Col. Cowdin, of the 1st Massachusetts regiment, who returns to his command.

Captain Page who has command at Liverpool Point, where the contrabands are employed unloading vessels, etc., and where the army supplies are stored, relates that two of these contrabands undertook and accomplished the boldest feat of the war, thus furnishing us with another irrefutable evidence of the courage, daring, and skill of the negro, when brought face to face with danger; the strength and permanence of his affections, which is the noblest evidence, too, of a pure, perfect and elevated nature. These men belong to the party Col. Graham brought off when he made his inroad into Virginia. The captain says that one of them came to him and asked permission to recross the river to rescue his wife, declaring that he was almost certain that he could bring her off safely. The captain thought the fellow mad, but he plead so earnestly that he gave him permission, and gave notice of the fact to the commander of the flotilla, to prevent his being fired upon by the gun boats. He left Liverpool Point on a dark night, in a small skiff with muffled oars. His wife lived some six or seven miles up the Occoquan bay. He reached her, brought her off safe, gathered much valuable information of the strength and position of the enemy, and returned the following night to Liverpool Point with his companion, safe and unharmed. This man is a true type of the negro; jet black, erect and athletic. The other man, a type of the mixed blood, seeing the triumph of his comrade, asked and received permission to secure his wife, and not having as far to go, brought her off triumphantly and returned the same evening that he went upon his errand. When it is remembered that the rebels are very vigilant on account of the expected attack of our forces, and that the beech is lined with sentinels from Martha's Point to Occoquan Bay, whose bivouac fires can be seen every night with common glasses, and also that if they had been detected nothing but instant death would have been meted out to them, we must accord these two of the most daring ventures and successful exploits of the war. If these men and their brothren were allowed to become active instead of passive co-operators with the Union forces, how long would treason be able to so impudently defy the federal powers?

Here is an item I give you for the special benefit of your fair readers. The more susceptible of the sterner sex may also gather whatever satisfaction this little story of love, struggle and triumph, may give. One of the most painful of the revolting sights one sees when sojourning in this land of slavery, is the universal prostitution by their masters of beautiful slave women. There are scarcely any farms or plantations in the south that can boast of no pretty women. They are prized, petted, bartered and sold according to the nature and extent of their charms. Beauties rivalling those of the Caucasian are sold in the slave marts of the U. S. No matter how loathsome to her the purchaser of her charms may be, the hard, remorseless necessities of her position compel her to yield. Mary Thomas, a beautiful negress, the slave of a man by the name of Henry Eglon, living near Newport, belonged to this class. Her master had already engaged her to an old lecherous scoundrel. She fell violently in love with an Anglo-African in one of the companies. Longing to be free, and to escape that living martyrdom, the life which her master had marked out for her, and also unite her destiny with that of her lover she made a bold stroke for life, love and liberty. She did not clothe herself in male apparel, like many of the paler heroines and amazons have done, but maintained a distinction of sex. She had not gone far before Ferrel, a slave hunter near Port Tobacco, arrested her and locked her up in the jail at that place. Her lover broke the jail open and released her. She had not been released five minutes before Johnny Shackelford, a noted slave hunter, re-arrested her; but the girl fought him bravely. Her lover and the soldiers could not quietly look on such a contest as this, they came to the rescue, and just barely left life in the hunter. And why should she not triumph? Did not she turn her back on slavery and ruin, while the path which she proposed to tread was illumined with the bright hope of salvation, liberty and love? I rejoice to say that Mary Thomas to-day is free!

There is nothing more galling to a black man than the iteration and reiteration of the foul misrepresentations which the advocate of man-stealing, man-torturing, and man-slaughtering slavery urge against him. There never has been a time in the history of this country when there was such a scarcity of material to build these heartless lies on. They may oppose us and deny us rights, but our friends and ourselves will soon settle the contest of ideas; but when our enemies add "insult to injury" it incites in us the desire to cut their throats or give them a taste of the horrors of the system they so much love. Although the Government has spurned the loyalty of the negro more pointedly and peremptorily than it has the treason of these slaveholding dogs and their Northern tools and accomplices, they have, as by some unseen power, become active and prominent in this great civil contest, and have impressed the indelible truth upon the minds of the thinking portion of this nation that he is a dreadful power for evil or a grand and noble one for good.

Rum Point and Liverpool Point, as I have often before remarked, are the points where the supplies are landed. Before the contrabands were brought here, details from the various regiments were made to unload the vessels and to store the provisions; these details generally numbered about a hundred men—a whole company. The soldiers were not allowed for this special duty any extra compensation; so the result was, that they skulked out of as much work as they could, upon the principle that it is far more agreeable and much more reasonable to play for nothing than to work for nothing. They were certain to get their $13 per month, and this poor pay and poorer fare formed no incentive to hard manual labor. Since the 30 or 40 muscular blacks have arrived at Liverpool Point it is made the principal depot for stores, and Rum Point is made the passenger depot; and these 30 or 40 men do more in the same space of time than a hundred white men—thus reversing the order of things. The black man under the incentives of Free labor, pay, and freedom, goes blithely and gaily to his task; while the white man under the repulsiveness of forced labor and no pay, lounges about and skulks sulkily away. They are also temperate and cleanly; are comfortably housed, clothed and fed by the Government, wives, children, and all; and are to receive 10 cents a day pay, which is small—but when the housing, clothing and feeding of a man and his family are considered, his pay is nearly as good as the enlisted soldier, it can all be saved up by them, and will make a small start for them when they shall be released by the authorities. G. E. S.

A SAD ACCIDENT occurred to a daughter of Mr. Louis Napoleon of underground railroad notoriety, on the evening of the 20th ult. She was attending an exhibition at Bethel Church, Williamsburgh, when a young man, in removing a chair, struck a fluid lamp under which she was sitting, which instantly exploded, and the flames coming in contact with her clothing, she was badly burned before they could be extinguished.

She has since died from the effects of the burns.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE Price per thousand $6 ; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, Diptheria, Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says for Neuralgia of the Back or Loins, it surpasses any medicine I have ever tried.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent liniment for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a liniment.

Dr. Walton writes from Coshocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says, "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful searching erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

THE
PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC,

Containing besides the Calendar and Copious Astronomical Statistics, a History of the Great Rebellion, Biographical Sketches of the Prominent Military Officers, a Dictionary of Military Terms, very full information relative to Military Matters of interest to the people at large, National Hymns, Incidents, Anecdotes, &c., &c.

Published and for sale by DEXTER & Co., 17 Spruce street. Newsboys and others wanted to make sales.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to
ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely, and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess of dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing;—and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
THOS. R. CROCKER,
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send the two dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.

D. W. INGERSOL,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 18th, 1856.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so, with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

JAMES EDWIN HALSEY,
193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Headache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want a good and safe article.

ALBRO LYONS.
20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway; Mrs. Staat's, 78 Thompson St.; Chas. H. Ring's, 135 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

WM. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rhubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c. they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes of people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb hat grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Billious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a billious state of the system viz. Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Waranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good; and by their continued use are sure to [cause a derangemen of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia; and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat o sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply be cause they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is erfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occasionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words can not fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK.
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.
Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions
History of project
Arrival and reception in Liberia
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Product
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS:

EMBELLISHMENTS.—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools.—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or the Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James McCune Smith.
Claude Brindes De Salas.—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas.—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches.—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture.—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Washington—Anon.
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robert Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous,
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica,—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James McCune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S. Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson.
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly.
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue,—by J. Mercer Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places,—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Connor. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W. Blyden, Rev. Robert Gordon Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs. M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. Nell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo., 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 21 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

The Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S. H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on slavery, and the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, in regard to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the Northwest Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 291 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Capt. Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel between decks, regulation slave deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which places it within the reach of the masses—viz. 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed.
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still and his wife Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May. Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 50 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Deacon Giles's Distillery and Deacon Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz. or $5 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859–60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia, and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 50 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents must be added.

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual.
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
By large octavo paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough description of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of materials used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and making all articles of clothing for women and children's wear, the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 34 NEW YORK, MARCH 22, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

The Weekly Anglo-African.
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY
BY ROBT. HAMILTON
NO. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.
Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.
All communications for the paper must be addressed ROBT HAMILTON,
18 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R DELANY

PART II.

Hear the word !—who fight for freedom !
Shout it in the battle van !
Hope ! for bleeding human nature !
Christ the God, is Christ the Man !
' H. Beecher Stowe.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

FEARFUL MISGIVINGS.

In the fullness of enjoyment at the Palace of the Queens nativity, the celebration continued the entire evening, only ceasing with the ushering in of a most delightful morning.

It was not until sometime subsequent to supper in the servants hall during the fete, that the absence of a number of domestics employed about the palace was discovered, especially the head of the cuisine, Gofer Gondolier. This favorite servant on all previous occasions when others failed, was usually chosen to supply the place of some absent musician, in which his skill on the Spanish guitar, or African bango, especially the latter instrument in which he had few, if any equals, was fully put to the test. He was a special favorite of the lady Alcora, who preferred his execution to any other person. In consequence of the absence of nearly all of the amateur musicians, the presence of Gofer had been particularly desirable.

As an outfit for the evening, an undress military suit from the wardrobe of the Captain General, selected by his own hands, was intended by the Countess to be presented to Gondolier.

On commanding to the presence that evening the caterer of the palace, her ladyship was told that he was not to be found.

'Are you certain of this?' asked the Countess.

'I is, your ladyship; case I looked—I hunted 'im good.'

'Did you enquire of the butler?'

'No ma'm you ladyship, I did'nt.'

'Why Hober did you not do so?' enquired lady Alcora.

'Case twarnt no use.'

'How do you know when you did not enquire?'

'Case dare's a big party at Madam Cordora's in P——s street to night, an' Gofer's gone at it.'

'At Madam Cordora's! Are you certain!'

'Yes ma'm, I is,' definitely replied he.

'I see,' impatiently murmured the Countess to herself, having ordered the servant away; 'this explains the whole matter. And even Gofer must be taken off to play for them! Indeed, things are fast changing, when not only are the blacks preferred to the whites, but even the civilities of the palace are slighted and its domestic offices neglected, and that too by a class wholly dependent upon and existing by the sufferance of the whites and clemency of the government. Tell me Hober,' she further enquired as the servant re-entered the apartment, 'did you hear Gofer say that he was going to the Cordora mansion?'

'Yes ma'm you ladyship.'

'What for; a party did he say?'

'Yes ma'm you ladyship, but dat am not what 'im call 'im.'

'What was it then?'

'It am somethin like "sorry," or sich name like dat.'

'Ah! soiree,' explained the lady.

'Yes you ladyship, dat am it.'

'Ah, holding a domestic council lady Alcora?' playfully asked the Captain General who had just entered.

'No, your excellency; not holding a domestic council, though counseling with a domestic But I very much fear, if all that's told be true, that if not already so, 'domestic councils' may become a reality in the colony,' seriously replied the Countess.

'Please explain lady Alcora, as I do not comprehend you!' anxiously asked the Count.

'Why your lordship, it would seem that to-night, there is being held a great soiree at the fine mansion of Madam Cordora, the wealthy widow mulatress, where doubtless a grand scheme will be disclosed for a general rebellion of the negroes.'

'Can't be possible!' exclaimed the Captain General. 'Where in the world did you learn this?'

'From our servant here, Hober.'

'How could he know these things! I'm sure it would be very difficult for him to learn them,' replied the Count.

'You are mistaken, Count Alcora, as he learned them among our servants, several of whom taking advantage of the fete to-night have gone there; among them our caterer, Gofer Gondolier, the chief of the cuisine,' explained the Countess.

'Are you certain of this lady Alcora?'

'I am.'

'Probably he only went for a short time as caterer, or, carried for some little notion of his own preparation.'

'No seh, 'e didn'; w'en 'e goed, 'e took wid 'im 'is big new carvin' knife. I seed 'im and hearn 'im say 'e goin' to use it on de wite folks, too,' interrupted Hober in explanation.'

'Say that over again Hober; let the Count hear you!' said the Countess.

'I distinctly understood him,' replied the Count; 'but regard it as merely a freak of vanity to show himself by exhibiting among the negroes evidence of his ingenuity by showing his invention; and an idle boast about using it on the whites would not be out of place to swell his importance.'

'I am fearful that you attach too little importance to this matter, Count Alcora, and could I without committing myself to ridicule do so, I would like to reveal a singular dream to you.'

'Well my lady,' humorously said the Count, 'as there are many revelations which I am incapable of comprehending, I shall make no objection to recording yours on the catalogue. Pray tell me, what is your revelation?'

'It is the more singular, as I know of no external cause for it,' replied the Countess.

'Do let me hear it quickly;' playfully continued the Count, 'as you have excited my organ of wonder.'

'I dreamed,' related the Countess, 'of being in the interior of Africa surrounded entirely by negroes, under the rule of a negro prince, beset by the embassadors of every enlightened nation, who brought him many presents of great value, whilst the Envoy of Her Catholic Majesty, sat quietly at the foot of the African Prince's throne. I cannot get this impression from my mind, it seems so indelibly fixed'

'Having had the revelation,' with ludierous seriousness said the Count, 'now to a comprehensive interpretation of it. By your permission I will give it to you, Countess Alcora. It simply means that we shall have in Cuba several large cargoes of choice negroes from Africa, out which your new plantation is to be stocked and when seated upon it in your new villa, very likely among them will be some negro prince, catering to your orders. I take no fee for the interpretation.'

'Count Alcora! I crave your clemency,' impatiently replied his lady, 'when I say to you, that as the Executive, you set too little estimate upon what seems to me important. I have had another presentiment: this is no dream but a wakeful reality.'

'What is it my lady? I am anxious to hear.'

'Why, that the negroes of Cuba are maturing a scheme of general insurrection!'

'How so? Why just now this conjecture Countess Alcora? Will you let the idle vanity of an elated negro cook frighten you out of our wits? I am really astonished at you, Countess. Tush!' rebuked the Count.

'No; Count Alcora, it is not this but something antecedent from which I draw my conclusions,' replied the Countess.

'Have you discovered anything? Pray do tell me if so, and let us be done with this unpleasant dreamy conversation,' said the Captain General.

'I have, and I would that I could make the same influence on your mind concerning them, that the things which I saw made on mine.'

'What were they lady Alcora?' now seriously enquired the Count; 'I'm sure I shall fully appreciate any advice you may be pleased to communicate.'

'I thank your excellency. I shall freely relate to you the facts. To-day while at the amphitheatre exhibition, I observed on the part of the colored officers of the day—those in your confidence—a recognizance of the common negroes and mulattoes in the pavilion, and on the parade ground in the sports of the negro chase, so soon as that part of the amusements were announced, I saw an immediate change not only in the countenances, but the conduct of all the negroes and mulattoes present. And never before had I witnessed anything indicative of insubordination as their manner, when the chase was ordered and the hounds let loose in chase of the negro prizes. Even Colonel Montego, one of your aids mounted on horseback near your side when the word was given, "let go the dogs!" involuntarily started a pace forward, pressing his teeth upon his lip, and placing his hand on the hilt of his sword for a moment, looked a rage of vengeance at the whites.'

'Do you tell me this,' exclaimed the Count with alarm.

'This is not all Count Alcora,' continued the lady. 'Intensely watching with a steady countenance the chase of the dogs, when a negro was caught and uttered a scream of agony, just as the shout of applause from the multitude rent the air—involuntarily drawing his sword partly from the scabbord, with a suppressed voice, though full in my hearing, exclaimed: "by the Holy Virgin, 'tis too bad!" gritting his teeth till they chattered. Recollecting himself and adjusting his sword, turning to me he dissemblingly remarked—"a well executed chase lady Alcora; very well done! Fine animals, those dogs!" But I had seen and heard all, and determined to advise you of it.'

'Thank you, thank you my dear Charlotte. I have found you in more than one instance a valuable adviser. I shall hereafter modify my actions by your counsels. Let us repair to the drawing rooms,' said the Captain General, supporting his lady on the left arm.

Previous to returning to the drawing rooms, precaution was taken to despatch a servant spy to the mansion of Madam Cordora to reconnoitre the premises, and if possible discover the true state of affairs. On nearing he observed an universal stir, and passing to and from the mansion into the beautiful enclosure and shubbery. To facilitate his errand, the spy attempted an entrance by a narrow court back way, but found it obstructed by negroes on guard some distance from the gate in among the shrubbery, who approaching, in a gruff manner, demanded his errand.

'I is got a message from de Captin Genal an' de Countess, for Madam Cordora, an' I wants to see 'er,' replied the domestic.

'She's engaged and can't be see!' impatiently replied the guardan black, seeming to anticipate the message.

'I mus' see 'er, case de Captin Genal tole me!' insisted the palace messenger.

'Curse the Captain General and his message!' was the imprudent retort. 'Be off, you can't see her!'

Hastening to the palace, the eager domestic related with compound addition to the governor and lady, all that he had seen and heard.

Becoming by these startling facts seriously impressed, the dawn of the morning induced the numerous guests to leave the palace to the quiet contemplation of the distinguished inmates, whose troubled souls now sought solace in the refreshing slumbers of retirement.

CHAPTER XXIX.

THE CAPTAIN GENERAL AND LADY.

'Indeed,' said the Captain General, pacing the floor with hands locked behind him; 'I cannot my dear, dismiss from my thoughts last evening's surprise. I have been anxiously meditating upon the whole thing, and scarcely know what course is best to pursue towards the rebels.

'Let me suggest to your excellency, I pray you, not use the word "rebel,"' said the Countess. 'Whatever my apprehensions I would not have you take it for granted, and anticipate that which has no reality. I would make no issue where there is no occasion for it, but first ascertain the true state of the case, and then act with decision, and if need be promptness and vigor.'

'Thank you for the advice; but what better evidence could I desire than that already obtained? It does appear to me that it is a plain case. However in my course, I'll be governed by your opinion'

'Not at all Count Alcora; I would not in the leas' control you, but only desire to prompt your memory.'

'But I solicit your opinion, lady Alcora, and will not be content without it. I pray you therefore, speak freely to me!'

'I have said,' resumed the Countess,' be cautious of the word "rebel." Let us take a common sense view of the case, and first enquire whether there was on the occasion an entertainment at the mansion of Madam Cordora; its character, and how far it will verify the report and implicate them in the crime of rebellion.'

'You think then there is no cause for suspicion?

'That is not the idea General Alcora. We should first carefully investigate, and not form hasty conclusions And for the credit of the colony and your administration, let us not rest so grave a charge as "rebellion" on so slight a testimony as that of the stammering jargon of a slave. Madam Cordora and associates are persons of reputation and affluence in the community, and cruel would it be to arraign them on the evidence of an envious negro servant. Beside, rumor has it that the poet Placido is betrothed to her daughter, the beautiful Ambrosina, and it may have been a celebration of the nuptials. Whether or not the circumstances justify investigation.

'How my lady,' pointedly enquired the Captain General, 'will you account for your dreams and presentiments!'

'That your excellency,' she quickly rejoined, 'is of minor consideration. Having once had your interpretation of them, I consider that case disposed of.'

'Well, your counsel is ever the same—judicious and available, lady Alcora,' concluded the Captain General.

Thus he affected to be satisfied, but in such an emergency, Count Alcora was not the man to remain passive, especially at the hazard of his government. Whilst seeming to be satisfied, he set immediately industriously at work using every covert means in his power, not only to ferret out, but with a determination to implicate if possible some of the suspected parties; the first effort being to entrap by stratagem on his return, the head of the culinary department, Gofer Gondolier.

They could not be reconciled to the disappointment met with by the non-compliance of many of the guests supposed to be at the Cordora mansion, with the invitation to the Palace fete. The Captain General had long suspected something wrong among this portion of the population, and with the facts before him, must have some victim as a peace offering to appease his vengeance.

His domestic had eluded his vigilance, misled his confidence, baffled his intelligence, and betrayed his trust, and who if not made an example of, was evidently destined to become if not the leader, an agent of a dire mischief throughout the Island. It was clear to him that his negro was one of the promoters of a bold design to wrest from Spain the Island of Cuba, and instead of a Castilian, establish a negro government This was the shock which electrified every nerve and dormant fibre of his system; the stimulant which exciting him to frenzy, induced him to neutralize every agency in the fearfully approaching issue, as far as it could be known; and Gofer was the only offender known to his excellency.

Despite the admonitions of the Countess, the Captain General summoned before him his faithful servant and spy, Hober, to repeat the whole story as previously related, touching the conduct of the culinarian at the soiree of Madam Cordora, the wealthy mulatto.

Promptly obeying the orders of his master, the but too willing servant tremblingly stood before him.

'I is ready Count to tell you anything, dat I thinks will please you lordship,' obsequiously bowing, proffered the debased slave.

The Countess gave a significant smile, whilst the Captain General looked seriously rebuked.

The story of the slave was concise and piquant, and absorbed for five minutes or more the breathless attention of the master. Whilst secreted in the shrubbery of the palace grounds, he overheard the conversation of Gondolier and several other servants previous to their going to the soiree. Gofer was to obtain at the instance of the Countess, the privelege of introducing into general use, his patent Cuban Carver, to give to every black the opportunity of having in their possession a formidable deadly weapon, without the violation of law, suspicion, or even objection of the whites. In the general rebellion that was to ensue, firearms at the commencement was to be prohibited, as the slaughter which was to commence in the dead of night could be prosecuted with silence, and thereby prevent a premature alarm.

'Now Hober my man, tell me like a good fellow, all you know about this thing —keep nothing back,' said the Captain General with emphasis, anxious and determined to criminate some persons.

'Wy yo' lordship, da is to begin soon!'

'When? Speak out my man, speak out!'

'Da is all to begin on one night!'

'How my man! Let us hear all about it.'

'Da is all to be hid, in an' out o' doors, one black for every white in each house on all de plantations, an' all at once at de same time, each one is to seize a white and slaughter 'im.'

'Immaculate Madonna, hear that! Go on my man, go on!' impatiently exclaimed the governor.

'Ag'in daylight, da aint one white to be left alive. In de same way dat de whites is all to be seized, one for each,—da is to have one to set fire to each house in all de towns at da same time, an' every white dat makes 'is escape is to be ketched an' killed as 'e runs into de country to escape de fire!'

To all this did the Captain General set and listen with an eager ear, till his emotions nearly equalled those of the guilty monarch, manifested at the interpretation by the Jewish captive of the blazing inscription upon the walls of Babylon.

Just as the servant concluded, the Count was startled by a sudden interruption, which presented in the person of the Countess.

'Do I intrude your excellency?' she enquired slowly approaching.

'No my lady! I have just been giving some order to the servant,' replied he with an uncontrollable sigh.

'Are you indisposed, Count Alcora? I'm sure you look worn,' said his lady.

'Nothing more my dear, than fatigue from the loss of sleep last evening,' replied the Count with a conciliatory tone.

'We are summoned to coffee. Come let us walk!' said the Countess taking his arm, who with pallid cheek and somewhat faltering step—the servant in the lead—supported her to the coffee table.

Exhibition of Anglo-African Industry and Art.

MR. EDITOR: I shall venture a few more remarks in furtherance of the Art Exhibition to be held by our race. I shall first remark, in order to put to flight any idea that may be entertained of its failure, that I have not only had letters of encouragement and congratulation from different parties, but have been honored by visits from those whose justly ambitious spirit has made them zealous in the accomplishing of a plan pregnant with so many benefits and so many important results to our people.

All we need is to emulate each other in our zeal. Spare not expense or trouble in endeavoring to introduce among our people a love for Art and encouragement of Science. Yes, Mr. Editor, let us come forth manfully with heart and purse, with one to encourage the artist, with the other to reward his labors. Parsimony in this case becomes impiety; a failure on our part to succor those who are treading the way of art and literature, generally strewn with the insurmountable obstacles of want and discouragement, becomes a flagrant violation on our part of those laws of kindness that we should cultivate towards our fellow-creatures.

Let us endeavor to rescue from squalid garrets genius which should ornament palaces; let us by our liberality encourage those who are backward and doubtful of their talent, and call forth to the view of the world those yearning hearts who possess under their tattered garments the ability of mind known but to few upon whom the comforts of life have been lavished. This is a point on which I could dwell for hours, and this is a consideration that should goad us on to the fulfillment of the object about which I now write.

When we review history, we must necessarily notice that at certain epochs art seemed to flourish in all its glory; at others it seemed to have been banished from the world entirely. At one era we read of the immortal fame of Myron, Phidias, Zensis, Parrashius, Praxitales, who flourished in the golden days of Greece, because encouragement was extended by a liberal government and they sprang into existence. At another era we hear of the names of Virgil, Horace, Lucan, Macanus and Aggrippi, their names covered with glory—why? because Augustus fortelling the effects of a liberal encouragement to literature extended it with unsparing hand, and with joy beheld its brilliant effects. At another era we see Michael Angelo, Raphael, Da Vinci, Badinelli, Corregio, and a legion of others, who would have been strangers to the fame their names now possess had it not been for the patronising liberality of De Medicis.

How can we account for this, that at certain epochs art seems to live, then die? I will attempt to answer. Those were the days of the almighty dollar as they are now: the days when the chink of gold, the gingles of coin, afforded more pleasure to miserly minds than art, which enhances our ideas of refinement of literature that polishes society; and if industry with its brawny arms support it, this, be it said to our cause, is the unmistakable cause of this melancholy reality. Once more I say let us stand forth to encourage art with heart and purse.

I would here mention that a friend to the exhibition, the Rev. James N. Gloucester, of Brooklyn, N. Y., called to see me while on a visit to this city, and has given an earnest to it by kindly offering the use of his grounds in that city on which to hold the exhibition, if satisfactory to the committee that may have this matter in charge: an example worthy to be praised and emulated by others for its liberality.

I have had the promise from many that they would exhaust their ability—strain every nerve, to be well represented at such an exhibition. Now, Mr. Editor, here is reality to deal with. Parsimony or negligence can now frame no excuse, and I will say that after the above statement if we refrain from exertion, we will have proved recreant to our zeal for the benefit and improvement of our race, and shown ourselves the prejudicial members of our people, and deserved to be spurned and degraded by them on all occasions for having so signally neglected their truest interest.

If we neglect this golden opportunity, when in future time we meet the haggard eye, the discouraged look—behold the tattered garment of the penurious votary of art and literature—we will be forced with pangs of remorse to turn aside from the spectacle which will cast the keenest reproach upon us, which will bear with it the unenviable stigma that we have demonstrated our disregard of all that tends to ennoble and refine the mind.

One more argument I will adduce. It was remarked to me that thousands of dollars had been expended by our people in holding conventions which have been productive of no real good to us; now it strikes me that, if only instead of holding more conventions we devote our time, purse and energy to an exhibition of art and industry, it would be better for us. Man's first and principal aim should be to endeavor, as far as in him lies, to better the condition of society, to elevate its morals, refine its feelings, and so contribute his individual share of support to raise man's moral standing. In what better manner can this be done than in holding exhibitions of this kind to spread knowledge and diffuse science? I noticed in one of your editorials on an art exhibition you say that my suggestion is not entirely new, for gentlemen in New York commenced moving in the matter weeks ago. True it is that it is not entirely new, for it has been a little more than three years ago, when on a visit to my friend Mr. Chaplin, the artist, of Huntingdon, Pa., that I then suggested the plan to him of an art exhibition; and two years since I made similar suggestions to W. H. Dorsey, Esq., of Philadelphia. However, little matters it from whom so important a suggestion emanates so it is carried out. A few more remarks and I shall conclude my communication, already too long.

I feel almost enthusiastic on the subject. May the day come when the sun which now shines upon the Saxon and African may shine upon them equally civilized, equally advanced in the paths of science, art and civilization. May the day come when the sneer of the Saxon at our supposed inability to cope with him may be changed to a reluctant smile at the stern reality. Sir, it is our imperative duty to hasten this day. Such a grand result is worthy our greatest emulation. Would that I could infuse into the breasts of all, that desire that I have to see our people advanced in science and art.

How otherwise can I express my earnest feelings on this subject than in these few words, and a willing determination to lend every effort to attain a "devoutly wished for consummation." Mr. Editor, how better can a life be spent than in the diffusion of knowledge! When the chill blasts of old age whistles through man's hoary hair, when the step falters, the eye becomes dim, and the physical frame sinking, the retrospect of a life so spent must be cheering and consoling. To be able to look back and see that one's efforts to better his people's condition have been crowned with success, and when on the verge of the grave to see that one's feeble effort in this worthy cause of science in bettering a people's condition have been productive of good, must necessarily smooth the descent of rugged years of old age, and give fit consolation for life's last hours.

EDWARD M. THOMAS.

Washington, March 7th, '62.

DESTINY OF THE COLORED RACE IN THIS COUNTRY.

MR. EDITOR:—"The manifest destiny" of our country with regard to the white race has largly absorbed the attention of the press. But it is your peculiar province to discuss matters pertaining particularly to the colored race, which has a destiny, and in my view, a noble destiny, as well. And I consider the educational process, through which that population has for nearly two and a half centuries been passing, but preparatory to that supervening destiny. The Anglo-African, or more properly Americo-African has borrowed of the Anglo-American his morals and religion, manners and customs, language and literature, arts and sciences, that the borrower may be fitted for a condition parallel with that of the lender. But to accomplish this evident design of providence, the hitherto dependent race must rise superior to being "a hewer of wood and drawer of water" to the dominant. And this can never be realized while the dependent remains in the midst of the dominant, inferior in numbers as well as standing. The history of the past in nominally free States shows the crushing weight that must rest like an incubus upon the struggling aspiration of the dependent race in such an abnormal condition. And to fulfill its manifest destiny, it must then, to a greater extent than at present, be collected together and formed into a homogenous people. Yet as Americo-Africans, the land of your birth is and must be the land where the major part of your race will doubtless work out this noble result. And it is only necessary that, like Abraham and Lot, the two races should occupy different portions of the same country, under the aegis of the same constitution and the same loved banner.

In taking this ground I am not influenced by personal prejudice of color, but by the philosophy of human nature, which teaches us that, to assume his normal status, the colored man must be able to rise without hinderance to the highest employments of society with adequate patronage from his own class. Otherwise his energies will be cramped and his aspirations baffled. And herein is the demand for a new order of things.

And this seems to be the crisis for the inauguration of a new era. Our convulsed country is in labor,—big with destiny. And as surely as there is a God in history, our national struggle will not end till the design of providence is accomplished. And you can easily read that design in the aphorism, "Man's liberty is God's opportunity." Every turn of the wheel of providence is rolling it on toward the full enfranchisement of man.

But "new occasions teach new duties." And in the present exigency, the line of duty for the colored man seems to me very plain, For the white man "the star of empire leads the way" eastward and as far southward as cottondom, as fast as the more northern of the southern States are redeemed from slavery. But for the colored man "the star of empire leads the way" toward the farther South. Hitherto the star of the North has been the slave's pole of attraction, but instead hereafter his magnet is to turn toward the Southern cross. God is to gather together this race, hitherto scattered as a servile class among another, into a homogenous people. And as to this end the North is to give up and the South keep not back. From Canada and the free States of the North, and from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky, North Carolina, Tennessee and Arkansas, the free colored people and the freedmen, as they come forth from bondage, are to migate to the cotton States, and occupy them as their own, and by taking the reins out of the hands of rebels, secure their perpetual loyalty to the stars and stripes.

And will not the colored people of the North take the lead in beginning the working out of this sublime destiny? They only need the assistance of Emigration Societies in accomplishing this desideratum. And will not the philanthropist, and capitalist, respond to this appeal? I know that such a proposition will be popular to men of every political creed, and will be a death-blow to the objection against emancipation, that the North would be over-run with the ex-slaves. It will be taking the handle from that objection, and putting it on the opposide side, to be assured that it is the desire of the freeman to move Southward, instead of Northward. And the removal of the colored population from the North will leave a vacuum, to be filled up advantageously by white laborers.

And it must be admitted that such an enterprise is very feasible. No doubt government will furnish transport free. And as soon as the emigrants arrive, they can begin to earn their subsistence. It will only need the capital requisite to set them to work. They would be willing to work at first for very moderate wages. While those now on the soil, who are accustomed to raise cotton, should be employed in that kind of labor, emigrants could cultivate cereal products, till they should gradually acquire the knowledge of cotton culture. And when cottondom is conquered and occupied, and reverts to the United States, as Territory, it is hoped that portions of land will be given to these "Squatter Sovereigns," that they may possess it as the Canaan of their inheritance. And if their arms are needed in aiding to put down the rebellion, in those States, they may and should go well armed, and with a reserve surplus of cheap armor, such as pikes or spears, for any emergency that may arise.

And if the Canaanites of old deserved to be dispossessed, much more do the arch-oppressors of the colored man the arch-traitors against the best of governments And this will be therefore a just retribution to slavedom and rebeldom.

When the two races have thus come out from the present chaotic state, the new order of things will present the aspect of a beautiful cosmos, and every revolving season will furnish a fresh wreath of blessing to both races. Distinct and homogeneous among themselves, yet united in one fraternal nationality, they will go forward at once in legitimate and healthful rivalry and in accordant union, under the stainless banner of liberty.

MOSES.

Fortress Monroe, Va., March 10, 1862.

From the N. Y. Daily Times.

THE COLORED ORPHAN'S HOME.

In review of the numerous public institutions monumental of our citizens' far-reaching benevolence, stands one which, save in circles immediately interested, is rarely talked of, yet which, from the peculiarity of its associations, is singularly interesting. If one had never visited it—a Southerner, for instance, who had never dreamed of such an establishment—and were shown the curious and remarkably impressive stereoscopic views which are here shown of the interior departments as they appear in daily routine, the natural sentiment would be incredulity. The idea of 237 young curly-headed "contrabands," or, as an Arkansas trader would say, in telling out the mush to a drove of such, "little niggers," being gathered together in order and cleanliness, to receive discipline and instruction, with a view to their usefulness as citizens and their soul's salvation, would scarcely be realized. Not they alone are benefited; as a work originated and upheld by the enlightened and refined as well as the opulent and powerful of our closely observed and influential land, it obtains a significance far outweighing any missions to Owhyhee, Birmah, or Tongataboo.

There are more boys than girls among the pupils, and they have separate school-rooms, play grounds, &c., &c. The sleighing carnival has not been lost to them, for the beautiful situation of the Asylum on Fifth-avenue, running the entire block through from Forty-third to Forty-fourth streets, is directly on the line of travel most affected by the driving community, and the air has been alive from morning to morning's dawn again with the merry-going sleighs, and rich chorus of bells and belles. They were privileged to enjoy it, too, albeit in a less expensive, but not less highly appreciated style, and the fine area of slope and level which forms the back domain afforded many a jolly coasting-match, which feats were performed upon sleds of rough, home construction. Others, more fortunate, sped in devious courses, mounted upon glittering skates, the thoughtful gift of some kind friend or relative. Thus we have a striking contrast of mother earth's snowy mantle, dotted after a fashion that calls to mind the royal ermine.

The wrappings of these children are noticeably consistent, and it is an indisputable fact that people of color cannot endure chilling exposure with the impunity of whites. Seamstresses are employed constantly, and have an exclusive department, where, with the aid of sewing machines, they make up the main part of the clothing, which comprises, in its variety, a large amount of tailoring. A shoe shop is also attached, and the brogans are home-made. Sewing is sometimes given out for the sake of charity by the lady managers, who send an order by a poor woman to Miss McLelland, who gives her a bundle of work to take home with her, and she is responsible for it to the manager, who pays her out of her private funds.

The daily house-cleaning is accomplished by the children before and after school hours, each child being accountable for so much work, which task is usually undertaken with alacrity, although indolent exceptions do occur, and are really the exceptions, as we learn, for activity is the rule, it being looked upon as a sort of honorable responsibility to be selected to take charge of a position—a flight of stairs during one week, for instance.

In the nursery was found a most interesting little group, the youngest two and a half years of age, all presided over by a colored woman of middle age and dignified bearing, whose especial province this has been for eight years past. "Aunty" is firm, yet affectionate, and when she communicates her wishes to her young charge, they derive an immediate and exact impression of her meaning. This nursery department is a sort of separate domain, and the wee ones are kept pretty much to themselves.

An interesting study is afforded in observing the larger children at their evening meal, where the simple and impressive devotion closing the day succeeds the satisfying of the appetite. After naught but the plate remains to tell the tale of rapid and inexorable consumption, the matron takes her chair at a small table at one end of the room and reads a portion of the Holy Scriptures, desiring the children to remember one text which she repeats to them. Thus a good impression is left which she finds of great benefit to her in guiding them the next day, for it not unfrequently happens that this same text is an appropriate reminder wherewith to meet a delinquency. After the chapter is finished all rise, and, standing by their small individual benches, sing in concert the sweet hymn, "Lord, dismiss us with thy blessing;" after which the hands are clasped, the eyes uplifted, and the Lord's prayer is repeated; then all disperse for an hour's recreation before bedtime. This evening meal takes place at 5 o'clock, and by 8 o'clock each neat little bed of the dormitories has its respective occupant.

The boys' and girls' dining-room is in one, and is kept in order—the plates piled and removed, &c., &c., by the children, a certain number being detailed each day for this duty; the whole being under the direction of a woman who sees to the placing of the food upon the table, and apportioning it out to the plate of each child before they are admitted to meals. The quantity of food is discreetly divided, but more is allowed a child upon request if it really needs it. A variety of diet is maintained, the dinners being full and wholesome, and varied each day of the week, but not changed from week to week, it being found convenient and tasteful to the inmates to have certain days bring certain dishes, so that one bill of fare is sufficient for a season.

The breakfast and supper arrangement admits of a more limited range, and consists of bread, with milk, tea or chocolate for breakfast; the milk, which is of good quality, being served hot except during three months of the year. The supper relish consists of either butter, cheese, cold milk or molasses, with bread. The bread is sweet and wholesome, and is made by a baker in this city especially for this institution. The kitchen is appetizing to go into, and the tidy colored cooks bobbing around in their Madras turbans, look as if they could tell how long to boil an egg without the aid of a sand glass.

The girls are taught to sew, and in the Winter evenings are employed in that branch of the fine arts familiarly known as darning stockings. One of the dormitories gave creditable evidence of their proficiency with the needle, as all the beds were spread with neat and uniform patchwork quilts, the result of their handcraft.

Twenty-five persons of mature years are employed about the institution, and a constant example of orderly management is presented the children by Mr. Davis and his valuable aid, Miss McLelland.

The penalties for disregard of the regulations are, first, a long-suffering degree of moral suasion, which, if found of non-effect, is set aside for the objectionable last resort of corporeal punishment. One excellent principle is here adopted, and sadly over-looked in some other similar establishments—which is not to allow the unoffending stomach to suffer for the faults of the will, or unfortunate weakness of character; if it is only a meal of dry bread, they are not deprived of the regular nourishment which nature requires, and which in withholding a responsibility is incurred which the punctillious guardian would be very much shocked to have associated with murder; and yet, if we interfere with a child's health, do we not interfere with its life, and who is to say to what extent, or how remote the result?

These children are allowed all requisite recreation, both at home and abroad, but are never allowed to leave the premises for a walk unaccompanied by a guardian of mature years, although the older and more responsible are occasionally sent of errands into the city.

A private hospital is connected with the main house, yet so arranged that communication can be cut off during the prevalence of an epidemic. Its accommodations admit of fifty invalids at one time; should an access occur at the City Hospital are had recourse to.

Many pleasant and touching incidents are mingled with the history of this home for children of the proscribed complexion, and there are men and women now who can trace back to their earliest experience passed within its influence. Many whose little feet first toddled in innocence upon its grassy playground, who knew gentle nursings and infancy's sweet slumber under its pleasant shades, have gone forth into the world to share the ups and downs of fortune with kind or indifferent employers, to rough it as apprentices, or to feel the truth settling home into a renegade conscience, that "the way of the transgressor is hard."

'Tis well worth a visit, this fine, old-fashioned dwelling, ample and spacious in its four lofty stories, as it stands back just off the Avenue drive, in summer veiled with green foliage, but now sentinelled by huge stems, their rough bark set oued down, and gaunt arms tipped with fleece of winter.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, MARCH 22, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

THE EMANCIPATION MESSAGE.

That the President of these United States sent a message to Congress proposing a means of securing the emancipation of the slaves, was an event which sent a thrill of joy throughout the North, and will meet with hearty response throughout christendom. The quiet manner in which this matter was laid before the national Legislature, and the utter unpreparedness of the public mind for this most important step, was a stroke of policy, grandly reticent on the part of its author, yet most timely and sagacious, which has secured for Abraham Lincoln a confidence and admiration on the part of the people, the whole loyal people, such as no man has enjoyed in the present era.

We could hardly believe the news. We dared not take up the message for a day or too, satisfied with the simple glory of the announcement, yet fearful that a reading of the document might send some shuddering doubt through a willingly rejoicing spirit. How many thousands there are, who exclaimed with the faithful man of old, "now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace!" But any doubts, all doubts were removed on the third or fourth reading of the message—for it will bear a close scrutiny—and now, when it is more than a week old it seems better and stronger than ever. It is not only cased in impregnable armor, but gives half silent evidence of power and will to blast the institution of slavery at any moment. It is the monitor which that rebellion had better heed.

The message contains a recommendation, an affirmation and a threat.

The recommendation is that Congress shall pass the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the United States ought to co-operate with any State which may adopt a gradual abolishment of slavery, giving to such State pecuniary aid, to be used by such State in its discretion to compensate for the inconveniences, public and private, produced by such change of system."

It is our opinion that Old Abe "cooned it on de log," when he produced that resolution. It passes the subtlety of Seward, the straight-forwardness of Stanton, or the skill of Chase. It is plainly home-spun, most definite in its indefiniteness. It is a solid offer of aid in well doing, yet requiring proof of "inconveniences" before the aid shall be forthcoming. Of course if no "inconveniences" arise, no pecuniary aid will be needed. Then again, the resolution once passed by Congress, quietly, but effectually places Congress along with the President on the side of emancipation, as willing aiders and abettors thereof. The moral sense of the nation will have found vent in a legislative decree in behalf of emancipation. Who would have been crazed enough, eighteen months ago, to have predicted such things? Then the words yet rolled from Wendell Phillip's eloquent lips that after twenty-five years of assault against the Bastile of Slavery, the "abolitionists had failed to carry a single battlement!" And to day, Wendell Phillip's own voice is heard preaching the golden glories of emancipation in the very strong-hold of slavery. Abolitionists have been again and again taunted with invitations to come down South and plead for liberty, and lo! they are there.

The affirmation in the message is, "The Federal Government would find its highest interest in such measure (the gradual abolishment of slavery) as one of the most efficient measures of self preservation." Is this a "kalon oneiron," a specious dream, or a sunshine reality? Can it be that the walls of that Cabinet in which Van Buren bowed down to slavery, in which Tyler nestled with the guilty upholders of slavery, in which Fillmore signed the damnable Fugitive Slave Bill, in which Buchanan puled and drivelled over the cups which treason held to his lips—can it be possible that the same four walls reverberated to the slight but portentious scratchings of the pen which wrote that grand sentence of freedom to four million of blacks and twenty-six millions of whites? If thousands have visited with awe the chambers at Fontainbleau in which the greatest genius of modern times abdicated an empire, with what reverence will they who come after us look upon the room where a plain single-minded but earnest man, elect of the people, signed the dethronement of the greatest evil which has cursed all time! That resolution, and this short sentence will be memorable in all time. It marks the grandest revolution of the ages, a revolution from barbarism to civilization, of darkness to light of slavery into freedom. Of all the lands in which the sunshine rests where is there to-day a nobler for the lover of freedom to dwell upon, be he black or white, bond or free?

But the crowning glory of this message is that it grows as it goes. When we get towards the last sentences they ring like an organ peal from the skies. "Such means as may seem indispensable, or may absolutely promise great efficiency towards ending the struggle, must and will come!" Which means, without interpretation, "I Abraham Lincoln, in order to crush this rebellion, will exercise the power invested in me as Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy of the United States—to abolish slavery!" Who could have prophesied this three months ago? Who? Why the down-trodden, degraded, beaten, bruised, crushed slaves all the way down South—wise with the inspiration of the good time coming who all give this one testimony: "I knowed it was a comin." Who? why the slaves whose dream of liberty blazed into a reality when they heard of Lincoln's election. They knew him better than he knew himself: their sight was keener than Seward's or Garrison's. Can we longer doubt that among the hidden things of Providence there must be an inspiration among men of their coming fortunes?

PIANO PLAYERS.

There has been one feature about the concerts given this winter which must have been very pleasing to the public: and that is, the many novices in the art of piano playing introduced. Some of these have been playing privately for some time, but whether they have made any advancement in the art for the last year or two we cannot say. Of one thing, however, we are very sure, and that is that they will not make much progress unless their capabilities are brought to the test of public competition. This is the plan pursued by Mr. and Mrs. Magnan toward their daughter Virginia, and the consequence is that she is making the most rapid progress. This will always be the case where public competition is encouraged, because the scholar, having lost the effect of public fear, is enabled to devote her whole attention to the instrument. We hope that this fact may not be lost sight of by those having children who are learning to play.

THE WHIPPING OF A LOYAL SLAVE.

A correspondent of the "New York Tribune" having seen fit to deny the truthfulness of the statement of our correspondent "G. E. S.," in relation to the murder of the slave Jack Scroggins by his master, a notorious traitor named Samuel Cox, the latter has furnished us with the following letter, a perusal of which will satisfy, no doubt, any impartial reader of our correspondent's veracity:

Head Quarters Hooker's Division, near Budd's Ferry, Maryland,
March 4th, 1862.

Mr. Editor: If General Sickles, or perhaps Col. Graham, chose to do so they would verify the general truth of the statements of my letter of January 10th. Gen. Sickles has now in his possession a white stallion which he seized from Cox, the murderer of poor Jack Scroggins. The treason of Cox is unmistakable, and this horse with other things were seized by virtue of his treason. Cox was maltreated by the soldiers when he came after Scroggins, and he would never have been able to take him, had not an officer in either Col. Graham's or Col. Dwight's Regiment returned him. My letter makes no charge against Col. Dwight, but only against that officer through whose order a loyal negro was surrendered to one of the most notorious traitors of this Pandemonium of treason and slavery. "An officer of the 1st Excelsior Brigade" is rather hasty in his defence, and championship, of Col. Dwight. He reminds me of that verdant thief who being caught at one of his light fingered tricks, denies his guilt before a charge was made against him. It has been my fortune to meet Col. Dwight on more than one occasion; and I have found him an officer and a gentleman, and I am pleased to bear my humble testimony to his efficiency in subduing, in connection with General Sickles and Col. Graham, the bold, active and insolent treason so rampant in the lower counties of this State. I am familiar with one instance at least, where a trio of Secessionists from Newport prevailed on General Hooker to prefer charges against Col. Dwight; but the committee appointed to investigate the affair bear the highest testimonial to the justness and correctness of Col. Dwight's actions and conduct. So notorious was the treason of Cox, that whenever the steamers touched at Chappel Pt., on Port Tobacco River, they always searched his house; and when Colonel Dwight's Regiment moved down in that vicinity and encamped on Dr. Rob. Ferguson's farm, Mulberry Grove, they searched, and found nothing worth mentioning; they, however, seized some of his things and returned them. But Col. Graham moved down there and encamped at Allen's Fresh; another and last search was made, and sufficient things were found in a swamp, between Cox's and William Nesbit's farm, buried in the earth to justify the seizure of the greater part of Cox's stock, which fact must be totally unknown to "an officer of the 1st Regt. Excelsior Brigade." "An officer" would have subserved the cause of his country, and therefore of truth, had he confined himself to the vindication of the officers of his Regt. Not content with that he pronounces my letter "wholly incorrect" in all its statements, treating as a farce one of the most astounding and guilty crimes, which has covered the authors and abettors of this Rebellion with the blackest infamy!

Over two months have elapsed since I penned the letter "an officer" refers to. At the time I wrote it, it was almost impossible to ascertain positively in which of the Regt.'s referred to, the 1st or 5th, the rendition took place. Knowing Colonel Dwight, and having facts in my possession which could enable me to make the amend honorable should this Regt. be the wrong one, I gave his name, almost confident that there must have been some one officer there who would set me right, but he has not yet shown himself. I have certain proof that Col. Graham's Regt. was the 2d one that encamped near Port Tobacco, Col. Dwight's being the 1st that went there, and that Scroggins joined the 2d one which had encamped at Allen's Fresh. After they commenced the march down to Hill Top, Cox and eight or ten friends went in pursuit, and overtook them about six miles on the march at a white house, where a man by the name of Joe Walters lived. Among Cox's friends was a man by the name of James Neil, who was elected to the State Legislature last fall. Cox rushed in the ranks and seized Scroggins, when the men with Scroggins beat him badly. An officer rode up and rescued Cox, and made the men surrender the slave up upon the promise that he would not harm him. I have tried to find out the name of the officer, but I find it almost impossible. Is there no honorable man in the 1st or 5th Regiment or anywhere else who will give the name of the officer? I heard that it was the Major of the 5th Regt.

G. E. S.

LETTER FROM REV. J. N. GLOUCESTER.

Washington, March 9th, 1862.

Mr. Editor.—I promised when I left your city,—for a brief visit to this,—to give you whatever I found that might interest your readers; now, although I may be mistaken in what I communicate on the point of interest, yet I feel willing to attempt to redeem my promise.

You are aware that those who travel the country by railroad, see but little of its beauty and expansiveness. It is only he who plods with ox and team, or in that, the most delectable of all conveyances, the country coach. Our rough uneven surface, rampelling you up, threatening to leave but little of you by the time you end the journey; yet with such a physical disadvantage—especially to the posterior—you see much of nature as pencilled in her magestic beauty by the Eternal hand, associated with the prolific power of art, so that the rural rude coach with all its infelicities, is not without its charms. The wheels of the fiery coach soon whirled me from our great and glorious city—glorious for its massiveness in population, for its commercial power, its literature, its progressive march in human freedom—to the city of Philadelphia, in the state founded by the virtue, patriotism, and heroism of the immortal Penn. This city once in a seeming hurry to do justice to this illustrious man, erected an almost unspeakable monument of bronze—unspeakable for its unintelligibility, so much so as to leave the stranger in doubt as to what was its previous intent, as it stands without any relief of beauty in one of its public parks. But even this might be pardoned—that miserable speciman of art—if this city in the elapse of years since this good and glorious man has departed to his fathers, had learned the good sense to have shaken off the barbarous relics of slavery, and not to practise them as they do now, upon defenceless woman in their city public conveyances.

Why, I find there is done no worse in the very strong holds of oppression, where the animal or chattle is conveyed. Yes so great is the damnable prejudice against complexion in this professidly free christian city, (but one in which resides many unmitigated villians,) as to offer no shield to woman, though clothed as she is with her own peculiar helplessness, beauty and glory. "Ah," says God by the mouth of the earnest eloquent Prophet, "will not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?"

I see in this city no marked difference in the status of the colored people, so far as they themselves are concerned. They certainly need more activity and diligence than what they now exhibit in these glorious times—some Boanerges to stir them up from their deep slumbers. I have had the great pleasure and profit to myself, and I trust to them, to preach five times to their several intelligent congregations during my brief stay, and then left on the universal charger for the times, he who carries you without stint of speed over land and water—so that I soon left in the distance this half free, but beautiful cultured State, and came into that of the little flat saucy State, Delaware—Delaware that even now feels her oath as a border power in the great national struggle, evidenced by her pert little message she sent to Congress on the question of emancipation, but to use the Yankee "guess," she will be spanked and set aside to mend her manners.

But soon again our mettled steed bore us on through the boson of this pretty little State, to that of the noble Maryland—Maryland far too much so, in the expanse of land and water, in agriculture, in art, in science, to be cursed with such a bitter curse as human slavery; but so it is. In this magnificent State stands Baltimore truly a beautiful city. Beautiful for the structure and cleanliness of its streets, its obelisk, as monumental of the history of Washington, the elaborate architecture of many of its public and private buildings—in brief, in all that varied paraphanalia that go to constitute existence and elegance of a city. But I must not forget in this enumeration to mention those for whose especial benefit I write—the poor despised Africo-Americans. They indeed add no small share to the magnitude, beauty, and glory of this city, in contributing to its wealth in handsome valuable residences, in unique beautiful commodious churches, in lyceums, in schools, in a pious, intelligent, and able ministry, that should put to blush our brethren in the free States. But such is the status of our brethren and sisters in this pro-slavery city—nothing less than a monument of confounding power to those who would place further fetters upon their necks. Ah thank God and the glory of this hour, that, that era has past, and as evidence of it I am told that the slave prisons of this city (these slave hells of the nation) have lost their accustomed victims. No longer is beholding sympathising humanity made to weep at her violations in the chain coffle as it was made to traverse the street day and night. The nation, as far as this city is concerned, has redeemed itself from this heaven-abhorring God, defying crime almost within the process of a day. Let us all therefore, thank God and take courage.

But I must cease, lest I should weary your intelligent readers, and defer what I have to say about Washington, (if agreeable to you) for your next emission.

Yours truly, for every good and righteous cause,

James. N. Gloucester.

LETTER FROM BETHLEHEM.

Bethlehem, Pa. March 14, 1862.

Mr. Editor.—The weather has been glorious—alternate rain and fog for the last ten days; consequently, mud prevails. Mud in the street, mud on the sidewalk, mud on the doorstep, mud in the house, mud on top the house, mud down in the cellar, mud up stairs; and such ugly, yellow, miserable stuff, a comparison would be odious indeed; in fact it closely resembles some of our government contractors, or agents for army supplies, everything within its reach quietly disappears.

If ancient Bethlehem in the land of Judea, resembled in the degree of mud the modern town of the same name, it is easily accounted for wherefore the Jews became wanderers upon the face of the earth. Mud in your ears, mud in your eyes, mud in your nose, mud to the right of you, mud to the left of you, mud everywhere.

Nothing particular exciting to record, except that the Rev. P. W. Brister has been confounding the natives of West Jersey, by delivering discourses upon the origin of black men, and upon the origin of white men; the black race as a people; their present condition; their future; the war, its causes and its consequence, &c., &c. The Rev. gentleman is looked upon as some strange anomaly; wondered at and spoken of as a sort of enigma, or as a something that is very difficult to comprehend.

In fact the major part of the inhabitants in this corner of the globe have yet to learn that there exists among the descendants of Africa such things as intelligence and learning. To them, the idea that the "Anglo-African," a weekly newspaper, edited and published by colored men, is a something inconceivable.

There has been considerable amusement occasioned by several returned young men who have been at Perryville, Md., endeavoring to subdue some of the mule species; but from all appearances, instead of taming and training mules to go in harness, the effect has been reversed, that is, with a little variation. The taming is all right, for the gentlemen are as gentle and docile as any mule need be; but the harness, that's where the variation is—scant and hardly adaptable to a Northern climate, and, in truth, of a social or soiree night at Voorhees's or Brown's, would be rather objectionable.

S. E.

LETTER FROM MIDDLETOWN.

Middletown, Ct., March 15, '62.

Mr. Editor: As you have been the faithful organ of the people of African origin, will you allow your columns to sound one note from the heart of the "Nutmeg State!" We have a population of less than two hundred of this class of people employed mostly as sailors and coachmen, five keeping barber's-shop, and one tailor's-shop. Our children enjoy all the school privilege of the whites in the high and primary schools. We have one church of the Methodist order, the Rev. James A. Jones as pastor, with about 30 members. This church held a fair last week, and realised $138 87 clear of all expenses.

Carter.

RETURN OF A FUGITIVE SLAVE IN ILLINOIS.

In November, 1861, a slave man by the name of Pleasant escaped from his owner, one Jesse H. Rector, of Pike county, Missouri, and was traced to Springfield, Ill., the home of President Lincoln, in which neighborhood he remained undiscovered until a few days ago, when he was arrested by the vigilant slave hound Assistant Deputy Marshal W. Crafton, who immediately notified Rector of the arrest. On Rector's arrival in the city, Pleasant was [illegible] U. S. Commissioner S. A. [illegible] When confronted with [illegible] in reply to the latter's inquiry "How are you, Pleasant?" he answered "Very well, sir," which, in the opinion of the Commissioner, established the slave's identity, and his right to the ten dollar fee. He accordingly was handed over to his owner, and left Springfield for Missouri the same day.

A Donation and Festival took place in the lecture room of the African Union Church in 15th street, New York, on the evening of the 4th and 5th inst., for the benefit of the aged and afflicted members of said church. It was gotten up by a committee of ladies, and proved to be far more successful than was anticipated; for at the very low price of the tickets (ten cents), and the moderate price of the excellent refreshments, the ladies realised the sum of sixty-nine dollars and one cent clear of all expense, and the donations in groceries swelling the amount to near eighty dollars, which will carry the recipients comfortably through the dull season. It should be borne in mind that all of the aged and infirm members of the church have spent their early days of health and strength in bondage in this country without pay; yet the church is not willing for them to become a burden to the public.

The evenings were spent in social conversation, singing and marching, interspersed with eating and drinking. The home-made bread furnished by the scienced hand of one of the ladies of the committee (and a widow too, as I was informed) would have gained a compliment, if not a premium, at any table in the city. There were present on this occasion Rev. Messrs. Richard Wilson and Wm. Hutchings, of the Union Church, who seemed much delighted with the praiseworthy effort of the ladies. Amongst the leaders of this pleasant affair was Mrs. Ellen Lake, Mrs. Elizabeth Corsey, Mrs. Rachel Brown, Mrs. Mary Ann Johnson, Mrs. Harden, Mrs. Porter, Mrs. Morton, Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Freeman, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Cargill, Miss Kelley, Miss Polk, Miss Cassell and Miss Jones; also Messrs. N. Lake, D. King, P. Freeman, Lone, Jesse Porter and P. S. Porter.

P.

DANGER OF ARMING SLAVES.

To the Editor of the New York Times.
—"Mr. Biddle of Pennsylvania, (Union,) in the course of his speech said the slave could not be made a soldier. Place arms in his hands and he is rendered an assassin."—(Times Feb. 7, 1862.)

We have here simply the assertion of the Hon Mr. Biddle. Let that assertion not be received without better authority. When the agents of the French Directory sent Polverel and Santhonax as their agents to San Domingo, (I think in 1789,) they found the mass of the slaveholders royalists, who refused to recognise the Republic of France. They liberated the negroes. The masters, notwithstanding, endeavored to subject their former slaves to coerced labor. Resistance, and finally the massacre of many of the masters, were the natural consequences.

When the agents of the Home Government received information of the approval of their action by the Directory they placed arms in the hands of the negroes, and appointed the famous Touissant L'Overture as their commander. Though a native of Africa, and ignorant of a letter in any language, he possessed such rare military ability, that he organized and commanded an army of blacks, who immediately became the police of the island. No massacres occured from that time until 1801, when Le Clerc with 30,000 men invaded the island. (I will not insist on the precise dates, as I write in haste, without time to make reference, but the facts are substantially true, and can be verified.)

Napoleon's instructions to his brother-in-law were that he should appear in the French West Indies not in the character of a partizan, but as the preserver of the authority of the Empire; that where the freedom of the negro was established he should enforce it—where the negro was a slave he should remain a slave. Unfortunately, Le Clerc first visited Gaudaloupe, where insurrections of the negroes, and massacres too, prevailed to a fearful extent, and where slavery was legal. His duty to his orders required him to subjugate the rebels. That is, he had to reduce them to slavery. On his arrival at San Domingo he found it impossible to convince the negro Government and the negro inhabitants that his mission to their Island could be anything else than the restoration of slavery. War resulted, and in three months the negro Government was subdued. Touissant was sent a prisoner to Paris, and in three months more twenty-two thousand of the French soldiery, out of the thirty-thousand which constituted the original army, were dead by the yellow fever.

Then arose a second series of massacres. In the early, as in the later massacres, the cause was simply the attempt to reduce freemen to slavery. In neither case was the negro made "an assassin by putting arms into his hands."

On the contrary, when the French agents did "place arms in his hands," the negro did not become an assassin, but he became an efficient policeman, restraining the ferocity of the master, and promoting order and industry among the negroes. It is a fact that, during the whole period of eleven or twelve years, between the two massacres on the island, its productions, as proved by the exportations of sugar and coffee, were greater than ever before or since.

I derive these facts from Thiers History of the Revolution Consulate and Empire, and whoever will take the trouble to read that admirable history, will at once discover the want of foundation in fact for the vulgar and malignant lie against human nature which has disgraced the National halls, and the senator who could lend himself to its propagation upon their floors.

C.

New York, Friday, March 14.

"COONED IT ON DE LOG."

One of the St. Louis papers tells an interesting story of a faithful negro who saved a family of Unionists in Arkansas. A resident of Fayetteville, Arkansas, named Smith, the owner of a tract of six-hundred acres of land, became obnoxious to the rebels in consequence of his Union sentiments, and his place was sacked by McCulloch's vagabonds. On receiving news of the approach of Curtis's forces to Springfield, the secessionists began pursuing all the Union men to hang them, and Smith and his brother-in-law, named Watkins, fled, hoping to make their way to some of the federal camps. The women thus left, in fear of outrage and torture on their husbands' account—if not death—left their home on the night of the 8th of February, with a slave named Charley as their guide and protector, leaving the aged mother and the child, who were unable to move. On foot they wended their way, sleeping, when they did sleep, in the open air, upon such litter as Charley could gather for them, and covered by the single blanket which he carried, and subsisting upon the food which he carried in a pair of saddle-bags. He would have been seized as marketable property belonging to a Union man, and the women regarded their own jeopardy as something more than that of their lives, if met or caught by the secessionists.

They traveled, he thinks, about eight miles the first day, (the women being feeble and one of them in a delicate situation), fording creeks and avoiding the traveled roads. On one occasion crossing a creek upon a log one of the ladies fell in, and was with difficulty extricated by Charley, who, as he said, "cooned it on de log," so that his mistress got hold of him, and when she reached the bank he pulled her out. Thus, for nearly a week, footsore and with short and painful journeys, having no shelter and not seeing a fire, subsisting on the scant provisions which Charley carried, they slowly made their way, until they first met the advance guard of the federal forces at Mudtown. Here the ladies were at once cared for by the Colonel, while Charley was taken some miles on horseback to "Mister Sigel," who examined him at great length, comparing his stories with his own maps of the country. He was satisfied of Charlie's truthfulness, and gave him a pass for himself and the two ladies.

From this point conveyance was given them to Springfield and Rolla, and they arrived in St. Louis on Friday night by rail, the faithful Charlie still their servant, protector and friend. He exhibited the various passes furnished him. He speaks of them with the utmost affection. "I brought dem children up," said he, though not more than thirty-seven years old himself.

A Touching Bequest.—The New York Institution for the Blind lately received a small legacy of one hundred dollars, under circumstances of peculiar interest. The testator was a colored woman, born a slave at New Utrecht, Long Island, of the name of Elizabeth Van Tuyl; after her freedom she came to this city, and lived out as cook. She died at the age of seventy, having accumulated about seven hundred dollars, of which she left three hundred dollars in special bequests, and the remainder to a granddaughter of her old master. She was for fifteen years in the service of the gentleman who now acts as her executor, and he says of her that he "never met with a person more scrupulously honest—white or black." To remember the afflicted blind, and to contribute, even in this humble way, to their relief, "points a lesson" which others, more fortunately circumstanced, may take to heart.—Evening Post.

A letter from London states that ex-Senator Mason, the rebel envoy, during the reading of the Queen's speech in the House of Commons, was seated in one of the side galleries, and that, singularly enough, "his next neighbor was a negro of the deepest dye, one of the Haytian embassy, I believe; at all events, he must have been of note to have got a place in that exclusive locality."

A FUNERAL SERMON.

A very large congregation assembled at Zion Church on Sunday last to listen to a sermon preached by the Rev. D. Stevens on the death of Mrs. Adriene Ferguson. This lady had been an exemplary member of Zion Church, and was also a member of the Order of Good Samaritans at the time of her death—and hence the great gathering on Sunday.

The seats on both sides of the middle aisle were occupied by the mourners, the class to which she belonged, and by the Order. The Elder preached a sterling sermon, and feeling remarks were made by several others, testifying to the Christian worth of the deceased. After these exercises, a hymn, composed by Mr. J. D. Bagwell, was sung by the whole Order. After some other services by the Order the congregation was dismissed.

The Boston Traveller states: "One of the casualties at Annapolis, resulting in the death of John Thompson, (colored,) aged about 20, an attendant on one of the surgeons of the 24th Massachusetts Regiment, occured on Christmas Eve, which is a merry time among the blacks, when crackers, squibs, pistols, &c., are let off. On returning to camp, one of his (Thompson's) companions prematurely discharged a pistol, and the ball penetrated Thompson's back near the spine, passed through the abdomen, and lodged under the skin above the navel. He was taken into a house, and he asked for his employer, who was summoned, and who remained with him while living. He was unwilling that any one else should do anything for him. He lingered without pain and was rational until the next day, when he died. He was kind and faithful, and was liked by all, and was considered one of the best lads in the service. His brother, a few years since, broke through the ice in the Back Bay, and was drowned, and their mother is now a lone widow."

PERSONAL.

The "Black Swan" and the "Black Mario" have been concertizing with success in Montreal. The "Advertiser" of that city says:

Miss Greenfield's voice is still as fresh as when she first sang here three or four years ago, and in some points has been improved. She still has that free, warbling cantatile style of phrasing for which her voice was so remarkable, and her compass remains in all its former purity and extraordinary range. She was received with great applause, and graciously responded to the encores which her delightful singing drew forth. Mr. Bowers has an admirable tenor voice. He sang "Spirito Gentil" with much feeling. In the concerted pieces he showed that his training had been thorough, as in fact he did in several of his solos.

The "Gazette" contained the following notice:

"The concert last evening at Mechanics' Hall was a decided success. The Black Swan, whose sweetness, power and wonderful compass of voice has made her fame world-wide, needs from us no especial praise. The appreciation by the public of her singing was best shown by the fact that every one of her songs was encored, which demands of the audience were very good naturedly responded to by her. "Home, Sweet Home," and "The Last Rose of Summer," were charmingly rendered, as was also "Comin' thro' the Rye;" and the duet from Maritana, "Ah, Maritana," with the African Mario, was remarkably fine. He is gifted with a sweet voice of considerable compass and highly cultivated, singing with much taste. His "Viva Britannia" brought down the house, and was repeated.

The Poughkeepsie "Eagle" of the 13th states:

The lecture of W. Wells Brown, last evening, at the Universalist Church, on "Fun and Benevolence," was well attended and highly applauded by those present, who went home apparently well satisfied with their evening's entertainment. At the request of several of the audience he promised to give a free lecture, at the same place, next Monday evening; subject to be, "What ought to be done with the Traitors and the Slaves."

We are informed that the talented artist, John G. Chaplin, Esq., of Huntingdon, Pa., has just finished another fine piece, the "Nubian Prince and the Magi paying adoration to the Savior." Our informant states that it is much thought of by the white artists of Washington. We hope that Mr. Chaplin may be induced to exhibit it at the forthcoming Exhibition of Anglo-African Industry and Art.

The Colored Tragedian, Ira Aldridge, made a great sensation at Odessa. When playing Lear in the malediction scene, it is said the audience were evidently astounded and spell bound for some seconds; then as awaking from a dream, they simultaneously rose, and summoned the artiste no less than six times to express their wonder and delight, amid substantial tokens showered upon the actor. A young lady in her enthusiasm threw a beautiful boquet from one of the private boxes, attached to which was a magnificent gold bracelet.

SUMMARY

The New Article of War.—President Lincoln on Thursday, 13th inst., approved of the additional Article of War, which goes into immediate operation, namely:

"All officers or persons in the military or naval service of the United States are prohibited from employing any of the forces under their respective commands for the purpose of returning fugitives from service or labor, who may have escaped from any persons to whom such service or labor is claimed to be due, and any officer who shall be found guilty by a Court Martial of violating this Article of War shall be dismissed from the service."

Charlotte Dans, a middle aged colored woman living in Chouteau near Pratte avenue, St. Louis, was badly burned on the morning of the 6th inst. by her clothes taking fire while engaged in household affairs. She is not expected to survive her injuries.

William Lewis, a man of color, was found dead on the morning of the 20th ult., a short distance from Bolton, in the township of Albion, Canada West. It appeared in evidence that the unfortunate man came from Toronto, where his family live; he was for five or six days residing with another colored man, with whom he did some work, and then left to work for a gentleman in the immediate vicinity. On the evening of the 19th inst., he was met on the road in a state of intoxication. The verdict of the Jury was that he came to his death from the effects of intoxicating drink and exposure to cold. He was buried at the expense of the township.

The Washington "Star" of the 7th inst. says —"On Sunday last the five children of a worthy colored man named Tillman, who resides on M street, in this city, were all taken sick within a few hours of each other. On Tuesday two of them died. At this time two are in a critical state, and one seems to be recovering. It is only a few weeks since that Tillman lost a near relative, after a few hours illness.

The same paper contains the following: "Yesterday, Henry Lyon, the colored boy convicted of an assault and battery on Abraham Price, a white boy, was sentenced to four weeks in jail, and to pay a fine of $1. The Court, in sentencing the prisoner, spoke to him of his bad temper in resenting a blow from a snow-ball by violence, and also spoke of the fact in evidence that persons at a hotel in the vicinity of the snow-balling had advised him (the prisoner) to assault any white person who interfered with him.

AMUSEMENTS.

An Entertainment.—The ladies of the Concord street Baptist church, Brooklyn, gave an Entertainment at Gronada Hall on Thursday evening, the 13th inst. for the benefit of the church; but we are sorry to say that the attendance was not such as the ladies had a right to expect, although those who came appeared to enjoy the occasion very much.

The piano playing of Master Paul Barnswell and sister was much admired, as was also the singing of the Misses Manley. Recitations were delivered by a little master and Miss whose names we failed to get who were greatly applauded. The exercises were concluded by some remarks by the Rev. Mr. Cary, after which the company enjoyed themselves in the usual manner until a very late hour.

The Entertainment given by the ladies of the Zion (Branch) church, of 16th st., was quite successful, notwithstanding the stormy weather that prevailed at the time. This success, we think, was greatly owing to the exertions of Mrs. Asa Francis and family, who seemed to leave nothing undone that would contribute to the affair. The children who spoke and sung performed their parts excellently well, as did also Madame Green, whose capabilities are so well known.

That some $27 or $28 profit should be realized by the affair, we think speaks very favorably for the managers.

A Surprise.—A number of ladies and gentlemen having concluded on giving the Rev. H. M. Wilson a surprise, assembled on Friday evening, March 14th, at the house of Mrs. Brown, in Morton street, and proceeded from thence to the church. The Rev. gentleman was just closing the meeting when they arrived, he having at that time called upon a gentleman to pray, but we are sorry to say that the gentleman forgot the prayer, as did every body else.

The party under the management of Mesdames Brown, Essex, Lyons, Pollard, Vandyke, Polk, Drayton, Colbourne, Mills and Bogert was not only very successful, but was exceedingly pleasant. The table, which was spread before the pulpit, was loaded with home-made and other dainties in great abundance, affording more than sufficient for all present. The money, which amounted to $27, was deposited in Mr. Wilson's hat, and as that amount in silver weighs something, it soon knocked the hat into the shape of a "cocked hat." Messrs Wilson and Garnet made short addresses, which were much applauded. Mrs. Lyons also made a few remarks, thanking the friends on behalf of the committee, and promising a like return when they should be solicited.

DIED.

Phillips.—In Buffalo, New York, on the 7th inst. of consumption, Thomas H. Phillips, son of Richard and Caroline Phillips, aged 20 years, 8 months, 18 days. He sleeps in Christ, and lives in heaven; he was prepared to meet God.

Qualls.—In Buffalo, N. Y. on the 19th of February, Miss Elizabeth Qualls, in the 31st year of her age. She was greatly beloved by all who knew her. In heaven we hope to meet her. Peace to her ashes.

Haywood.—In this city, March 14th, of hasty consumption, Ann Louisa, daughter of Ann Louisa Haywood, and niece of the Rev. J. T. Holly, aged 20 years and 9 days.

Cooper.—In New Haven, Feb. 25th, after a short but painful illness Chloe Ann, wife of Leven Cooper. Mrs. Cooper had been for a long time a much respected member of the A. M. E. Zion Church. Her end was peace.

Webster.—In this city, March 12th, of apoplexy, William A. Webster, aged 62 years.

Welden.—In this city, of apoplexy, Fanny Welden, aged 69 years, 7 months and 18 days.

Special Notices.

☞ Miss Caroline C. Jones, formerly of 129 Greene st. is informed that we have a letter for her in our possession.

A FESTIVAL, AND MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT,

Will be given for the benefit of Richard Turner, on Thursday evening, March 27th, 1862, at the Continental Hall, corner 34th street and 8th avenue. The Committee pledge themselves to spare no pains to make the entertainment agreeable to all who may favor them with their company.

The exercises to consist of speaking, singing and promenading. Addresses and recitations will be made by Messrs. Robert Johnson, Joseph Clift, and Ohr. R. Brown.

Tickets of admission 10 cents, to be had at the door and of the following Committee:

Committee of arrangements — David Walker, 161 29th st.; John Ford; Miss Henrietta Hecter, 85 30th st.; Mrs. Hannah Ford, 57 29th st.; Miss Caroline Lepain, 47 Laurens st.; John Bennet 45 Laurens st.; Daniel Titus, 159 29th st.; Mrs. Jackson, 177 31st st.; Miss Josephine Donner; Mrs Mary A. Bennett, 45 Laurens st.

Refreshments will be furnished at reasonable rates.

NOTICE.

☞ There will be a Special Meeting of the African Civilization Society in the Seventh Avenue Presbyterian Church, (Wilson's) on Monday Evening March 24th, inst. at 8 o'clock.

A full attendance is requested.

REV. H. H. GARNET, President
HENRY M. WILSON, Sec'ry

J. W. Bowers, L. W. Green, T. J. G. Campbell, Benj. W. Wilkins, P. S. Porter, R. Hamilton, John Cary, L. T. Smith, S. D. Howard, John Bees, Rev. D. Stevens, Rev. G. W. Le Vere, Rev. R. H. Cain, Rev. W. J. Alston, Rev. J. G. Urling, Rev. A. A. Constantine, Rev. S. White, Henry Montgomery, Samuel Colborn, Thomas R. Williams.

LECTURES AND EXHIBITIONS.

The Subscriber is prepared to Lecture on Phrenology and the Southern Rebellion, before Lyceums and other bodies, or to give exhibitions of John Brown's Raid on Virginia, and the affair in which the hero Tillman figured. My address is Ithaca, N. Y. box 470. WM. F. JOHNSON.
34 tf

GRAND CONCERT.

There will be a grand concert and exhibition given by the young ladies and gentlemen of the New York Benevolent Society, No 1 and No. 2, at the Prince Street Hall 178 Prince Street, on Wednesday evening, March 26th 1862, for the benefit of the Rev. John Cary.

Stage conductor, R. Hamilton, Brooklyn. Miss Mary Garnet will preside at the Piano.

At the close of the exercises, there will be refreshments for sale, and promenading.

Doors open at 6 1-2 o'clock. Exercises at 7 1-2 o'clock.

Tickets of admission, 15 cents.

THE 52d ANNIVERSARY
OF THE
NEW YORK AFRICAN SOCIETY
FOR MUTUAL RELIEF.

Will be celebrated on TUESDAY evening, March 25th, 1862, in the METROPOLITAN ASSEMBLY ROOMS, 178 Prince Street.

Short Addresses will be made by members of the Society and others, together with singing by a number of young ladies and gentlemen; also several young ladies will give performances on the Piano.

The musical department will be under the efficient direction of Mr. Rob. Hamilton.

A pleasing feature of the exercises will be the reading of the First Annual Address, delivered before the Society by Mr. J. Teasman in 1811.

At the conclusion of the exercises, a collation will be served under the supervision of Mr. E. V. Clark.

Exercises will commence at 8 o'clock precisely.

Tickets of Admission 25 cents. May be obtained of the Committee and at the door.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS:

Alex. Elston.	Albro Lyons.
Ed. Latham.	E. Brown.
P. Vogelsang	J. J. Zuille.

A
GRAND CONCERT,
OF
One Hundred and Fifty Juvenile Singers,
WILL BE GIVEN AT THE
COOPER INSTITUTE,
On Monday Evening, March 31st,
IN AID OF THE WEEKLY ANGLO AFRICAN,
And an effort to establish in this city a
Mechanical School for Colored Youth
of both sexes.

TICKETS 25 Cents. Children under 12 years of age 15 cents.

☞ Further particulars will be given in Circulars and in next week's paper.

LOVE AND CHARITY.

The Officers and Members of Margaret A. Jackson Tabernacle No. 5, I. O. of Brothers and Sisters of Love and Charity, will give their first Anniversary of said Tabernacle,

TUESDAY EVENING,
March 25, 1862,
IN THE
CONTINENTAL HALL,
34th street and 8th av.

This being the first entertainment ever given by this Tabernacle since its organization, the committee will endeavor to make this entertainment satisfactory to all those who may favor us with their presence on this occasion.

Addresses may be expected from P. G. W. S. Rev. H. H. Garnet, and other distinguished brethren of the Order.

The Grand Tabernacle for the State and City of New York, and subordinate Tabernacles are expected to appear on this occasion.

Odes will be sung by the order.

Tickets of admission, 15 cents. Refreshments will be on hand at the option of the audience.

Abraham B Aray, Chairman
J. H. Lewis, Secretary.
Sophia C. James, Treasurer.

EXHIBITION.

Colored Public School No. 1, Brooklyn, Will give an Exhibition in the Polytechnic Institute, in Livingston street, between Court and Boerum streets, Brooklyn, on Friday Evening, March 21st, instant, commencing at 7 o'clock,—doors open at 6 o'clock. Admission 15 cents. No postponement on account of the weather.

I. O. OF G. S. AND D. OF S.

New York, March 10th

Notice is hereby given that the Officers and members of the G. Lodge, and Subordinate Lodges, will meet on Sunday, March 28, at 1 o'clock P. M. precisely, in the Basement of Zion Church, for the purpose of attending the Funeral Sermon of the G. Treas., brother Wm. Burnett.

John R. Porter, G. Sec.

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

DISTRICT GRAND LODGE, No. 2, OF THE INDEPENDENT ORDER OF GOOD SAMARITANS AND DAUGHTERS OF SAMARIA.

In accordance with previous arrangements, Thomas Lodge, No. 35, of Good Samaritans; Smith Union Lodge, No 13, of Daughters of Samaria; Van Brakle Lodge, No. 4, of Good Samaritans, Olive Union Lodge, No. 27, of Daughters of Samaria, Prudence Lodge, No. 30, of Daughters of Samaria, and Perseverance Lodge, No. 42, of Daughters of Samaria, were reinstated to fellowship with the Right Worthy National Grand Lodge, of the I. O. of G. S. and D. of S., First Branch, on Tuesday evening, March 4th, A. D. 1862. A dispensation having been granted, the Right Worthy National Grand Sire, Bro. Geo. H. Hick, organized the above named Lodges into a District Grand Lodge, to be known by the name, style, and title, of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, of the Independent Order of Good Samaritans, and Daughters of Samaria, and installed the following named Brothers and Sisters into their offices respectively, viz:

Bro. J. T. Robinson, R W. P. Grand Chief.

Sist. M. E. Ashton, R. W. P. Grand Presiding Daughter.

Bro. H. Brooks, R. W. G. Chief.

Sist. S. Davis, R. W. G. Presiding Daughter.

Bro. R. H. Gleaves, R. W. D. G. Chief.

Sist. M. Parker, R. W. D. G. P. Daughter.

Bro. N. L. Durham, R. W. G. V. Chief.

Sist. M. Highgate, R. W. G. D. of the Fountain.

Bro. J. H. Smith, R. W. G. Prelate.

Sist. J. Pharis, R. W. G. D. of Lessons.

Bro. F. C. Revels, R. W. G. Orator.

Bro. W. H. Longfellow, R. W. G. R. Secretary.

Sist. S. Jenkins, R. W. G. D. of Records.

Bro. J. Davis, R. W. G. F. Secretary.

Sist. C. E. Gilbert, R. W. G. F. Daughter.

Bro. J. Dolphin, R. W. G. Treasurer.

Sist. E. Maston, R. W. G. D. of Treasurer.

Bro. H. H. Gilbert, R. W. G. Conductor.

Sist. E. Briant, R. W. G., D. Conductor.

Bro. W. Cooper, R. W. G. I. Sentinel.

Sist. S. Young, R. W. G. D. of the Key.

Bro. G. Murry, R. W. G. O. Sentinel.

Sist. S. Fauset, R. W. G. D. of the Pass.

After the installation ceremonies the R. W. National Grand Sire declared District Grand Lodge No. 2, I. O. of G. S. and D. of S., to be a regular organized body, under the Jurisdiction of the R. W. National Grand Lodge.

On motion, it was resolved: That a list of the officers be published in the Christian Recorder, and the Anglo African.

Wm. H. Longfellow, } Committee.
Jonathan Davis, M. D. }

Philadelphia, March 5, 1862.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER. A Printing Office for $10. LOWE'S Improved Printing Presses are the Best, Cheapest, most Durable portable Card and Job Presses ever made, and have been awarded Diplomas and silver medals. You will find a press a source of pleasure and profit, by printing for yourself or your neighbors. Many persons are saving and making money by using one at their homes or places of business. A comfortable living may be obtained in any city, town or village, with a small outlay for press and types. The press costs but one-tenth as much as a common job press, and is so simple a boy or girl of twelve can do common and fancy printing with ease. Cards, Bill-Heads, Labels, Receipts, Circulars, &c., can be printed at a trifling expense. Price of Presses—No. 1, $5; No. 2, $10; No. 3, $15; No. 4, $20. Price of Printing Offices, including press.—No. 1, $10; No. 2, $20; No. 3, $30; No. 4, $40. Send for a Circular to the LOWE PRESS COMPANY,
34ts 13 Water street, Boston.

BOARDING AND LODGING. Mrs. A. M. Thompson, (late Jackson) respectfully informs the public that she has opened a Boarding and Lodging house at No. 39 Watts street. The house is well situated, being between two railroads, and within 15 minutes walk of the principal colored churches. Terms very moderate.

NOW IS THE TIME
To Use Dr. CLARKE'S
SHERRY WINE
BITTERS!!
Composed of

Dock Root, Wild Cherry,
Sarsaparilla, Prickly Ash,
Thoroughwort, Poplar Bark,
Rock Rose, Rhubarb,
Wintergreen, Dandelion,
&c. &c.

For Weakness, Loss of Appetite, Sour Stomach, Jaundice, Headache, Piles of long standing, Humors,

And all Diseases which arise from an unhealthy state of the Stomach, Bowels, and Blood.

PRICE ONLY 25 CENTS A BOTTLE!

For Sale at the office of the Anglo-African, 48 Beekman street.

TO LET.—Apartments in house No. 148 Jay street, Brooklyn. As these apartments are within five minutes walk of Fulton and Catherine Ferries persons desiring a residence in Brooklyn will find them desirable. Apply on the premises after 1 o'clock, P. M.

THE HORACE WATERS PIANOS, MELODEONS, ALEXANDRE ORGANS, T. Gilbert & Co's. Celebrated Æolian Pianos, are the finest instruments for Parlors and Churches now in use. A large assortment can be seen at the new Warerooms 481 Broadway, between Grand and Broome streets, which will be sold at extremely low prices. Pianos and Melodeons from sundry makers, new and second hand, to let, and rent allowed if purchased, as per agreement. Monthly payments received for the same. Also, second-hand pianos at great bargains, prices from $25 to $100. Sheet Music, Music Books and all kinds of Music merchandise at war prices. A Pianist in attendance will try new music.

HORACE WATERS, Agent.
32 13t.

MEDICAL.

MRS. R. LEE, for several years Practising Eclectic, and at present Student of the N. E. F. Medical College of Boston, is now in Brooklyn at 97 High street, where she will take great pleasure in giving medical advice to any who may wish it while she remains in the city.—Charges very moderate. Hours 10 to 2 A. M. and 3 to 8 P. M.
32 tf.

THE LAUNDRESS' SECRET.

The most Invaluable Preparation known for rendering clothes white and clean, without rubbing or injury to the fabric.

The above recipe, together with over one hundred other items of information, sent free on the receipt of 5 red stamps.

A liberal discount to peddlers. Address,

Jos. Adams,
33 Nassau street.

A. ROBERTS,

120 Clinton Court, 8th st., New York, agent for the Weekly Anglo-African. Copies may be had of him at an early hour after its publication.

TO LET.—Apartments in house 153 Thompson Street. A few gentlemen can be furnished with lodging also. Inquire of Mr. Jer. Bowers on the premises.
315t.

ZION CONFERENCE.

☞ Notice is hereby given to the Members of the Annual Conference of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion, that the Annual Conference of the New York District will meet in Zion Church corner of Church and Leonard streets, New York city, on the Third Saturday in May, 1862.

WM. H. BISHOP,
Superintendent of the 1st Dist. of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion.

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

HELP! HELP WANTED

At Tilmon's Agency, No. 70 East 13th st., one door East of the 4th Avenue. Spring is here and now is the time. Never was there a greater demand for all first class colored help than now. Remember that this is the oldest and most responsible office in the city for colored help. Situations constantly on hand for both city and country. Terms cash and strict attention paid to business. All persons coming to this city and wishing to save board will do well to call during Office hours, from 7 A. M. to 5 P. M.

31tf L. Tilmon, Proprietor.

STONE SQUARE LODGE NO. 6, A. Y. M. under the jurisdiction of the M. W. United Grand Lodge of the State of New York, meet every Friday Evening at 8 o'clock, at their Hall 309 Grand st., Williamsburg, Brooklyn, E. D.

J. H. DAVIS, Sec'ry.

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City.
17 13t

PLANE St. SELECT SCHOOL.

195 PLANE ST., NEWARK, N. J.
Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, Principal

The branches taught are Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography and History.

Plain Sewing, Ornamental Needlework, Worsted Embroidery and Fancy Knitting.

Piano Forte, Melodeon, and Vocal Music by Prof. John H. O'Fake.

A limited number of Misses between the ages of ten and fourteen may be boarded in the house on moderate terms. Healthy location, and a fine yard for exercise.

REFERENCES.

Newark, N.J.
Rev. E. J. Adams, Jefferson Ellis,
Adam Ray, Abram T. Cook.
Brooklyn.
Rev. J. N. Gloucester.
New York.
Rev H. M. Wilson, Rev. H. H. Garnet.

All letters may be addressed to Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, 194 Plane st. Newark N. J.
27 6t.

Elizabeth City, N. J. Feb. 8, 1862.

This is to certify that I heartily approve of the effort of Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers to establish a Select School for young misses. I have been acquainted with her for over twenty-five years, and am happy to recommend her and her enterprise to the patronage of the public in general.

DANIEL H. VANDERVEER,
Pastor of the 1st Colored Pres. Church, Eliz. City.

Washboards! Washboards!! Washboards!!!—of the celebrated "Hoagland Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

PHILADELPHIA AGENCY.

Wm. R. De Cordover, 419 South 7th st. is authorized to receive subscriptions and advertisements for the Anglo-African. All orders left with him will receive prompt attention.

GLASS, CHINA, AND EARTHEN-WARE MENDED,
BY A. ROBERTS,
120 Clinton Court, 8th st. New York.

A Supply of the EGYPTIAN CEMENT, for the above purpose constantly on hand. Price 25 cents per bottle.
29tf

WORLD'S FAIR AGENCY.—The undersigned are acting as Agents for Merchants and Manufacturers to Exhibit at World's Fair, and to introduce into England, France and other European countries, articles of American Invention, Procuring Patents, making Sales, or in any way promoting their interests.

DEXTER & CO. 17 Spruce st. N. Y.;
86 Milk street, Boston; 149 S. Fourth st., Philad
1m3ap

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND
Balls, Parties, &c., furnished with music at the shortest notice.
MR. GEORGE OTON,
Professor of Music,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St, and with G. Oton.
18tf

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,
REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.
New York—corner of Prince and Marion street near Broadway.

Hours of Worship;—
Prayer-meeting, 10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.

Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock.
Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.
Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,
(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.)
Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. Wm. J. Alston, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.
Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—
10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn.
13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.
DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.
Rev. Eli N. Hall, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:
10½ o'clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.
7½ " P. M.
10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,
28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor. Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:
10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.
7½ " P. M.
12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,
Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—
3 o'clock, P. M.
7 1-2 " P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

LECTURE every Wednesday evening.

Rev. Chas. H. Thompson, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,
Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
3½ " P. M.
7½ " P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. Hall, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.
Sullivan St., near Houston.
Rev. John T. Raymond, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.
7 1-2 " P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

Agent for Washington.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson will be promptly forwarded.

Troy Agency.—Mr. Henry Burke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

MRS. ELIZA LEWIS' SALVE,
ANDERSON'S HAIR RESTORATIVE,
(New London.)
SPANISH OIL, (For the Hair.)
WHITE'S VEGETABLE EXTRACT,
BRANDRETH'S SUGAR COATED PILLS.
For Sale at the
Drug Store 55 West Broadway
tf-47

TO LET.—Two furnished Rooms in Mrs. [illegible] Boarding House suitable for a gentleman and wife, or for single gentlemen or ladies. Apply on the premises.

BOARDING AND LODGING, at No. 3 Jay street, by Mrs. Brown, (widow of the late J. W. Brown) who begs the patronage of her friends and acquaintances.
29tf.

SOMETHING NEW.

The best washing preparation in the world. No boiling, pounding or rubbing required, but all done in simple warm water. Full instructions concerning its use and manufacture sent by mail on receipt of 25 cents Address

Rufus Stickney.
28 4t Templeton, Mass.

BOSTON HOUSE.
MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

Established in 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches.
19 26t

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG
Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as
BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTING
of every description. Also constantly on hand well-selected stock of Ready-Made
MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.
Don't Forget, 168 EWEN ST.,
Williamsburg
9 1y.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL,
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. Ramsey.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.
First Premium for Misses and Children's
HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.
The Clergy supplied at a discount.
KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y.
19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
Residence—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS
For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.
Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St.,
on door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS
Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 71 Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn.
10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street.
11—3m

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding.
8 tf

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. Fortes, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 South Street, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate.
31y

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS,
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly Richardson) respectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

MRS E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 Sullivan Street, New York,
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.
3tf

BOARDING AND LODGING

By Mrs. Mary Johnson, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in very healthy and convenient the city.

Boarding for Ladies	$2,50
" " Gents,	3,00
Lodging per week,	75

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER,
219 Centre Street New York.

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,
In all its branches—such as
BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH
GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.
Residence—120th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.
18 26t

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

HEAD QUARTERS, HOOKER'S DIVISION, near Budd's Ferry, Md., March 12th, 1862.

MR. EDITOR: The rebels have raised the seige of the National Capital. The U. S. flag now waves majestically, if not triumphantly, over the ramparts of the famous Cock-Pit Point Battery. On the evening of the 8th inst., about 10 o'clock, two fugitives from Slavery escaped from the Virgina shore in a small dug-out, and fell into the custody of picket-guard No. 3 of the 8th Reg. N. J. Vols. They reported that orders had been received by the rebels to abandon their works. About 3 o'clock on the 9th (Sunday), the gunboat Anacosta crept down to the rebel batteries and commenced shelling them, and receiving no response, sent a boat on shore and found the works deserted. The second boat ran the flag up amid the cheers of the thousands of soldiers; while this was going on the steamer George Page could be seen enveloped in flames, as was also two schooners, her prizes. Far back could be seen numerous minor explosions; and about 4 o'clock the works on Shipping Point blew up with a great concussion. Boats commenced to run frequently between the two shores, and by night-fall five hundred men must have straggled over there. As your correspondent has been cautioned against furnishing information of the movements of the division I must be extremely cautious, or, like Dr. Ives, the champion of Northern treason, I may suddenly find myself in durance vile. I shall not refrain primarily but only incidently on this account, for although the Government has spurned and rejected us, and has pampered and petted its bitter foes, yet for the love and gratitude I bear for the millions in the free North who are standing between the slave and the slave master, I am determined to be loyal, and to lose this insignificant life before one single word or act of mine shall jeopardise the interests of the service. Now that the rebel blockade of the Potomac has been raised the valuable fishing grounds will be accessible to the fishermen. The Potomac fisheries are worth thousands of dollars; and thousands of souls now in the throes of starvation will be furnished with food both savory and nutritious. There was such a continued communication kept up by the quasi Unionists of Maryland with the Virginia shore that the authorities were compelled to destroy nearly all the seine boats on the river, and these will have to be replaced before seine-hauling can be resumed. The fishing season commences about the 10th of March, at which time the gillers commence to take in the shad. About the last of March or the first of April seine hauling commences. The shad season closes about the last of May, the seine-hauling about the 10th of May. Herring is the principal yield of these fisheries.

The bran new General Nagle, like the old dough-faces of old, has summoned all the military power he possesses to advance the interests of slavery; but he belongs to a by-gone race. They stood and looked on with blanched cheek when Sumner was beaten down in the Senate Chamber; they were bullied and kicked by imperious slaveholders; they plead and begged the free North to spread inhuman bondage over the entire North: their mean cringing narrow souls longed for this: their big soft bellies yearned for it; and after Sumter fell and the national flag dishonored, and the rebel ensign unfurled over nearly every fort, arsenal and custom-house in the Southern States, they prayed to their God that "Jeff. Davis" might extend his dominions to even Bunker Hill and Fanniel Hall, so that free-speech might become a crime. There are but few of them left, Vallondingham, Diven, and several little Generals. They are traitors. There is no such thing as an uncompromising loyalist and a slave-holder whether in fact or in heart. Any man who ever apologises for slavery apologises for treason, and so long as slavery exists so long will secession remain unsubdued. This is as true as that God lives and reigns. I saw in the "Anglo" an extract from the columns of the "New York Tribune," which gives the special order No. 24 with comments, and which calls forth these remarks: these are very common things, and I can furnish you with any quantity of such orders. But the peculiarity of this order is its bold and unqualified assertion of the loyalty of Samuel W. Adams, which is false, gloriously false. This man, who commanded Brigadier General Nagle and whom Brigadier General Nagle instantly obeyed, lives at a place called Smith Point, on the Potomac, and which is directly opposite to Acquia Creek. He was the owner of several boats, and last summer used them to convey goods and men to the Virginia shore, and his house was a sort of rendezvous for the pilgrims to secessia. For this his boats were seized and he was arrested, carried to Washington, and of course released. For this man General Nagle proposes to employ the whole force of his Brigade, nearly 4,000 United States soldiers, to crush if possible by it any manifestation of sympathy for the oppressed or love for freedom; but the power he thus dares to insult will overwhelm him if he dare oppose it. The negro he would have re-enslaved by New England men, was rescued and set free under his very nose and would have been under his eyes. So much for the bran new Brigadier General Nagle, of Pennsylvania.

In your report of the Congressional debate on the bill establishing an additional article of law for the Government of the U. S. Army, Mr. Diven is reported, to have said, I want to ask the gentleman (Mr. Bingham) to specify where any military officer has hunted down any fugitive slave for the purpose of returning him to his master? Now, sir, I would have given the world if I could have had a chance to make the specifications referred to. I can give the data for scores of cases; one case, particularly, where an officer, Col. Vandyke, of the 26th Pennsylvania Volunteers, had sent a guard outside the regimental lines beating the bushes for a negro boy, while the hunter in search of him was imbibing bad whiskey with the colonel; and a captain still in the same regiment approached a lieutenant and inquired of him whether he would not like to make twenty dollars. The lieutenant, of course, said yes; when he was told that he must help him to catch and re-enslave a panting fugitive from inhuman slavery, he indignantly rejected the offer and reported the captain to his superiors. So you are already aware I might go on to enumerate. The one case alone of the return of Jack Scroggins by the Major of Col. Graham's Regiment is enough to choke Mr. Diven of itself.

G. E. S.

LETTER FROM MIDDLETOWN.

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., Feb. 10th, '62.

DEAR ANGLO: After the lapse of about one year I again take up my pen to let you know of my whereabouts. Being transferred from the New York Annual Conference to the New England by Superintendent Clinton, I was stationed at this place. This is a very fine city; the people kind and affectionate. We have a very fine little church, and the only colored one here, seating about one hundred comfortably; it has thirty members. We have also a very fine Sunday-School, taught in part by our people. We have also a Mental and Moral Improvement Society, which meets on Monday evening of each week. Its object is to improve the mind by discussions, lectures, essays and select readings *by its members, and is composed of gentle*men and ladies without respect to color. Many of the students of the Wesleyan University and the Divinity College are members of the society.

On Thursday evening last I was surprised by a number of lady members and friends of the church and the Lyceum with baskets and bundles of the good things of life; I tell you, they made the table fairly groan under its load. We were no ways sorry for the visit, for they left behind them tokens of friendship that will do us no harm. May the good Lord bless and keep them through life and then take them to heaven.

J. A. JONES.

[The above letter was received several weeks ago, but mislaid.—ED.]

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

Washington, March 11th 1862.

MR. EDITOR.—Permit me to call your attention to one important feature of the non-intervention law in respect to slaves escaping from their masters. The law provides that no officer under any judicial or military authority shall arrest a fugitive from slavery, provided the master be a secessionist.

In consequence of the passage of this law there are in Washington to-day over four-hundred slaves. You will probably ask what is to become of these people, as they have no money or employment; well, Mr. Editor, I will tell you. The aforesaid law also empowers the Provost Marshall General Porter, to take charge of these slaves, and as many as may come for protection, and place them in the old Capitol with the rebel prisoners: in some cases master and slave are in the same building. The superintendant, Mr. Wood, is also empowered to let families come to the Department and choose slaves, only giving a guarantee for their good treatment. In some cases the poor slave who thinks he has at last gained his freedom, is compelled to go and serve some farmer sixty miles in the country, and this farmer may own from fifty to sixty others; but swearing to be a loyal man, he can come to Washington and get servants for life for nothing, only giving a guarantee of good treatment. And the government is glad to get rid of the poor fugitive at that rate, for they are afraid that they will have too many to provide for. I think that the authorities will in a few days compel the government to do something for the poor fugitive paupers that flood the city, and who have not claimed protection of the Provost Marshall.. It can hire them to drive the government wagons, if they choose, but of that I shall write hereafter I shall be en route to-morrow for Charlestown, Virginia.

The colored people can walk any hour of the night here now. Au revoir,

J. V. GIVENS.

VISIT TO SALEM, OHIO.

MR. EDITOR.—I arrived in this pleasant village on the 1st. inst., on a pastoral visit. Salem has a population of over three thousand, and is quite a business place. It is sixty-five miles from Cleveland, and the same distance from Pittsburg.

THE COLORED PEOPLE.

Our people, as a general thing, are in pretty good circumstances. Many of them own the buildings they live in. There are three carpenters, one plasterer, two blacksmiths, three bootmakers, four brick masons, one butcher and one drayman.

CHURCHES.

The A. M. E. Zion is the only colored church in the village. It is pleasantly situated on Green st. The building is fine and capacious. Size thirty-five by forty feet, neatly finished. A religious interest has been gotten up, through the indefatigable efforts of Rev. Joseph Armstrong, who is a man of talent and energy, and whose chief object appears to be the promotion of the Redeemer's cause, and the upbuilding of the church. The pleasure of the Lord has indeed prospered in his hands. The second quarterly meeting for the present year was held last Sabbath. There has been a time of refreshing here from the presence of the Lord. There is a glorious revival going on at present; the anxious seat is nightly crowded with mourners seeking the pardoning mercy of God. Several have found the pearl of great price. There are revivals in several of the churches in this part of my executive district. God grant that the good work may go on, until hundreds are brought into the fold of Christ.

PUBLIC SCHOOL.

There are no separate schools here; white and colored all go to the same school. I took occasion on Friday to visit the school, which is pleasant and agreeable. The building is large and commanding, and is well situated; the size is ninety by sixty-five feet. There are eight departments, large, well ventilated and clean. There is a vestibule attached to each department for hats, bonnets, etc. The basement is partitioned off into three rooms, for play ground during the winter season. In the third story is a large hall used for lectures, etc. In an adjoining room is the library, containing hundreds of volumes. All the branches of an English education are taught in this school. More anon.

J. J. CLINTON.

Salem, March 6th, 1862.

P. S. I will leave here for Lima, Ohio, on the 8th. J. J. C.

LETTER FROM FLUSHING.

FLUSHING, N. Y., March 10, '62.

The village of Flushing, a delightful place about ten or fifteen miles from the city of New York, is noted for its nurseries, which are by far the most delightful resorts for those who not only understand the language but also for those who love flowers and plants for their own sakes.

There are about three or four thousand inhabitants in the village, and generally they are friendly to our cause.

There is a society, whose sole object it is to ameliorate the condition of the colored people in particular, termed the Flushing Female Association. This association as early as the year 1814 erected a building for the education of the colored and white, and from that time until within a few years successfully carried on their labors for the benefit of both classes. Most of our prominent business men are the fruits of their labors. But within a few years they have given their undivided attention to the education of the colored people, and we trust with success. They are continually sewing and distributing, and to crown all, they have lately erected a building for the use of the colored public school, on Liberty street, at a cost of about two thousand dollars.

It may not be amiss to state the cause of the erection of this new brick school-house. In the fall of 1860, Mr. William T. Dixon took charge of this school, then numbering about fifty scholars. The building in which the school was held was dilapidated by reason of an age of forty-six years, and let in as much fresh air as chose to enter without invitation, to the annoyance of our feet, producing chilblains and cold feet. At first our friend (the teacher) thought to bear with it, but then he thought that we, as a people, have too long been content with the refuse, and so he endeavored to try the minds of the colored inhabitants. Accordingly, on the 8th day of July, 1861, a meeting was called and the object stated. Mr. James Pierce was chosen Chairman, and William T. Dixon, Secretary. Mr. John S. Kenney, by vote, proposed that the Secretary draw up a petition, which was done, and read and signed by upwards of seventy persons. It was then presented to the Board of Education of Flushing and also to the Flushing Female Association, and published in our two weekly papers. But, here let me say, some of our people thought we went too far—"the white folks would never give us a school-house," and such like fearful remarks were made. But when the sun arose on the 3d day of, February, 1862, we all beheld, not only a new school-house, but a brick one, and the colored children and teacher moving into it, and the Board of Education and the Female Association coming also, together with a goodly number of whites, and also our dear friends, who said that they "could not believe their own eyes."

The new building was opened with exercises of a very interesting character. At quarter past 10 o'clock A. M., Mr. Samuel B. Parsons, Treas. of the Board of Education, read the 5th and 6th chap. of Prov.; after which prayer was offered by Rev. John T. Raymond of Zion Baptist Church, N. Y. City. After prayers Mr. Parsons gave a brief history of the building. The Rev. J. T. Raymond was then introduced to the audience, who listened with profound silence to his happy address, in which he thanked the ladies and others for their kindness exhibited on so large a scale to our people, and also showed that the colored man would not be inferior to the whites if allowed the same privileges; and he also said much to establish the character of the present teacher. Rev. Mr. Bartlett, of the Congregational Church, Flushing, next addressed the audience and alluded to the goodly report he had heard of the school, and encouraged the children and parents in their several duties to continue, and that he believed that with equal advantages we would be men. Next followed Mr. Benj. W. Downing, a lawyer of Flushing and the District School Commissioner, who said that in all Queens County no school could compare with the colored school of Flushing for good order.

Mr. Gates, Principal of the Public School No. 1 of Flushing, next addressed the audience in some pertinent allusions to his rickety seats, which if the scholars but approached them would creak, and said that if they behaved themselves, he could see no reason why the public school (white) could not have as good furniture as the colored public school, which, with other timely remarks, were well received.

Mr. Parsons then called upon the teacher, who in a few pathetic remarks, thanked the donors, and presented the Board of Education and the Female Association a token of his thanks by way of a piece of penmanship, which we hear has been framed for preservation.

Mr. Parsons then arose and expressed to the audience the entire satisfaction of the Board of Education with Mr. Dixon, and that he not only did his duty, but labored outside of the school for the advancement of his race; and expressly enjoined upon the parents to sustain the teacher.

After singing the Doxology and receiving the benediction by the Rev. John T. Raymond the audience dismissed.

The outside labors referred to by Mr. Parsons are those in the Sabbath-School which meets in the school-house, and numbers about forty scholars, and eight teachers, all being white with the exception of Miss R. Kenney. Mr. Dixon being the Superintendent. A Lyceum has been formed, named after the founder, the "Dixonian Lyceum," which numbers about twenty-five members, and meets every Friday evening to discuss questions, read essays, and other original pieces.

The last question, "Which has done the more for the benefit of the country, the sword or pen?" was discussed with spirit—the question being decided in favor of the negative. You shall hear from us again.

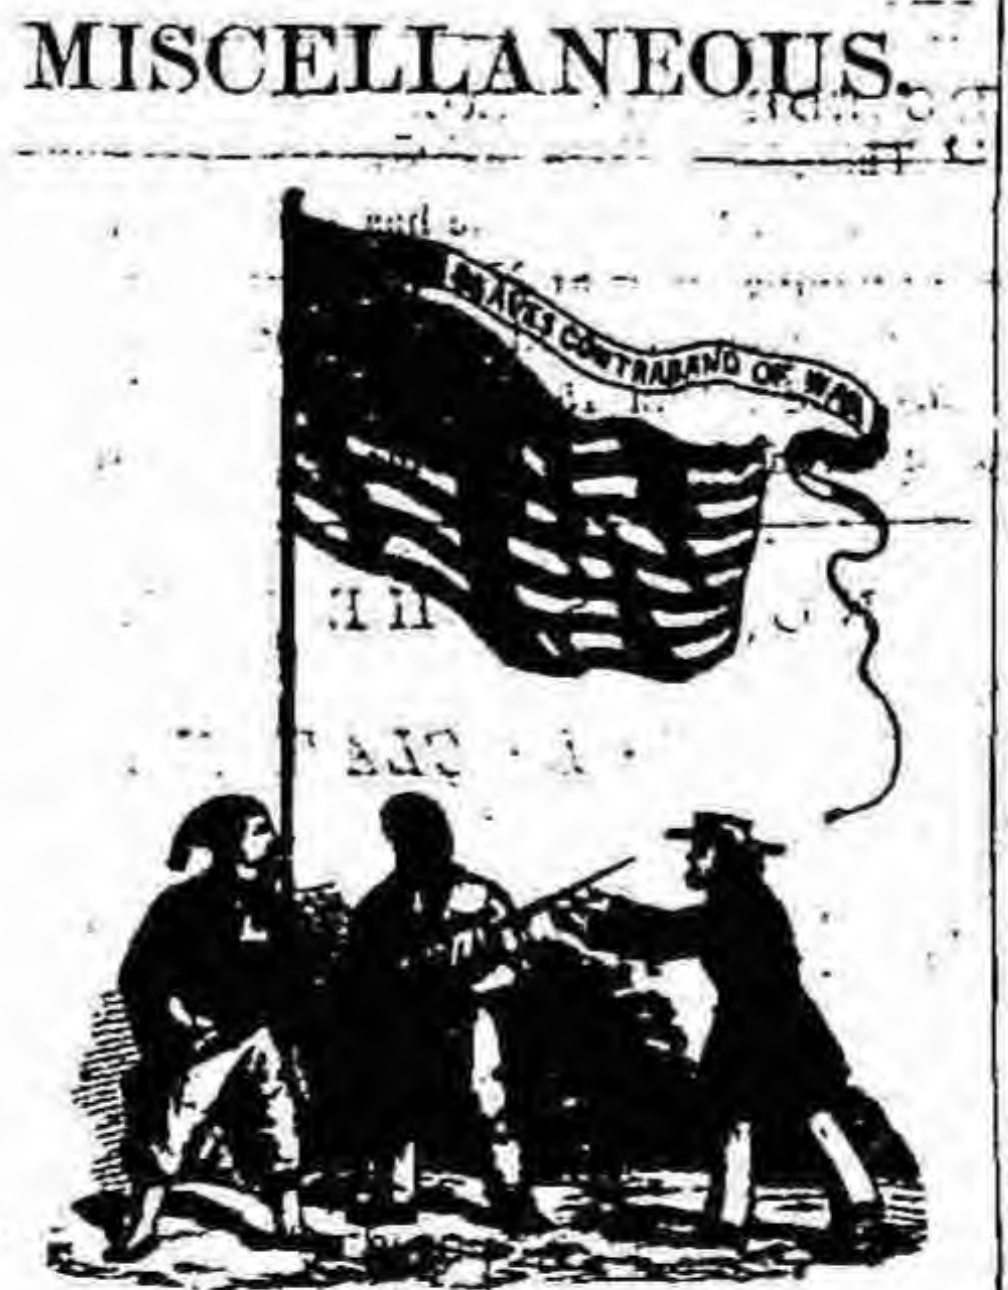
LIBRA.

SHAMEFUL.

Rev. M. D. Conway states, that seeing Gen. Halleck's order for turning over to the quartermaster the 16 slaves at St. Louis, to be him held to work until the government was paid certain expenses, for clothing, &c., allowing in the meanwhile any to take them who could prove a claim, he supposing the amount due could not be large, concluded to raise it and rescue the individuals from man-stealers who might be prowling round. He therefore wrote to Gen. Halleck to ascertain what was the government demand, and received the following bill of items, much to his surprise, as it will be to that of every unprejudiced reader: "The Missouri Republican's bill for advertising runaway negroes, $225 81; Jailer Rodeman for jailing them, $320; rewards of slave-catchers for catching them, $80; sheriff fees, $80; clothing furnished negroes, $14 43." Total, seven hundred and twenty-six dollars, twenty-five cents! Thus it will be seen that government officials demand the payment of over $700 by these poor blacks, as a penalty for being black, and in consequence on a suspicion of being slaves. Shame on all concerned in the infamous transaction!

Two passengers were conversing in a railway car about music. One gentleman asked the other, who appeared rather simple, 'Do you know the Barber of Seville?' 'No,' replied the latter, 'I always shave myself.'

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5, per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent liniment for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coshocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric will tend to set the colors, and wash c aner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

THE
PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC,

Containing besides the Calendar and Copious Astronomical Statistics, a History of the Great Rebellion, Biographical Sketches of the Prominent Military Officers, a Dictionary of Military Terms, very full information relative to Military Matters of interest to the people at large, National Hymns, Incidents, Anecdotes, &c., &c.

Published and for sale by DEXTER & Co., 17 Spruce street Newsboys and others wanted to make sales.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess of dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing; and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
THOS. R. CROCKER,
Fulton Fish Market

New York, May 30th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.

D. W. INGERSOL,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 12th, 1855.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

JAMES EDWIN HALSEY,
193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Headache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want and safe article.

ALBRO LYONS.
20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway, Mrs. Staat's, 78 Thompson St; Chas. H. King's, 155 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

WM. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dockroot, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as, they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood; thereby speedily curing, jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Billous Stomach, Billous Bowels, Billous Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz; Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Waranted for a gentle family physic not to have ad equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gambogo colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply, because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once, if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occassionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK.
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Product
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions.

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00.

CONTENTS:

EMBELLISHMENT—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or he Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James Mc Cune Smith.
Claude Brihadas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica,—by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon.
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thomas Jefferson.
Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robert Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James M'Cune Smith.
Trifles, by Mary A. S. Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson.
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly.
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G. B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. M. Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African, and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York.

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1,50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gordon, Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs. M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. Nell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry, By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo., 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

Th Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S. H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on slavery, and the relative powers of the State and National Government. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory; also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp. 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 291 pp. 8vo. Price 75 cts., or postage paid 80 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, (from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large one, 18x12, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel between decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large, 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which places it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents) must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes in one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed.
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife "Vina," after forty years of Slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard; with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 90 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Deacon Giles's Distillery and Deacon Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per dozen or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea,
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland.
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party, late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia, and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added.

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual.
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
00 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pilkington. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress; an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing; remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred wood-cut plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW.

VOL. 1, NO. 35. NEW YORK, MARCH 29, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENTS

The Weekly Anglo-African
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY
BY ROBT. HAMILTON
NO. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.
Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.
All communications for this paper must be addressed
ROBT HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

PART II.

Hear the word!—who fight for freedom!
Shout it in the battle van!
Hope! for bleeding human nature!
Christ the God, is Christ the Man!

H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER XXX.

THE CONFRONTMENT.

And is he gone?—BYRON.

Early that morning as usual, Gofer Gondolier was found in the cuisine department. Mild, affable, pleasant, and cheerful, he went about his duties, as though the past evening his rest had not been taxed in the expansion of a night, certainly to him, the most eventful in the political record of history.

After the family had been seated, as was his custom to walk to the door and take a peep into the ordinary, this morning there was no delinquency.

When the countess turned her face in the direction of the door, with his accustomed politeness, Gofer quite raised from his head the black silk slouch cap which he wore, bowing with that civility becoming his position, and due the distinguished personage in whose presence he then was.

There was observed in the countenance of the Captain-General a slight emotion, but with decided effect he managed to suppress it, and looked at Gofer with a smile, such as he had never before witnessed from that personage, which gave him an impression such as he had never experienced. Stepping backwards he bowed himself out of the noble presence.

Shortly after repast, before executing his design, the count deemed it advisable to acquaint the countess of his intended course toward the caterer.

To this she decidedly objected, as impolitic and unwarrantable, which, from its rashness, tended to thwart his designs. She suggested instead, that nothing should be done or said until the application made to her by Gondolier for the license of a general use of the carving knives, which might give the occasion and pretext for an accusation against him.

To this Count Alcora readily assented, and reclining for a rest, the countess immediately left his presence.

Scarcely had she emerged from the chamber when Hober entered, bearing the intelligence that Gofer was preparing to leave the palace. Startled with emotion, she quickly imparted it to the count.

Fearing corruption among the rest of the servants, it was thought advisable to dismiss him at once, which having been done, in less than half an hour the faithful Gondolier was lost—as doubtless the Captain General hoped, forever—among the transient inhabitants of the busy thoroughfares of the city.

It was but a short time, however, till the countess had good reason to believe, that the story against Gofer was a base fabrication, originated through jealousy by their own slave Hober, who envying the position of the free black, designed to succeed him in the cuisine department.

This fact went far in changing the feelings of the governor toward him, and reduced in his opinion the felon and rebel to a mere peccadillo offender.

CHAPTER XXXI.

WHAT OF THE NEGROES?

After leaving the palace, making the most of his time, sauntering through the streets, vacantly gazing at almost every person and thing, Gofer Gondolier continued wandering till evening caught him far up in the city. His first impulse was in consequence of the restrictions, to hasten back in search of lodgings, but being directly in front of a large and fashionable restaurateur thronged with white men in the full enjoyment of an evening's pleasure, stopping to look in at the windows, he thus reflected:

"Freedom should ever be potent to repeal and annul the decrees of oppression, and repel the oppressor. The instant a person is claimed as a slave, that moment he should strike down the claimant. The natural rights of man are the faculties of option, heaven bequeathed, and endowed by God, our common Father, as essential to our being, which alone distinguish us from the brute. The authority of the slaveholder ceases the moment that the impulse of the slave demands his freedom, and by virtue of this divine attribute, every black is as free as the whites in Cuba, and I will resist this night, and henceforth every attempt at infringement on my inherent privileges." Acting upon these promptings, Gofer left the front of the restaurateur, continuing his rambling through the town.

This evening Blake and Placido had several appointments in different parts of the city, one of which was at the residence of Andro Camino. Looking at his watch, Placido with a smile observed:

'As our time is limited we had better go!'

Though said as a jest, the emphasis with which it was expressed was full of meaning. They immediately left the house.

According to an ordinance of the city, at the firing of the great gun at Moro Castle at 9 o'clock in the evening, every negro and mulatto was compelled to be within doors, or if caught out fifteen minutes after to be imprisoned in the Calaboose until the sitting of the police court at 10 o'clock next morning, subjected to a fine or whipping according to the decision of the magistrate.

In the enforcement of this ordinance, there were some exceptions made at the discretion of the police who arrested, or persons who tried the case. The wealthy, professional, and literary classes among them, were usually shown favors by the officers of the law, in consequence of their influence over the Captain General.

But subsequently to the demonstrations of the grand negro councils, these ordinances were violated and set at defiance by negroes and mulattoes of all grades and classes, with impunity, passing at all times and places.

Leaving the residence of the newly appointed quarter master general Blacus, father of the Chief, where for a short time business had called them, they took the nearest way to reach the upper part of the Almeda, the great fashionable thoroughfare of the city.

Leisurely promenading among the moving mass, deeply engaged in conversation on the momentous subject of their political and social condition as a race, and position in community as a class, at the instant when Placido named the injustice and despotism of the city ordinances, toward them, the great gun fired its evening alarm.

The grim howl of this municipal watch dog had scarcely ceased growling in the air, when two Irish gens d'arms came hurriedly up to them saying,

'An' who do yez b'long to?' when Blake and Placido looking first at each other, then at the Irishmen, uttered not a word.

Mistaking their silence as an evidence of guilt and fear, 'faith,' continued one of them, 'an' sure yez hain't no pass, an' must go to de calaboose! An' sure nagurs hain't no business out forninst de firin' ov de gun. Come along wid us to de guard house, an' sure yez'll be well taken care of!' each taking hold of one of the party.

As the policemen laid hands upon them, a blow in quick succession from a powerful unknown source, struck down their arms in paralyzed suspension at their sides.

At this timely and unexpected interference, Blake and Placido were not less surprised than the affrighted gens d'armes themselves. On turning to discover the perpetrator, to their surprise, Gofer Gondolier with clenched fists in the attitude of defence, stood gritting his teeth behind them Somewhat recovering, and recognizing the person of their assailant—

'Och, jabers! an' he b'longs to de palace!' cried one.

'He is dat same! an' is'nt it mese'f dat knows 'im well? Troth boys, an' we'll not be afther hurthen ov yez! An' sure yez'll be afther taken a bit uv a joke!' concluded the other, to which Gondolier made no reply. 'Good night gentlemans, good night!' saluted the Irishmen as the party left.

Gondolier indeed was well and popularly known to the police and keepers of the public houses, many of the latter being greatly indebted to him as the chief caterer at the palace, for their knowledge of some of their most choice dishes which filled their daily bills of fare. His position together with this, gave him a license throughout the city which probably no other black enjoyed. He was accustomed to pass at all times and hours of the night, to every part of the city, without hindrance or molestation. His presence was thus most timely, and of the greatest importance to the two black officers.

CHAPTER XXXII.

CONJUGAL.

In the midst of revolutionary movements, there are sometimes the agitation worked out of other problems than that of the political destiny of a people. It was so in the present issue.

The frequent coming together in general council formed attachments doubtless, but little thought of previous to the occasion which induced their meeting. The consummation of conjugal union is the best security for political relations, and he who is incapable of negociating to promote his own personal requirements, might not be trustworthy as the agent of another's interests; and the fitness for individuals for positions of public import, may not be misjudged by their doings in the private affairs of life.

With the fullness of some such convictions, there were many billet doux exchanged, arrangements made for a chit-chat, or tete a tete between parties, on matters entirely separate from those touching the general welfare.

Of these, Gofer Gondolier became enamored of Abyssa Sondan, and General Juan Montego betrothed to Madam Cordora. So sincere were they in these obligations that the time for their fulfilment was set as early as the approaching Sabbath morning.

Among them, a great event was expected to ensue, when every step taken should have been well measured, timely, and in the right direction, tending in its course to the accomplishment of the great and desirable end to be attained.

The political relations of the colony were peculiar, and singularly mischievous and detrimental to the best interests of this class of inhabitants. The four great divisions of society, were white, black, free and slave, and these were again subdivided into many other classes, as rich, poor, and such like. The free and slaves among the blacks did not associate, nor the high and low among the free of the same race. And there was among them even another general division—black and colored—which met with little favor from the intelligent.

The leading characters had long since observed all these social evils, and fully matured the scheme and policy for their remedy. Hence, the better to verify this policy, Montego communicated to Gondolier the design and intention of Madam Cordora and himself consummating at the same time at the same sacred hymenial altar with him and Abyssa, the holy sacrament of the marriage feast.

This as might have been expected, was received with great favor, among the high and low classes, especially the slave portion of the black inhabitants, and their social relation was now regarded as a mutually fixed reality.

After this, many rumors obtained circulation with no little credence, that other hearts than those were mutually throbbing, and other hands than theirs were intended to be joined in a pledge of union forever.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

FALSE ALARM.

On Saturday morning after the encounter of Gondolier with the gens d'arms, a report spread rapidly that an unsuccessful attempt of the negroes at insurrection had been quelled on the evening of the Queen's nativity by the decisive and timely action of the National Guards. One white was said to have been killed, another mortally, a third and fourth seriously wounded.

The gens d'arms who had cowered before the stout arm of Gondolier, determining to be avenged for his temerity and daring, gave credence to the rumor to excite the prejudice of the whites against the blacks.

This day the troops marched to and fro the city, and out of ranks freely mingled among the people, designedly to keep them in awe. On the corner of every street and byway could be seen in crowds, the white inhabitants standing discussing most earnestly the topic of the day. By noon there was much sensation, and against the middle of the afternoon the excitement became so general and intense, that it was with eminent peril that any free black could pass along the public highways.

Although the Mayor had full authority over the matter to prevent a popular outbreak, the Captain General was compelled to interfere by summoning the parties to appear forthwith before his excellency in the fort of Moro Castle. This had a tendency to appease and to some extent allay the excitement to await the result of an investigation.

As the viceroy rode through the streets, the people followed in crowds around him, and only stopped from necessity at the Castle gates, standing on the quay during the investigation.

The two gens d'armes were the first called to answer to their names, and who took their places on the stand with assurance of a verdict against the negroes. Having laid complaint before the chief of police, their affidavits had been filed for future reference, which unexpectedly to them was brought in comparison with the charge now made before the governor.

By this there was too much discrepancy to justify a verdict for the plaintiff, the gens d'armes being unable to identify the criminal, though they insisted that two white men had been attacked, and felled to the ground by a negro desperado.

The case after a strictly summary hearing was finally dismissed by the Captain General, who ordering the discharge of the complainants from office, and the story of the insurrection to be contradicted, as a base fabrication got up at the instance of two profligate gens d'armes.

From circumstances transpiring but a day or two before at the palace, the Captain General had his own opinion of the matter, but unsustained as it was even by their own testimony, he deemed it advisable at such a time to decide as he did.

The difficulty now having been adjusted, and the inhabatants again quieted, the negroes were permitted to pass through the streets without molestation or unusual attraction.

Taking advantage of this brief respite, and determined to make the most of the time, invitations to the friends of the parties were immediately sent to attend the marriage ceremonies of Montego and Madam Cordora; Gondolier and Abyssa Sondan—at the earliest dawn on Sabbath morning at the church of the Ascension, to be celebrated the next evening after, at the house of Carolus Blacus.

Cheerfulness and high hopes once more impelled the progress of the black inhabitants, and in their esteem the name of Count Alcora stood first among the greatest of Cuban executives. Every little negro learned to lisp his name, and the black stevedores at the seaside rung its praise in the packing of his cargoes. Even the old black matron as she sat under the verandah, sung a morning chant to the name of—"The Great Alcora," whilst the old black invalid talking in the sun, had not to cheer his hopes but—"God help de Captin General!"

Congratulating themselves whenever they met through the day on the merciful escape they had, each for that evening retired to his home though well advised; determined to profit by the opportunity offered them in the policy pursued by the highest authority in dismissing the trial for insurrection.

THE NEW JOHN BROWN SONG.

Old John Brown's body lies a mouldering in the grave,
While weep the sons of bondage, whom he ventured all to save;
But tho' he lost his life in struggling for the slave,
His soul is marching on; glory, hallelujah!

John Brown was a hero, undaunted, true, and brave,
And Kansas knew his valor, when he fought her rights to save;
And now, though the grass grows green above his grave,
His soul is marching on; Glory, etc.

He captured Harper's Ferry with his nineteen men so few,
And he frighten'd 'Old Virginny,' till she trembled through and through;
They hung him for a traitor, themselves a traitor crew,
But his soul is marching on; Glory, etc.

John Brown was John the Baptist, of the Christ we are to see—
Christ who of the bondmen shall the Liberator be;
And soon throughout the sunny South the slaves shall all be free,
For his soul is marching on; Glory, etc.

The conflict that he heralded, he looks from heaven to view,
On the army of the Union with its flag red, white and blue;
And Heaven shall ring with anthems o'er the deed they mean to do,
For his soul is marching on; Glory, etc.

Ye soldiers of Freedom, then strike, while strike ye may,
The death blow of oppression, in a better time and way;
For the dawn of old John Brown has brightened into day,
And his soul is marching on; Glory, etc.

LETTER FROM JAMAICA.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Feb. 28th, 1862.

MR. EDITOR:—You and the kind friends of our colored brethren, will, I have no doubt, be glad to hear a word about our kinsmen here according to the flesh. But before I say anything directly about them, I must tell you a little of the very rough voyage I had to this Island. We were 12 days on the Atlantic engulfed often in the great waves of the sea. I thought several times that it would not be my happy lot again to see land, but kind providence spoke a calm, and peace again was restored to many hearts. Friday the 25th of January we came in sight of Cuba. Sunday morning the 2d inst we caught sight of the beautiful Island which was cheering to all on board. At the hour of 6 o'clock, P. M., we made our moorings to the docks of Kingston. I saw here what I never beheld before, colored men exercising govermental authority. This was quite pleasing to myself. These are a few instances; the Mayor of this city is a person of color, the Hon. E. Jordan, C. B. I have had the honor of being introduced to him by a letter from a gentleman of the House of Assembly, who is also a person of color. We have a Mr. F. Webb here in the Post Office filling a very responsible position; some of our readers I have no doubt will know him, as he is from the United States. So much for a truthful and honest government. Great Britain is that government that does not require a man first to prove that his ancestry is of the great stock of the Anglo race before he can go into office, but they are honest and humane enough to judge men from other standpoints, without going into metaphysical examination of his origin.

Kingston is a city of 30,000 inhabitants, and a beautiful locality with a delightful harbour. I have been some twenty-five or thirty miles in the mountains since I landed here. I met the Rev. Loren Thompson, the American Missionary, soon after I arrived here. He gave me a most hearty welcome, and invited me at once to visit his station, near where the Rev. W. P. Newman has settled. On Saturday the 8th inst, the Rev. Mr. T. sent a horse into town for me. I left the city at 9 o'clock, A. M., arrived at Elliot Station at 7 o'clock P. M. found them waiting tea for me. I was most cordially received. Sunday the 9th inst. I preached to Bro. T.'s congregation who paid the most profound attention, many of whom welcomed me as a visitor. I wish here to state for the information of those who have sent these kind ministers to this settlement, that they seem to be progressing.

The land in this region seems to be very rich. Large cocoanut walks may be seen in all directions, contributing much to the beauty of the mountains. Plaintain and yam-vines, cocoa and various productions peculiar to this climate, in many parts coffee, may be seen growing wild. The mountain districts are very pleasant at this season of the year. I have been into many of the native houses, they are very singularly built of what is called bamboo, yet many of them are considered comfortable. The mode of cultivating the soil here is entirely different from ours. I am sure if the natives were to make use of our ploughs they would certainly get along much better in turning up the soil, and the land would yield doubly as much. The Indigo tree grows wild here also, but very little attention is paid to it. Chocolate may be cultivated to any extent. As to sugar-cane it seems to flourish with a very little trouble. I have been on several small plantations or estates as they call them here. The cotton plant grows here without any attention paid to it whatever. I shall enclose a sample of it that you may judge of its quality. I am told that persons care but little about it here; but I am led to believe from the small amount that I have seen that if persons were only to plant it, they could make the cultivation of it profitable.

The class of people that are wanted, are such as know how to till the soil, and those who know how to manage. The people here are anxious to have our colored American brethren to come in any number, they would be assured as they have already said, of a most hearty welcome. It is the opinion of the American Missionaries that our people could not fail to do well. Provisions are high, such as: pork, beef, flour, butter, &c. If a company of our friends in America would buy a vessel or two, and bring to this Island such provisions as are named above, they could make a profitable exchange for coffee, sugar, cocoa, ginger, arrowroot and much other marketable stuff that would pay a large per centage. Why not some of our monied men take hold of this work?

Lumber would also be a most excellent trade to go into. It is worth from $35 to $40 a thousand here. Coffee can be bought here in the mountains for $9 per hundred. Sugar from three to four cents per pound, and often for less, and other products in proportion.

You, Mr. Editor, can do much to forward such a movement, by the use of your pen. You will see a notice of a meeting held in the mountains, on the subject of emigration of the colored people from America to this Island. This meeting has been published in the "Guardian," of this City. Another meeting will be held in the Court House of this city, the Hon. E. Jordan, the Mayor, is to take the chair on that occasion. The Mayor himself is quite favorable to the scheme of emigration. I hope some plan may be adopted immediately. I would advise the holding of a meeting in your popular city on the subject, that the people may become alive to the matter. You will have further particulars from the Rev. W. P. Newman who has been already appointed as the agent here to lecture and hold public meetings on this subject. I am sure this will meet your approval as well as many others. I was present at the meeting when Bro. N. was appointed, it had my hearty support. Let me hear from you at the earliest opportunity.

Sir, I am yours in the great battle of human freedom.

WM. TROY.

LETTER FROM REV. W. P. NEWMAN.

ANNOTTO BAY, Jamaica, West Indies, March 2d, 1862.

EDITOR ANGLO-AFRICAN:—SIR:—Permit me, through your good paper, to assure Mr. James Redpath that it gave me great pleasure to learn of his conversion to Jesus Christ and his pure doctrines—doctrines opposed to falsehood, to theft, and to slander, in which he took delight and practiced. Christianity demands reparation to be made by him, if to nobody else, at least to me. He has published to the world, that I sought his agency of emigration to Hayti, and opposed the movement because I did not get it. Rev. Nathan Brown, editor of "American Baptist," and Cor. Secretary of the Baptist Free Mission Society, whose missionary I was in Hayti, has my letter written before Mr. Redpath went to Hayti for his agency—which tells him (Mr. B.) of the Haytian Government, offering me the agency of emigration, and that it was not my intention to accept of such an agency. Let Mr. Brown speak, &c. Mr. Redpath either stole my private letters or received them knowing that they were stolen, and sent some of them privately to Hayti to public functionaries, in order to get me shot by the bigots, and others of them he published in the Palm and Pine, with a view to injure my character. And he has slandered me publicly and privately by his writings and publications, and hired certain poor negro tools, who would do any dirty work for a dollar, to do the same, and has constantly refused to reply in his paper. But since his confession of conversion he has published a stolen letter of mine to Deacon Hamilton, and a lying slander in John Hepburn's letter. The American Baptist Free Mission Society know I did not spend a penny unfairly to get their property in Hayti. They know that I never bribed anybody. Mr. Redpath reminded me in Hayti, that John Hepburn was a notorious villian and to be careful in my affairs with him. Hepburn was the first man who cried out against the assault of the Roman Catholic mob upon him. He told me that he spoke to the Minister of Justice about it! I did not designedly go into the procession—I tried to avoid it. Hepburn knew it, so did Redpath. The "Palm and Pine" informs the world that I am "dead"—now I have to say that the civilized world will and ought to regard James Redpath as a barbarous wretch, if he don't let the ashes of the dead rest in the grave—even though they committed suicide.

I state again and rest my reputation upon the statement, that John Hepburn has laid in jail in Hayti again and again for his deeds of villainy, unless everybody slanders him there. He is so notorious for his villainy that no decent man will keep his company. But the testimonials he gets from an official does not disprove what I now say—let the reader interested examine it. Mr. Redpath knows that in the United States and Canada, any enterprise to succeed among the colored people, must be baptized in the name of christianity. There is converting grace in the (20,000) twenty thousand dollars, he told me were put at his disposal by gentlemen of Boston to carry on the work of establishing colonies in Hayti. I will make affidavit at any time of that statement, and that he also told me he had designs on Cuba and wished me to join him. He wanted to get the Island of Tortuga for that purpose. He had a work in French on that Island, translated into English by Mr. W. L. Judd, and paid him $20 for it. Mr. Redpath handed me the work one day and said, "Here is the work Judd translated, I paid him twenty dollars to do it, for your especial benefit." Now the truth of the whole matter is simply this: Mr. Redpath wanted me to join him in this work, and he told me the Haytian Government wished me to also, and they were and are angry because I would not do it.

There is much interest felt here on the subject of emigration from N. America. The newspapers are discussing the matter warmly. A large meeting is to be held tonight at Eliot on the subject, and another one in Kingston on Thursday next in the Court House. Sir Edward Jordan consents to preside, and the Rev. W. Troy is moving in the matter. I am invited to attend and address them, but I don't expect to be there. I see by the papers of last week that at some of the public meetings, strong resolutions in favor of the emigration of our people have been passed, and one inviting me to act as agent of emigration. I will here state that I do not intend to take any position in that matter, where it will interfere with my ministerial duty. I don't know what the interest of my people demands just now. If Mr. Lincoln and his government have come to their senses and intend to do justice to our people, let them remain where they are, if not, let them come here. I am ready to do my duty. But as God is my judge I want no agency in this matter. I have spent hundreds of dollars in this matter of emigration, because I thought the interest of my people demanded it. But what may be true of our people in the United States is not true of them in Canada. Let the Canadians come to Jamaica, I shall do what I can for them. But let no more of them go to Hayti. I send here with a true copy of a letter I received from Hayti. It tells its own story:—

SAINT MARK, Hayti, Dec. 25, 1861.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER:—About one hundred are, and two thousand shortly will be desirous of returning to the States and Canada, except a more favorable alternative be effected. I have suggested the alternative as an emigration to Jamaica. The suggestion has been enthusiastically received, and I am requested to pioneer the movement. There is a general dissatisfaction among the emigrants here. The particulars will be made public in due time, together with the causes, except satisfactory compromise prevent. Will you answer or have answered the following questions, based upon the best of authority. 1st. Has Jamaica issued a call for emigrants, if so, on what conditions? 2d. Can there be a condition entered into between the authorities of Jamaica and Haytian emigrants, to migrate, and settle a certain number of them in rural districts of your Island? 3d. Will, or could Jamaica, if necessity required it, discharge the indebtedness of from one hundred to two thousand people at $18 (Spanish) per head to the Haytian Government before the full year is out, together with the money for emigrating thither? 4th. Is religious liberty tolerated and protected by the law, and what liberalities now exist on naturalization? 5th. Will the government donate lands, if so, how many, and will they supply emigrants for eight days, at least? 6th. What season of the year is it proper to bring the matter before, and how long before it could be done? 7th. Will the government provide houses for emigrants, and put them on their places, and give them five or six years to pay it in? 8th. What other guarantee will the government hold out favorable to a large emigration from this Island, the United States, and Canada? The above information, and any other you think proper to give, please send as soon as possible, and if favorable you will find a practical response of a multitude.

GEORGE C. ANDERSON.

P. S. I have been advised to send this letter vailed under the address of S. R. Ward, Esq., as a precautionary measure to prevent miscarriage.

G. C.

Well done Hayti! Three cheers for Redpath! I write in haste to send by the next mail for New York. Yours, &c.

W. P. NEWMAN.

SELF-HELP OF THE CONTRABANDS.

Needless anxiety is the commonest [illegible] of humanity, but one of the most unnecessary manifestations of it is the fear that the black freedmen of the South will not be able to take care of themselves. All that is requisite is to give them the chance. Leave them to themselves, with land enough to operate upon, and they will not starve. This is not the idea, however. We hear people all the time speaking of them as if they were helpless little children, utterly inefficient and incapable, without a thought or a care about providing for their natural wants. Fancy and artificial wants, it is true, they will not provide at present, for they do not feel them, but they can be happy without them. A common mistake of the benevolent is to insist that all others must enjoy life in their way or not at all. What makes themselves happy in a highly artificial state of civilization, seems to them equally indispensable for the most stolid barbarian. All this may be desirable with tastes for it, but negroes are constituted to enjoy themselves highly without much science, refinement, or fine arts. God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb, and has made them, naturally cheerful and good-humored, so as, more than any other race in the world, to fulfil the Christian duty, Having food and raiment, therewith to be content. With freedom they will gradually learn to want more and obtain more.

But can they procure food and raiment now for themselves? They can if they are only allowed to. A residence of years among them both on the plantations and in cities, leaves us no doubt on the subject. They can continue to do the work for themselves which they have done for their masters, at least a small part of it, if not the whole. They have raised the food, they used to spin and weave the clothing for whites and blacks; will they endure hunger and nakedness when they have only a third of the former stomachs and backs to provide for, and will not need a hundredth part of the luxuries they provided for the whites? They who are afraid that these slaves, accustomed to the care of masters, must be destitute of skill and management, of faculty and resources of every kind to do anything for themselves, are not they who have lived among them. It seems to be forgotten that, if their masters have taken care of them, they too have taken care of their masters. Yes, have thought for them, as well as toiled. They have been mechanics, artisans, sometimes even engineers, pilots and navigators. We have been surprised and mortified, sometimes, at their superiority to ourselves in fertility of invention to meet difficulties continually occurring in journeying through a sparsely settled country. Bad [illegible] have been, and perhaps [illegible] for their ingenuity and efficiency. Valuable crops are raised by black drivers, and all the ever-varying and often trying emergencies of plantation [illegible] by them with [illegible] aids. If they can do all this with no white face present for miles and for years, and do it for others, why not for themselves?

But probably the fear is not that black hands cannot just as well as white, drop seed into the ground and gather nature's bountiful product deftly enough to maintain themselves and families. The solicitude that prevails looks farther than this. It is not a solicitude for the blacks of the South so much as for the whites of the North. We are so distressed for these poor creatures, we have such painful apprehensions that they will not be able to take care of themselves, thinking that perhaps the great plantations will be broken up into small farms, and the freed men will not care much for the clamor of the commercial world for cotton as abundant as possible. They may be satisfied to study comfort, and let the world [illegible]. This troubles us [illegible] old lady we knew of at the South. Ordinary rain did not interrupt the field labors of her slaves, but a tempest always made her "sorry for the poor negroes, because they would not be able to do their daily work." She considered it their misfortune, unhappy creatures! So many of us, besides Carlyle, think it shameful that Quashy should sit in his field "up to the eyes in pumpkin," and neglect any part of his opportunity to enrich distant white men. Quashy has everything he wants without excessive toil, but how presumptuous in him to forget that the colored races were created for the benefit of the fairer. If this is our idea, when we fear those poor creatures will miss the beneficent superintendence of their late owners, it would be as well to get rid of it. Very likely commerce and manufactures will suffer for a while, but afterwards to be abundantly compensated; for even barbarians and savages soon learn to covet every luxury they see and see other men prize. But what if they should fail to lose the rare treasure of content? Where is our authority to question their Maker's endowment of them with simple tastes, and require their sacrifice for the pleasure of strangers they have never seen?

This is supposing they might be left to themselves. Give them an old field or two, where they have been accustomed to live, and they will settle down and make themselves comfortable enough before long. But this probably will not be. They will not be left to themselves. They belong to the human community and cannot permanently live to themselves. To prepare them for the changes that will make them willingly most useful to other men, and even for their own sake, independently of other men, we would interfere with them in offering the Gospel and education. This offer is quite compatible with the conviction that as regards material comfort, they are competent effectively to take care of themselves. For that there is little need of elaborate legislation and restricting bayonets hampering and hemming in every movement. Just forget their complexion and let them be as free as other men.—Boston Christian Register.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, MARCH 29, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

COLORED INVENTORS, ARTISTS, MECHANICS, &c.

Are earnestly requested to lose no time in getting their articles ready for the NATIONAL EXHIBITION OF ANGLO-AFRICAN INDUSTRY AND ART, which will positively be held in this city or Brooklyn in the early part of the ensuing fall. All communications in relation to said Exhibition may be addressed for the present to this Office.

When Peace Comes!

The Government and people of the United States have shown themselves equal to the exigencies of a sudden and stupendous war; how will they bear themselves under the advent of a gloriously conquered peace? Will the storm now passing over leave the atmosphere clear and bracing, or will cloud and mirk and malaria still hang like a doom upon us!

This must depend entirely upon the fate of slavery. If slavery be destroyed, so that peace and emancipation shall join hands, then we will have a "glorious summer" of healthy, hopeful peace; but if slavery remain recognised and assured in a single State, then "the whole torment of the last half century will come back to be endured anew."

Under these circumstances it is worth while to enquire into the probabilities of emancipation, by examining in detail the impediments which stand in the way, and the agencies which favor an event so necessary to the salvation of the whole country.

First and strongest among the impediments, is the inherent vigor and tenacity of the slaveocracy. Defeat in the field of battle will only transfer the contest to a field in which they are infinitely able to battle against freedom, because it is the field in which against any and all odds they have hitherto triumphed. Even to-day, two second rate slave-o-crats in the Senate and three or four in the House, hold at bay the confiscation act and the bill for the emancipation, with compensation, of the slaves in the District of Columbia. And where five or six second rate men hold three hundred, twenty-five or thirty able men could conquer!

It is a wide mistake to suppose that the slave representatives will come back into Congress a snubbed and crest-fallen brood, or with a diminished grasp on public affairs. Such a supposition belies not only their nature, but the teachings of history. Their impudent effrontery, their lying and craft are too deeply interwoven in their very being to be eradicated by a few wholesome buffetings. And history tells us that their proto-types, the cavaliers, thoroughly beaten in the field and driven from power by Cromwell, returned to power to crush puritanism with an iron heel heated and jagged by the very punishment themselves had suffered.

In the cities and towns which the federal troops have overrun, they find anything but sorrow for the sin of rebellion, but an abundance of clamor about the rights of the South, to say nothing of the bitter hostility of the women.

A second, and equally strong impediment in the way of emancipation, is, the prejudice of the North. The neglect of the abolitionists to "remember the Greeks at their doors," to elevate and affranchise the free blacks in the free States, is now bearing its bitter fruit. That was a practical measure which they could have carried out with half an effort. Had they done so, there would to-day be little if any prejudice against color, and the question would not be raised, "what shall we do with the slaves?" The troops from the free States, made up of all complexions, would be marching down South to affranchise as well as liberate our oppressed black fellow citizens.

We may as well look this prejudice in the face as a disturbing element in the way of emancipation. Its manifest expression is, that setting black men free to be the equals of white men in the slave States is something more dreadful than rebellion or secession, or even a dismembered union. The strength of this element, is, that there is no voice against it. A man of earnestness has not yet risen and pronounced in favor of freedom and affranchisement for the slave. How far public sentiment is behind just views in this matter may be gathered from the following, which we copy from the "Tribune" of March 11:

"No one who has not thoroughly and earnestly considered President Lincoln's late Extra Message will be likely to realise how admirable and comprehensive are his suggestions, and how surely their adoption will conduce to National integrity and internal peace. Look, for a moment, at the question of negro expatriation, which is one of the chief difficulties of our position. There are many worthy and good men, with ten times more of the other sort, who hold that, whenever slavery is abolished, the negroes should be sent out of the country. We have much charity for this opinion, for we once held it; but we are now convinced that it is an error."

But Mr. Greeley's convictions in the right direction do not seem to be deeper nor more lasting than those of our esteemed brother of the "Pine and Palm," for just ten days after, to wit, on the 2d of March, the Editor of the "Tribune" says:

"Mr. Doolittle thinks the commingling of whites and blacks in the same community and household, unnatural and pernicious. There we agree with him."

Take the poor slave from his friends, or rather from the false-hearted, prejudice-cankered, semi-barbarous self-styled friends of freedom, of whom one honest (?) slaveholder is worth a whole pack.

The other form in which this prejudice is pronounced, is, in the fear expressed that the retaining of colored free laborers in the South will interfere with the domain of white laborers! The N. Y. "Herald, the "Tribune," the "Leader," James Gordon Bennett, Horace Greeley, John Clancey, and Ralph Waldo Emerson are all upholders of this view. Poor chicken-hearted, semi-barbarous Caucasians, when will you learn that "the earth was made for MAN!" You have arts and arms, and culture, and an overwhelming majority in numbers, and, as you say, an overwhelming superiority in intellect—must you die and give no sign that you have been able to surmount the prejudice of race, or your dread of the negro!

Another impediment in the way of emancipation is political. President seekers will secretly oppose the movement in the fear of offending the border States and the South. They will grow wiser as they grow older.

Having stated what appear to be the principal difficulties in the way of emancipation, we will endeavor, next week, to glance at the agencies which favor emancipation—we mean immediate emancipation, for the ball once set rolling we do not think the American people will be any slower than their British cousins in hastening from gradual to immediate emancipation.

IS JAMES REDPATH AN ANGLO-SAXON OR AN ANGLO-AFRICAN?

NORRISTOWN, Pa. March 12, '62.

MR. EDITOR: We have had considerable discussion going on among us recently in relation to which of the races Mr. Redpath belongs. Some claim that he is a colored man, because in referring to the colored people in his "Pine and Palm," he sometimes calls them "our people." Those of a different opinion give various reasons to sustain their belief. Now, as I suppose you are personally acquainted with him, will you set us right in the matter?

W. C.

REPLY.—Mr. Redpath is an Anglo-Saxon, with, at present, Anglo-African proclivities. He does not like, however, the term "Anglo-African;" pronounces it "absurd." Of his nativity we know nothing, save that he is from England, having left that country several years ago for its good, coming to America, preferring it probably to Van Dieman's Land or Botany Bay. Upon arriving here, he "traveled on foot through Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama and Missouri," no doubt in search of a situation as overseer. He tells us that he has "held conversation with the slaves in every State from Washington to New Orleans," and was "secreted, lodged and fed by them in their huts and their master's outhouses, times unnumbered," which kindness on the part of the slaves was probably suggested by the unhealthy condition of his finances. It was from him, we have reasons for believing, that they formed the idea of a "dead, mean po' white man." He has spent a portion of his serviceable life in Kansas, performing there many daring exploits, one of which was dashing, at midnight, at the head of five hundred men, through a border ruffian town of a few score of inhabitants without losing a single man. Hayti also has been illuminated by his presence, and from which country he wrote for the N. Y. "Tribune" a series of letters vilifying the inhabitants, but subsequently concocted the grand and lucrative scheme in which he is now engaged for their elevation, as well as that of the colored people of this country. This disinterested benevolence on his part would probably be reciprocated by hundreds of his victims in that country had they an opportunity, many of whom having sworn to "elevate" him from the nearest tree should he again be found there. The most remarkable event in his later life is his conversion to the Christian religion, which event was trumpeted to the world, through the "Pine and Palm," in an article of a column in length; but unfortunately for him there appeared in the very next column the shameful falsehood that he was not being paid for shipping our people off to Hayti, the publication of which he attempted to justify by stating that it was in type before he "got religion."

We have neither time or room to say further in regard to our modern "Moses," but will leave him until a more convenient season.

THE NEGROES IN TENNESSEE.

Correspondence of the Cincinnati Gazette.

ON THE CUMBERLAND, March 10, 1862.

Gen. Halleck's order to exclude fugitive slaves from our lines, as the reader is doubtless aware, has been lately reiterated. To the credit of our soldiers recently at Fort Donelson, however, be it said that no attention seemed to be paid to the order. They had a little higher law among themselves, and acted upon it. Nine contrabands in one drove came in while I was there; and scarcely a day passed without the arrival of one or more, who experienced no difficulty in getting through the lines. I hope that the same disregard of it prevails in other divisions, as well as in Gen. Buell's Department, for, if I am not mistaken, it is sought to be practically enforced, though not publicly announced, in his also. The edict of no General binds any man to recognize such a rule, and the soldier's sense of justice is too strong to allow him to be made the instrument of its execution.

A large number of these fugitives are deterred from coming in by a knowledge of the existence of this order. Thus not only is a great deal of valuable information concerning the enemy excluded (for they have constituted our chief and most trustworthy source of information), but those slaves desiring to avail themselves of the right to which they are entitled by forfeiture under all military laws, as well as the laws of Congress, are deprived of the opportunity of doing so. The order is therefore as inhuman as it is impolitic; for, with the exception of Port Royal, the number of slaves escaping into our lines when no such order existed, has never been so great as to render them burdensome, and there has at all times been ample employment for as many as would be likely under the most favorable circumstances to come. Furthermore, the slaves are so well posted that only those of rebels as a general thing attempt to escape. The pretext that they may act as spies is a miserable dodge; for such is rarely if ever the case, and, if it were, they could easily be sent to points where no information they could obtain would be of value.

It is proper to add that no restitution of a fugitive from beyond our lines, so far as I know, is made when once within them, either to a Union man or Secessionist, the theory being that he comes from a locality in insurrection, and the law not being operative outside of the ground we cover. If, however, his master is a Union man and lives within the lines, he can come and take him, but without assistance from the military authorities.

While I was at the Fort, the neighbor of a sick rebel living about 40 miles off came to reclaim a slave of the latter, as well as a horse which the contraband, being lame, had appropriated for the purpose of accelerating his speed, alleging in excuse that he thought he had worked long enough for his master to "pay for de hoss." Collaring "Bill," as he called him, and informing him that he was going to take either him or his scalp, the Doctor (for he was a physician) led him to Gen. Grant's quarters, "Bill" meanwhile lustily protesting that he could not be taken back, "for his mass'r was a rebel, and de Doctor knew it and wouldn't deny it; besides, de law didn't reach dar." "Bill" understood himself. The Doctor didn't deny the fact, and couldn't have taken him without his voluntary consent if he had. Gen. Grant said he could do nothing for him, either as to the chattel or horse. So the chopfallen Doctor relaxed his grasp, remarking to the bystanders that "Bill" "would bear watching, for he was the most rascally nigger he ever knew"—an imputation upon his personal honor which "Bill" saw fit to treat with lofty disdain; and, as he limped triumphantly out, remarked to some of the spectators, "he didn't make nuffin out of me, did he? I knows what I'm about."

The last I saw of "Bill" he was exultingly relating his success and the Doctor's discomfiture to an intensely interested circle of his fellow contrabands.

As I was strolling around the outside works the evening before I left, I met a negro riding home a mule which he said had strayed off from his master's house, two or three miles distant. Accosting me in a most deferential manner, the following conversation, as near as I can recollect, ensued:

"Mas'r, whar do you live?"

"Cincinnati."

"Can't you get me a passport to go dar?"

"A passport—you mean a pass, don't you?"

"Yes, de paper what you hab to show de guard."

"Why, what do you want with a pass?"

"I wants to leab, and I'll work for any gemman all my life for nuffin what 'll git me away."

"Well, why don't you run away? You're free as soon as you come within our lines, and you're within them now."

"Yes; but mas'r lib inside de lines, too, and he can come and take me!"

"But isn't he a rebel?"

"Yes, he big a rebel as dey is in de State, for I hear him say so many a time; but den he pretend to de officers here to be a Union man, and dey tink he is."

The shrewd contraband understood his case thoroughly. His master lived within our lines, and claiming to be a Union man, and no tangible proof existing against him, our aspirant for freedom knew that he would be immediately retaken. So he was watching his chance to get off on a boat before he would be missed; and in hopes of meeting some stranger who could obtain the desired pass for him, and take him along as a servant, I have no doubt he was allowing that mule to escape every day so as to furnish himself the opportunity of prospecting his own liberty, unsuspected, while hunting the mule.

It being out of my power to obtain for him what he desired, I gave him the best advice I could as to the most feasible mode of accomplishing his purpose, which he received very thankfully, and left saying he intended to make the trial.

A RIVAL OF TOUISSAINT L'OUVERTURE.

THE ADVENTURES OF "POTOMAC JIM."

There are several remarkable points in the subjoined statement, which we copy from the N. Y. Daily Times. That the writer should find no better word than "darkie," for one who in his imagination has claimed a place along side of the immortal TOUISSAINT L'OUVERTURE, is a proof that he is quite as ignorant a beast as the British officers who thus termed that Touissaint whom they could not approach in generalship, heroism or courage.

That a black freedman should become the hero of the Potomac—that he should be the trusted scout of General Sickles—that his companion's death should be avenged by a United States officer—that four white men (thus reversing a sacred clause in the constitution) should thus be killed for one black—are hopeful signs of that acknowledgement of manhood, that fraternizing of good and loyal men, regardless of color, which portends the grand revolution going on down South, which must culminate in emancipation.

"I spent three weeks at Liverpool Point, the outpost of Hooker's Division, almost directly opposite Aquia Creek, waiting patiently for the advance of our left wing to follow up the army, becoming, if not a participator against the dying struggles of rebeldom, at least a chronicler of the triumphs in the march of the Union army.

During this time I was the guest of Col. Graham, of Mathias Point memory, who had brought over from that place (last November) some thirty valuable chattels. A part of the camp was assigned to them. They built log huts, and obtained from the soldiers many comforts, making their quarters equal to any in the camp. They had friends and relatives. Negroes feel as much sympathy for their friends and kin as the whites, and from November to the present time many a man in Virginia has lost a very likely nigger, for the camp contains now upwards of a hundred fat and healthy darkies, in addition to its original number from Mathias Point.

One of the number deserves more honor than that accorded to Touissaint L'Ouverture, in the brilliant lecture delivered by Wendell Phillips. He is unquestionably the hero of the Potomac, and deserves to be placed by the side of his most renowned black brethren.

The name of this negro is James Lawson, born near Hempstead, Virginia, and belonged to a Mr. Taylor. He made his escape last December. On hearing his praises spoken by the Captains of the gunboats on the Potomac, I was rather indisposed to admit the possession of all the qualities they gave him credit for, and thought possibly his exploits had been exaggerated. His heroic courage, truthfulness and exalted Christian character seemed too romantic for their realization; however, my doubts on that score were dispelled, and I am a witness of his last crowning act.

Jim, after making his escape from Virginia shipped on board of the Freeborn, flag-gunboat, Lieut. Magaw, commanding. He furnished Capt. Magaw with much valuable intelligence concerning the rebel movements, and from his quiet every-day behavior won the esteem of the commanding officer.

Capt. Magaw, shortly after Jim's arrival on board the Freeborn, sent him upon a scouting tour through the rebel fortifications, more to test his reliability than anything else; and the mission, though fraught with great danger, was executed by Jim in the most faithful manner. Again Jim was sent into Virginia, landing at the White House, below Mount Vernon, and going into the interior for several miles, encountering the fire of picket guards and posted sentries returned in safety to the shore, and was brought off in the Captain's gig, under the fire of the rebel musketry.

Jim had a wife and four children at that time still in Virginia. They belonged to the same man as Jim did; he was anxious to get them; yet it seemed impossible. One day in January, Jim came to the Captain's room and asked to be landed that evening on the Virginia side, as he wished to bring off his family. "Why, Jim," said Captain Magaw, "how will you be able to pass the pickets?"

"I want to try, Captain; I think I can get 'em over safely," meekly replied Jim.

"Well, you have my permission;" and Capt. Magaw ordered one of the gunboats to land Jim that night on whatever part the shore Jim designated, and return for him the following evening.

True to his appointment, Jim was at the spot with his wife and family, and were taken on board the gunboat and brought over to Liverpool Point, where Col Graham had given them a log house to live in, just back of his own quarters. Jim ran the gauntlet of the sentries unharmed, never taken to the roads, but keeping in the woods—every foot-path of which, and almost every tree, he knew from his boyhood up.

Several weeks afterward another reconnoissance was planned, and Jim sent on it. He returned in safety, and was highly complimented by Generals Hooker, Sickles, and the entire flotilla.

On Thursday, week ago, it became necessary to obtain correct information of the enemy's movements. Since then, batteries at Shipping and Cockpit Points had been evacuated, and their troops moved to Fredericksburgh. Jim was the man picked out for the occassion, by Gen Sickles and Capt. Magaw. The General came down to Col. Graham's quarters, about 8 o'clock in the evening, and sent for Jim. There were present the General, Col. Graham, and myself. Jim came into the Colonel's.

"Jim," said the General, "I want you to go over to Virginia, to-night, and find out what force they have at Aquia Creek and Fredericksburgh. If you want any men to accompany you, pick them out."

"I know two men that would like to go," Jim answered.

"Well, get them, and be back as soon as possible."

Away went Jim over to the contraband camp, and returning almost immediately, brought into our presence two very intelligent looking darkies.

"Are you all ready?" inquired the General.

"All ready, Sir," the trio responded.

"Well, here, Jim, you take my pistol," said Gen. Sickles, unbuckling his belt, "and if you are successful, I will give you $100."

Jim hoped he would be, and bidding us good-bye, started off for the gunboat Satellita, Capt. Foster, who landed them a short distance below the Potomac Creek Batteries. They were to return early in the morning, but were unable, from the great distance they went in the interior. Long before daylight on Sunday morning the gunboat was lying off the appointed place. As the day dawned, Capt. Foster discovered a mounted picket guard near the beach, and almost at the same instant saw Jim to the left of them, in the woods, sighting his gun at the rebel cavalry. He ordered the "gig" to be manned and rowed to the shore. The rebels moved along slowly, thinking to intercept the boat, when Foster gave them a shell, which scattered them. Jim, with only one of his original companions, and two fresh contrabands, came on board. Jim had lost the other. He had been challenged by a picket when some distance in advance of Jim, and the negro, instead of answering the summons, fired the contents of Sickles' revolver at the picket. It was an unfortunate occurrence, for at the time the entire picket guard rushed out of a small house near the spot, and fired the contents of their muskets at Jim's companion, killing him instantly. Jim and the other three hid themselves in a hollow, near a fence, and after the pickets gave up pursuit, creeped through the woods to the shore. From the close proximity of the rebel pickets, Jim could not display a light, which was the signal for Foster to send a boat.

Capt. Foster, after hearing Jim's story of the shooting of his companion, determined to avenge his death; so, steaming his vessel close in to the shore, he sighted his guns for a barn, where the rebel cavalry were hiding behind. He fired two shell—one went through the barn, killing four of the rebels and seven of their horses. Capt. Foster, seeing the effect of his shots, said to Jim, who stood by: "Well, Jim, I've avenged the death of poor Cornelius," (the name of Jim's lost companion.)

Gen. Hooker has transmitted to the War Department an account of Jim's reconnoissance to Fredericksburgh, and unites with the army and navy stationed on the left wing of the Potomac, in the hope that the Government will present Jim with a fitting recompense for his gallant services.

THE AFRICAN CIVILIZATION SOCIETY.

MR. EDITOR: An agreeable and highly gratifying assemblage of the members and friends of the African Civilization Society was held in the 7th avenue Presbyterian Church (Rev. H. M. Wilson's) on Monday evening, the 24th inst.

On motion, the Rev. H. M. Wilson was called to the Chair and Rev. John Cary appointed Secretary.

The meeting was eloquently and ably addressed by the Rev. H. M. Wilson, T. G. Campbell, B. W. Wilkins, Jer. W. Bowers, Esqrs., and Rev. John G. Urling.

The African Civilization Society should undoubtedly meet the entire approbation and support of the people of color in every part of the world; and, to set aside other objects which it aims to accomplish, I will only call the attention of your numerous readers to the national feature in the constitution of the society. This, if no other, ought to remove, expel, and eradicate every germ of prejudice in the minds of those who are opposed to the designation of "African Civilization." 'Tis, in my view, a mighty engine to combine, consolidate and centralize the efforts of the friends of African regeneration and elevation.

I will only add that the meeting was a decided success, and that it would be well for all who feel interested in our people's moral, religious, social and political advancement and elevation to attend the society's next public meeting, and hear and judge for themselves whether or not the society is not the desideratum imperatively needed in the present crisis of our people's destiny.

VIATOR.

FAILURE OF A RUSE.

A few weeks ago there appeared in the "Sunday Mercury" a long article with flaming headlines, announcing that much excitement existed in this city among the colored people, owing to a line of steamers being started for Hayti. It stated that twenty-five thousand persons had expressed their determination to emigrate in consequence of the new arrangement. This statement, in substance, was published a few days after in the "Pine and Palm," when it immediately occured to the intelligent that it was a ruse of the Haytian Bureau to get up a stampede among our people. Well the day for the departure of the steamer arrived, and instead of there being a considerable portion of the twenty-five thousand to depart with her, not twenty could be counted. The article in the Brooklyn "Star" of the 22d, makes the failure appear still more ridiculous. It reads as follows:

"Emigration to Hayti does not appear to be in a flourishing condition. It was expected that 200 negro colonists would take passage in the British steamship Plantagenet, which sailed for Port au Prince Thursday, but only two negroes were on board, and they were old residents of Hayti."

Finding that a fizzle was inevitable, the General Agent discovered that his announcement to emigrants of the steam arrangement was premature.

As the few on hand are likely to manifest a disposition to turn their faces homeward, we should not be surprised to learn that fresh pecuniary inducements had been held out to them to continue on their journey.

It is unnecessary to add that, the sterreotyped article which usually appears in the "N. Y. Tribune" on the sailing of each handful of emigrants, did not appear on this occasion.

WM. BURNETT'S FUNERAL SERMON.

Zion Church was again crowded last Sabbath, to hear the funeral discourse of our late friend and fellow citizen, Wm. Burnett. Mr. Charles W. Robinson, local preacher in the church, and a very intimate friend of Mr. Burnett, was selected by him to preach the discourse, and the text was faithfully executed. The gentleman took for his text words uttered by Burnett himself, a few days before his departure, and which may be found in 2d Timothy, 4th chapter, 1st and 2d verses. These words the speaker made very good use of, but his sermon was more of a genuine funeral one than we usually hear. He talked about the deceased from the beginning to the end of his discourse, giving him the most exalted christian character.

The Rev. Thomas Johnson also bore testimony to the christian virtues of deceased. At the conclusion of the services the "Good Samaritans" who were out in immense numbers, sang their funeral ode, after which the congregation was dismissed. The "Sons of Wesley" society and the "Benevolent Daughters of Conference" were also out in large numbers. While these exercises were proceeding, another of the trustees died. This was Mr. Smart Drayton, an account of whose demise will be found in another column.

AN INCIDENT.—When the United States vessels were on their way to attack Fernandina, they picked up a contraband who had ventured to sea in a small boat to notify them that the rebels were deserting the place. While questioning the black, some of the officers of the Alabama remarked that he should have brought them newspapers to let them know what was going on. "I thought of dat," replied the contraband, "and fotched a Charleston paper wid me." With this he put his hand in his bosom and brought forth a paper, and with the air of a man who was rendering an important service handed it to the circle of inquirers. They grasped it eagerly, but one glance induced a general burst of laughter, to the profound astonishment of the black, who it seems could not read, and imagining that one paper was as good as another, had brought one dated 1822. This South Carolina relic was forwarded to Thomas B. Stillman, Esq., of this city as one of the curiosities of the war. It is a little odd that this paper, which has floated so long down the stream of time, contains an article in favor of negro emancipation.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

BARBARISM.

A slave lately came into the camp of the Iowa troops at Florence, Mo., mounted upon a high spirited horse, on which he had escaped from his master who lives near St. Louis. Around his neck was a band of iron half an inch thick and nearly one and a half inches wide, not locked, but securely riveted. Three iron prongs, of lightning-rod size, were welded to this band, at equal distances apart, and arose above his head about nine inches, with an outward inclination. The iron had lacerated his neck, and the wounds had partially healed under the protection he had given to them by holding up the band with his hands during the preceding day that he was concealed in a corn-field, but while riding the horse he could not hold it up, and it had opened the wound from which there was a bloody, mattery ooze trickling down upon his broad shoulders. To the soldiers who surrounded him, with pity and astonishment, the negro plead earnestly for the removal of the collar, which, after a labor of three hours, was filed off. It appears that the negro carried this iron-band upon his neck about three months as a punishment for assisting his wife to escape to Illinois.

BULLY FOR LIBERIA.—We take the following from the Brooklyn Star:

We find in late English papers another fact showing the unfitness of the negro to receive and maintain the arts of civilization. The International Exhibition, in London, is beginning to receive the wares of exhibitors, and the first that came to hand were from the government and people of Liberia. Perhaps Mr. Yancey will protest against the reception of the Liberian products before those of the "Sunny South," as an insult to South Carolina?

An effort was made a few days ago in the city council of Alexandria, Va., to pass an ordinance repealing the law which prohibits colored persons from being seen on the public streets after 11 o'clock, p. m., unless they have a written permit, and directs their arrest and detention as disorderly characters, unless they can give a satisfactory account of their business on the streets at a late hour, (being the ordinance recommended by the Mayor, at the suggestion of the Police Commissioners.) After a lengthy debate it was laid on the table by a vote of 9 to 2.

As a little colored boy about 8 years old, named Freddie Lewis, was entering his parents house, in Hartford, on the 11th inst., a cake of ice slid from the roof on him, causing his death a few hours after. He was a bright boy—the most intelligent of his class in the Sabbath, and week day school.

SUMMARY.

The Havana correspondent of the "N. Y. Times," says in a recent letter:—

"I have heard it said that the Dominicans are not by any means content with their new masters, and that there are parties in Santo Domingo who look to an alliance with the Haytians to recover their independence, which has been bartered away to Spain.

A few nights ago an intelligent slave named Cornelius, who had recently escaped from Virginia to Maryland on the Lower Potomac, recrossed for the purpose of reconnoitering the enemy's camp, when he was discovered and shot.

The Government of North Carolina has published under date of 4th March, "An Act to provide more efficent police regulations for the districts on the seaboard, as amended by the Governor and Council." It provides for the establishment of police courts, whose jurisdiction shall extend to all matters of criminal and police regulation over the slaves and free persons of color in the seaboard districts. Said courts shall have full power to establish such regulations and inflict such punishments as they in their discretion may deem the exigencies of the time may require. It further provides that said court may arrest such white persons as may be considered dangerous in the community.

The papers state that a colored man who blacks boots at the National Hotel in Washington, has the following motto conspicuously displayed over his stand:

"NO NORTH, NO SOUTH,
NO EAST, NO WEST,
NO TRUST."

It is estimated that there are now six thousand runaway slaves in Kansas.

A colored woman aged about 75 years, named Keturah Young, residing in the upper part of Greenport, was so dreadfully burned by her clothes taking fire, on Sunday morning, 9th inst., that she lingered in great agony until Monday when death relieved her of her sufferings. She was formerly a slave, and was well known by the name of "Aunt Ketury."

A great revival is now in progress among the colored people at Shinnacock Neck, Long Island. Between twenty and thirty have already united with the church.

The Albany "Republican" of March 17th says:

"Last evening Coroner Allen was called upon to hold an inquest upon the body of a colored woman named Huldah Stewart, residing at No. 58 Green street, who died suddenly about 5 o'clock. It was thought she died from the effects of poison administered by her own hand. A jury was empannelled this morning and a post mortem examination was had when it was discovered she died from an inflamation of the bowels produced by natural causes. Verdict accordingly."

A correspondent of the "Commercial Advertiser," writing from Port Royal states:

"Contrabands are coming in to our camp from the main land. Two came in last week from Barnwell district. They had run away several times and were pursued. One of them is the most frightful object I ever saw. His arms are covered with the marks of the teeth and claws of blood hounds. His back is furroughed all over with the marks of the lash. He is quite an intelligent negro."

Charlotte Davis, a beautiful Creole girl, from Louisiana, was burned to death in St. Louis on Thursday, her clothes catching fire from the stove. In her dying moments she was robbed of $400 in gold, by a saloon-keeper named Joseph Stein.

A SLAVE HUNT IN CUBA.

As a specimen of the state of things in slaveholding Cuba, I send you an account of a slave-hunt which took place a few weeks ago, near Trinidad. Don Ignacio Puig having received information that some runaway negroes had been seen in the woods bordering on the coffee estate of his father, called Emulation Itabo, determined to make a search for them—some of the neighbors having first obtained permission of the authorities to do so. Not very far from the estate a rancheria, and a cleared piece of land of about ten acres, which had been planted with sweet potatoes, tobacco, yams, rice, Indian corn, etc., was discovered. On approaching it the party found a band of negroes, armed with spears and cane-knives, who, instead of separating, showed fight. They were immediately ordered to surrender, and a promise was made to intercede with their owners for their pardon; but this command only emboldened them, and the party which was in pursuit was obliged to make use of its firearms. A mulatto, the property of a planter residing in Trinidad was captured; one negro was killed, and the remainder were put to flight—some of them wounded. But one of the pursuers was hurt, and he but slightly.—Cor. N. Y. Daily Times.

The Port Royal correspondent of the Boston "Traveler" makes the following striking statement:—"There are on this island some negroes scarcely able to talk or understand the English language, and who but a year since were free as now in their native African homes. In fact the larger portion of the blacks about here are of the pure blood, such as are seldom seen in the Northern States."

The Louisville "Journal" says that within three months $300,000 worth of impressed slaves in rebel camps have died in three Kentucky counties alone.

DEATH OF MR. SMART DRAYTON.—This gentleman, who, previous to joining the church, had long maintained the reputation of being the master pugilist of this country, although always a peaceable and quiet citizen, departed this life on the afternoon of the 26th. At the time of his death he was a local preacher and trustee in Zion Church.

At the attack of the Merrimac on the Minnesota, Joyce Moore and Eli Parris, colored, were slightly injured.

PRAISEWORTHY.—The Social, Civil and Statistical Association of the colored people of Pennsylvania, have generously contributed fifty dollars toward the relief of the freedmen of Port Royal and elsewhere.

RETURNING FROM HAYTI.

The schooner Helen Augusta, arrived here last Monday with the following returned emigrants from Hayti. Mr. Marcus Dale, wife and three children, of Detroit, Mich., Zach Cordin, of Oberlin, O., Mr. I. Jones, of Windsor, Canada West, Mrs. Johnson, of Rochester, N. Y., Capt. Graddock and wife, of Charleston S. C., and a young man from Buffalo, N. Y., whose name we did not learn. Two "encouraging" letters from Mr. Dale appeared in last week's issue of the "Pine and Palm;" we wonder if the statement that he is now prepared to make would also be published in that sheet.

COLORED PERSONS AND THE MAILS.—Mr. Sumner introduced the following bill, March 18th, which was referred to the Postal Committee of the Senate:

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act, no person, by reason of color, shall be disqualified from employment in carrying the mails, and all acts establishing such disqualification, including especially the seventh section of the act of March 3, 1825, are hereby repealed.

TELEGRAPHIC DISPATCH!

NEWBERN, N. C., March 100th, '62.

This morning, at precisely 6.05 o'clock General Burnside suddenly arose, and after a few minutes returned calmly to his camp-bed "in accordance with the minute instructions received from General M'Clellan, before he left Annapolis."—N. Y Herald.

AMUSEMENTS.

We find the following in the Hartford, (Ct.) Times of March 20th:

The Colored Old Folks were again introduced by their leader, Mr. Hazard, last night, at Allyn. Hall, which was not crowded but a fair audience listened very attentively to the singing—Mr. Perry Davis, though laboring under severe indisposition, would at times break forth in strains which would fill the hall. He deserves great credit for the manner in which he sang in the chorus of the New Jerusalem. His son, Master Davis, indeed his whole family, also received great applause. Miss Grace Paul, the Prima Donna, sang in a way not to be despised by some higher artistes—and received, as she justly deserved, several encores. The troupe appeared first in old-fashianed costumes, with bonnets and hats; and after the first part came on in what we suppose was full dress, one hundred years ago. Miss Paul changed her costume several times, finally appearing as the Goddess of Liberty, and sang the "Star Spangled Banner" in good style. The whole affair was a success. After the performance the audience was cordially invited to attend a grand banquet at Union Hall where they had a good time till 1 o'clock A. M.

THE J. M. WILLIAMS' TABERNACLE, No. 3. I. O. of B. and S. of Love and Charity.—This flourishing Society, which is located in Brooklyn, gave their Annual Festival on the evening of the 19th inst., in the Hall 166 Fulton street.

Recent illness prevented us from attending, but we are pleased to learn that it was a very spirited and refined affair. The people of New York and Brooklyn turned out in large numbers, and every thing passed off very pleasantly. The company was "sold" on a "flying pie," which many went to see. This "big thing" was nothing more than a live bird enclosed in a hollow pie. It is hardly necessary to say how the appearance of the bird was hailed by the crowd. The friends speak in high terms of the music furnished by Prof. Murray's band.

PROF. W. J. WILSON'S SCHOOL CONCERT AND EXHIBITION.—This affair came off on the evening of the 21st, at the Polytechnic Institute, Brooklyn, in fine style. The house was filled to its utmost capacity, many being obliged to go away. The children looked as neat as possible; the girls all being dressed in white, and many of them wearing beautiful wreaths upon their heads. The singing was very good, but the speaking was most excellent; this was particularly manifested in the dialogues, "The sewing circle," and the "Country Aunt." These, with the dialogue, "Bluster and Fuster, or ups and downs of Dixie," kept the house in a roar of laughter. As the affair is to be repeated let everybody go and hear for themselves.

ARTS AND ARTISTS.—Quite an excitement has been created among the mathematical savans of our city by the superb and correct dancing of Senorita Cubas.

PUBLIC SCHOOL EXHIBITION.—Those who doubt the possession of intellect and the ability to learn of our colored population, should have attended the exhibition given Friday evening, at the Polytechnic Institute, by Mr. Wilson, the Principal of Colored School No. 1, on Willoughby street. The large room of the Institute was crowded almost to suffocation. A portion of the stage was given up to the audience.

The pupils of the school were tastefully and modestly dressed, and in point of ability and excellent performance of the parts assigned them, no Public School Exhibition in Brooklyn has excelled. Master Delancy Hunter particularly excelled. Had he a white skin, talents such as he gave the evidence of possessing, would, if rightly directed, land him in the Senate of the United States.

The two accomplished lady teachers of the school, Miss Williams, and Miss Lamas, gave evidence of musical genius, in the singing a duett from Norma, etc., that many of our first class Opera singers might envy.

As a whole, the exhibition was a decided succes. In a pecuniary point of view, the worthy Principal has the gratification of knowing the piano he has labored so hard to get for his school, is now out of debt. Several members of the Board of Education were present.—Brooklyn Star, March 24th.

THE TEA AT ZION CHURCH.—We are happy to say that the tea given at Zion Church on the evening of the 13th inst. was quite successful. The ladies seemed to have exerted themselves pretty effectively, and due credit ought to be given them by the church. The amount realised by the ladies must have been quite heavy, if the number present was as large as is represented bysome of the guests.

MARRIED.

PRIME—WALLACE.—In New York, on Wednesday evening, March 19th, by the Rev. H. Highland Garnet, James Lawrence Prime, Esq. of Sagharbor, L. I. to Miss Mary Wallace of this city.

VANDORAN, JOHNSON.—At the residence of the bride's parents, at Flatlands, L. I. on Wednesday, March 19th, by Rev. G. Washington Le'vere Mr. Samuel Vandoran, of Coney Island, to Miss Jane Johnson, of the former place.

JONES—HILL.—In Brooklyn, March 5th, by the Rev. Sampson White, Mr. John Q. Jones, of Agawam, Mass., to Miss Elizabeth Hill of Brooklyn, N. Y.

NELSON, THOMAS.—In Lockport, N. Y., March 20th, by Rev. H. L. Dox, Rev. Joseph A. Nelson of Lockport, to Mrs. Catherine C. Thomas of Buffalo, N. Y.

BARON DE PRAGA, BOOTH.—In N. Y. city, March 24th. 1862, by Rev. W. Johnson Alston, Mr. Hugo Baron De Praga, of Spain, to Mrs. Mary Jane Booth of N. Y. city.

DIED.

PURVIS.—At Byberry, near Philadelphia, on Wednesday Evening, March 19th, Robert Purvis, Jr. in the 28th year of his age.

LEWIS.—In Hartford, Ct., March 11th, Freddie, son of Thomas and Abby Lewis aged 7 years and 8 months.

FREEMAN.—In Brooklyn, on Tuesday evening, March 18, 1862, William Augustus, only son of John and Martha Freeman, aged 2 years 6 months and 1 day.

Thy little son is gone,
The babe once dear to all;
The angels bid him come,
And join the heavenly saints
In chanting round the throne.

THOMPSON.—In Brooklyn, March 22d, of convulsions, Harriet Banks Thompson, aged 7 months and 9 days.

WELDON.—In this city on Tuesday morning, March 18th, of apoplexy, Fanny Weldon, aged 69 years 7 months and 18 days

Special Notices.

A FAIR.

A judicious Committee of ladies attached to the First A. M. E. Bethel Church, Second street, under the pastoral charge of the Rev. J. D. S. Hall, will give a Grand Union Fair in the basement of M. E. Church, Sullivan street, between Bleeker and Amity streets, opening on April the 1st and continuing for the space of ten days.

Open at 4 o'clock every afternoon.

CONFIRMATION.

The Right Rev. Bishop Potter will visit St. Philips Church, Mulberry st, near Bleeker, on Wednesday evening next, April 2d, for the purpose of administering the rite of confirmation. Services will commence at 7 1-2 o'clock.

LOST

At the Odd Fellows Ball, on the evening of the 10th inst, an embroidered silk pocket handkerchief. It being the gift of a deceased friend, and consequently highly valued, it is hoped that the finder will return it to its owner, MRS. HAWKINS, (Rear) 218 Wooster st.

NOTICE.

☞All the members of the Giddings and Jolliffe Union Association are particularly notified to attend their Monthly Meeting on Wednesday, April 2d, at Metropolitan Hall, 178 Prince street, at 7½ o'clock P. M., by order of Past Worthy Matron, MARGARET A. JACKSON.

A MUSICAL FESTIVAL

for the benefit of the funds of PROGRESSIVE UNION LODGE NO. 4,
I. O. OF G. S. AND D. S., WILL BE GIVEN
AT MASONIC HALL
309 Grand Street, Williamsburgh, on THURSDAY EVENING, APRIL 3d, '62.

The Lodge meeting with so many losses, they appeal to the generous public for their patronage. No pains will be spared to make this Festival equal to any they have given.

The following Lodges will be present in full Regalia: Fountain Union No. 1, G. S. and D. S.; Fidelity, No. 1, D. S; Unity, No. 2, D. S.; Purity, No. 3, D. S., Rebecca Union, No. 5, G. S. and D. S.

Music under direction of Prof. George Oton. Tickets 50 cents.

Committee of arrangements: Mrs. M. Hammond, Mrs. A. Jarvis, Mrs. A. Duffee, Mr. A. Stanley, and Mr. Wm. McClaughry

N. B. Cars leave Peck Slip and Grand Street Ferries every five minutes, and go past the Hall. Fare 3 cents. No postponement on account of the weather.

A GRAND CONCERT,

OF
ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY JUVENILE SINGERS
Will be given at
The Cooper Institute,
(At the junction of the Bowery and 3d Avenue,)
ON MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 31st, 1862,
In aid of
THE WEEKLY ANGLO-AFRICAN,
And an effort to establish in this city
A MECHANICAL SCHOOL
for colored youths of both sexes.

The subscriber, in returning his heartfelt thanks for the very generous response to his last appeal, would respectfully announce, that through the kindness of the parents of the children he will give another GRAND CONCERT at the above named place and time, for which occasion Miss Sarah Ennalls has kindly volunteered the services of the entire Primary Department of Public School No. 2. Also Mr. John Peterson, Principal of Public School No. 1; Mr. Ransom F. Wake and Miss Fanny Tompkins, Principals of Male and Female Departments of Public School No. 2; and Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Principal of Public School No. 1, Brooklyn, have generously tendered a class from their respective Schools.

The following solo singers will also appear:

Miss Caroline Brown, of Brooklyn,
" Lydia Dangerfield, of New York,
" Bertha Burnet, of Freehold, N. J.,
" Mary A. Day, of New York,
" Letitia Smith, of New York,
" Pauline Green, of New York,
" Sarah E. Cary, of New York,
" Alice Taylor, of Brooklyn,
" P. C. Groves, of Harlem,

Miss Mary Brown, of Brooklyn,
" Addie M. Hamilton, of Brooklyn,
" Mary A. Hamilton, of Brooklyn,
" Fanny J. Hamilton, of Brooklyn,
Master William Bronaugh, of Brooklyn,
" Edward Thorne, of New York.
" Robert H. Hamilton, of Brooklyn
" James M'Cune Smith Hamilton,

Prof. WALDRON will preside at the piano, assisted by Miss VIRGINIA MAGNAN.

ROBERT HAMILTON, Conductor.

PROGRAMME—PART 1st.

1st. Fantasia—Piano	Miss Virginia Magnan.
2d. Chorus—"In the Light"	Company.
3d. Solo—"Bacon and Greens"	Jas. M'C. S. Hamilton
4th. Solo and Chorus—"Haste away"	Campany.
5th. Solo—"Happy be thy Dream"	L. Dangerflold.
6th. Chorus—	By class from School No. 1.
7th. Solo—"Eva's Vision"	Alice Taylor.
8th. Chorus—"Hosanna"	Company.
9th. Solo—"Hark t'is Music"	Bertha Burnett.
10th. Chorus—	By class from School No. 2.
11th. Solo—"They are coming again"	P. C. Groves.
12th. Duett—"What are the Wild Waves Saying"	Lydia Dangerfield and Pauline Green
13th. Solo—"Lovely Night"	Mary Day.
14th. Solo—"I'm Leaving thee in Sorrow"	Letitia Smith.
15th. Chorus—"The True Patriot"	Company
16th. "We are but Humble Singers"	Seven

Solos and Choruses, which will be sung by the subscriber and six of his Children: James, Robert, Fanny, Mary, Addie, and Olivia. At the conclusion of each chorus, a National or popular air will be introduced, in the singing of which the audience is respectfully invited to join

PART 2d.

1st. Solo	Sarah E. Cary.
2d. Solo—"Dreams that are Brightest"	Pauline Green.
3d. Trio—"Rock of Liberty"	Caroline Brown, W Bronaugh, and R. Hamilton.
4th. Solo—"I Cannot Pretend to Say"	Mary Hamilton.
5th. Solo and Chorus—"The boy and the Bobolink,"	Company.
6th. Solo—"Come my Love my Dearest"	Mary Brown.
7th. Chorus—	By class from School No. 1.
8th. Solo—"Love my Dearest"	Adeline M. Hamilton.
9th. Solos and Chorus—"Wishing"	Little Class
10th. Chorus—	By class from School No. 2
11th. Quartette—"Why have my loved ones gone"	Conductor and Children: James, Robert, and Addie
12th. Solo—"Annie of the Vale"	Edward Thorne.
13th. "	Lydia Dangerfield.
14th. " "O God preserve the Mariner"	Wm. Bronaugh.
15th. " "I see her still in my Dreams"	Pauline Green
16th. " "The right of Loving Thee"	Caroline Brown.
17th. Solo and Chorus—"We're going Home"	Full Company

Doors open at 5 o'clock—Concert to commence at 7 1-2 o'clock.

ADMISSION 25 CENTS—Children under 12 years of age, 15 Cents. No postponement on account of the weather.

ROBERT HAMILTON.

TO LET in Williamsburgh to a small family, the upper part of No. 64 South 8th st., containing all the modern improvements, within three minutes walk of all the ferries.

For particulars inquire as above Possession given immediately.

A NEW ORGANIZATION.

The scholars in the Sabbath Schools now meeting in the 7th Avenue Presbyterian church (Rev. H. M. Wilson's) being more numerous than can be accommodated in the afternoon, a new organization will take place on Sunday, April 6th, at 9 o'clock.

GRAND CONCERT.

THE YOUNG FOLKS OF BROOKLYN will give a Grand Concert in aid of the Ladies Union Bazaar, for the Colored Orphan Asylum, on THURSDAY EVENING, April 3d, in the Bridge street A. M. E. W. Church, near Myrtle Avenue.

Doors open at 6 1-2 o'clock. Concert to commence at 7 1-2 o'clock.

Admission, 15 cents.

LODGINGS. Four Gentlemen can obtain comfortable lodgings by applying to Mrs. Ellen Anderson No. 150 W. 29th street, between 7th and 8th avenues. The house is in a very pleasant part of the city and within half a block of cars and stages.

35 5t.

TO LET.—Apartments in house No. 148 Jay street, Brooklyn. As these apartments are within five minutes walk of Fulton and Catherine Ferries persons desiring a residence in Brooklyn will find them desirable. Apply on the premises after 1 o'clock, P. M.

BOARDING AND LODGING. Mrs. A. M. Thompson, (late Jackson) respectfully informs the public that she has opened a Boarding and Lodging house at No. 39 Watts street. The house is well situated, being between two railroads, and within 15 minutes walk of the principal colored churches. Terms very moderate.

TO LET.—Furnished rooms for gentlemen with or without board, at 68 Sullivan st.

J. H. JACKSON

TO LET at low rents, to respectable colored people, the convenient two story and attic brick houses Nos. 1 and 5 York street, directly in the rear of St. John's Church. Apply at 158 Waverly Place near 6th Avenue.

APARTMENTS to let No. 217 Sullivan street. Inquire on the premises of E. V CLARK.

25 4t.

NOW IS THE TIME
To Use Dr. CLARKE'S
SHERRY WINE
BITTERS!!
Composed of.

Dock Root, Wild Cherry,
Sarsaparilla, Prickly Ash,
Thoroughwort, Poplar Bark,
Rock Rose, Rhubarb,
Wintergreen, Dandelion.
&c. &c.

For Weakness, Loss of Appetite. Sour Stomach, Jaundice, Headache, Piles of long standing, Humors,

And all Diseases which arise from an unhealthy state of the Stomach, Bowels, and Blood.

PRICE ONLY 25 CENTS A BOTTLE

For Sale at the office of the Anglo-African, 48 Beekman street.

WORLD'S FAIR AGENCY.—The undersigned are acting as Agents for Merchants and Manufacturers to Exhibit at World's Fair, and to introduce into England, France and other European countries, articles of American Invention, Procuring Patents, making Sales, or in any way promoting their interests.

DEXTER & CO. 17 Spruce st. N. Y.; 86 Milk street, Boston; 149 S. Fourth st., Philad

1m3ap.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER. A Printing Office for $10. LOWE'S Improved Printing Presses are the Best, Cheapest, most Durable portable Card and Job Presses ever made, and have been awarded Diplomas and silver medals. You will find a press a source of pleasure and profit, by printing for yourself or your neighbors. Many persons are saving and making money by using one at their homes or places of business. A comfortable living may be obtained in any city, town or village, with a small outlay for press and types. The press costs but one-tenth as much as a common job press, and is so simple a boy or girl of twelve can do common and fancy printing with ease. Cards, Bill-Heads, Labels, Receipts, Circulars, &c., can be printed at a trifling expense.

Price of Presses—No. 1, $5; No. 2, $10; No. 3, $15; No. 4, $20. Price of Printing Offices, including press.—No. 1, $10; No. 2, $20; No. 3, $30; No. 4, $40. Send for a Circular to the

LOWE PRESS COMPANY,
34t. 13 Water street, Boston.

MEDICAL.

MRS. R. LEE, for several years Practising Eclectic, and at present Student of the N. E. F. Medical College of Boston, is now in Brooklyn at 97 High street, where she will take great pleasure in giving medical advice to any who may wish it while she remains in the city.—Charges very moderate. Hours 10 to 2 A. M. and 3 to 8 P. M.

32 tf.

THE LAUNDRESS' SECRET.

The most Invaluable Preparation known for rendering clothes white and clean, without rubbing or injury to the fabric.

The above recipe, together with over one hundred other items of information, sent free on the receipt of 5 red stamps.

A liberal discount to peddlers. Address,

JOS. ADAMS,
83 Nassau street.

A. ROBERTS,

120 Clinton Court, 8th st., New York, agent for the Weekly Anglo-African. Copies may be had of him at an early hour after its publication

TO LET.—Apartments in house 153 Thompson Street. A few gentlemen can be furnished with lodging also. Inquire of Mr. Jer. Bowers on the premises.

315t.

ZION CONFERENCE.

☞ Notice is hereby given to the Members of the Annual Conference of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion, that the Annual Conference of the New York District will meet in Zion Church, corner of Church and Leonard streets, New York city, on the Third Saturday in May, 1862.

WM. H. BISHOP,
Superintendent of the 1st Dist. of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

HELP WANTED

At Tilmon's Agency, No. 70 East 13th st., one door East of the 4th Avenue. Spring is here and now is the time. Never was there a greater demand for all first class colored help than now. Remember that this is the oldest and most responsible office in the city for colored help. Situations constantly on hand for both city and country. Terms cash and strict attention paid to business. All persons coming to this city and wishing to save board will do well to call during Office hours, from 7 A. M. to 5 P. M.

31tf L. TILMON, Proprietor.

STONE SQUARE LODGE NO. 6, A. Y. M. under the jurisdiction of the M. W. United Grand Lodge of the State of New York, meet every Friday Evening at 8 o'clock, at their Hall 399 Grand st., Williamsburg, Brooklyn, E. D.

J. H. DAVIS, Sec'ry.

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

PLANE ST. SELECT SCHOOL.

195, PLANE ST., NEWARK, N. J.
MRS. HARRIET E. ROGERS, PRINCIPAL.

The branches taught are Reading, Writing Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography and History. Plain Sewing. Ornamental Needlework, Worsted Embroidery and Fancy Knitting.

Piano Forte, Melodeon, and Vocal Music by Prof. John H. O'Fake.

A limited number of Misses between the ages of ten and fourteen may be boarded in the house on moderate terms. Healthy location, and a fine yard for exercise.

REFERENCES.
NEWARK, N.J.
Rev. E. J. Adams, Jefferson Ellis,
Adam Ray, Abram T. Cook.
BROOKLYN.
Rev. J. N. Gloucester.
NEW YORK.
Rev. H. M. Wilson, Rev. H. H. Garnet.

All letters may be addressed to Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, 194 Plane st. Newark N. J.

27 6t.

Elizabeth City, N. J. Feb. 8, 1862.

This is to certify that I heartily approve of the effort of Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers to establish a Select School for young misses. I have been acquainted with her for over twenty-five years, and am happy to recommend her and her enterprise to the patronage of the public in general.

DANIEL H. VANDERVEER,
Pastor of the 1st Colored Pres. Church, Eliz. City.

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated "Hoagland Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

PHILADELPHIA AGENCY.

Wm. R. De Cordover, 419 South 7th st. is authorized to receive subscriptions and advertisements for the Anglo-African. All orders left with him will receive prompt attention.

THE HORACE WATERS PIANOS,
MELODEONS, ALEXANDRE ORGANS,
T. Gilbert & Co's. Celebrated Æolian Pianos,

are the finest instruments for Parlors and Churches now in use. A large assortment can be seen at the new Warerooms 481 Broadway, between Grand and Broome streets, which will be sold at extremely low prices. Pianos and Melodeons from sundry makers, new and second hand, to let, and rent allowed if purchased, as per agreement. Monthly payments received for the same. Also, second-hand pianos at great bargains, prices from $25 to $100. Sheet Music, Music Books, and all kinds of Music merchandise at war prices. A Pianist in attendance will try new music.

HORACE WATERS, AGENT

32 13t.

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND
BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC at the shortest notice.
MR. GEORGE OTON,
PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St., and with G. Oton.

18tf

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,
REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.
New York—corner of Prince and Marion street near Broadway.

Hours of Worship:—
Prayer-meeting, 10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.

Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock,
Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.
Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,
(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)
Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.
Rev. WM. J. ALSTON, Pastor Residence—70 Sullivan St.
R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.

Lect ure every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.
Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.
Hours of worship:—
10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No 7 Fair St., Brooklyn. 13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.
DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.
REV. ELI N. HALL, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.
Hours of worship:
10½ o'clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.
7½ " P. M.
10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,
28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.
HOURS OF WORSHIP:
10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.
7½ " P. M.
12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,
Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue
Hours of worship:—
3 o'clock, P. M.
7 1-2 " P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

LECTURE every Wednesday evening.

Rev. CHAS. H. THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,
Second Street, between Avenues B and C
HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.
7½ " P. M.
Rev. J. D. S. HALL, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.
Sullivan St., near Houston.
Rev. JOHN T. RAYMOND, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.
HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.
7 1-2 " P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

AGENT FOR WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

TROY AGENCY.—Mr. Henry Burke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

MRS. ELIZA LEWIS' SALVE,
ANDERSON'S HAIR RESTORATIVE,
(New London,)
SPANISH OIL, (For the Hair,)
WHITE'S VEGETABLE EXTRACT,
BRANDRETH'S SUGAR COATED PILLS.
For Sale at the
Drug Store 55 West Broadway
tf-47

GLASS, CHINA, AND EARTHEN-WARE MENDED,
BY A. ROBERTS,
120 Clinton Court, 8th st., New York.

A Supply of the EGYPTIAN CEMENT, for the above purpose constantly on hand. Price 25 cents per bottle.

29tf.

LECTURES AND EXHIBITIONS.

The Subscriber is prepared to Lecture on Phrenology and the Southern Rebellion, before Lyceums and other bodies, or to give exhibitions of John Brown's Raid on Virginia, and the affair in which the hero Tillman figured. My address is Ithaca, N. Y. box 470.

34 tf WM. F. JOHNSON.

TO LET.—Two furnished Rooms in Mrs. Plant's Boarding House suitable for a gentleman and wife, or for single gentlemen or ladies. Apply on the premises.

BOARDING AND LODGING, at No. 3 Jersey street, by Mrs. Brown, (widow of the late J. W. Brown) who begs the patronage of her friends and acquaintances.

29tf.

BOSTON HOUSE
MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott.
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of al the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG
Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as
BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTING
of every description. Also constantly on hand well-selected stock of Ready-Made
MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.
DON'T FORGET,
168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T. L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.
First Premium for Misses and Children's
HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.
The Clergy supplied at a discount.
KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y. 19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tf

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTES, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 SOUTH STREET, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS. CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS,
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) REspectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

MRS E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.
3tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING

BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in very healthy and convenient the city.

Boarding for Ladies,	$2,50
" " Gents,	3,00
Lodging per week,	75

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER
219 CENTRE STREET New York

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,
In all its branches—such as
BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH
GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.,
Residence—120th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.
19 26t

Poetry.

For the Anglo-African.

"THANK GOD I'M BLACK."

I envy not the lily's grace,
I fancy not the pale moonbeam,
Nor be it mine in sunsets to trace
The glory of poetic theme,
The burning glow the tropics know,
Inspires to me the midnight dream.

I envy not the power and skill
That makes the white man me enthral.
The tiger hath the art to kill
More than the tenant of the stall
Tho' tortures rack, thank God I'm black!
No white blood adds its bitter gall

Talk not to me of beauty's cheek,
The marble tinged with ruddy glow,
The blood hath mounted there to speak
Of the deep fires that burn below.
The lava's force that in its course,
Hath scorch'd and burn'd us in its flow

Black is the midnight vault of heaven,
The velvet canopy on high,
Where glow the mighty suns of even
Amid the calm of nature's sky;
Such, Africa, hath been thy day,
But darken'd clouds now round thee lie

Ye daughters of my sunny land,
Still glory like your forest tree,
The bow of hope is ever spann'd
Where grows the darken'd ebony.
Type of the power whose iron hour
Assails in vain thy destiny.

I see my tribes in native grace,
Unnumber'd marshall'd on thy shore!
O Africa, what power shall trace
Thy glory when thy wrongs are o'er!
Through ages hid thy pyramid
Shall open up art's wondrous store

Thy Atlas from his shoulder heaves
The burden'd world,—no longer borne:
And as the forest casts its leaves,
Shall Slavery into shreds be torn.
And beauty's grace shall in its place
Bring forth the rose without the thorn.

I swear it, by thy golden sands,
Thy forest depths, thy lakes, thy plains,
To break the shackles from thy hands,
While life and thought this soul retains!
Land of the sun! this work, begun,
Shall deluge like thy autumn rains!

Aye, I am black! the glorious thought
Inspires me with a strong pride!
And as a poison'd arrow, fraught
With death, its point shall glide
Where'er the foe exists below
Whose hand with thy best blood is dyed.

—H.

From Zion's Herald.

THE SLAVE MOTHER'S LAMENT.

BY DANIEL F. WOLCOTT.

Hope, with beaming rays,
Used to illume my early days
With many prospects fair
I dreamed the time would come to me
When I and mine should all be free;
For this I offer'd prayer.

The thought of freedom shed its light
Upon my weary dreams at night,
And soften'd my repose;
Cheer'd my dark heart as time rolled on,
Blest each new day with happier dawn,
And with a gentler close

I struggled thus for many a year,
Through trials keen and sorrows rear,
Till hope within me died;
Sweet hope, that gave me all my rest
And comfort, in my lonely breast
Are buried side by side.

Yes, those bright days are over now,
Joy will no more illume my brow,
Nor make my burdens light.
Hard labor, insults, tears, I know,
Are all my heritage below;
A starless, cheerless night.

My little lambs have left my fold,
Far, far away in bondage sold;
I know not where they roam;
Beneath the ponderous weight I stoop,
While master, with his little groupe
Can have a pleasant home.

When little Ned, with tearful face,
Was snatch'd away from my embrace,
My bleeding heart was riven;
The tide of anguish ran so high
It seemed that I must surely die,
But needful grace was given.

But I a poor unnoticed slave,
Must bear these hardships to the grave,
With sighs and groans unheard.
When we receive the bitterest cup
It must be drank entirely up,
Without a murmuring word.

It is a crime to show our grief,
Our tears bring lashes, not relief,
Thus we are forced to bow.
In what should be our blooming years,
The mark of fading age appears
On many a furrowed brow.

O God of pity, truth and grace,
Look down upon the fetter'd race,
And needful aid impart;
If we must bear these galling chains,
Give us thy love to ease our pains,
And cheer each lonely heart

Kind Father, may we not some time,
In Canaan's fair and holy clime
Be happy, blest, and free?
We're sighing for our home above,
O send the chariot of thy love,
And take us Lord, to thee.

Southbridge, Mass

PLACIDO

The true wealth and glory of a nation consist not in its gold dust, not in its commerce, nor in the grandeur of its palaces, nor yet in the magnificence of its cities—but in the intellectual and moral energy of its people. Egypt is more glorious because of her carrying into Greece the blessings of civilization, than because of her pyramids, however wondrous—her lakes and labyrinths, however stupendous—or her Thebes, though every square marked a palace, or every alley a dome. Who hears of the moneyed men of Athens, of Rome? And who does not hear of Socrates, of Plato, of Demosthenes, of Virgil, of Cicero? Are you in converse with him of the "sea-girt isle," and would touch the chord that vibrates most readily in his heart?—then talk to him of Shakespeare, of Milton, of Cowper, of Bacon, of Newton, of Burns, of Scott. To the intelligent son of the "Emerald Isle," talk of Curran, of Emmett, of O'Connell. Great men are a nation's vitality. Nations pass away—great men, never. Great men are not unfrequently buried in dungeons or in obscurity; but they work out great thoughts for all time, nevertheless. Did not Bunyan work out a great thought, all-vital and vitalizing, when he lay twelve years in Bedford jail, weaving his tagged lace, and writing his Pilgrim's Progress? The greatest man in all America is now in obscurity. It is he who is "the Lord of his own soul," on whose brow wisdom has marked her supremacy, and who, in his sphere, moves

"Stilly as a star on his eternal way."

A great writer hath said, "Nature is stingy of her great men." I do not believe it. God doeth all His work fitly and well; how, therefore, could he give us great men, not plentifully, but stingily? The truth is, there are great men, and they are plentiful—plentiful for the times, I mean—but we do not see them, because we will not come into the sun-light of truth and rectitude where, and where only, dwelleth greatness. Placido was a great man. He was a great poet besides. He was a patriot, also—how could he be otherwise? Are not all poets patriots? "Adios Mundo," cried he, as with tear be-dimmed eyes he looked up into the blue heavens above him, and upon the green earth beneath him; and upon the portals of the universe read wisdom, majesty, and power. Was there no poetry in this outburst of a full heart, and in thus looking upward to heaven? "Adios Mundo," cried he, as now beholding, for the last time, the home of his love—he bared his bosom to the death shot of the soldiers. Great was Placido in life—he was greater still in death. His was the faith which fastens itself upon the EVERLASTING I AM. Call you that greatness which Pizarro achieved when, seizing a sword and drawing a line upon the sand from east to west, he himself facing south, he said to his band of pirates:—"Friends, comrades, on that side are toil, hunger, nakedness, the drenching storm, desertion, and death; on this side, ease and pleasure. There lies Peru with its richness; here, Panama with its poverty. Choose, each man, what best becomes a brave Castillian. For my part I go to the south;" suiting the action to the word—so do I;—but look ye! this is merely the greatness of overwhelming energy and concentrated purpose, not illuminated by a single ray of light from the Divine. See here, how Placido dwarfeth Pizzaro when he thus prayeth:

"God of unbounded love and power eternal!
To thee I turn in darkness and despair;
Stretch forth thine hand! and from the brow infernal
Of calumny the veil of justice tear.

* * * * *

O King of kings!—my father's God! who only
Art strong to save, by whom is all controlled,
Who givest the sea its waves, the dark and lonely
Abyss of heaven its light, the north its cold.
The air its currents, the warm sun its beams,
Life to the flowers, and motion to the streams:—
All things obey thee; dying or reviving
As thou commandest; all, apart from thee,
From thee alone their life and power deriving,
Sink and are lost in vast eternity!

* * * * *

O merciful God! I cannot shun thy presence.—
For through its veil of flesh thy piercing eye
Looketh upon my spirit's unsoiled essence,
As through the pure transparence of the sky;
Let not the oppressor clap his bloody hands,
As o'er my prostrate innocence he stands.

* * * * *

But if, alas, it seemeth good to thee
That I should perish, as the guilty dies,
Still fully in me thy will be done, O God!"

Placido had a symmetrically developed character. All great men have this. His intellectual and moral nature blended harmoniously as "Kindred elements into one."

An ancient philosopher hath said that the passions and the soul are placed in the same body, so that the passions might have ready opportunity to persuade the soul to become subservient to their purpose. A terrible conflict. And yet through it Placido passed triumphantly. Placido was born a slave on the Island of Cuba, on the plantation of Don Terribio De Castro. The year of his birth I am unable to give, but it must have been somewhere between the years 1790 and 1800. He was of African origin. But little is known of his earliest days, save that he was of gentle demeanor, and wore an aspect which, though mild, indicated the working of great thoughts within. He was allowed some little advantage of education in his youth, and he evinced great poetic genius. The prayer just quoted was composed by him while he lay in prison, and repeated on his way from his dungeon to his place of execution. The "Heraldo," a leading journal of Havana, thus spoke of him after his arrest:—"Placido is a celebrated poet—a man of great genius, but too wild and ambitious. His object was to subdue Cuba, and make himself chief." The following lines, also, were found inscribed upon the walls of his dungeon. They were written on the day previous to his execution:

"O Liberty! I wait for thee,
To break this chain and dungeon bar.
I hear thy voice calling me,
Deep in the frozen north afar,
With voice like God's, and vision like a star.

Long cradled in the mountain wind,
Thy mates the eagle and the storm,—
Arise: and from thy brow unbind
The wreath that gives its starry form.
And smite the strength that would thy strength deform.

Yet Liberty, thy dawning light,
Obscured by dungeon bars, shall cast
A splendor on the breaking night,
And tyrants flying thick and fast,
Shall tremble at thy gaze, and stand aghast.

In poetic feeling, patriotic spirit, living faith, and withal in literary beauty, these lines are not surpassed; and they cannot fail to rank Placido not only with the great hearted, but with the gifted men of the earth. A tribute to his genius is recorded, in the fact that he was ransomed from slavery by the contributions of slaveholders of Cuba.

Placido was executed on the 7th of July, 1844. On the first fire of the soldiers, no ball entered his heart. He looked up, but with no spirit of revenge, no aspect of defiance—only sat upon his countenance the desire to pass at once into the region where no death is "Pity me," said he, "and fire here"—putting his hand upon his heart. Two balls then entered his body, and Placido fell.

As Wordsworth said of Touissant, so may it be said of Placido:

'Thou hast left behind thee
Powers that will work for thee: air, earth, and skies,
There's not a breathing of the common wind
That will forget thee; thou hast great allies
Thy friends are exultations, agonies,
And love, and man's unconquerable mind.'

The charge against Placido was, that he was at the head of a conspiracy to overthrow slavery in his native island. Blessings on thee, Placido! Nor didst thou fail of thy mission. Did the martyrs, stake-bound, fail of theirs? As the Lord liveth, Cuba shall yet be free.

That Placido was at the head of this conspiracy there is not a doubt; but what his plans in detail were, I know not; the means of acquiring them are not within my reach. Nevertheless, from the treatment throughout of the Cuban authorities towards Placido, we may safely conclude that Placido's plans in detail evinced no lack of ability to originate and execute, nor of that sagacity which should mark a revolutionary leader. Placido hated slavery with a hatred intensified by the remembrance of wrongs which a loving and loved mother had borne. The iron, too, had entered into his own soul; and he had been a daily witness of scenes such as torment itself could scarcely equal, nor the pit itself outdo. Call you this extravagance? You will not, should you but study a single chapter in the history of Cuban slavery.

Do you honor Kossuth?—then forget not him who is worthy to stand side by side with Hungary's illustrious son.

What may be the destiny of Cuba in the future near at hand, I will not venture to predict. What may be her ultimate destiny is written in the fact that—"God hath no attribute which, in a contest between the oppressed and the oppressor, can take sides with the latter."

This sketch, though hastily written, and meagre in detail as it must necessarily be, will show, at least, by the quotations of poetry introduced, that God hath not given to one race alone all intellectual and moral greatness.

WM. G. ALLEN.

UBI PATRIA, IBI LIBERTAS.

Alike in servitude, and in being distinguished by complexion from our task masters, we act differently from the Israelites. Why? It must be for the accomplishment of some end different from what they effected. They emigrated from the scene of their slavery and in the search for liberty. 'Ubi libertas, ibi patria,' is an expression of their rule of conduct; and from the time of their escape from the house of bondage, until now, the persecuted or oppressed few have for the most part fled from their homes in search of liberty.

By remaining upon the scenes of our oppressions we are acting out the converse of their rule of conduct. We proclaim to the oppressed few, 'Ubi patria, ibi libertas,' 'Where our country is, there shall liberty dwell!' For, come when or how it may—Whether long after we have passed into the cold and silent tomb, or whilst the tide of life yet courses through our veins—Whether by the red right arm of sturdy rebellion, or by the quick necessity of foreign invasion, or by the slower but more certain influence of public opinion—the time must come when from the Aroostook to the gulf of Mexico,—from the Atlantic to where the Pacific calmly laves the shores of Oregon, there shall go forth a blast from the trump of Freedom, at which our chains shall be broken, our fetters fall; and the American people, swelling beyond the links in which pride and prejudice have bound them, shall become the free and equal participants of one government, one destiny.—JAMES M'CUNE SMITH.

A SOUTHERN CHARACTER.

An officer of Gen. Hooker's division, now on the Maryland side of the lower Potomac, wrote on the 25th of February to Hon. W. D. Kelley, M. C. from Pennsylvania, a letter, from which the following is extracted:

Col. M——, as he is called, in accordance with the general custom here of giving every man some title, and not, I believe, from any military rank, he may have held (though I am not sure,) is a man about 45 years old, of considerable intelligence and wealth, and, as I am informed, has traveled both in this and other countries. He is a rather good looking man, somewhat larger than the average size of our people. He lives on what is called Stump Neck, a peninsula between the Mattawoman, Chicamoxin, and Potomac rivers, directly opposite to Cockpit Point, on the Virginia side of the latter river. Stump Neck contains something over 1,000 acres of good land, and is, as a farm, kept in a better condition than most of the farms about here, though it will not compare with what you would call a good farm in Pennsylvania. He resides about the centre of the farm, in a small frame house, such as any of our Northern farmers who were at all in a thriving condition would be ashamed to live in. By the side of it are two log houses, in which live his slaves, as I suppose I must call them, according to the laws of Maryland. His barns are better than his houses. This place is entirely away from any road, and therefore seldom visited. The Colonel is unmarried, but as the divine declaration, that "it is not good for one to be alone," holds good in relation to him as well as others, he has four female slaves who fulfil the duties of wives to him. Now the Colonel, in his patriarchal relation, likes variety, and so he has them of various hues and shades, from a negro up to a light quadroon. By these women he has had from twenty-five to thirty children, but as the mothers differ in complexion, so do the children, only with a most decided improvement in the lightness of the shading, from mulattoes up to pass anywhere for white—the children of the quadroon woman, wife or slave, whichever you choose, having light flaxen hair, and dark hazel eyes. The Colonel is also somewhat conscientious in his attention to their dress, the dark skinned having very coarse clothing, without such luxuries as shoes or stockings, while there is a regular gradation to the lightest color—they having both shoes and stockings and very decent clothing. On a visit to the place some time since, the children were asked as to their paternity. They all said their mothers lived there, pointing to the log house; but when asked who was their father, one of the darkest boys said,—"Got no father," and one of the whitest children said, pointing to the frame house, "He lives there." The Colonel also is a good farmer, and knows that it will not do to keep on hand too large a stock of cattle, &c., and so he regularly sells off the increase of his farm as soon as it is ready for the market—horses, mules, cattle, pigs, and—children. These last, however, are the most profitable, or rather have been so; God grant it may be so no longer. Dr. Woodhull, formerly the Assistant Surgeon of the 5th New Jersey Vounteers, now Surgeon of the 9th New Jersy Volunteers, was called upon to attend the quadroon wife in her last confinement, and learned many particulars in regard to them. He was very favorably impressed with her appearance, and considers her a very intelligent woman. Now I do not know that I have in the least exaggerated in this description, but, on the contrary, have softened it very much. It is not an exceptional case, but a fair specimen of what can be seen everywhere throughout the Southern States. It has made almost every man in the brigade a determined foe to slavery. That a man would sell his own children they had thought was one of the Abolition lies, until they had the fact so thrust into their face that it was impossible to doubt it."

VANDALISM.—A correspondent of the "Boston Transcript" relates the following:

"Day before yesterday, as I was standing on the land at Lady's Island, a poor but rather good looking yellow woman came over in a 'dug out,' paddled by herself, from the main land, and her choking sobs drew my attention, when I asked the reason of her hurry and grief. 'O massa, massa, I have no daughter nor chile now; the white man shot my daughter in the back, and took his gun and beat the head off my poor chile.' She could say no more; she sank upon the ground from exhaustion, and when she was able to stand we noticed blood running down the side of her dress; she had been shot right through the body, under the lower rib, and has since died of her wound. She was shot by a picket while she was escaping in the boat. I had occasion to visit the island yesterday, for a short time, and saw them bury her after their own style. They put the body in the grave, and all kneel down around and cover it with dust by throwing it in by handfuls, singing all the while verses fit for the occasion, one of which is

My father's only son has died:
O Lord! remember me.

A plain spoken western preacher delivered the following speech from the desk: "I would announce to the congregation that, probably by mistake, there was left at this meeting-house, this morning, a small cotton umbrella, much damaged by time and tear, and of an exceedingly pale blue color, in the place whereof was taken a large black silk umbrella, and of great beauty. I say, my brethren, it was probably by mistake, that of those articles the one was taken and the other left; though it is a very improper mistake, and should be discountenanced if possible. Blunders of this sort, brethren and sisters, are getting a little too common."

Throw a piece of meat among bears, and a purse of gold among men, and which will behave the most outrageously—the men or the bears? In fact which will 'bear' it the best?

WEDDING FEES.—The religious papers occasionally get off a spicy item. The Reverend editor of one of these papers, in a recent issue, says; "In our experience we have married persons for 37 1-2 cents; we have in trust; and we have married for a counterfeit bill!" Dr. Bestien, in copying this item adds:—"We soften our German friends grievances by quoting the case of the minister who received as a wedding fee a salt codfish, which, when he had taken it home to his table, was chiefly eaten by the bride and groom, who called upon him at dinner!"

STRIKING HOME.—In the Senate the other day, Davis, of Kentucky, was magniloquent and pathetic over the horrors of the proposition to arm the slaves, and told his audience how well he loved his negroes. Senator Harlan, of Iowa, gave him a hard hit when he suggested that the Senator from Kentucky had omitted in his recital the most heinous part of the proposition that it was "arming children against their fathers."

DR. Chalmers once asked a woman what could be done to induce her husband to attend the kirk. "I don't know," she replied, "unless you were to put a pipe and a pot of porter into the pew."

MISCELLANEOUS.

SLAVES CONTRABAND OF WAR

THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE

Price per thousand, $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.

Orders should be addressed to

THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent liniment for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Wolcott writes from Choctaw County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, Diptheria, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [Here used as a gargle, and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.

PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.

10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING

B. T. BABBITT'S

SUPERIOR FRENCH

CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

THE

PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC,

Containing besides the Calendar and Copious Astronomical Statistics, a History of the Great Rebellion, Biographical Sketches of the Prominent Military Officers, a Dictionary of Military Terms, very full information relative to Military Matters of interest to the people at large, National Hymns, Incidents, Anecdotes, &c., &c.

Published and for sale by DEXTER & Co., 17 Spruce street Newsboys and others wanted to make sales.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess of dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing; and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
THOS. R. CROCKER,
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs Ingersol.

D. W. INGERSOL,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 12th, 1855.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

JAMES EDWIN HALSEY.
193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Headache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want [illegible]

ALFRED LYONS.
20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway; Mrs. Steat's, 78 Thompson St.; Chas. H. Ring's, 155 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

WM. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of

THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb, Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c. they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Billious Stomach, Billous Bowels, Billious Colic, Billous Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz. Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex.

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Waranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the lowest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occasionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of this world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK.

REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY EXPLORING PARTY;

BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Product
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St. N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00.

CONTENTS:

EMBELLISHMENT—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
Music—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or the Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James M'Cune Smith.
Claude Brindas De Salas.—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas.—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture,—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon.
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson
[illegible]
On the Personality of the First Cause,—by Robert Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Gems.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica,—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets,—by M. R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James M'Cune Smith
Titles, by Mary A. S. Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly.
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G. B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by Charles Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection
The Execution of John Brown
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to

THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY

THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound.—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M.D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gordon Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs. M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps, Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. Nell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass. One vol. 12 mo., 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

The Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S. H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom in the slavery of their south, terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations. 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1.00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association, 1775. With notes showing their bearing on slavery, and the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory; also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1.00.

The American Slave Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp. 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 291 pp. 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 85 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 6 cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1, is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2, represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel in cross section, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which places it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two Volumes one. Price, $1.25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed.
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after fifty years of Slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May. Illustrated. 12mo cloth $1.25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz. or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party, late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents must be added

Turner's J. A. Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin Price, $1. Postage, 18 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
100 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pellan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear, the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 36.

NEW YORK, APRIL 5, 1862.

PRICE FOUR CENTS

The Weekly Anglo-African
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY
BY ROBT. HAMILTON,
NO. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.
Notices of Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.
All communications for the paper must be addressed ROBT. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

PART II.

Hear the word!—who fight for freedom!
Shout it in the battle van!
Hope! for bleeding human nature!
Christ the God, is Christ the Man!
H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

SUNDAY MORNING

Early this morning, before the peep of dawn, ere the great bell of St. Xavier had sounded the first knell of her loud summons to the altar of supplication, the wedding party, brides and bridegrooms, with numerous friends and attendants, might have been seen directing their course toward the church of the Ascension.

Scarcely could be seen at this early hour any others, save in different directions noted by their Franciscan caps and long white surplices, numerous visiting priests hastening to the various places for the performance of their official duties.

So dim was the faint inkling light which just began to dawn, that those sons of the holy order presented more the appearance of spectres than men; spectres disturbed from their resting place by a consciousness of wrongs done and left unrepented of while inhabiting their "earthly tenement." Doubtless were they such; for, professing death to the world, its cares and fleeting allurements, sensibly mindful were they of having "left undone" many things that they ought to have done, whether or not they were fearfully conscious of "having done the things they ought not to have done."

Presently the darkness was dispelled by that soft and mellow light peculiar to a West India sky, which ushered in a beautiful cheerful morning.

The priests, but faintly discovered before, could now be distinctly seen, and appeared rather impressive at so early an hour in the morning.

'Behold the men of God!' reverently whispered Abyssa.

'Who made them men of God?' sarcastically asked Montego.

'Are they not God-fearing men?' innocently inquired the simple, religious African.

'To be 'God-fearing' is to do the will of God,' continued he, 'and these men have neglected the letter of the law 'Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them.' These are the words of His divine injunction, every letter of which these men have neglected either to carry out themselves or to enforce. They are, in the stern language of the holy prophet, 'dumb dogs and will not bark.' Were they not, there never would have been occasion for the gathering, organization of the council, nor such a meeting as we must have to-morrow evening at General Blacus' residence.'

'Then they can't marry us!' replied Abyssa, which provoked a general merriment from the company.

In this general good humor Gondolier heartily joined, and nodding his head significantly to one side, observed that it was the only good thing he believed, they did do, and thought that the blacks might try them that time. The merriment was long continued.

Montego explained to Abyssa that the acts of the priests in performance of the marriage ceremony were right, because done in accordance with the law of God, and acknowledged by the laws of the land, but not more sacred than if performed by a civil magistrate, or any other person set apart by law for such purpose. He preferred the priests for the simple reason that he thought them better men than the magistrates. Hastening on they entered the church at a very early hour.

On entering, the vestibule was dark, and had not the numerous variegated tapers emitted from the farthest extremity their scintillating rays to the centre, the body of the building itself, must have been equally gloomy.

Slowly and solemnly did they advance till directly in front of the altar, where a silly looking adult vestry attendant standing with half open mouth, by motion and gesture admonished them that the place whereunto they approached was a sacred spot.

Stopping directly in front of a massive golden flesh colored life like statue representing the Savior of the world, upon either side of which was suspended a malefactor in supplication; they bowed in the name of the Eternal Three. Still looking upon the truthful picture of a skilful hand—the delineations of the well developed muscles of trunk and extremities; the stern and ghastly, though mild, pitying and forgiving expression of the face—a mouth which she almost imagined she could see and hear bid her sorrows cease—in the fullness of native goodness and simplicity of African devotion, no longer able to restrain her feelings, falling upon her knees before the altar, clapping her outstretched hands, with face upturned toward heaven, Abyssa cried out:

'Glory to God!'

At this moment a body of twelve priests arrayed in robes imposing, accompanied by numerous attendants bearing in their hands many colored lighted candles, entered, the leading divine saying:

'Arise my child from grief to joy! The first miracle wrought by our blessed Savior was on an occasion of this nature; a marriage feast in Cana of Gallilee. Be not sorrowful then but rejoice and be exceeding glad, for where Christ is'—pointing to the crucifix before her—'there is no sorrow.'

'Thank God!' responded Abyssa, when the right hand of the simpleton instinctively was lifted to enjoin silence in the house of God and presence of the holy order, as he stood with gaping mouth holding in his left hand a burning wax candle.

The ceremony was short, pointed and impressive, relating mainly to religious duties and a preference for the Roman Catholic church, concluded by the placing of a plain gold ring on the forefinger of the right hand of each of the brides.

'This ring which I place on your finger,' said the priest, 'is a type of our holy religion; in substance as pure as the incorruptible gold; in character like him,' again pointing to the crucifix—'who propagated it, it must endure forever. Here you see a cross surmounted by a ring'—holding up a Maltese cross in the centre of a ring—'which is steadfast in its position, as you see the cross on our spires. But not so with other religious denominations. Upon their churches you behold a weather cock which turns every way the wind blows. This shows that there is nothing steadfast in their professions, they changing whenever it suits them. I pronounce you man and wife in the name of the Immaculate Conception.'

It was surmised that the rings supplied were obtained from a stock in trade kept for the purpose in the church, as at the conclusion of the ceremony the gaping simpleton hinted by the summons of his beckon that there was yet another duty to be attended to, when Placido and Castino following the priests in the vestry, returned three doubloons each less in their pockets.

On this fact becoming known to the married party as they retired through the aisle, Gondolier observed in a whisper:

'These "men of God" make most ungodly charges for their services; a doubloon apiece for the two little gold rings the ladies got.'

The remarks were fully appreciated and equally enjoyed. When the party emerged into the streets, it seemed as if all the beauty and fashion of each race were crowding the streets en masse, making their way instead of to the Cathedral, the head of the See, the church of the Ascension appearing to be their aim.

Jet, topaz, and lilly colored maidens, graceful and comely, the pictures of innocence and virgin purity, majestic and stately matrons, grave and dignified men, as well as children, composed the mighty throng, but by far the fewest of them being the whites. This fact elicited general observation.

'Singular,' remarked Montego, 'that there should be this morning such a large number of the blacks out, and comparatively so few of the whites.'

'Enough of them,' replied Gondolier, 'to watch over us and keep us in our places. These few came out as our masters and overseers.'

'But seriously,' enquired Madame Montego, 'I have always observed it. Why so many more of our people than the whites attend church?'

'Because,' replied Placido, 'we are really more religiously inclined than they.'

'I have also often wondered why it was that we are so much more submissive than they,' resumed Madame Montego.

'Let us for the present defer this discussion,' prudentially admonished Placido, 'and resume it on to-morrow evening at the quarter master's residence.'

CHAPTER XXXV.

ENTERTAINMENT AT CAROLUS BLACUS.

Monday was another day of promise to the oppressed race of Cuba. For although there was on this occasion no general public demonstration, yet so completely were they organized, and systematic their plans, that whatever might be going on among them in Matanzas those in Havana were conversant with it, and that which might take place in Havana was at once known to those of Matanzas, Principe, Trinidad, and St. Jago de Cuba, Fernandina and every part of the colony.

Many who visited the city from a distance on the occasion of the queen's nativity, having entered the Seclusion and received commissions in the council, went forth to establish confidence in all parts of the Island. Even Louis Chevaro, of Principe, was one of the foremost of these.

Early in the evening, they began to gather, which occasion was unlike that of the soiree at Madame Cordora's, where many being unacquainted, doubts and fears prevailed, not only for their fidelity to each other, but also of their acceptance on account of their humble social position, as inferiors and domestics in society.

But to this they came under very different circumstances, having at the other been redeemed from the degradation of captivity, chosen among the self reliant of their people, received into seclusion and acknowledged as equals in the council.

The repast was simple, though substantial and wholesome, the warm table beverage being coffee and chocolate. The assembly was complete, every person being in his place, and of the whole sent out, not one invitation probably had been neglected. Among them there were cheerfulness and even gaiety, though solemnity and dignity prevailed.

At the appointed hour, a servant entered the drawing-room announcing, that the Council Chamber was in readiness, when Gondolier immediately arose following him into an off wing extending back the most distant from the street, which being so completely enveloped with closely clinging creepers and thickly studded shrubbery, that light could not be discerned from an uncurtained window; at the door of which he took a seat armed with a cutlass and his fearful Cuban carver. Shortly after the council was in session.

'Preceding all great undertakings,' said Blake, 'Divine assistance should be invoked. Let us this night, as on former occasions, as the first step in so momentous an undertaking, ask the aid of heaven;' when they immediately fell upon their knees with their heads bowed low to the floor, burying their faces in the palms of their hands.

In this position they remained in silent prayer for half an hour, when silence was broken by Abyssa Gondolier, the captive woman of Soudan, in the following unique supplication, which emanating from any other source could hardly be approved of:

'Make bare thine all conquering arm; uncover thy impenetrable shield; sway thy matchless sceptre; put our enemies to flight before Thee that not one have courage to stand, and at every stroke of the weapon may they fall as dead men before us! Look down we beseech Thee upon us, the least protected, by reason of our weakness, of Thy humble children! We have been captured, torn from friends and home, sold and scattered among strangers in a strange land; yea, to and fro the earth. Sorely oppressed, mocked and ridiculed, refused and denied a common humanity, and not even permitted to serve the same God at the same time and place, in the same way and manner as themselves. Change, oh change, we beseech Thee, this state of things! Give us success in this, our most important undertaking and hour of trial, and enable us we beseech Thee to go forth and conquer even unto a mighty conquest!'

'Amen!' responded the council in conclusion, rising to their seats.

Though simple in manner and language, and humble in source, yet so earnest and impressive was this prayer, that many of the principal persons present were moved with deep emotions of sympathy. Sensibly touched with the unexpected scenes around her, the simple, good-hearted Abyssa wept aloud, clasping her hands exclaiming—

'Oh Lord, look down on one of the least of these thy despised children, and protect her from harm!'

'Ef he don't I will!' exclaimed Gofer, her husband, who, until then, stood outside of the door, but now entered the room with his terrible weapon glittering in his hands, eyes flashing and teeth gnashing for vengeance on his oppressors.

'Thank God,' said Blake, 'for this prospect! It much reminds one of the singular days of miserable happiness spent at times while in bondage, agonizing together in our religious meetings in the huts of the slave quarters of Mississippi and other plantations. But bright as we at times, from our faith and dependence on God, then considered our prospects, there is here a much brighter and happier one in view. When faith and hope were our only dependence, expecting God to do everything for us, and we nothing for ourselves, now with the same faith and hope and dependence on God we have learned and know what He requires at our hands, and stand ready in obedience to his divine command to do it. Let us then, for God's sake, profit by this knowledge, self-reliance, with faith and dependence on God. What is now before the council; God has been praised—what comes next?'

'Our policy is the first consideration,' replied Placido.

'What is that policy?' inquired Blake.

'That is for the council to determine,' replied he.

'The rules laid down, whatever they may be, should be plain, simple, and at once comprehensible to every black person, however illiterate,' said Blake.

'That's the idea at once expressed,' sanctioned Placido with emphasis.

'Shall we not discuss the point raised returning from the church of the Ascension—the equality of the black and white races?' inquired Madame Montego.

'I cannot see the utility of it, Madame Montego,' replied Placido.

'A useless expenditure of time, Madame, it would seem to me,' added Blake. 'Ethiopia shall yet stretch forth her hands unto God; Princes shall come out of Egypt; 'Your God shall be my God, and your people, my people,' should comprehend our whole policy.'

'That's the word of God,' said Placido.

'I'm sure God's word is His will,' added the Madame.

'We would what God wills,' responded Placido.

'Then let God's will be done,' said Blake.

A word from the President of the Council and Commander-in-Chief would be in place at this time in stating his own position and intended course of policy, suggested Montego.

'In the name of God, the cause of my brethren and suffering humanity,' said Blake rising to his feet in answer to the call, 'I can only promise for the confidence and trust reposed in me, that guided and directed by Him in whom I have ever trusted, the will and desires of my head, the most elevated feeling of my heart, and the best directed efforts of my hands shall ever be united in endeavors to carry out, as the humble representative of my race, every just measure which comes within the province of my duty.'

The pithy speech ended, Placido, supported by Antonio Blacus, Justin Pampo, and six ladies, among whom were Ambrosina and Seraphina, also Julia Chevaro, the wife of the Principe quadroon planter, taking their stand on the orchestra prepared for the occasion at the extreme end of the drawing-room, commenced in the most stirring strains the following ballad composed for the evening and event:

'Yes; strike again that sounding string,
And let the wildest numbers roll;
Thy song of fiercest passion sing,
It breathes responsive to my soul!
A soul whose gentlest hours were nursed
In stern adversity's dark way,
And o'er whose pathway never burst
One gleam of hope's enlivening ray.

If thou wilt soothe my burning brain,
Sing not to me of joy and gladness;
'Twill but increase the raging pain,
And turn the fever into madness!
Sing not to me of landscapes bright,
Of fragrant flowers and fruitful trees,
Of azure skies and mellow light,
Or whisperings of the gentle breeze.

But tell me of the tempest roaring
Across the angry foaming deep,
Of torrents from the mountains pouring
Down precipices dark and deep.
Sing of the lightning's lurid flash,
The ocean's roar, the howling storm,
The earthquake's shock, the thunder's crash,
Where ghastly terrors teeming swarm.

Sing of the battle's deadly strife,
The ruthless march of war and pillage;
The awful waste of human life,
The plunder'd town, the burning village!
Of streets with human gore made red,
Of priests upon the altar slain;
The scenes of rapine, woe and dread,
That fill the warrior's horrid train.

Thy song may then an echo wake,
Deep in this soul, long crush'd and sad,
The direful impressions shake,
Which threaten now to drive me mad.'

Again the whole assemblage bowed in silent devotion.

Their justification of the issue made was on the fundamental basis of original priority, claiming that the western world had been originally peopled and possessed by the Indians—a colored race—and a part of the continent in Central America by a pure black race. This they urged gave them an indisputable right with every admixture of blood, to an equal, if not superior claim to an inheritance of the Western Hemisphere.

The colored races they averred were by nature adapted to the tropical regions of this part of the world as to all other similar climates, it being a scientific fact that they increased and progressed whilst the whites decreased and continually retrograded, their offspring becoming enervated and imbecile. These were facts worthy of consideration, which three hundred years had indisputably tested. The whites in these regions were there by intrusion, idle consumers subsisting by imposition; whilst the blacks, the legitimate inhabitants, were the industrious laborers and producers of the staple commodities and real wealth of these places. They had inherited those regions by birth, paid for the soil by toil, irrigated it with their sweat, enriched it with their blood, nothing remaining to be done but by a dependence in Divine aid, a reliance in their own ability and strength of their own arms, but to claim and take possession.

'On this Island,' said Blake, 'we are the many and the oppressors few; consequently, they have no moral right to hold rule over us, whilst we have the moral right, and physical power to prevent them. Whatever we determine shall be, will be. What say you brethren, shall we rise against our oppressors and strike for liberty, or will we remain in degradation and bondage, entailing upon unborn millions of our progeny the insufferable miseries which our fathers endured and bequeathed to us?'

'Liberty! liberty or death!' was the frantic response of every voice.

'Then,' concluded he, 'freedom is ours!'

The manifestations succeeding this conclusion were indescribable and such only as an abjectly oppressed and degraded people determined to be free were capable of giving. Applause, shouts, cheers, sighs, heaves, groans, and tears, all with intense feelings of restraint, were there exhibited. They looked each other in the face, then at their chief, wringing their finger ends and pressing the palms of their hands.

'Arm of the Lord awake!' cried some.

'Glory to God!' cried others.

Their course henceforth being decided on, they determined that nothing should daunt their courage nor obstruct their way.

'What hope of assistance have we from our sister islands,' inquired Madam Montego.

'None at all,' replied Placido.

'Nothing from the British colonies, all of which are free?'

'Not any. Because although our brethren there are all free and equal in the law, yet they are a constituent part of the body politic and subject alike to the British government and laws which forbid any interference in foreign affairs by any of her Majesty's subjects.'

'Are not our people, the most numerous part of the population of these islands?'

'They are.'

'Why then do they not at once rise up and assert their independence?' continued Madame Montego.

'Simply because under the circumstances, this is not particularly desirable, if they were able to do so, which they are not. What they most desire is freedom and equality politically, practically carried out, having no objection to being an elementary part of the British body politic.'

'This I can fully comprehend—it is plain,' replied the Madame; 'but why should we who also owe allegiance to our mother country, Spain, be more justifiable than they, in striking for liberty and independence?'

'The cases are intirely different,' explained Placido. 'The British islands have all been fully enfranchised by that nation, all the inhabitants being equally eligible to positions; whilst here in Cuba we are the political and social inferiors of the whites, existing as freemen only by sufferance, and subject to enslavement at any time.'

'Is there no remedy for these evils?'

'We have petitioned and prayed for a redress of grievances, and not only been refused but spurned and ridiculed with greater restrictions placed upon us. And bad as things were before, since the advent of these Americans in the colony, our people have scarcely an hour of peaceful existence. Should we under such circumstance strike for liberty, it must also be for independent self government, because we have the prejudices of the mother country and the white colonists alike to contend against. Whereas, were we as we should be, enfranchised by Spain, we would then only have the opposition of Cuba and Porto Rico, and should be loyal to Spain.'

'This is all very plain Senor Placido. One question more and I shall be satisfied,' said the Madame. 'What aid may we expect from Hayti—she is independent?'

'Hayti is a noble self-emancipated nation, but not able to aid us, excepting to give such of us shelter, as might find it necessary or convenient to go there.'

'What of Liberia?' enquired Maggie Blake. 'I'm sure while living in Mississippi I heard a great deal about the greatness of Liberia. When I went north, I often heard the white folks say, it was the greatest country in the world; that the negroes were better off there than the whites were in America.'

'They are too weak, and too far off dear Maggie, to render us any aid at present, though making praiseworthy efforts to develope their own nationality, and the staple products of their native Africa. The whites did not belive what they said, nor even what is really true concerning the advantages of that country.'

'Brethren,' said Blake, 'you must "tread the winepress alone" so far as earthly aid is concerned, only looking above to Him who "tempers the storm to the shorn lamb," and directs the destiny of nations.'

'God's will be done!' responded Montego.

'Amen!' added the woman of Soudan.

'Let us then,' replied Placido impromptu:

"On God and our own strength rely,
And dare be faithful though we die;
But trusting in the aid of Heaven,
And willing with unfaltering arm,
The utmost power which God has given—
Conscious that the Almighty power
Will nerve the faithful soul with might,
Whatever storms around may lower,
Who boldly strikes for the true and right."

They closed this most portentious gathering with the doxology of 'Gloria in excelsior,' and 'Praise God from whom all blessings flow.'

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

HEAD QUARTERS, HOOKER'S DIVISION, Lower Potomac, March 21st, 1862.

MR. EDITOR:—The stupendous retreat of the Confederate army from the whole line of the Potomac, must be conceded by every man in the grand army to be a bold and hazardous military feat. An army of seventy thousand men in the face of nearly one hundred and fifty thousand, encumbered with thousands of civilians, with their moveable property and slaves, carrying all off successfully, leaving behind them a desolate and depopulated country which the grand army, when it takes upon itself sufficient vitality, may take possession of. When this is formally done, I suppose orators will proclaim the wonderful achievement of slumber and inertness, poets will canonize it. The immortal McClellan, the pet young American general, the hater, Young American-like, of abolitionists, good morals, manners, and of liberty, who could not take it into his heart to hurt the poor rebels, or to take from them their dear "niggers," nor, would not a "nigger" see inside the lines of his pickets, unless he has sent a bullet into the heart of some poor mudsill, has become the founder of a new school of warfare. Future generals may emulate his novel tactical genius, those stray imps of the demon of treason and slavery who have escaped the tender mercies of the grand army, and have kept up communication with their satanic emissaries, in spite of glittering bayonets, passports, and frowning cannon; who have robbed the nation of its commerce, its trade, its manufactures, its power, and its fair fame; who have spilled the blood of the best men of the nation; who have robbed four millions of human beings of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, may dance with hellish glee and exultation in the lurid glare of burning cities and towns, and while the hundreds of thousands of national troops have been sleeping in their quarters and silently gazing on the rebel entrenchments, the rebels have been preparing a stupendous movement of concentration which they could never have done if the army of the Potomac had two months ago attacked and routed the main army in front of it. But the fortuitous moment has passed, and the grand army is demoralized and to-day is more inefficient than they were three months ago. I will guarantee they are not a whit more efficient or better drilled at least. But I see in it the finger of God. In ninety days the rebels will be concentrated and hidden in the interior and the mountain fastnesses, and the war will be protracted to such a length that the black Unionists will have to step in at last and settle the question. This they will cheerfully do, although how? Montgomery Blair, in the capacity of prophet, declares that in the event of such an action, the result would be a war of extermination. I think so too, a war of extermination of slaveholders as a class: there would not be a soul left who stood in the way of liberty and union! Mr. Blair, the negro has something to say about this matter as well as yourself, though you hold in your possession the portfolio of a cabinet officer.

Although the rebels have abandoned their entrenchments, we still lie here, and we dare not put our feet on the Virginia shore unless we have a pass signed and countersigned by the commanding officer. Day before yesterday I took two hours to myself in the vicinity of Cockpit Point battery. For some reason or other the guards would let me make but a short stay. I saw many deserted log huts, and quite a large number of tents, on one which, was marked in large illy-shaped letters, "No quarters for the Yankees," and quite a large well furnished mansion, which a poor white woman told me had generally been used as the quarters of the commanding officer. I saw the table at which he sat eating his dinner when the Gunboats commenced to shell the batteries. One of the shells fell in the centre of the room. He left his plate, knife and folk and scampered off, his dinner half eaten on his plate, so sayeth a poor white woman. The name of the officer I could not learn. Another woman stated that the rebels had treated her very badly. On the day before they left, they took her last hog. While she related this, a big fat porker stuck his nose in the door and grunted a contradiction. The woman colored up, and if we had not been so black we might have colored up also, but we thought to ourself and looked black. We found numerous secesh specimens, such as ragged coats, wornout shoes, hideous looking knives, buttons, miserably written letters, of which I would fain send you specimens did space allow. Scores of freedmen are coming in. There are now some seventy or seventy-five at Rum Point, and some twenty or twenty-five more at Liverpool Point, added to those who were already there. They are principally from Stafford County, and were forced to secrete themselves in the woods and hedges, to escape being run off to Richmond. Some come in wifeless and childless, some husbandless and fatherless. Wives, husbands, children, and parents, have been run off to aid the cause of slavery and treason. They are generally intelligent. Quite a number can read. One of the most communicative, whose name is Peter King, was held to service and labour by George Moncure, of Kelsea farm, Stafford County. He has a wife and two children, whom he desires to take with him to the North. His sister and grandmother were seized by the retreating rebels and carried off. He states that he has a mother living at Altoona, Pa., whose marriage name is Maria Alexander; Lieut. Baune, of the 26th Regt, the ordnance officer of the division, in company with a telegraph operator ventured too far outside the lines, and were made prisioners by the rebel pickets, and he states that he saw them en route for Fredericksburg, Va., under a guard of twelve men. This is some relief to the uncertainty of their fate, as it was feared that they might have been murdered by the bush-whackers. One man was found three or four days ago with his throat cut from ear to ear.

It is a sight to see these men and women who, though born and bred in slavery, boldly grapple with death itself for the sake of freedom. They tell me they were not badly fed or poorly clad, that there is an abundance of provisions in secessia. All they seem to desire is liberty. I heard some of them telling some officers that they fared very badly, and on investigation I found it to be a rule amongst them to so represent their case, shrewdly knowing that in the majority of cases the white man's idea of the wrongfulness of slavery lies in the bad treatment of the slaves. Their idea is, if he could be convinced that the slaves were well fed, clothed, and housed, he would forget that man has an inalienable right to liberty, and believe slavery to be a sublime and beneficent institution because its victims could revel in hog and hominy. This is one of the lessons slavery teaches. Here is another specimen of the deceptions which the necessities of the slave's condition compels him to resort to. Henry Morsell, the slave of B. H. Eglin, was overseer on his master's plantation. The master one day, revolving in his mind the probability of his whole human stock deserting him, asked Henry whether he intended to leave him like the hundreds who had already left good masters. Henry became terribly enraged, and even shed tears because his master had allowed such a thought to enter his mind. The master pleased and delighted pronounced him a faithful, and a noble fellow. "Indeed I is massa," declared the faithful Henry. That night about 12 o'clock a large robust, deeply colored specimen of manhood, might be seen making steady and rapid strides towards Rum Point. The next evening about the same hour the same specimen, who we may call Henry Morsell, might be seen walking up Broad street, Philadelphia, snuffing free air. Mr. Eglin says he "don't care a d——n for all the niggers in the country," declares that "they will run away in spite of h——l, they are 'fore God." A little boy about 12 years of age who had made his escape, sent word to his mother and two little sisters, that he would soon be in a free country where he could earn money for himself, and that he intended to save his money and buy them out of bondage. When boys of twelve years are animated by such thoughts as these, what must be the thoughts that dwell in the minds of hardy and sturdy manhood?

G. E. S.

MR. COX AND THE SLAVE WHO WAS WHIPPED TO DEATH.

To the Editor of the N. Y. Tribune:

SIR—The case of "Negro Jack" was in part published in "The Christian Advocate and Journal" of this city in December last, from Chaplain Boole of the 5th Excelsior. This gentleman informed me that the whole truth was not written, in order that certain persons of the regiment might escape censure; but that now, inasmuch as the flat denial is made by the friends of Cox to the facts of the case, there is no longer consistency in nor cause for concealment.

Now for the facts: "Negro Jack" did inform the officers of the 5th Regiment Excelsior of the Secession sympathies of his cruel master and through his information the discoveries were made—already noticed in his letter. He did not live with the regiment, as the jury represent, neither was he a constant guide to them. If he drank whisky to excess it was no more than members of that jury do (my eyes being witness), and in one point, he was more respectable than they; the soldiers never saw Jack drunk publicly. Cox and Davis were generally so. For his patriotic and valuable services Jack was promised, on the honor of an officer, by the Lieutenant under whose command the scout was made, that he should not be given up to his master to be punished, nor should he (Cox) be permitted to injure him.

This was necessary, inasmuch as Cox had become terribly enraged at the Negro for discovering the movements of Secessionists to the military. A detachment of the 5th regiment had left for Budd's Ferry some days before the remaining companies were ordered to join them. It was while this second detachment was on the march that the capture of Jack took place. The detachment was under command of Acting Major Giles. "Ben Franklin" says that when the regiment (2d detachment) left Port Tobacco they were "followed by Mr. Cox in company with about 15 or 20 other citizens of the county, whose slaves had left with the said regiment."

Now, this latter assertion I pronounce an inexcusable falsehood—a plain, barefaced lie. Not a slave went with the regiment; and in proof of this, I assert that those "15 or 20" gentlemen took position in the square of the town and closely inspected the companies as they filed past them on the march, on the look-out for their slaves, and failed to discover a single "chattel."

That their slaves did, very ungratefully leave their kind-hearted masters and come into camp expecting to find freedom under the Union flag, is true, but whose was the blame? Why did they leave? Is the army to be censured for this outgushing inspiration of freedom in the heart of the oppressed blacks when they vainly imagine the stars of our glory and our shame are floating in their sight as the beacon of freedom? These slave vultures seeking their prey had obtained an order from General Hooker requiring the commandant of the 5th Regiment to drive out from the camp all the Maryland negroes, fugitives. The order was presented to Major Glass by some of the same "fifteen or twenty citizens," who also asked of Major Glass that he drive them to a certain point where they could be surrounded by the drivers and captured. This, to the honor of Major Glass be it said, he refused to do "for Gen. Hooker or any other General," but would only issue a command for them to leave the camp, for the woods or anywhere else.

When the second detachment had marched about three or more miles from Port Tobacco, Cox, in company with others on horseback, drove furiously up to the centre of the battalion, and without a word of warning, he (Cox) rushed upon the ranks where he saw his negro. Jack had joined the regiment on the march. "Ben Franklin" says that Cox "was set upon by the soldiery."

The fact is, that Cox broke into the ranks, and with the butt-end of a heavy whip began to "set upon" Jack's head, and in doing this, being drunk, he struck several of the soldiers. It was for this that they "set upon" him, and when they saw the insolent slave vultures on horse heading for the ranks some fixed bayonets and swore that if they drew a step nearer they would run them through. Cox continued to use his heavy whip, striking indiscriminately soldiers and the negro, and in his drunken madness, his stout, closely knit, powerful frame, his eyes glaring all on fire with rage and whisky, he seemed more like an incarnate devil than a representative of human kind.

The officer in command at length quelled the disturbance and brought the men to quiet; and it is true, as asserted by "Franklin," that had it not been for his interference Cox would have been killed. But why? Not because the soldiers thirsted for his blood, but in his insanity of passion he continued to strike at them with his fists and whip to obtain his negro, as though they, too—Americans all—were chattels, "mudsills." Major Glass did, in the presence of those soldiers, rebuke Cox in the strongest terms for his unwarranted and mad assault, and said, "You have insulted these men; they understand law as well as you, and they know that your attack is criminal. You should be thankful, sir, that you have escaped with your life. I am commander of this battalion, and you and these gentlemen should have applied to me, and not have committed such an outrage." Now, it may quiet the consciences of some objectors to be informed that neither the officer in command nor one of the soldiers engaged in the fight was an Abolitionist nor Republican. This is asserted upon a personal knowledge of their politics and sentiments.

After order was restored, the regiment resumed its march. And now began the most shameful part of this odious transaction. Cox and his minions were accompanied by Capt. Morey of the 5th Regiment, Excelsior Brigade, who had been appointed Provost-Marshal of the town of Port Tobacco, and who in that capacity had enjoyed free intercourse with the inhabitants. The result was an intimacy with Cox and some others whose names appear among the jury in this case. He accompanied Cox from Port Tobacco, and stood by his side when he rushed upon the ranks and struck the soldiers. Capt. Morey rode in the same carriage with Cox, and although he doubtless did not anticipate the result, he encouraged Cox in attempting to drag out his negro. Morey's sympathies were with the slave-vultures before Cox was beaten; before the fight he had offered to obtain his slave for Cox. The battalion marched on till nightfall. Meanwhile, Morey had counseled the defeated chivalry to retire, and wait for him at a certain point some distance in the rear. Under cover of the darkness, and by a false pretext made to allay the suspicion of his lieutenant, who had promised protection to the negro for his services, Morey took Jack to the rear between a file of men, marched him to the place designated, where Cox and his comrades were in waiting, and delivered him to his master.

How many miles he was compelled to walk after Cox I will not presume to say, nor is it of consequence. One thing is certain: Cox and his overseer beat the negro after getting him home, and he died immediately after the beating. The story of the Jury and doctor, that he was drunk the day he was captured, is a lie; I saw him upon the march—saw the poor old man, when the Regiment came to a halt, craw! away under a tree off the roadside, and with anxious face watch to see whether he was pursued. What do the Jury mean by saying that he lived on less food, and poorer than he had been accustomed to, and died from "exposure and excitement?" Do they insinuate that he fared poorly while with the regiment, and was hard worked while acting as guide? Why then did he not leave and go back to his "indulgent" master! Where did Jack get the whisky which created the "excitement," which, as the Jury say, helped him on to his death? I challenge that Jury to repeat their libel in the presence of any of the 5th Regiment: an excitement would be raised without whisky.

The jury were evidently reduced to straits, and "Ben. Franklin," the justice, "hard up" for testimony, when they admitted the evidence of slaves to make out their case, and relied upon it for substantiating their story; slave testimony is not admissible in law—why did they take it in this case? Was it taken at all?

All the truth told by that jury composed of "twelve of the most upright citizens of Charles County," is contained in one single clause of their report, "negro Jack died of exposure and excitement." The conclusion is correct, the premises false, all false! It was the "excitement" of an unmerciful whipping, and the "exposure" for hours tied by the hands to the death post.

So true is it, and so well known, that Jack came to his death by ill treatment, that a movement was begun at the time by several officers which contemplated the arrest of Cox and an appeal to the law, and to test the question whether the Maryland Slave Code would shield such a villain and refuse to punish such an outrage against common humanity, because the victim happened to be only a "chattel." And this was only prevented by circumstances of duty placing them at too remote distance to prosecute their purpose.

The empanneling of the jury was a screen behind which Cox hoped to hide the evidence of his barbarity; why, if Jack died a natural death, and Cox was not frightened, was a jury called to sit on the death of a slave? If "Ben. Franklin," the "upright" juryman, or any other supporters of slave-murderers in Charles County, desire the public to have knowledge of further revelations in that line, they are at hand, and can be given, for the "half has not been told." Ex.

New York, March 22, 1862.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, APRIL 6, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN IN NEW YORK AND VICINITY.

After the exceedingly generous demonstration of the 3d of March in aid of this paper, I had no right to expect that you would respond to a second call, nor would it have been made but for the urgent solicitations of many who were prevented from attending the first concert on account of the storm. But the result of the effort at the Cooper Instituttte last Monday evening makes me doubly assured of your determination to make the enterprise a success, and leaves me without words adequate to express my gratitude to you. To the parents of the children performing on that occasion, to Miss Sarah Eonalls and assistants, to Miss Fanny Tompkins, John Peterson and Ransom F. Wake, Esqs., and to the children I owe obligations that shall not be forgotten.

To the clergy of this city and vicinity, particularly Rev. Moses Manning, of Williamsburgh, I am deeply indebted for their efforts to make the affair successful, by reading the notice from their pulpits and arranging for the sale of tickets among their congregation. Also to my many personal friends would I return my sincere thanks for their exertions in my behalf.

Robert Hamilton.

EMANCIPATION.

In looking over the "signs in the heavens" which favor emancipation, the first and most prominent is that state of the public mind which will follow the announcement of peace. In the triumph of the hour of a conquered peace, the enlarged and jubilant public mind will be generous, good humored, charitable—filled with all the better principles of our common nature, and desirous that all may share in the common joy. So, when the people of France triumphed over a proud and insolent aristocracy, in the joy of their success they immediately emancipated and affranchised all slaves held in the French colonies. In the enlargement of the heart of England which followed the passage of the Reform bill in 1832, a generous feeling towards their oppressed fellow subjects in the West Indies was the principal source of the disposition as well as the power of the people which culminated in the abolition act of 1836. And in our own beloved country it is notorious that the success of the revolutionary arms in 1783 found the most glorious and fitting expression in the initiation of emancipation, which, but for the cotton gin, would long since have blessed our entire republic. It would seem, therefore, a normal succession of events, that a triumph in arms over this desperate and wicked revolt of slaveholders must terminate in the abolition of slavery. We are not optimists in regard to poor human nature, and, growing up under the harrow of American prejudice, we cannot be accused of a too favorable view of the American heart; but it is contradictory to all our conceptions of the vilest of mankind even to imagine that the million of men in arms with their bayonets pointing at the heart of slavery, their eyesight sickened with the horrors of slavery, and their hearts already warmed in human feeling towards the slave himself—that these men shall consent to the continuance of this vile institution as part and parcel of the great Union which they are risking their all to preserve.

Another reason why emancipation must follow peace, is found in the fact that peace will find slavery deprived of all its main supports, and with nothing but its own hideous ugliness to oppose against the emancipating tendencies of the rejoicing mind of the people. Let us see what these supports are, and how they are giving way.

The pulpit, the counting-room, and politics have hitherto maintained, upheld, and exalted slavery in this land.

When the New York "Observer" argues in favor of general emancipation; when Dr. Vinton, of Trinity Church in the city of New York, preaches on the necessity, under certain circumstances, of emancipation; when Dr. Francis Hawkes resigns the rectorship of Cavalry Church in New York city, on account of his pro-slavery views and feelings; when the sedate and conservative Brick Church vomits forth a priest for pro-slavery heresy, it is safe to affirm, of the whole North, that its religion is divorced from slavery henceforth and forever; for if these things occur among the high-priests of the aristocracy, how much more thorough the revolution among the middle class? The frequent assertion of those revolutionised to anti-slavery, that "they are no abolitionists," is very harmless in its way, so long as they tread in the path of emancipation.

The commercial aspect of the question is most cheering to the friends of freedom. For it not only presents the fact that the counting-house prop is knocked away from slavery, but the additional assurance that the absence of this prop will keep the pulpit "all right." Our South-side Adamses were the Reverend Cream Cheeses of the cotton lords. The books of our merchants are closed against the slaveholders for a generation at least, and slavery cannot live one generation without the "advances" of our merchants. The end of this war will find the slaveholders as poor and helpless, in regard to the material for growing another crop, and the means of subsistence until it gets to market, as the neighborhood of St. Marks, Hayti, finds the poor hunger-stricken wretches whom the greed of one white man and the treachery of a dozen black men have decoyed away from their comfortable homes in the United States. For at least thirty years past the great slaveholders have lived on trust: they had received and spent the proceeds of their crops months before they were ready for market. Their houses, their lands, their slaves, were, like those of the West Indies at the time of emancipation, mortgaged to their full value, when the rebellion broke out. And one broad reason for the opposition to the "confiscation bill" consists in the fact that two thirds of the arable land of the South is mortgaged to patriotic men of means in New York, Boston and London. There would seem therefore a pecuniary impossibility in the resumption of the slave-system on its old basis. For the slaveholders will not only be without means, they will in vain seek credit. Without means, without credit, the system must die of inanition, even without the triumph call of the brothers of the North for the freedom of their brothers of the South. In addition to their manifest bankruptcy, the slaveholders have openly avowed their dishonesty; and it will be something new in finance, if men holding the strong box, will lend to persons who are at once thieves and bankrupts. This pecuniary element had been tending toward emancipation for many years: and if, early in the rebellion, moneyed men and merchants of the North still upheld the South, it was in the forlorn hope of realising something of what they already knew to be bad debts. In the debates of the Confederate Congress, it is already admitted that "cotton is no longer king:" and the Southern people are urged to cultivate the cereals and raise stock, which pursuits have been the death-blow of slavery in the North, and will be at the South also should time be afforded for its trial. So that slavery is driven from the counting-house as well as the sanctuary in the North.

The political support to slavery cannot survive the advent of peace. The unity of the slave States is broken; and with their unity departs their power. On the contrary, there is a unity of political elements at the North on the one subject of opposition to the slave power. The golden bribe which the President has held out and Congress ratified, for the initiation of emancipation, at once severs the unity of the slave power. The nation will be too generous to haggle over the price; the slaves will be paid for magnificently: and the party, now doubly impoverished, which will be but too glad to realise, will be large if not overwhelming in the great border slave States. Then must come up the agitation of emancipation in these border States themselves; between taking a fair cash price in United States gold for their slaves, on the one hand, and remote promises to pay from confederate thieves on the other, even the immortal ignorance of the people of Accomac county would not long hesitate. The political power of slavery in the slave States will be shaken if not shattered by another element. Months ago the New York "Leader" well said, "the broad foot of the white man is planted on the far side of the Potomac, and there will be no step backward—his onward march will be the destruction of slavery." Of the million of soldiers now invading the slave States nearly one-half will remain there after the war, attracted by its rich soil and genial climate. These men will have a powerful influence in moulding the politics of the slave States; the old slaveocracy will have been crushed out by the war, and these white men from the North will be ten times the match of the poor whites in the said States; and these white men from the North will never re-inaugurate slavery so long as they chant—

"His soul is marching on!"

But the last and strongest hope of emancipation dwells in the slave himself. It is impossible that this war thus far has failed to rouse in his soul all over the South an abiding desire for freedom. The power of their masters will be broken before their eyes; they already see them fleeing, and hunted, scattered and slain, their pride gone, their arrogance subdued. Tens of thousands of slaves already stand up, freed by the war. Will the remainder submit quietly to their doom? Slavery cannot any longer be kept up at the South without a standing army: such an army the South is all too poor to create and support for such a purpose. Will the North do so? No! a thousand times no.

These views are cheering and hopeful. The day of deliverance is at hand. To such weak-kneed brethren as favor expatriation we need only point to the vote of Maryland within a year, when the people of that State voted to retain in their midst the free colored population as a necessity.

You can easily keep yourself through the winter from freezing, by getting continually into hot water with your neighbors.

STORY OF ANOTHER RETURNED EMIGRANT FROM HAYTI.

Mr. Isaiah Jones of Windsor, C. W., who left this city last September for Hayti, in company with his father, mother, and about one hundred and thirty other colonists, returned a few day ago to this country as we announced in our last. The colony arrived at St. Marks, after a passage of eight days. Mr. Jones' statement is in substance as follows:

After arriving at St. Marks, I was obliged to wait about two months before I received my land which was located near the Valley of the Artibonite, about ten miles from St. Marks, and of which I cleared up a quarter of an acre before I abandoned it. I gave up working the land for the want of water, the nearest being about three miles off. After remaining at St. Marks nearly three months, I started on a trip to Gonaive, Cape Haytien, Jeremie, Port au Prince, and other places in search of employment, but met with no success. During my stay on the island, I witnessed much suffering among the emigrants, from the want of the necessaries of life; sufferings that the government were not always disposed to alleviate. I do not know of an agent there, with the exception of Mr. Elie, who is qualified for the position. They are overbearing, neglectful, and frequently treat the emigrants with brutality. Here is an instance: Mr. Wm. Haines, of Canada, for two months was very ill with the fever, during the greater part of which period he was neglected by the agents, and consequently was without food, and died from actual starvation. Such cases were not rare. At one time the mortality was so great at St. Marks, that an undertaker, Mr. Henry Johnson, of Rochester, was constantly enployed in making interments. During my stay there, I suppose that at least 50 per cent of the colonists died. The number of deaths was probably increased by the crowded state of the hospital. The native females generally were kind to the emigrants, and done much toward their relief. The Haytians are opposed to immigration, and believe that the emigrants have been deceived by the agents here.

A meeting was held at St. Marks in relation to the treatment of emigrants. It grew out of the ill treatment of Mr. Josiah Tucker, of New York, on the occasion of his application to Mr. Onwell, a government agent for means to purchase the necessaries of life for his sick family. The abuse consisted in the striking of Mr. Tucker by said Onwell with a club in his efforts to drive him from the office. At this meeting resolutions were passed condemning the conduct of said agent, and asking the interference of the government in their behalf. A report of the gathering having been made to the agent, representing it to have been the incipiency of a conspiracy against the government, the police were ordered to notify the emigrants that no assemblage of more than fifty persons, would be allowed. Persons composing a large assemblage were liable to imprisonment. Much feeling exists against the agents in this country, particularly the general agent, James Redpath, whom they threaten to hang if found there.

Much complaint is made by the emigrants in relation to the publication of letters in the "Pine and Palm," purporting to come from them, but were probably written in the office of said paper. There was one, with my mother's (Mrs. S. E. Jones) signature attached, but was not written by, nor for her. As an illustration of the eagerness of the emigrants to get away from there, I will give the case of a Mrs. H., of Philidelphia, who having lost a daughter, could not attend her funeral, fearing that the vessel might sail without her. I do not believe that there are a dozen persons there but that would return could they get away.

Freedom of speech does not exist in Hayti. I understand that they are about passing a law forbidding the introduction of foreign newspapers into the country, without the consent of the government. The Haytian government is a military despotism in the strictest sense of the term. People in this country cannot account for the nonreception of letters containing intelligence unfavorable to emigration. Persons there dare not write such letters; it would cost them their lives.

I will say one word in regard to the customs and habits of the people. The natives, male and female, generally go half clad, bordering on nudity. The women wear turbans on their heads, and do not seem to have any use for hats. The men always go armed. Persons standing sponsor for children have a claim on them in case of the death of the parents, and frequently practise the greatest cruelty toward them. One mode of punishment is to place the child with its knees on a stone, with its hands raised to its head with the palm upward, in each a stone, and a large stone on its head. In this position it is terribly scourged."

We have not space this week for any more of Mr. Jones statement, but will only add that Mr. Jones declares that he will never be found leaving this country again for Hayti, through a red path or any other path that leads to destruction.

THE MISSION SCHOOL OF CHATHAM, C. W.

To the Editor of the Anglo—Sir: Whatever may have been said in public or otherwise in opposition to this school has as yet failed to prove that it is not doing a great work for the colored people of this vicinity. Heretofore the atmosphere has been freighted with sordid opinions about this school, which were conceived in the evil passion of persons who have never visited it, nor even given themselves the trouble of knowing its true status. We are too prone in becoming the converts of a prevailing sentiment without setting ourselves right upon its veracity. As regard the resolutions which were circulated in opposition to this school, through the Chatham "Argus," Dec. 19th, Toronto "Globe" and "Pine and Palm," bearing my name, I would say that I remonstrated against their publication, because I perceived that it was a Sectarian strife that occasioned the meeting in which they were nominally passed; and furthermore, being a neutral on the church dissension, I did not want to be entangled in church quarrels, and thereby incur the holy indignation of one party, when I had no disposition to do so. On the 18th of March this school held its examination, and truly it was a complete success, and an honor to Mrs. I. D. Shadd, its teacher. Sixty-five scholars were in attendance this term—in which was taught algebra, arithmetic, history, philosophy, grammar, botany, penmanship, &c. &c. There were present some of the best educated colored men of Chatham, who took part in examining the several classes. The scholars were neatly clad, and an expression of intelligence beamed on each countenance. The recitations, too, were to the satisfaction of those present, interlarded with music from the melodeon by some of the pupils who are learning this branch. The following pupils received prizes: Miss Mary Hosey, 1st; Wm. Russell, 2d; and Wm. Douglass 3d prize in history. C. Hosey and Loyd Wheeler—prizes in geography. Geo Burton 1st prize in grammar; Mary Levere 1st prize in arithmetic; Elihu Smith 1st prize in catechism of history; John Jones, 2d; Henry Smith—prize in penmanship; Henry Jones 1st prize in Mother's Catechism; and Miss Martha Scott for exemplary conduct. Mrs. I. D. Shadd is a woman of great forbearance and integrity, and under her and Mrs. M. A. S. Cary's (its agent) management, the school will rise above the surges of opposition. My Haytian policy has evaporated into the formation of a new project, which I intend ere long to make known to the public by your permission, through the columns of the "Anglo," and which I am inclined to believe will meet the approbation of the free colored people of the United States.

Yours for American Redemption,
J. W. Menard.
Chatham, C. W., March 26, '62.

THE MISSION SCHOOL AT CHATHAM C. W.

Mr. Editor:—I wish to say through the columns of the "Anglo-African," and notwithstanding the transcendently wicked, and in every particular, false resolutions, published first in the "Chatham Argus," then in the "Toronto Globe," and lastly in the "Pine and Palm," that the lot upon which the Mission School at Chatham is now situated, and upon which a large number of the children of fugitives and others are now instructed—many of them entirely gratis—will be lost not to I. D. Shadd, but to the trustees and the people for whom the Mission was established, if the debt due on the lot cannot be met.

The design has been to establish a High School and permanent literary institution. To that end I shall continue to solicit donations for the purpose, from abolitionists and christions. One of the most unpleasant duties conceivable is to fight falsehood, nevertheless it has to be done. There is a great war going on in your country at this time; there are jealous, designing, aspiring, dangerous men within it now doing all to defeat success in the right direction by lying on your most capable men.

There is a wicked scheme being prosecuted for the purpose of decoying colored people to Hayti, that certain white humbugs may carry out their scheme of subjugating Hayti to American domination and securing through the imbecile and treacherous Jeffrard a place in your Capital as the representatives of the Haytians—of a people by whom they are disfranchised—and thus cater to the prejudice against which they hypocritically pretend to disclaim. To carry out this audacious scheme which, however, is fast coming to an end, have not they villified, attempted to deride and lied about the leading colored men of the land, ever since their scheme was questioned? And do they not proclaim a grand falsehood continually, by designating the men of the people the "past" leaders? In view of such well known facts, I should not complain. I suppose that we of the Mission School get our share. There have been but three grand falsehoods—two sets of defeated resolutions—and that Refugee Home story, guite a small list, with a few incidental humtwangs by the western whippers in, surely one woman need not complain. Oh but there will be a day of reckoning for these lying men, and I can afford to wait. But the Mission School will continue—the people have crowded their children in, and Revs. H. R. Simpson, C. H. Pearce, Right Rev. A. R. Green, and other gentlemen who have visited and lectured to them, give encouraging words. Should the Haytian opposition cause the property to be sold, because of inability to meet instalments due, we design to prosecute the object, God willing, for a High School must go up, if only brick at a time.

Mary A. S. Cary.

INTELLIGENCE FROM LIBERIA.

Mr. Editor: We are continually receiving the evidence that the day has arrived when the blacks of the United States are desirous to know what is going on in all parts of the world among the people with whom we are particularly identified. We also notice a growth of liberal sentiments on the part of the whites toward us. I therefore feel assured that you will give place in your valuable paper to the following items of news from the African Republic of Liberia:

The Legislature have authorised a commission of emigration to itinerate in the United States. The Commissioners named are Profs. Alex. Crummell, E. W. Blyden and J. D. Johnson, Esq., all Liberians, who shall present the advantages Liberia posseses over all other countries for the colored man, and shall invite the class mentioned to her shores. This movement will be entirely distinct from that of the Colonization Society. All persons desirous of emigrating will be given a free passage to Liberia, six months support, farm land, and medical aid free of charge. If they are not satisfied they will not be under obligations to remain.

The Ladies Annual Picnic was a fine affair. There were about 250 or 300 persons present, who enjoyed themselves much.

A Grand Masquerade Ball came off recently in fine style.

A Fancy Dress Ball took place also subsequently, at which the following characters appeared: Mr. S. L. L., late of your city, appeared as Norma; Miss A. P. as Lady Macbeth; Mrs. A. G. McG. as Empress Eugenia; Mrs. E., of the Gold Coast, as Princess; Mrs. S. V. B., of Sinoe, as Queen of Spain; Mrs. C. O. L. as La Sonambula; Miss D. J. as Shepherdess; Miss L. B as Flower Girl; Miss E. E. J. as La Cracoveina; Miss H. C. J. as Child of the Regiment; Mrs. G. S. as Spring; Mrs. J. D. J. as Turkish Lady; Mr. C. B. D. as Surgeon in the French Army; Mr. S. as Surgeon in the French Navy; Mr. J. M., of Cape Palmas, as Prince De Joinville; Mr. J. M. M. as Lord Elsmore; Mr. B. A. as Brigand; Mr. E. C. J. H. T. H. as Prince of Wales; H. W. J. as a Miller; C. O. L. as a Black Yankee; Mr. L. L. L. as a Horse Jockey; Mrs. L. L. L. as Lady Gay Spanker. The affair passed off brilliantly.

On the 6th of January the inauguration of the President took place, which was attended by a large concourse of persons. The procession formed in front of the President's Mansion, at 10 3-4 o'clock A. M., under the direction of Chief Marshall B. J. K. Anderson; and on the firing of the signal gun, moved off in the following order:

Young Guards, Mayor and City Council, Chief Justice and Associates, Committee of the Senate and House, President and Vice President elect, Cabinet Officers, Diplomatic Corps, Staff and Field Officers, Officers of the Navy, citizens generally, and military.

On arriving on the ground, the exercises were as follows:

National air, administering of oath of office, Inaugural Address, National Air.

—The Liberia Herald of Jan. 15th says:

"About three o'clock, on the day of inauguration, many hundreds of citizens assembled in the Government Square to partake of the dinner that had been prepared for the occasion. There were present at the dinner the President and Vice President and Cabinet, members of the Legislature, Chief Justice and associate Judges, Representatives of foreign governments and other distinguished persons.

Nor did the day end the ceremonies and festivities of this grand occasion. The shades of night had scarce fallen when the mansion was brilliantly illuminated—and many happy faces and joyous hearts were smiling at the anticipation of the entertainment about to be. By ten o'clock there had collected at the mansion nearly two hundred persons of both sexes, and of different ages; and the time passed lightly *off, as different ones found means of enjoy*ment. Mr. Lucas, the celebrated pianist, was there, and added no little to the liveliness of the occasion by his skilful performance on the piano.

Morning had began to dawn ere the last guest left the mansion; and many regretted that night seemed so short, or that their pleasure had so soon come to an end."

Mr. E. J. Roye has offered to invest $50,000 to encourage the growing of cotton in the Republic.

J. D. J.

THE CHILDRENS' CONCERT AT COOPER INSTITUTE.

The concert of one hundred and fifty juvenile performers at the Cooper Institute on Monday evening in aid of the "Anglo-African" and an effort to establish in this city a mechanical school for colored youths of both sexes was, without exception, the largest and finest demonstration of the kind ever had in this city. In the absence of a more extended notice, which we will give our readers next week we publish that of the "New York Daily Times" of April 2:

Concert by Colored Children.—The large hall of the Cooper Institute has seldom been filled with a larger audience, and never with one more decorous, than was assembled on Monday evening last to hear the vocal performances of 150 colored children, from some of our public schools. The music was under the care of Mr. Robert Hamilton, and Mr. Waldron performed on the piano, assisted by Miss Virginia Magnan. The proceeds were for the purpose of [illegible] a mechanical school for colored people, and to assist the "Anglo-African, a paper published and edited by colored men. We cannot give space to criticism or speak in detail, further than to say that the whole effort was eminently creditable to the conductors, and to the teachers and the young vocalists. Some of the solos were very finely sung, and the chorusses, in which the whole united, were rendered in good taste and with fine effect. Rev. Henry Wilson and Dr. Delany, the African traveler, were announced to speak, but owing to the lateness of the hour at which the other features of the exhibition terminated, they declined.

LETTER FROM REV. J. W. LOGUEN.

Mr. Editor: I spend at present a good part of my time in Binghamton trying to do the colored people and others some good, preaching and laboring with them. I have a mixed congregation of colored and white. We have had a good revival with us this winter; many have been added to Zion. We have two meeting houses in the place, a Zion and a Bethel, both Methodist Churches. I judge we have about two or three hundred colored people, all told. We have one school for colored children, taught by a very fine lady (white). The colored people have a great deal of low prejudice to contend with in this place; much are from causes that we think we could name, which rest mostly with us as a people. But with all our short-comings we are a great people. We have got this nation all by the ears, and came very near getting old England in with them. Well, let them work at each other; they have worked at us without ceasing for these many years. The President's Message of the 6th inst. shows some progress, glorious progress in the right direction. Willingly or not by the nation, it is God's will and it must come. The slaves have long prayed, and their friends, the people of God, have prayed, and their prayers have been heard and they are being answered. The slave must be delivered, come what may to this nation. What is the preservation of this wicked nation to the freedom of four millions of deathless souls! It is nothing more than a drop to the ocean. Souls must live—nations will decay, and will be no more. So let us pray that Pharaoh Lincoln may be made to take another step, and another, until Liberty is proclaimed to every slave in this land. It must come, and it will come. They may stone the Prophets that are sent to them in Cincinnati or in any other place, yet emancipation must come; God must and will answer their prayer; and emancipation must come in the Lord's good time coming. I believe it. So let it come, and if the nation cannot stand the shock of emancipation, then it must go down. We have some fine colored people in Binghamton, and I hope that they are on the rise for good. Many of our people here are a hard working, honest people, and they need encouragement. They have had too little of it I think. Many that have labored with us here have thought that the fleece was all that was worth laboring for, and I suppose they got it. They have been kept divided, and therefore they have been kept poor, trying to rear two churches. On another part of my district, at Montrose, Pa., we have the same thing to contend with. There are two Methodist Churches with a hand-full of hard working people, not enough for one strong church. Well may it be said that we destroy ourselves in such things. In Montrose our people are owners of more real estate than what we have in this place. But your readers have heard of them from the pen of our present Superintendent of the Third District, Rev. Joseph J. Clinton. They have one school for the colored people, old and young—for both go to it; and report says they have one of the best taught schools in the county, and it is taught by a young colored lady only 18 years old, and brought up and educated in Western New York. She possesses one of the best minds in the State. I hope she will prove a great blessing to that people. Many of our people in Montrose have had the Haytian fever, and have it yet. Many of them yet talk of going to Hayti. Some eight persons went from there to Hayti last fall; four out of the eight have died, I have heard. We have Sabbath Schools in both of these places. In Binghamton we have one of the best Sabbath Schools in the State of New York, composed of colored and white all together. When I can see the people united in Churches as they are in Sabbath Schools I shall have some hope of success with them, both in temporal and spiritual things. We are one in the eyes of our enemies; and they know that united we come up, divided we stay down.

Your paper sells in Binghamton first rate by the copy. If I can get a good agent I will send you his name; such are very scarce with us here.

I expect to leave here in a few days for Syracuse, my home, and the head quarters of the U. G. R. R. in Western New York.

Yours as ever,
J. W. Loguen.
Binghamton, March 28, '62.

We call special attention to the programme published in this week in our advertising columns, of a demonstration in behalf of the Gerrit Smith Land movement. We ask the hearty support of the public to this noble object.

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

Washington, D. C., March 29th, '62.

Dear Anglo:—I left my home in Middletown Ct., on the 11th inst., to visit my children and friends in the rebellious city of Baltimore, my native city, which is completely surrounded and kept in subjection by the Federal troops. The city shows the awful effects of secession. Stores and warehouses closed, and the white people out of work. Our people have plenty of work at present, and will have during the oyster season, which will close in May. Troops continue to pass through that city to the seat of war. After spending a week in Baltimore I took the cars for this place, and here I found every thing full of life. Regiment after regiment are continually arriving and departing to the South. At least thirty or forty thousand soldiers must have left this city during the present week. There is a continual stream going South. On yesterday, for the first time, I put my foot on the sacred soil of Virginia. I had two objects in going there, and they were attained to my satisfaction.

The rule established here is that every person, without regard to color or condition must go to the Provost Marshal and get a permit declaring themselves to be a loyal citizen of the United States of America. I having received such a certificate in company with the Rev. J. P. Hamor, J. Andersone, and R. Dyson, took the steamer plying between this place and Alexandria, where we found a great number of troops ready to embark and eight or nine vessels loaded with horses for cavalry purposes. My first object was to see the house where Col. Ellsworth was assassinated, which I had the pleasure of seeing occupied by Federal soldiers, or as they are called "Yankees." The 94th have possession of the city. There are a great many of our people here. Times in Alexandria are brisk—plenty of work for those who wish to do it. My second and principal object was to see a colored school in Virginia, and I had the pleasure of visiting and addresing two. The first of about fifty scholars taught by Messrs. Hill and Parker, two young men, the former a young man of my acquaintance from the city of Baltimore, the latter, a citizen of Alexandria. They both seem to be amply qualified for the business they are engaged in. The second is taught by a lady, a Miss Mary Chase. She has thirty children, teaching them the lower branches on the first principles of an English education. These schools are not free, but pay schools. The parents of these children have to pay the teacher. After visiting and talking to the teachers and children, left Alexandria and arrived safe in this city, after meeting several thousand soldiers on their way to Dixie. More Anon.

J. A. Jones.

A. M. E. ZION CHURCH, JERSEY CITY.

Mr. Editor.—Knowing that you take a deep interest in the progress of society in general, as well as in the advancement of Christian intelligence and church organizations, I thought that I would let you know that Jersey city does not lag in the race. The A. M. E. Zion Church under the pastoral charge of the Rev. Wm. H. Pitts, is making good progress, the spirit of peace prevailing within its bounds.

A donation visit was paid to the Elder on the 26th and 27th by the ladies and gentlemen of the city who appeared to enjoy the occasion very greatly, and we are pleased to state that nothing occurred to mar the pleasures of the entertainment. P. P.

Jersey City, March 29th.

Letter From Paterson.

Paterson, N. J., March 24th.

Mr Editor.—In the course of a recent letter 'Young Hickory' cudjels us for irregular attendance at church; but we at least have the satisfaction of not being the only delinquents. Lately "Hickory" himself has been among the missing on some important occasions, and it seems that though formerly interested in Sunday Schools and church matters, he now has his hand on the reversing lever, and is throwing the machinery into a backward motion.

'Tis true 'tis pity, and pity 'tis 'tis true.'

Want of other amusements is probably the reason why our people so frequently have their balls, etc. A respectable affair of the kind came off recently, the main features of which may be summed up as follows: lovely women, good music, a substantial supper, and some tall traveling around the room. Among others, Miss Ellen Conover, and her partner Mr. Jos. Jackson, were especially commended for their proficiency in the dance. Messrs Fowler, Thompson and Schacks were the committee of arragements. Index.

A SURPRISE.

Mr. Editor.—One of the most real, and, I may add, agreeable affairs, recognised by the above title, came off at the 3d Baptist Church, on the evening of the 27th of March. The pastor, the Rev. James Hamilton, who had been absent on a visit to Philadelphia, returned late on the said evening, quite travel-worn, and retired to his peaceful slumbers. You may imagine his surprise when informed near midnight that his door was besieged by a bevy of young ladies, whose request was that he should arise and accompany them to the church. Not divining their intention the reverend gentleman made many excuses, but all of no avail, for his young friends were inexorable. Upon arriving there, you might in imagination share our beloved pastor's surprise, on finding the church filled with a happy and smiling crowd of his personal friends and members of his church, all met to do honor to their much beloved pastor; and Mr. Editor, such a sight to see the tables, groaning as it were beneath the load of fat things which were heaped upon them! not to say much of a certain little mysterious corner, which seemed to attract general attention, and into which many precious deposits in the shape of coin were continually dropping. On the whole I think I may be permitted to say that the entire affair reflects great credit upon the ladies, Miss C. R. S., Miss L. A. F., Mrs. C. J. S., and Miss A. M. S., also the gentlemen whose initials are appended: Mr. W. H. F., S. R. T., J. M. S., of Williamsburgh, and W. F. S., of New York, who volunteered their services, and performed at a brief notice the services assigned them so creditably to themselves and all concerned. May their shadows never grow less.

Benevolence.

THE MURDER OF A LOYAL SLAVE.

Mr. Editor: In looking over the "Tribune" of the 21st inst. I noticed copied from the "Baltimore American" an article, over the signature of "Ben Franklin," in which it seems evident that the various presses are hard pressed for arguments suitable to press out the stains of blood caused by the murder of the loyal Jack Scroggins, in relation to which B. F. dashes out at some length what he terms brief facts; and after jumbling together his crude conglomeration, he at length arrives at the death of the poor slave. Then follows a statement well calculated to astonish all civilization. Hear him:

"On Saturday night, at the request of Mr. Cox, I prepared, as a justice of the peace, to hold an inquest upon the body of the negro Jack, whom I learned was dead. I issued my writ," &c. Then follows a list of names to the number of twelve, whom he claims to be as upright men as the country contains.

Well, this I suppose needs but little comment: yet one parallel case I find in the Scripture, which is this: A certain rich man who lifted up his eyes in hell could have, with equal propriety, called for or summoned a posse of his upright neighbors, whose uprightness had caused them to flounder about away down in that doleful situation, and appealed to them to investigate his ruined condition, and thus demand and obtain water from Abraham, as did B. F. in the present case, and who found men just as upright too. But without wasting time with upright men and their situations, let us take a common sense view of the case. What on earth are we to understand—that the law respecting coroner's jurors were made for men, human beings, exclusively, or does it include all manner of goods and taxable property in the whole country? If the provision was made for the former only, by what authority did B. F. officiate in the case of the latter? Did not the law of the State pronounce Scroggins taxable property? Sir, my conclusion is, that after all the bombast we have heard about superior abilities, talents, and literary qualifications, all nations under heaven, yes, even the half civilized, are baffled to understand this monstrous thing. A State law placing man positively on the catalogue of goods, articles, &c, and then in case of death or damage authorises a coroner's inquest. It is time, yes high time, this unparalleled, outlandish thing was exposed from the rivers to the ends of the earth.

Again B. F. tells us he consulted the slaves of Mr. Cox, and their testimony went to show that Cox was never before known to raise his hand to a slave; and in this case he only gave a few cuts lightly with a small leather strap. Pray, Franklin, how long since a slave's testimony has been considered reliable? Remember, B. F., he who does one fault at first and lies to hide it, makes it two.

Take advice, Ben, when you prepare such epistles as those send them South, away down South, as far as you can, for I assure you they will not answer the end for which they are designed here. Such palaver is worthless here. Remember this, every murderer is a liar; therefore cease to trouble yourself, for it does not nor cannot alter the case. Scroggins is dead, and God is alive and at work, and none can hinder. Wait patiently and see the end, it will come, and come right, for the wicked shall not go unpunished.

Joseph G. Smith.

New Haven, Ct., March 24, '62.

"This animal," said an itinerant showman, "is the royal African hyena, measuring fourteen feet from the tip of his nose to the end of his tail, and the same distance back again, making in all twenty eight feet. He cries in the wood in the night season like a human being in distress, and then devours all that come to his assistance—a sad instance of the depravity of human nature.

—"Pat, you are wearing your stockings wrong side outward." "Och, don't I know it, be sure: there's a hole on the other side, there is."

MARRIED.

Smith, Berry.—In Hartford, Ct. March 26th, by Rev. A. N. Freeman, George G. Smith, of New York to Mrs. Cordelia P. Berry, of Hartford, Ct.

DIED.

Goosely.—In Liverpool, Nova Scotia, Feb. 18th, Mr. James Goosely, aged 36 years and 4 months. He was at his decease a member of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion. "I called upon the Lord in distress; the Lord answered me and set me in a large place." Ps. cxviii., 5.

Give joy or grief, give ease or pain,
Take life or friends away;
But let me find them all again
In that eternal day.

Moses Manning.

Wills.—In Basti, N. Y. on March 19th, Miss Mary Ann Wills, in the 54th year of her age. She was much beloved by all who knew her. She has gone to dwell with Jesus, for she was a lover of our Heavenly Father. Peace to her ashes.

Special Notices.

LADIES' UNION BAZAAR,

For the Benefit of the
COLORED ORPHAN ASYLUM.

In consideration of the many pressing wants of the Asylum, and the great and constant need of funds to supply those wants the Ladies of New York and Brooklyn have consented to hold a Bazaar, to aid the Managers in their labors of love and charity for the Orphans under their charge.

The object is one which speaks for itself; we therefore deem any further appeal to the sympathies of the people wholly unnecessary.

The Ladies most earnestly solicit the aid of the community in donations of money or goods of any kind.

Contributions may be sent to the directress, Mrs. E. Bastien, or to any of the committee.

OFFICERS.

Mrs. Emeline Bastien, Directress, 189 Thompson st. N. Y. Mrs. Ransom F. Wake, Assistant, 99 Thompson st. N. Y., Mrs. Rev. J. N. Gloucester, Assistant Bridge st., Brooklyn, Mrs. D. Roselle, Assistant, South Second st., Brooklyn, Mrs. Mrs. J. H. Jackson, Assistant, Sullivan st., N. Y., Miss. F. Tompkins, Secretary, 52 Laurens st., N. Y., Mrs. C. Graham, Asst., Broome st., N. Y. Mrs. W. J. Wilson, Asst., Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, Mrs. C. L. Reason, Treasurer, 118 Laurens st., N. Y.

COMMITTEE.

Mrs. C. Robinson, N.Y.
" Rev. P. Williams, "
" R. Rich, "
" H. Scott, "
" Dr. Smith, "
" C. Fitch, "
" E. Parker, "
" A. Duncan, "
" Bowser, "
" J. Jenkins, "
" J. Bell, "
" J. Peterson, "
Miss E. D. Richards, "
Mrs. C. Topp, "
" P. Guignon, Br'klyn
" Barnswell, "
" W. Leonard, "
" Rev. C. Thompson, "

Mrs Rv. H. H. Garnet, N.Y.
" Margt. Jackson, "
" E Stevens, "
" P. Van Dyke, "
" W. Curtis, "
" Lambert, "
" E. Symonette, "
" Shadd, "
" A. Williams, "
" E. Mann, "
" B. Stanley, "
" J. W. Bowers, "
" H. Mars, "
" R. Jackson, Br'klyn.
" M. Van Stay, "
" Hall, "
" J. C. Morell, "
" Tompkins, "

The entertainment for the benefit of the Rev. Mr. Cary came off on the evening of the 26th in a very spirited manner. The friends of the Reverend gentleman turned out in large numbers, filling the Metropolitan Hall to repletion. Miss Mary Garnet, daughter of the Rev. H. H. Garnet, presided at the piano, and several young ladies and gentlemen took part in the exercises. The solo singing of the Misses Delany, Miss H. Vanostan, Miss M. Eggleston and Miss S. E. Cary, was much applauded, but Miss E. J. Johnson was the only lady whose singing was honored with an encore. These ladies have very good voices, and we hope yet to hear them to better advantage. The performance of Miss M. Day and master A. Thompson in the 'Curtain Lecture' was admirable; indeed we doubt whether Miss Day has her equal in our school as Mrs. Candle. The speaking of the Masters Williams was much applauded, as was also that of Master Harris. We were pleased to observe that the audience made a clean sweep of the refreshments.

ARRIVALS

At Mrs. PLANT'S Boarding House.

Dr. P. A. Skinner and Pupils of the Mute and Blind Institution, Trenton, N. J.
Mr. and Mrs. Margs. of New York.
" Wm. H. Moore, " Norfolk, Va. "
" P. N. Moore, " "
" N. Pindee, " Baltimore, Md.

TO THE PUBLIC.

There having been a misunderstanding in regard to the arrangements for the funeral of Mrs. James Tate, which was to have taken place on the 1st inst., and my name associated with it, I feel called upon to make the following statement: On Saturday, (March 29th) Mr. Tate called on me and informed me of his wife's decease, and requested me to send notices to the churches, which request was faithfully and promptly complied with. On Monday evening I called to see the corpse, and on Tuesday, the day appointed for the funeral, I was surprised to learn that it would not take place owing to the failure on my part to make the necessary arrangements. This was the first intimation that I had received that any such duties were expected of me, inasmuch as nothing had been said to me by Mr. Tate or any body else in relation thereto. Who the blame rests with is more than I can say, but the public may feel assured that I done all that was asked of me.

JAMES F. THOMAS.

Wanted Immediately.—At Tilmon's Agency, 70 East 13th street, one door east of the 4th Avenue, several colored men and their wives, as farmers and gardeners. Best of wages given. Come and come quickly. Good references required.
36 4t.

Apartments to Let, in two first class houses on 129th street, between 3d and 4th Avenues, (Harlaem) for first class colored families;—those without children preferred. Apply at No. 70 East 13th street. L. TILMON.
36 4t.

Boarding and Lodging. Mrs. A. M. Thompson, (late Jackson) respectfully inform the public that she has opened a Boarding and Lodging house at No. 39 Watts street. The house is well situated, being between two railroads, and within 15 minutes walk of the principal colored churches. Terms very moderate.

A GRAND
HISTRIONIC, MUSICAL, AND SOCIAL ENTERTAINMENT

Will be given in behalf of the Gerrit Smith Land Movement,
On Thursday Evening, April 10th, 1862,
AT THE METROPOLITAN ASSEMBLY ROOMS, 178 PRINCE ST.

By a company of Young Ladies and Gentlemen of this city and Brooklyn. The exercises will be of a class entirely new to this community. Musical department under Mr. William F. Sturgis. Solo Manager, James J. Spelman. The piano will be under the control of Misses Victoria Price, Mary Highland Garnet, Jane Ann Williams, and Virginia Magnan. Prof Robert Brown has kindly given his services. The performances will commence with the trial scene of Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice.—Shylock, Geo. Bodee;—Doctor of laws, Augustus Powers;—Antonio, John C. Gambier, Jr.;—Duke of Venice, C. Rose;—Bassanio, J. Gray;—piano solo, 'Maiden's Prayer,' by Miss V. Magnan;—solo, 'Gaily through the valley,' by Miss Powers.

After which scenes from Toodles.

Timothy Toodles, Esq., James J. Spelman;—Charles, Augustus Powers;—Geo. Acorn, John C. Gambier, Jr.;—Farmer Fenton, Charles Ross;—Farmer Acorn, Wm. H. Scott;—Mrs. Toodles, Miss Matilda Williams;—Mary, Miss Josephine Williams;—solo by Miss Vogelsand.

After which the elegant parlor comedy of Love in Livery. Lord Sparkle, Geo. Bodee;—Frank Howard, J. C. Gambier;—Paul Patent, J. J. Spelman;—Thomas, Wm. H. Scott;—Violet, by a Lady;—Louise, Miss M. Williams;—Mary, Miss J. Williams;—Susan, Miss Powers;—overture by the orchestra.

Concluding with the amusing farce 'Mistakes of a day.' John Box, J. J. Spelman;—Mrs. Bounce, Miss Ophelia Powers;—James Cox, Geo. Bodee.

☞ Tickets of admission 25 cents. Refreshments will be for sale. Tickets to be had at this office, the Pine & Palm, Dr. Smith's Drug store, 55 West Broadway, J. J. Zuille, 396 Canal street, J. Powers, 18 Greene street, Warren M. Stewart, 72 4th avenue, Miss Mary Stackhouse and Miss Rebecca Anderson, Marion st., Albro Lyons, 174 Rosevelt st., Mrs. Theo. Giles, and Mrs. Chas. Harris, Williamsburg, and at the door.

Theo. Giles and John W. Williams, Com.
J. R. W. Leonard,—Supervisor.

At the conclusion of the exercises the evening will be devoted to social and festive enjoyment.

☞ No postponement on account of the weather.

ANNIVERSARY.

The Young Men's Literary Association of the city of New York, will hold their sixth Anniversary on Wednesday Evening, April 24th, at the Continental Hall, corner of 34th st. and 8th avenue. Several distinguished speakers from abroad are expected to make addresses. For further particulars see small bills.

John W. Williams, President.
Abr'm. W. Larkins, Sec'ry.

GRAND JUBILEE.

The Ladies of
ZION BRANCH CHURCH
16th Street, bet. 7th and 8th Avenue, will repeat their
GRAND JUBILEE ENTERTAINMENT

At the Church Hall, on Wednesday evening, April 9th, and will make every effort to render it one of the most agreeable Festivals of the season.

Solos, Duetts and Trios will be sung and Addresses made by the following young Ladies and Gentlemen:

Master Edward Esto, Miss Clara Paine,
Joshua Elliott, Mary J. Lee,
Frederick Francis, G. Williams,
Floyd Hutchinson, Sarah Martine,
Miss Jane Esto, and several others.

MADAME GREEN,
will be present and sing some of her Favorite Solos.

The following gentlemen and others are expected to be present: Rev. H. H. Garnet, [illegible], Rev. J. D. S. Hall.

The exercises will conclude with the singing of the Grand Jubilee Hymn, "Blow ye the Trumpet Blow." The audience will then have an opportunity to obtain Refreshments, and join in the marches, etc.

Ice cream, cake, [illegible], lemonade, etc. will be on hand.

Doors open at half past six o'clock.

Tickets 15 cents; children 10 cents.

For particulars see small bills.

A FAIR.

A judicious Committee of ladies attached to the First A. M. E. Bethel Church, Second street, under the pastoral charge of the Rev. J. D. S. Hall, will give a Grand Union Fair in the basement of M. E. Church, Sullivan street, between Bleeker and Amity streets, opening on April the 1st and continuing for the space of ten days. Open at 4 o'clock every afternoon.

Lodgings. Four Gentlemen can obtain comfortable lodgings by applying to Mrs. Ellen Anderson No. 156 W. 29th street, between 7th and 8th avenues. The house is in a very pleasant part of the city and within half a block of cars and stages.
35 5t.

Apartments to let No. 217 Sullivan street. Inquire on the premises of [illegible] CLARK.
25 4t.

To Let.—Furnished rooms for gentlemen, with or without board, at 68 Sullivan st. J. H. JACKSON.

To Let, in Williamsburgh to a small family, the upper part of No. 64 South 8th st., containing all the modern improvements, within three minutes walk of all the ferries.

For particulars inquire as above. Possession given immediately.

World's Fair Agency.—The undersigned are acting as Agents for Merchants and Manufacturers to Exhibit at World's Fair, and to introduce into England, France and other European countries, articles of American Invention, Procuring Patents, making Sales, or in any way promoting their interests.

DEXTER & CO. 17 Spruce st., N. Y.; 86 Milk street, Boston; 149 S. Fourth st., Philad [illegible]

Every Man His Own Printer. A Printing Office for $16. LOWE'S Improved Printing Presses are the Best, Cheapest, most Durable portable Card and Job Presses ever made, and have been awarded Diplomas and silver Medals. You will find a press a source of pleasure and profit, by printing for yourself or your neighbors. Many persons are saving and making money by using one at their homes or places of business. A comfortable living may be obtained in any city, town or village, with a small outlay for press and types. The press costs but one-tenth as much as a common job press, and is so simple a boy or girl of twelve can do common and fancy printing with ease. Cards, Bill-Heads, Labels, Receipts, Circulars, &c., can be printed at a trifling expense. Price of Presses—No. 1, $5; No. 2, $10; No. 3, $15; No. 4, $20. Price of Printing Offices, including press,—No. 1, $10; No. 2, $20; No. 3, $30; No. 4, $40. Send for a Circular to the

LOWE PRESS COMPANY,
34tf 13 Water street, Boston.

THE LAUNDRESS' SECRET.

The most Invaluable Preparation known for rendering clothes white and clean, without rubbing or injury to the fabric.

The above recipe, together with over one hundred other items of information, sent free on the receipt of 5 red stamps.

A liberal discount to peddlers. Address,
Jos. Adams,
83 Nassau street.

A. ROBERTS,

120 Clinton Court, 8th st., New York, agent for the Weekly Anglo-African. Copies may be had of him at an early hour after its publication.

To Let.—Apartments in house 153 Thompson Street. A few gentlemen can be furnished with lodging also. Inquire of Mr. Jer. Bowers on the premises.
315t.

ZION CONFERENCE.

☞ Notice is hereby given to the Members of the Annual Conference of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion, that the Annual Conference of the New York District will meet in Zion Church corner of Church and Leonard streets, New York city, on the Third Saturday in May, 1862.

WM. H. BISHOP,
Superintendent of the 1st Dist. of the A. M. E Zion Connexion.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

HELP WANTED

At Tilmon's Agency, No. 70 East 13th st., one door East of the 4th Avenue. Spring is here and now is the time. Never was there a greater demand for all first class colored help than now. Remember that this is the oldest and most responsible office in the city for colored help. Situations constantly on hand for both city and country. Terms cash and strict attention paid to business. All persons coming to this city and wishing to save board will do well to call during Office hours, from 7 A. M. to 5 P. M.

31tf L. Tilmon, Proprietor.

STONE SQUARE LODGE NO. 6, A. Y. M. under the jurisdiction of the M. W. United Grand Lodge of the State of New York, meet every Friday Evening at 8 o'clock, at their Hall 300 Grand st., Williamsburg, Brooklyn, E. D.

J. H. DAVIS, Sec'ry.

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

PLANE St. SELECT SCHOOL.

195 PLANE ST., NEWARK, N. J.
Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, Principal.

The branches taught are Reading, Writing Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography and History.

Plain Sewing. Ornamental Needlework, Worsted Embroidery and Fancy Knitting.

Piano Forte, Melodeon, and Vocal Music by Prof. John H. O'Fake.

A limited number of Misses between the ages of ten and fourteen may be boarded in the house on moderate terms. Healthy location, and a fine yard for exercise.

REFERENCES.

Newark, N.J.
Rev. E. J. Adams, Jefferson Ellis,
Adam Ray, Abram T. Cook.

Brooklyn.
Rev. J. N. Gloucester.

New York.
Rev. H. M. Wilson, Rev. H. H. Garnet.

All letters may be addressed to Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, 194 Plane st. Newark N. J.
27 6t.

Elizabeth City, N. J. Feb. 8, 1862.

This is to certify that I heartily approve of the effort of Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers to establish a Select School for young Misses. I have been acquainted with her for over twenty-five years, and am happy to recommend her and her enterprise to the patronage of the public in general.

DANIEL H. VANDERVEER,
Pastor of the 1st Colored Pres. Church, Eliz. City.

Washboards! Washboards!! Washboards!!!—of the celebrated "Hoagland Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

PHILADELPHIA AGENCY.

Wm. R. De Cordovey, 419 South 7th st., is authorized to receive subscriptions and advertisements for the Anglo-African. All orders left with him will receive prompt attention.

THE HORACE WATERS PIANOS,
MELODEONS, ALEXANDRE ORGANS,
T. Gilbert & Co's. Celebrated Æolian Pianos,

are the finest instruments for Parlors and Churches now in use. A large assortment can be seen at the new Warerooms 481 Broadway, between Grand and Broome streets, which will be sold at extremely low prices. Pianos and Melodeons from sundry makers, new and second hand, to let, and rent allowed if purchased, as per agreement. Monthly payments received for the same. Also, second-hand pianos at great bargains, prices from $25 to $100. Sheet Music, Music Books, and all kinds of Music merchandise at war prices. A Pianist in attendance will try new music.

HORACE WATERS, Agent.
32 12t

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND
Balls, Parties, &c., furnished with music at the shortest notice.
MR. GEORGE OTON,
Professor of Music,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St, and with G. Oton.
18tf

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,
REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.
New York—corner of Prince and Marion street near Broadway.

Hours of Worship:—
Prayer-meeting, 10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.

Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock,
Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.
Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,

(Protestant Episcopal)
Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. Wm. J. Alston, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.
R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.

Lect ure every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—
10½ . . . . A. M.
3 . . . . P. M.
7½ . . . . P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn.
13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

Rev. Eli N. Hall, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:
10½ o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7½ " . . . . P. M.
16 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:
10 1-2 o clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7½ " . . . . P. M.
12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—
3 o'clock, ... P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

LECTURE every Wednesday evening.

Rev. Chas. H. Thompson, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7½ " . . . . P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. Hall, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. John T. Raymond, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bagard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

Agent for Washington.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

Troy Agency.—Mr. Henry Burke, 38 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

MRS. ELIZA LEWIS' SALVE,
ANDERSON'S HAIR RESTORATIVE,
(New London,)
SPANISH OIL. (For the Hair,)
WHITE'S VEGETABLE EXTRACT,
BRANDRETH'S SUGAR COATED PILLS.
For Sale at the
Drug Store 55 West Broadway
8 4t

A NEW ORGANIZATION.

The scholars [illegible] now meeting in the 7th Avenue Presbyterian church (Rev. H. M. Wilson's) [illegible] more numerous than can be accommodated in the afternoon, a new organization will take place on Sunday, April 6th, at [illegible] o'clock.

GLASS, CHINA, AND EARTHEN-WARE MENDED,
BY A. ROBERTS,
120 Clinton Court, 8th st., New York.

A Supply of the EGYPTIAN CEMENT, for the above purpose constantly on hand. Price 25 cents per bottle.
29tf.

LECTURES AND EXHIBITIONS.

The Subscriber is prepared to Lecture on Phrenology and the Southern Rebellion, before Lyceums and other bodies, [illegible] of John Brown's Raid on Virginia, [illegible] in which the hero Tillman figured. My address is Ithaca, N. Y. box 470.

34 tf WM. F. JOHNSON.

To Let.—Two furnished Rooms in Mrs. Plant's Boarding House suitable for a gentleman and wife, or for single gentlemen or ladies. Apply on the premises.

BOSTON HOUSE
MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

Established in 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of al the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen it you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this or any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTING

of every description. Also constantly on hand well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.
Don't Forget,
168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.

On an improved plan, by widow T. L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. Ramsey.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.
First Premium for Misses and Children's
HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.
The Clergy supplied at a discount.
KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

AGENTS WANTED.

Something New—Wanted in Every family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y. 19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
Residence—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

Clocks, Watches, Jewelry and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tf

New Sailor's Home. Charles M. Forres, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 South Street, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS,
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

Mrs. S. Plant (formerly Richardson) Respectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. [illegible] HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

MRS E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 Sullivan Street, New York.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.
3tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING

By Mrs. Mary Johnson 190 West 26th Street, New York. This house is [illegible] situated in a very healthy and [illegible] the city.

Boarding for Ladies $2.50
" Gents, 3.00
Lodging per week, 75

[illegible]
CARD AND JOB PRINTER
[illegible]

MRS. SARAH [illegible]
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,
In all its branches
BRACELETS, [illegible]
[illegible]

Poetry.

From the Rochester Express.

SLAVES REJOICING.

Suggested by the President's late Emancipation Message.

Brightly Freedom's morn is breaking;
Hopes that slumber'd are awaking;
Gloom, from souls oppressed, is taking
Flight before its rays!

See the flag of Freedom nearing!
Starry emblem, oh how cheering!
Long we waited thy appearing,
Banner of the free!

See the bayonets' sunbeams glancing!
Drums loud rattle—steeds are prancing,—
Freedom's army bold advancing,
Brings deliverance near.

Slavery's strong supports are falling—
Brandings, burnings, fetters galling,
Blood stained lashes, deeds appalling,
Lose their cruel power.

Years of stolen toil are ended;
Trade in human souls suspended;
Human rights, o'er us extended—
Liberty now reigns.

God has heard our piteous pleading—
Answers now our interceding,
While from bondage he is leading
Us to Liberty.

Thrilled with Freedom's new-born feeling,
Let us each, devoutly kneeling,
See his hand thus freely dealing Joys of Liberty.

"R., Jr.

From the Morning Star.

THE PRAYER-MEETING OF THE CONTRABANDS.

Night unfurled her sable banner, gemmed with many a starry ray;
Silence, too, her gentle sister, followed where the shadows lay:
Weary men were calmly sleeping, men who in the conflict dire,
Through the anxious hours of daylight wrought with hearts of fire.

Wearily the watchful sentry paced beneath the fortress wall,
Musing how the land was troubled, how the brave and good must fall;
Thinking that perhaps his mother, in the home so far away,
Kept the lamp at midnight burning, while she waked to pray.

Then he turned his head to listen, for the strange notes of a song
On the silent air of evening rose with cadence full and strong.
Many voices, wild, yet mournful, mingled in its plaintive flow;
This the burden of the anthem—"Let the people go."

How Jehovah led his people, safely through the parted wave,
Where the mighty host of Pharaoh, mid the billows found a grave;
How the cloud and fiery pillar went before them night and day,
And the angel of his presence ever led the way.

Thus they sung, and Israel's story seem'd like a prophetic strain,
As their voices rose triumphant, on the loud and bold refrain—
"Let the people go—no longer we can bear this weight of wo, God will break the chains which bind us—'Let the people go.'"

Ceased the song, and yet the sentry paused another song to hear,
Words of praise and earnest pleading fell upon his listening ear.—
"We have waited—still are waiting," cried the voice; "How long, O God, Ere thou ope the house of bondage, break the oppressor's rod!"

Then they sung of Christ arisen, of that land beyond the grave
Where no master, stern and haughty, in God's presence holds a slave.
Still the choral notes triumphant answered every closing strain—
"Let the people go! for Jesus soon will break our chain."

Then the holy hush of silence fell upon the midnight air,
Over tent, and tower, and bastion, lay the moonbeams cold and fair.
Yet the wakeful sentry listened, slowly pacing to and fro,
For he heard a voice still crying—"Let the people go!"

Over city, town and hamlet: over mountain, plain and glen,
Rang the wild notes like a war cry, bursting on the hearts of men;
And he knew that God was speaking, as he spoke so long ago,
When he said to haughty Pharaoh, "Let my people go!"

V. G. R.

From the National Anti-Slavery Standard.

THE FREEDMEN OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Beaufort, S. C., March 15th, 1862.

To the Editor of The National Anti-Slavery Standard:

When I saw you in New York, on my way here, I hesitated about promising to write for "The Standard." My fears have been more than realized, for I have been so busy every hour since my arrival, and find so much work to do, I have no time to write letters. But I must seize this hour, the last that I have before the sailing of the Atlantic on her return voyage, to redeem my promise. I do so the more readily because I presume many of the readers of "The Standard" will be glad to know that any Abolitionist is in the Palmetto State to teach and to preach to the contrabands, or freedmen.

I am here by the appointment of the Board of Missions of the Reformed Presbyterian (Covenanter) Church. My mission is to explore these islands with reference to the location of a missionary station, and to labor for a time for the physical, educational, moral, and religious elevation of ex-slaves here.

I sailed from New York, in the Atlantic, on Monday, the 3d inst. Our good ship was the Mayflower of 1862. She bore fifty or sixty men and women on errands of mercy to the ten thousand slaves here now abandoned by their masters. Your readers have no doubt heard full accounts of the movements to which I refer, and I need to say only that the design of the government is certainly wise and benevolent, and I earnestly hope the plan may succeed. Mr. Pierce, the agent of the War Department, had in his charge some forty or fifty men from Boston and New York, to be located upon the abandoned plantations, to bring order out of confusion, if possible—to superintend and to teach. Many of these supervisors are excellent men—warm-hearted Abolitionists—and are here out of benevolence. It is to be feared, however, that they are not all of this kind. One thing is certain, some of them have never been known to be truly anti-slavery; and I may add, from personal knowledge, some of them have not learned to spell negro with only one g. These superintendents should all be men of deepest compassion and free from negro hate. If not, it is to be feared that the colored people will have only a change of masters and overseers.

Our voyage was rendered still more pleasant by the company of Rev. Mansfield French and twelve or thirteen excellent ladies coming here to establish an Industrial School for the benefit of colored girls and women, and to make up and distribute clothing for the destitute. Among those with whom I formed a pleasant acquaintance, and to whom I am greatly indebted for kindness during the voyage, I wish to make honorable mention of Mrs. Nicholson of New York, and Mrs. Senator Harlan of Iowa. They are eminently qualified for the work, being true friends of the slave. Any clothing sent to Mrs. Nicholson will be well distributed. Mrs. Harlan will not remain long.

We had a stormy and very rough passage, and did not reach the light-ship off Hilton Head harbor until Thursday night; and, owing to the slow operation of things under military control, we did not reach Beaufort until late Saturday night. You are already familiar with the description of this place. The town is pleasantly situated on the Port Royal river, about 15 miles above Hilton Head, at the mouth of Broad river. It has many fine mansions, in Southern style; but the greatest number, probably three-fourths, of the houses are miserable negro huts. In these the colored people are still living, and others coming in from Secessia. In the houses formerly occupied by the slaveholders the soldiers are now quartered. The commissioned officers and government agents are living in these in pomp. The most gorgeously furnitured mansions have been emptied of all their contents, and many of them are almost destroyed by the ruthless hand of the soldier. Good houses are turned into commissary stores, or stables. Gens., Cols., Majs., and everybody down to corporals, roll at ease on richest sofas, faring sumptuously every day. But how sad the contrast! In the negro quarters, among the poor and despised ex-slaves, is great destitution. Clothed in rags, many of them little or nothing to eat, without employment, no one to provide, under the most rigid military rule, so that they cannot pass even from one side of town to the other without a written pass from Gen Stevens, and many of them bereft of husbands, or wives, or children, they are indeed most miserable objects of compassion.

I had thought that I had read and heard of or seen slavery in all its dark features; but after only a few days of observation and inquiry I find I did not know the tenth part. Oh, I have seen and heard what made my heart bleed. How can all this suffering and degradation be removed? How can these outcasts be cared for? The greatest obstacle in the way of their education and elevation now is the military here.

The most marked difference between the slave here and those in the Border States is in their color. Here there are very few mulattoes. Most of them are purely African. This is owing partly to the fact that most of them have been born here, and have been intermingled little with those of other places. And I think that few have ever been sold away from here. The plantations are large, and the slaves have not exchanged hands much.

The other day I explored the northern portion of the island of Port Royal, and passed over upon the Barnwell Island. This is one plantation, formerly owned (claimed, rather) by Trescott, assistant Secretary of State under President Buchanan. Before the war there were two or three hundred slaves on the plantation. When Hilton Head was taken, he ran away from his farm, taking with him the women, young men, and children; leaving only the old men, ordering them, in case the Federals should come there, to set fire to everything and follow him. They disobeyed, and are still on the plantation, together with others who have fled thither from the "main land" in Secessia. The negro quarters are about one or two miles beyond the picket guards, so that when there I was within gun shot of the rebels. Their pickets can be seen over the river on both sides, and sometimes they fire upon ours. On this plantation I saw what I would never see again unless it would be to remove. And bad as was their condition before the war, it is now physically worse. I hope that soon it will be better.

The darkest moral feature of slavery I have here discovered in the slaves is the utter ignorance, generally, of their own rights. Many of them seem not to have known that they ought to have been free. Few, if any, ever desired or hoped to be free. All seemed gloomy. They knew that it was wrong to separate families, to whip and abuse the black man; but they seem to have taken for granted that their masters had a right to own and control them. Many of them have heard the Bible—large portions of it—read in the churches; but other portions they have never heard. And, by the way, I have not found, among the hundreds I have been with, more than two or three that were able to read! One or two could spell out and pronounce words in easy portions that they had often heard read.

Yesterday I had a long interview with an old man, a deacon in the Episcopal Church (colored), who, when I read several portions of Scripture directly anti-slavery, seemed perfectly astonished. Said he: "And dat is de law of de Lord? Dem parts we neber hear read to us." This deacon's children were all taken from him by his master when the army came here.

To-morrow I am to preach in the Episcopal church, where used to worship the largest white congregation of the wealthiest slaveholders on the island—the Rhetts, the Barnwells, the Habershams. To give you an idea of the character of the religion of which this house used to be the headquarters, let me mention an illustration. Samson was the property of an Episcopal clergyman, living most of the time in Charleston. He was sexton of the church here. His wife and children were the slaves of the pastor of this Church, and lived with Samson at the time the army came here. On the night of the flight from Beaufort, Walker, the parson, came into Samson's house at the hour of midnight and tore the wife and children out of bed and dragged them away with him. This I have from the lips of poor, heart-broken Samson, and it needs no comment. Many similar cases have come to my knowledge. But why chronicle them? "The world itself could not contain the books that should be written." As I am to be the first successor of Parson Walker, and as my colored congregation will be invited to sit, not in the gallery as before, but down where their lords and masters used to sit, you may easily imagine what kind of Gospel I will preach to them. I pray God I may be true to both them and Him who has sent me "to preach good things unto the meek."

But this paper is already too large, though I have not written half of what I should. More anon.

N. R. Johnston.

P. S. My work here will be to teach and to preach to the contrabands; also to look after their wants, to distribute clothing, etc. Boxes containing shoes, garments, etc., may be sent to my care for distribution. In this I will be aided by ladies and others here. Direct to Beaufort, to my care. Send to 320 Broadway, whence they will be shipped here free.

INTELLIGENCE OF A SLAVE.

The Burlington "Free Press" tells a good story of the intelligence of a slave:

I lived in the family of a cotton planter who worked from fifteen to twenty hands. He employed no overseer. During the planting season he gave his personal attention to the field work of his slaves, but during the rest of the season contented himself with the inspection of their work once a week, or the like, and carefully questioning them at night as to their work during the day. This he commonly did through one of the older and more trustworthy slaves, whose name was Allen. Cotton picking lasts some three months, the hands going over the field once a week, and oftener, if possible, so as to gather the contents of the freshly-opened balls before it is bleached by the sun, or soiled by the rain. My host entrusted the weighing to Allen, who was required to report at night the amount picked by each man. Allen just weighed with the common steelyards each one's basket—and the picker must use the same basket through the season. The weight of the basket Allen recorded in his memory. At noon all came up to the "gin house" to empty their baskets, and Allen weighed each one's basketful, substracted the weight of the basket, set the amount against the negro's name—all in his memory, for he could not make a figure, nor read it if made with a pen. This work was repeated for the afternoon's picking, and the sums added together for each picking. When the negroes came up at dark, the first thing was to attend to their own little household cares and get their suppers. Then Allan called at the door of his master, sometimes at the window, and reported the amount of cotton picked by each hand during the day. As my pedagogueship made it usual for me to be at my table in the evening, with pen, ink and paper before me, my host used to ask me to take down Allan's numbers. This I did regularly for two years. And though I subjected Allan to the severest tests I could think of to be assured of his accuracy, I never found a single occasion to doubt it. Allan's pleasant voice at the window near my table, so often repeated, "Take the cotton now, if you please, massa," is one of the most distinct remembrances of my Southern home.

Livingston, the African traveler, describes an ingenious method by which the Africans obtain water in the desert: "The women tie a bunch of grass to one end of a reed about two feet long, and insert it in a hole dug as deep as the arm will reach, then ram down the wet sand firmly around it. Applying the mouth to the free end of the reed, they form a vacuum in the grass beneath, in which the water collects and in a short time rises to the mouth." It will be perceived that this simple, but truly philosophical and effectual method, might have been applied in many cases in different countries, where water was greatly needed, to the saving of life. It seem wonderful that it should have been now first known to the world, and that it should have been habitually practised in Africa, probably for centuries. It seems worthy of being especially noticed, that it may no longer be neglected from ignorance. It may be highly important to travelers in our deserts and prairies in some parts of which water is known to exist below the surface.

THE 10th MASSACHUSETTS REGIMENT AND THE SLAVES.

A few weeks ago a statement appeared in the papers that the above named regiment had been engaged in the dirty work of returning fugitive slaves to their owners. In the "Northampton Gazette" of March 18th, appears a letter from Capt. L. Black, of company E., giving an account of what he terms the "sad calamity":

On Thursday, Feb. 27th, Keyes' division was ordered to report at the depot in Washington on the following morning at 6 o'clock The order asserted that we were now needed in the field for actual service, but during the evening of the 27th the order was suspended, still we were instructed to hold ourselves in readiness to march at a moment's notice. On Saturday, the citizens in this vicinity anticipated our departure from camp, and many who had slaves in the regiment were here with a view to reclaim them. This very naturally awakened enthusiasm in the boys, in favor of the bondmen who had learned to look to us for their freedom, and they manifested unwillingness to yield them again to slavery, and therefore commenced hooting their owners from the grounds; whereupon, some of them had the boldness and impudence to tell us that "if we would just call up in Maryland they would give us all the work we wanted," and also had the insolence to ask us how we would like another "Bull's Run" and "Ball's Bluff" affair.

Stung by these reproaches, the boys some hundred in number, under the cover of night and armed with muskets, pistols and knives, left their camp and proceeded to the residences of the offenders, as they said, "to seek redress for the wrong they had done us." They encountered no opposition, but finding the object of their indignation, they forced them to swear alliance, some one of the party administering the oath. Under the excitement incident to such occasions, some of the party committed several petty acts of larceny and some mischievous depredations, which in their more sane moments they would not have done.

This act, in consideration of the good name we had won by all we had previously done, deeply affected the sensitive mind of our much respected and highly esteemed Colonel, who thought it the beginning of mutiny, and after due consideration it was deemed expedient and practicable to expel all contrabands from the camp. This duty fell on the officer of the day, and some one who had not seen "fun enough," as they call it, placed a placard before his quarters stating that if the order was carried into effect, the regiment would rebel. This greatly strengthened his (the Colonel's) apprehensions, who communicated his fears to his command and pointed out the consequences of mutiny in eloquent and telling words. But his fears in this respect were needless I firmly believe that there is not another regiment in the service more contented and more desirous of maintaining their credit for good order, than is the Mass. 10th, and it is our determination to convince our friends of the truth of this statement, and if permitted to engage the foe they will learn that we are composed of the right material.

HABITS OF HUSBANDS.

The habits of husbands, with regard to the treatment of their wives, are so various that the question can only be answered by individual specimens of each mode:

Some husbands never leave home in the morning without kissing their wives and bidding them "good-bye, dear," in the tone of unwearied love; and whether it be policy or fact, it has all the effect of that, and those homes are generally pleasant ones, provided always that their wives are appreciated and welcome the discipline in a kindly spirit. We knew an old gentleman who lived with his wife over fifty years, and never left his home without the kiss, and the "good-bye, dear."

Some husbands shake hands with their wives and hurry off as fast as possible, as though the efforts were a something they were anxious to forget, hold their heads down, and dart around the first corner.

Some husbands say only "well, wife, I am going," and start at the word "go," which comes to them from some back retreat.

Some husbands, before leaving home, ask very tenderly, "what would you like for dinner, my dear?' knowing all the while that she will select something for his particular palate, and off he goes.

Some husbands will leave home without saying anything at all, but thinking a good deal, as evinced by their turning round at the last point of observation, and waving an adieu at the pleasant face at the window."

Some husbands never say a word, rising from the breakfast-table with the lofty indifference of a lord, and going out with a heartless disregard of those left behind.

Some husbands never leave home without some unnd word or look, thinking that such a course will straight in their absince.

Then on returning.

Some husbands come home jolly and happy, unsoured by the world, some sulky and surly with its disappointments.

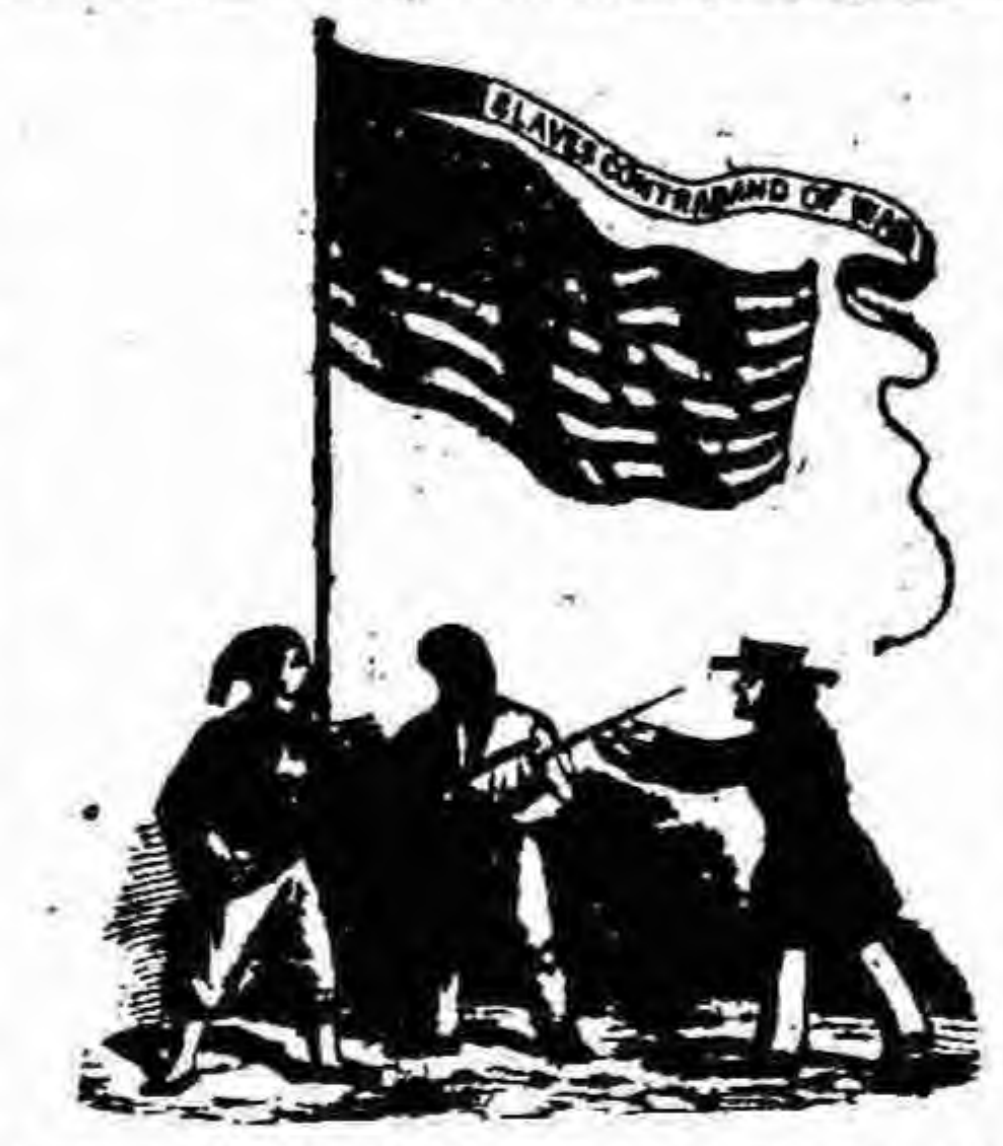
Some husbands bring home a newspaper or a book, and bury themselves in the contents.

Some husbands are called away every evening by business or social engagements; some doze in speechless stupidity on a sofa, till bed time.

Some husbands are curious to learn of their wives what has transpired through the day; others are attracted by nothing short of a child's tumbling down stairs, or the house taking fire.

'Depend upon it,' says Dr. Spooner, 'that home is the happiest, where kindness, and interest, and politeness, and attention, are the rules on the part of husbands—of course all the responsibility rests with them, and temptation finds no footing there.'

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, Diptheria and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent liniment for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, Diptheria, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the Original Inventor of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we Challenge the World to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric will tend to set the colors, and wash c aner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

THE
PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC,

Containing besides the Calendar and Copious Astronomical Statistics, a History of the Great Rebellion, Biographical Sketches of the Prominent Military Officers, a Dictionary of Military Terms, very full information relative to Military Matters of interest to the people at large, National Hymns, Incidents, Anecdotes, &c., &c.

Published and for sale by DEXTER & Co., 17 Spruce street. Newsboys and others wanted to make sales.

TAKE CA E OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess or dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing; and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
Thos. R. Crocker,
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.

D. W. Ingersol,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 19th, 1855.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

James Edwin Halsei,
193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Headache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want and safe article.

Albro Lyons.
20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway; Mrs. Staat's, 78 Thompson St.; Chas. H. Ring's, 155 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

Wm. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rhenbarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb hat grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Billous Bowels, Billous Colic, Billous Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Waranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equral in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangemen of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no il effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat o sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordiary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is erfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat all.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occasionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

Price, 25 Cents per Bottle.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK.
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Product
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St. N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

Price.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, ilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS;

Embellishment—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
Music.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or he Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizensihp,—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihndas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture—by Robert Gorden.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gorden.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson
Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robert Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love,
Poetry—Anonymous,
Selected items,
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell,
The Attraction of Planets—by R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James Mc Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J [illegible] Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Horland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires G eat Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. Contents: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. ell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo., 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

Th Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvary, annd the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 291 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price; $1.25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed.
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Deacon Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz. or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party, [illegible] of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia, and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents must be added.

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin Price, $1. Postage, 13 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
100 large octavo pages, a paper, by Mrs. Pollan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by twenty-two hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 37. NEW YORK, APRIL 12, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

The Weekly Anglo-African,
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY
BY ROBT. HAMILTON
48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
ollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
ents a line for the first insertion, and Three r each subsequent insertion.
s of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents pro ey do not exceed five lines; if more than e Cents for each additional line.
mmunications for the paper must be ad-
ROBT HAMILTON.
48 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

PART II.

Hear the word!—who fight for freedom!
Shout it in the battle van!
Hope! for bleeding human nature!
Christ the God, is Christ the Man!
H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

MOMENTOUS STEP.

The time for this important gathering was chosen on the auspicious occasion of the day of Special Indulgence granted by the Bishops to the colonists, and set apart as a general holiday, which presented another favorable opportunity for bringing together many of the negroes and mulattoes from a distance to the metropolis.

The place of meeting was, as before, the residence of Madam Montego, the Cordora mansion, the attendance being general and full. Solemnly they sat in their places, with anxiety depicted in every countenance, not a whisper being heard among them.

'What is the order of the evening?' enquired the chief on taking his seat, who was the first to break silence.

'We should like to have an expression from each member of the Seclusion, and cannot have a more acceptable precedent than that of the chief himself,' replied Placido.

'I have but little to say,' said Blake rising. 'You know my errand among you; you know my sentiments. I am for war—war upon the whites. 'I come to bring deliverance to the captive and freedom to the bond.' Your destiny is my destiny; the end of one will be the end of all. On last Sabbath, a day of rest, joy and gladness to the whites, I was solemnly and sadly impressed with our wretched condition. While passing through the great Cemetery amidst the busy throng of smiling faces and anxious countenances of the whites; the soul impressing odors of the flowers and inspiring song of birds; the sound of the unfettered rolling sand on the beach and untrammeled winds of heaven; and then beheld the costly ornaments and embellished tombs erected at the expense of unrequited toil, sweat and blood wrung from our brother slave still laboring on in misery, inexpressible suffering and wailing, though Sabbath it be, sending up to heaven in whispers of broken accents, prayers for deliverance, all in the sight of these happy throngs and costly catacombs—I could not suppress the emotion which swelled my breast, nor control my feelings when I cursed their bones as they lie mouldering in their graves. May God forgive me for the wickedness, as my conscience admonishes and rebukes me. In contemplation of our condition, my heart is sorrowful to sadness. But my determination is fixed; I will never leave you. An overwhelming power of our oppressors or some stern adversity, brethren, may force you to forsake me, but even then will I not leave you. I will take me to the mountains, and there in the dreary seclusion of the wilderness, though alone, will I stand firmly in defence of our cause. Buckle on your armor then, and stand ready for the fight! Finally, brethren, I may eventually go down to a disappointed and untimely, but never to a coward's or a traitor's, grave! God's will be done.'

To this impressive and solemn speech there was a universal shout of response, when Gofer Gondolier next spoke by request:

'I havn't done nothin', I hadn't no chance; but I'm anxious to do somethin', an' ef the gener'l there hurry up this thing an' give me a chance, I'll show 'im what I kin do. I'm no speaker, but whenever there's any carving to be done, give me a chance; I'm your man. I've nothin' more to say, only that I owe 'em somethin' for what they done to her'—pointing to Abyssa, his wife—'an' I'm ready to pay 'em back with interest.'

'You should 'pray for them that despitefully use you,'' admonished Abyssa.

'I will,' said Gofer as he passed out with a significant nod of the head to one side, eloquent with meaning.

'Are we now certain each for himself,' asked the chief, 'that he is ready to enter into this solemn responsibility of self-emancipation from an otherwise interminable bondage? If you have so decided and determined, I desire each to so express himself audibly and distinctly, that the name may stand on our secret record to be seen and read by future generations.'

'I am,' was the universal response, each rising separately to give his name.

'How,' inquired he; 'what am I to understand by it? Are you for or against?'

'For war!' was the shout sent up with a thrill.

'Then let us pray,' said he—all falling upon their knees with their heads again low to the floor, Blake offering up this petition:

'Oh God of clemency, in humble petition we again prostrate ourselves before Thee, to acknowledge our feebleness and unworthiness to come before Thee. We are more and more sensible that without thy divine aid, we can do nothing. Oh, guide and direct us in this the greatest of undertakings: be a leader in our wilderness traveling: director in our wilderness wanderings: chief in our wilderness warfare: benefactor in our wilderness sojourning, and light in the midst of the darkness in which we are now enveloped. Oh fit and prepare us for the work that is before us—a mighty undertaking: go with us to the battle field—be our buckler and shield, sword and spear, and strengthen us for the conflict: and be with such of us who fall in the struggle, through the dark valley and shadow of death. Be our great captain, I pray thee; for it is written in thy holy word, 'the Lord is a man of war, for the Lord is his name.' If thou art for us, Lord, none need be against us. These things and thy name shall be ever praised, and have all the glory!'

'Amen!' was the response, all rising to their seats.

'In the name of God, I now declare war against our oppressors, provided Spain does not redress our grievances!' proclaimed Blake.

'In God's name, then,' responded Placido, 'let us prepare for war.

'By God's help, I second the motion!' sanctioned Montego, the vote being taken standing, with great sensation.

The greatest enthusiasm prevailed, though prudently controlled within due bounds; and among other preparatory arrangements the regimentals of the general officers were at once to be obtained. Those of Blake, Placido, Montego and staffs were to be ordered from the French capital.

Again summoning the council to a solemn seclusion, the chief at length addressed them, reminding them that it was the last opportunity they would have for a regular meeting in Seclusion. The time, he impressed them, was fast elapsing, and Nature being exact and regular in all her fixed laws, suspended nor altered them to suit no person, circumstance nor thing. That the time to strike was fast verging upon them, from which, like the approach of the evening shadow of the hill tops, there was no escape. It would overtake them whether or not they desired it, though in accordance with its own economy, would be harmless and unfelt in its action and progress. This period was a familiar and regular action of nature which suggested the occasion and proffered the auspices.

'Glorious circumstance!' exclaimed the chief; a regular daily visitant, whose hints and suggestions have never, until recently, been comprehended. No longer shall they be neglected, but eagerly accepted of, as sixty or ninety days hence, at most, will verify our appreciation of them. Nature, after all, in uncorrupted purity, is the best and most reliable friend of man.

'Equality of rights in Nature's plan,
To follow nature is the march of man.'

Then let us determine to be ready, permitting nothing outside of an interposition of Divine Providence to interfere with our progress. Whenever an emergency demands it, I shall call a special council in seclusion; until then, let confidence, the most implicit, govern and controll all of your actions toward each other, when a united effort must crown our portentious struggle with success. And may God protect us, and defend the right!'

After singing the solemn hymn of 'Old Hundred' to the words of

'Before Jehovah's awful throne,' and offering up a solemn prayer by Montego, these people full of hope the highest, and expectation the most sanguine, separated for their homes and lodgings near three o'clock in the morning, amidst the most intense feelings and unswerving determination to make a bold and fearless effort to break the shackles of bondage and throw off the galling yoke that so long and grievously tormented them.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

FEARFUL APPREHENSIONS.

Another report obtained currency that the negroes were about to rise, through what medium—whether the legitimate consequence of conscious guilt and fear, or the revelations of a servile black—never was known.

As a natural consequence, all Havana was thrown into consternation—effect following cause as the report gained currency—until the whole colony in a very short time was aroused to the most fearful apprehensions. As is usual on such occasions, the Captain-General placed the city under martial law, enforced restrictions upon the negro population, ordered the military to be in readiness for a moment's warning and commenced a rigid inspection of all the military departments.

The negroes and mulattoes were eyed with suspicion, and instead of the accustomed nine o'clock alarm, every hour during the night, a gun from the castle thundered the terrible warning; executing the order throughout the prevailing excitement.

On one of those eventful evenings in the upper Alameda, just after the alarm of the gun, a black man who had been seen in close conversation with a white, was arrested, and exhibited a 'pass' purporting to have emanated from a foreign functionary in the city.

The next day the place was fermented with excitement, the highways being thronged with people eagerly discussing the subject and anxiously speculating thereupon.

Among the absurdities to which this report gave rise, none were greater than those which found their way into the Havana morning journals one of which was "El Diero," hawked about the streets and eagerly brought up by the news seeking population to the effect that "Dr. M——, the British consul, having been caught, tried, found guilty and afterwards confessed to having been concerned in a negro insurrection in Cuba, was to be hanged, shot or garoted;" while another report had him "imprisoned," "publicly whipped," and "transported to the mines in Spain,"

In the mean time this functionary was really seized and thrown into prison, which not threw the authorities into a dilemma, much more perplexing than that of the British Consul.

Whilst the Captain General in fearful suspense was pondering with much embarrassment, and devising schemes to extricate himself from the difficulty of an almost fatal error committed by a stupid blunder, a timely relief was offered by a note received from the minister for Foreign Affairs in Great Britain, politely suggesting that the immediate and unconditional release of H. B. M. Consul for the port of Havana was desirable, concluding with that affability for which the distinguished nobleman who then occupied the Foreign Office, and other British statesmen are remarkable. This was opportune proving a most fortunate and happy pretext for an honorable escape from the fiery ordeal which awaited them, by the terrible displeasure of England.

The first sail from Havana to Great Britain, bore to the Minister for Foreign Affairs the assurance that an apology had been made to Her Majesty's Consul for the rash conduct of two hasty officials who would receive at the hands of the government due attention for their indiscretion.

This speculation was happily disposed of, the Spanish adventurer escaped with little loss of capital in a bold and precipitious investment, though at one time the stock had considerably depreciated at the political exchanges.

The whole matter doubtless had been schemed by interested American slave-dealers in the negro brokerages of the Southern States, a number of whom may always be found in Cuba watching the foreign slave trade, for the purpose of purchasing souls to drive on their plantations. It is confidently believed upon good authority, that the American steamers plying between Havana and New Orleans, as a profitable part of their enterprise, are actively engaged in the slave-trade between the two places. These facts though seen and known by all employees and passengers of such vessels are supposed to be a legal traffic of masters removing their slaves.

The excitement consequent to the arrest and the imprisonment of the British Consul had not yet ceased throbbing in the public heart, when a new issue was made of an entirely different character. In this speculators and political jobbers might with impunity make the most reckless investments without a fear of loss, the article being a home commodity.

One evening while the Captain General and lady sat musing on the rear corridor of the palace, a gentleman, who subsequently proved to be a loyalist and one of the first persons of education and wealth, came with hurried steps to the door where meeting a guard, enquired for His Excellency, who being apprised, immediately repaired to the ante-chamber.

"Has your Excellency heard the news?" with quick breathing, inquired the gentleman.

"Of what import senior?" asked the Captain General.

"Concerning the insurrection sir!" replied he with evident fatigue by the hurry of his errand.

"Which one of them senior?" replied his Excellency; "since rumor recently has been so abundant in her productions of insurrectionary reports, we must be certain before proceeding to an investigation, what we have before us."

'The last one your Excellency,' seriously said the gentleman.

'Ah! then that one has been happily settled to the honor of our country. The Consul has been released, an apology made, the British Government reconciled, and Spain satisfied.'

'Your Excellency,' with surprise replied the man, 'I have no reference whatever to that affair, but something more recent.'

'Ah!' again exclaimed the governor gravely, 'I thought you had reference to that, since it is the last of which I had any knowledge.'

'May it please your Excellency!' anxiously importuned the gentleman, 'the intelligence of this has just come to light.'

'Indeed!' responded he in a manner which greatly embarrassed the messenger; 'how many plantations sacked and what the number of whites killed?'

'Your Excellency,' impatiently replied the bearer of dispatches, inwardly feeling what he dared not outwardly express: 'it has not yet come to a strike, but has been discovered in the plot.'

'Yes, yes! that materially alters the case,' indifferently continued the count; 'like all the others it may only exist in the imagination of those who fabricate and vend these alarms for political purposes, keeping the public mind in a continual state of uneasiness and excitement.'

'I hope that your Excellency does not mistake me!' in a subdued tone enquired the disheartened loyalist. 'I am no political newsdealer, huckstering gossip for speculative purposes. I am chairman of a delegation of the proprietors of large estates near Matanzas, appointed as a messenger and bearer of despatches to communicate with the government.'

'Ah ha! something new in reality then?' with some anxiety enquired the governor. 'What is the true state of the case?'

The gentleman at once proceeded to relate the facts that some thirty miles in the interior from Matanzas, the wife of a respectable planter had doubtless from impressions made upon her mind by the reality, become a maniac, making the most startling disclosures. An insurrection was to have commenced on their own plantation, she having been a party to the scheme. Talking incessantly, she raved and screamed frequently startled calling for a black chief to protect her. When to dispel the phantom a black girl child had to be placed in her bed, with the assurance that it was the child of the negro chief sent in advance of him, when she immediately became quiet and apparently reconciled. She had imagined herself in a horrible seclusion or cave surrounded by black serpents, when being attacked by a huge monstrous serpent, was only protected from certain death by the timely interposition of one of those divine black spirits.

'How long has she been thus affected?' enquired the Captain General after patiently hearing the history of the case.

'During the last three days and nights, your Excellency.'

'What do you desire at my hands?'

'Protection of troops—and if thought advisable, the presence of your Excellency.'

'What have her physicians done in the case?' continued to inquire the governor.

'They can do nothing at all, Count Alcora,' positively replied the planter.

'Neither can I,' gravely rejoined he; and would willingly send up troops to restore her to rationality, but see no good reason for detailing at the bedside of a crazy woman a corp of military to frighten her out of whatever mind there might be yet remaining. As to myself, I can see no good to result from my entering the bedchamber of a maniac, dressed up in regimentals. If her greatest hallucination now be black ghosts, it would only change the illusions to white ones. You, sir, will hereby inform your constituents, that it is neither the desire nor duty of the Executive of this colony to carry the national troops in battle array to divert the phamtoms of a prostrated maniac,' when, making a polite bow, he withdrew.*

The planter so unsatisfactorily dismissed, with sullen countenance left the palace gritting his teeth with a determination of being avenged for the neglect and want of care shown to his neighborhood, a loyal district.

The count was a proud and haughty Castilian, and the planters near Matanzas generally being Americans, a restless, dissatisfied class, ever plotting schemes to keep up excitement in the Island, thereby having continual cause for complaint; he hated them as only a member of the Cortez Council could do a colonial 'patriot,' as the American party termed themselves.

For this contempt, however, the country paid dearly, as they made it the immediate cause of dissatisfaction and complaint against the administration of Count Alcora, and also the home government.

They complained that the Creoles had not the right of franchise, being ineligible to positions of honor, the council being selected by the Captain-General, and all the offices of consequence being filled by persons directly from Spain—persons whose every relation was foreign to the interests of society and detrimental to the progress of the colony. Spain, they insisted, was a foreign country, having no right to rule them. They were Creoles, and of right ought to be their own rulers.

To these complaints the Captain-General as also Spain, paid a deaf ear, replying that in general these 'Creole' statements originated in the principal commercial cities in the United States, by such speculators as frequent the exchanges in Dock, Wall and State streets, backed by the brokerages of Baltimore, Richmond, Charleston and New Orleans. They had openly declared that Cuba and Porto Rico must cease to be Spanish Colonies, and become territories of the United States.

All this did the Spaniards hear and know with a degree of tolerance, patience and forbearance worthy of a cause having higher claims upon their magnanimity. But the Captain-General and true loyalists were becoming impatient, who with his Executive Council were maturing a decisive course toward them.

---

* So frequent were these complaints to the Captain-General that he often gave them a summary dismissal.

LITERARY TASTE OF THE COLORED PEOPLE.

MR. EDITOR: Besides contributing liberally to the support of the various lectures and other literary entertainments which have taken place in Boston during the past winter, the colored citizens have kept up a series of literary and historical lectures and entertainments for their moral, social and mental elevation. On Monday evening of last week, the "Union Progressive Association" gave their first exhibition at the Joy Street Church, for the purpose of raising means to make additions to their library. The exhibition consisted of speeches, readings and recitations, original and selected, which reflected great credit upon the association. During the evening, Mr. George W. Potter read a very able and interesting essay on Crispus Attucks and John Brown, which was finely delivered, and received with marked applause. Seldom have we heard a better display of truly genuine eloquence than occurred in some of its passages. The essay was Mr. Potter's own production. The declamation by Mr. John A. Newby, on "Eloquence," was tastefully rendered. Mr. Wm. G. Butler did ample justice to "Hotspur's Account of the Fop." The dialogue between "Edward and Warwick" was well represented by Richard T. Greener and Albert Jackson. William H. Simpson, the distinguished young artist, had a most difficult piece in the recitation of "The Maniac," but he did himself great credit, and showed that he possessed genius of a high order in the art of declaiming, as well as in the use of the brush and pallet. Their performance was concluded with a colloquy, written by Wm. C. Nell, which had in it considerable merit, and gave general satisfaction. The "Jonathan Gamut" of Mr. J. H. Shaw was very good. He looked, walked, talked and acted the green down-easter, in genuine Yankee style, and his "story" could not well be beat. Success to the "Progressive Union!"

On the following evening (Tuesday), at the same place, an entertainment was given for the benefit of the fugitives in Kansas. This consisted of dramatic and poetical readings by Mrs. Louisa DeMortie and Miss Susie Cluer. The first piece, a dialogue between "Old Fickle and Son," was finely read by both ladies, and received with applause. Mrs. Caudle's lecture on the "Shirt Button" gave Miss Cluer an excellent opportunity to show her comic powers. Whittier's "Maud Muller" was given in a superior manner by Mrs. DeMortie. The same lady also read "The Leap from the Long Bridge," by Grace Greenwood, Whittier's Toussaint L'Ouverture, and his celebrated "Stanzas for the Times," to the entire satisfaction of the large audience, who testified their approbation by frequent rounds of applause. Of Miss Cluer's ability as a reader we need say nothing, for her reputation in that line has long been established. Of Mrs. DeMortie's capabilities we must offer a few words. This was her first appearance in public, and her friends felt no little interest in her success. However, she soon dispelled all doubts, and convinced every one that she possessed rare genius, that needed only an opportunity for developement. Mrs. DeMortie has a voice of great richness and expression, which tells effectively on an audience. She evinces talent for tragic and comic representations seldom combined. But her great powers lie in tragedy. We should like to hear her read "Hamlet," "The Tempest," "The Maniac," or "The Gambler's Wife." In reading "The Leap from the Long Bridge," she exhibited, in some of its passages, traits that called to mind the finest displays of Fanny Kemble, Miss Glinn, or Mrs. Barrow. Should Mrs. DeMortie make reading a profession, she will attain a high position. Thus one after another of the oppressed race rises up and testifies that

"Fleecy locks and dark complexion Cannot forfeit Nature's claim."

Boston, March 31, 1862. B.

From the Herald of Progress.

A SLAVE RETURNED TO HIS MASTER.

Editors of the Herald:—We have just received another letter from our son Lieut. C. J. Robinson, from which we copy the following account of an exploit of soldiering by Northmen. See what Uncle Sam is doing by placing muskets in the hands of his boys to fight against rebellion, at the same time using them to knock down negroes so as to kidnap them into them into slavery for a price:

Camp Andy Johnson, near Nashville,
Tenn. March 8, 1862.

'My dear Parents: . . . A great outrage was perpetrated in our camp yesterday, as follows:

'A black boy named Henry has been at work for the Colonel for some days. His owner came after him while we were camped on the other side of the river, but the boys hooted him out of camp. The negro said he would rather be killed on the spot than go back to his master, even if he knew he would not be punished. His master, he said was a secessionist, and had kept him, (the boy) on some fortifications down the river at work for four months. . . .

'Nothing more transpired concerning his return until yesterday. While the greater part of the regiment were out on picket, the boy's owner came with two sentinels of the provost guard from the city, and after chasing the poor frightened boy through the camp several times—he drawing a knife once, and the sentinel knocking him down with his musket!—they captured and delivered him to his owner, who stood waiting outside the lines. The latter paid the catching sentries fifteen dollars each, and led Henry away with him unmolested, flourishing a pistol at his head as he went. They had no order, at least showed none, for the boy from headquarters, and the Lieut. Colonel of our regiment who was in command, need not have delivered him up without such an order, yet allowed him to be caught, and the major forbade our boys from giving him any assistance. One of the sentinels was from Kentucky and one from an Indiana regiment. . . . .

'The former master of our boy will not get him without an order, and an imperative one, I believe; and if one is given for him—his master having been a strong and active secessionist, a quartermaster for the Southern army in fact—I have about concluded to follow it by immediate resignation, and this, whether the order be for him or any other negro. The order would make it an official act. What do you think my duty would be in the premises? Is there any hope that the Government will confiscate the slave property of the rebels by civil act or by military? Is there any use of waiting longer for the slaves to be freed regularly or legally? That is the question with me. I have no interest in the war only in so far as it will result in the progress of ideas and toward freedom. The preservation of 'church and state' merely I have no interest in; and if I knew that this great struggle was to result in that only, I should get out of it in double quick time!'

'C. J. R.'

Why was not this traitor slave-master arrested instead of the loyal black man? Oh, the slave power rules this country and sways its government. A government that tolerates, through its agents, such outrages on a portion of its most loyal people, not only against liberty but against humanity itself, ought to perish, and be brushed from the records of the world!

To our dear soldier-boy the advice of his father and mother is, that, unless the Government adopt effectual measures for the suppression of slavery, which is itself rebellion, without further delay, he leave such disgraceful service, and return again to peaceful pursuits. C. and D. ROBINSON.

A SURPRISE.

The friends of the Rev. Chr. Rush mustered in splendid style on Wednesday evening, the 24th ult., in Zion's Church, to surprise him with solid silvery and pabular tokens of their veneration and esteem. Our venerable father was at a late hour sent for and conducted to the church, where he was warmly greeted by the friends who had met to do him honor; among these we noticed Revs. W. J. Alston, John G. Urling; Messrs. Jno. Peterson, Randall, Jas. Purnell, Johnson, Jas. Stokley, Montgomery, Powers.

Rev. Mr. Alston, on being called upon, stated to Rev. C. Rush the object of the enthusiastic gathering, in a very neat speech. John Peterson, Esq., on being introduced said he remembered that nearly half a century ago, he with others, then boys, but now no more, sat around the altar of Zion (then a framed building) and listened to the faithful instructions of our venerable father, and that he would have been greatly hurt had the friends not informed him of this surprise party, etc., etc. Rev. John G. Urling added a few words; after which Mr. Powers gave a comico humorous speech, to the great delight of the risible powers of the party.

Mr. Rush responded. He was indeed surprised. The rev. gentleman always so ready, was taken quite aback. He appreciated the kindness of the friends, but he must in the first place return thanks to God, who had stirred up his friends to this noble act of benificent weal. He must thank them cordially. His best wishes were with them, and he hoped that God would ever smile upon them; again, he thanked them cordially.

After Mr. Randall presented the amount realized, namely goods to the value of $7 15 and cash $48 09, the party haying partook of an excellent collation they separated in the best possible humor.

VIATOR.

From the Herald of Progress.

SOUTHERN CIVILIZATION.

"I visited the medical college in this town where M. D.'s are furnished to the Southern Confederacy. Prominent among the objects in the museum was the body of John Brown, senr., the integument taken off and the muscles, veins and arteries all preserved, the top of the cranium sawn off and the lips purposely distorted in disrespect."—Cor. of the World from Winchester, Va.

This statement is not as most readers will imagine, pure fiction. The remains are not, of course, those of John Brown, sen., for they were delivered to his friends and buried in Northern N. Y. Neither are they those of John Brown, Jr., since he is still alive, and we trust doing good service in putting down the rebellion. We believe the body alluded to, to be that of the son of John Brown, who fell on that fatal morning in the fight between the handful of zealous invaders and the U. S. marines.

The writer was upon the first train from the West which reached Harper's Ferry on the Baltimore and Ohio RR., after the capture of John Brown and the defeat of his party. After spending two or three hours at the Ferry, we took the first train to Winchester. In a seat just in front of us sat a Virginia doctor, evidently a professor at the medical College. He belonged to that (large) class of surgeons who would rather amputate a limb than eat breakfast, and also to that, we trust small class, who would prefer the job of rendering amputation necessary, to eating dinner. He had just purchased one of the Sharpe's rifles bought by Brown and captured in the schoolhouse, by a Virginia company, and ran out of the car once before we left at the cry that Cooke was seen in the mountain across the river, to get a shot at him. Well, this medical warrior said that he had the body of young Brown—a noble form as all admitted—in the baggage car taking it to the college, and which he declared he would preserve in some manner known to surgeons, though it would cost him months of labor. He betrayed as fiendish a spirit as we could imagine it possible for an intelligent educated man to evince, and we doubt not was capable of adhering to his resolution, and preserving the body of the young martyr, with such distortion as suited his insane spirit of revenge. Harper's Ferry has already atoned for the blood of the martyred freemen. And doubtless the Winchester Medical College will need some as enduring monument as this manly form will afford, to preserve the memory of its existence. C. M. P.

Anglo-African War Items.

Gen. Curtis has issued the following Special Order, dated Headquarters of the Army of the South-West, March 26:

Charles Morton, Hamilton Kennedy, Alexander Lewis, colored men, formerly slaves employed in the rebel service, and taken as contraband of war, are hereby confiscated, and not being needed for the public service, are permitted to pass the pickets of this command, northward, without let or hindrance, and are forever emancipated from the service of their masters, who allowed them to aid in the efforts to break up the Goverment and laws of our country.

A Cairo correspondent of the "Chicago Tribune," writing under date of 26th ult., says:

"It seems that there is in Cairo an organized band of unprincipled scoundrels who had for some time before the inauguration of the war been engaged in the nefarious business of kidnapping negroes whom chance or business brought to Cairo, and running them off to Kentucky and Tennessee and selling them into slavery. At the head of this gang are sons of persons of high social position, resident in this city and elsewhere in Egypt. When Capt. Turnley, of the Quartermaster's Department, came to Cairo, he found a half dozen intelligent contrabands, whom he fed, clothed, and employed as laborers in his Department. Some time yesterday a man representing himself as a resident of Chicago, endeavored to induce them to go with him, telling them they were free, and offered $30 a month for their services. They refused these flattering offers, and an attempt was made by a mob, evidently controlled by the parties of standing above alluded to, to take possession of them. This plan failed, and the negroes were placed in jail for safe keeping. To-morrow the matter will be inquired into by the Provost-Marshal, and the guilty parties punished."

A Kansas correspondent of "Zion's Herald says:

"The contraband question meets us at every step; 'colored people,' as they persist in calling themselves, are 'very plenty this year' in Kansas. They come within our lines and go out again as white folks do, many of them are employed as servants by our officers, and really they are 'quite' as apt to look out for number one in their business transactions as are the whites. We saw a company of five the other day as they came in from Arkansas, and by a very close cross questioning we became perfectly satisfied that they knew enough to take care of themselves. True, some of the blacks are indolent and will steal, but the whites are equally vicious. And for people who live by fraud, or are supported by their wealthy relations, to talk about the dishonesty of the blacks, is simply ridiculous. The truth is, our common humanity is about the same the world over. Great numbers of the Missouri slave owners are moving South with their human property, which affords a strong motive to their slaves to take 'French leave' for the North; they have a terrible dread of the term 'going South.'"

The Washington correspondent of the New York "Tribune" gives the following pleasing incident:

"On the return march of Mix's 3d New York Cavalry from Winchester to Washington, a large number of male contrabands followed the regiment. They were not permitted to be turned back or molested by the commanding officer, Col. Mix. They built camp fires and groomed horses for the troops, who in return fed them from their rations. Lieut. Chamberlain, of Rochester, adopted one of them, a fine looking boy of about 20 years, as his servant. On reaching Washington he gave him money to purchase an extra supper out of camp. The negro went without the supper and invested the money in a spelling book. He has studied this intently every leisure hour, and although perfectly ignorant of the alphabet one week ago, he is now master of his letters."

The following is from the Murfreesboro correspondent of the "Cincinnati Gazette:"

"On the road out, the band would play some lively air whenever we passed a house which looked as if human beings could live in it. The music was always the signal for a perfect avalanche of negroes. The scene that generally followed, to be appreciated should have been seen. Dances, jigs, reels, hoedowns, such as would have made Dick Sliter envious in his palmiest days, followed each other in rapid succession, and as the long column moved its way along, cheers and shouts encouraged the dancers, until they were lost by a turn in the road."

An investigation made by a Committee of the Ohio Legislature, relative to the condition of the rebel prisoners from Fort Donelson now at Camp Chase, develops some remarkable facts in the highest degree disgraceful to the military authorities. The Committee found fifty slaves who were taken with the rebel officers, confined in prison with those officers, their former masters—cooking, washing, waiting upon and serving them just as before their capture—the relation of master and slave being as rigorously maintained by the master, and as fully recognized by the negroes and the other inmates of the prison as it ever was in the State of Tennessee. These servants of rebel officers were transported at the expense of the Federal Government, and are now maintained at its cost—thus pampering the very men who are most active in the attempt to destroy that very government!

A correspondent of the "Tribune writes:

"The panting chattle of one Hannan, seeking refuge in the camp of the Massachusetts 1st, the owner chasing him with an order from division and brigade headquarters, that facilities to hunt be afforded, and unobstructed privilege to seize and carry off; the presentation of the order to Lieut. Col. Wells; a solemn warning from Wells that no assaults or disorderly conduct would be allowed in his camp, and that his guardhouse impartially received civilians and soldiers, accompanied by a polite permission to search for the chattel; a hesitating and shamefaced master, and a fugitive slave grinning behind a tent, were the dramatis personae and the elements of a popular play at Budd's Ferry yesterday.

A correspondent of the Platteville (Wis.) Witness, writing from Charlestown, Va., remarks:

"It must be extremely annoying to the sour old secesh of this place, who so short time ago exulted over the execution of John Brown, to see their fine churches and palaces overrun by those they term his followers, and to hear them sing the song devoted to his memory, and play it upon their church organs. This morning I visited the cell in which John Brown was incarcerated It is like all other cells, a dismal place.

NEW YORK, APRIL 12, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

Colored Inventors, Artists, Mechanics, etc. are earnestly requested to lose no time in getting their articles ready for the National Exhibition of Anglo-African Industry and Art, which will positively be held in this city or Brooklyn in the early part of the ensuing fall.—All communications in relation to said Exhibition may be addressed for the present to this office.

Rev. Joshua Leavitt D.D.—A Pervert.

We print in another column the proceedings of a society, the most remarkable incident of which is the announcement by Dr. Leavitt of his perversion from abolitionism to the hell-born creed of the expatriation of freed colored men from the soil and homes which they have earned by their sufferings and their toil.

It is usual for converts, or perverts, in announcing their change of mind, or heart, to give a reason for the new faith that is in them. Dr. Leavitt either will not, or cannot, follow this good old rule. His remarks, as reported, seem rather inflamed and rhapsodical for one of his clear head and cool temperament. It is plain that the new diabolism which has seized upon him, did not find the chambers swept and garnished —empty—of the good old demons so long inhabiting there; the writ of ejectment met with some opposition, hence the Doctor announces, instead of a clear, sound reason, the simple fact that "he is excited by this lecture," and has "glimpses of an almost unoccupied paradise." We hope Dr. Leavitt will be careful. Let him with fitting and prayerful preparation sound again the dim and perilous track on which he has wandered. Let him be sure that the paradise—unoccupied—which beckons him on, is not the baleful gleam of a very different locality. Those Haytian mountains are a volcanic region frequently disturbed by quakings of the earth; and among them may be that facilis descensus in which Hiram Ketchum and all other barbarian colonizationists may tread and welcome—but we cannot suffer abolition friends who have done good service, to be decoyed thither without an attempt on our part to pull them back as brands from the burning.

It is well enough for ignorant English penny-a-liners to seize upon the expatriation scheme to coin money out of it; it is well enough for heartless office seekers to foment this huge scheme, in the hope of obtaining prominent and profitable offices for themselves in the national provision to carry it out; it is even excusable in black men of intelligence whose hope of otherwise rising to wealth or notoriety, is blasted, to buzz about those in power, in the hope of obtaining a demi-semi old pair of pantaloons sort of commission, with the covert assistance of the American Colonization Society; it is well enough for the life-long supporters of the American Colonization Society to see, in coming events, the only solution of the freedman question in expatriation: but it is not well in Joshua Leavitt, one of the primary managers of the American Anti-Slavery Society—Joshua Leavitt, for many years a prominent officer of that society—Joshua Leavitt, long editor of the "Emancipator," in which, with relentless logic, overpowering facts and statistics, and an eloquence the stronger for its purity in reasoning, he opposed the principles, aims and means of the American Colonization Society—Joshua Leavitt, who as managing editor of the "Independent," lends that great journal its odor of Anti-Slavery—we say it is not well for him at this moment, when he can crown the labors of a long and gloriously laborious life, by adhering to and advocating his long cherished doctrine of the equal humanity and equal rights of the negro; it is not well for him to desert and go over to his life-long enemy, and lend him aid in upholding the very vilest principle which lies at the foundation of our national troubles, and thereby render the very act of emancipation, which he has helped to bring about, and which should heal all our woes, a damning blot upon the unconverted national heart.

In calling upon Dr. Leavitt to stand by his old principles, we could easily from his voluminous writings quote passages which are unanswerable even by him, because they are unimpeachable as facts and arguments. We are content with one record, from which he cannot escape. In the "Emancipator" of Dec. 14th, 1833, he is announced as one of the managers of the newly formed American Anti-Slavery Society. In the same paper we find, issued by that society, that famous "Declaration of Principles," which, in the true history of the United States, will be hardly less famous than the Declaration of Independence. Among the sentiments contained in the 'Declaration of Principles,' by the society of which Joshua Leavitt was an officer, is the following:

"WE REGARD, AS DELUSIVE, CRUEL, AND DANGEROUS, ANY SCHEME OF EXPATRIATION WHICH PRETENDS TO AID, EITHER DIRECTLY OR INDIRECTLY, IN THE EMANCIPATION OF SLAVES, OR TO BE A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE IMMEDIATE AND TOTAL ABOLITION OF SLAVERY."

This is clear, sound and explicit. We defy Joshua Leavitt D.D., with all his new friends, to contradict or gainsay the dotting of an i, or the crossing of a t, in it. In the speech announcing a change of view, Dr. Leavitt, for the first time in his life, indulges in a flight of imagination. It will remain among his writings like the solitary passage in Locke, if the frightful may be compared with the beautiful. The announcement that Divine Providence has selected a man of Consul Fabens' antecedents, to deliver a message to Joshua Leavitt, is but an evil dream; unless it were that Divine Providence, so often sneered at of yore by Dr. Leavitt, "which has placed an inseparable line of demarkation between the whites and negroes which it is impossible to overcome." How William Lloyd Garrison, Oliver Johnson, S. H. Gay and Abby Kelly Foster will shout with laughter at this new revelation of Divine Providence to their whilome friend Joshua! If we could but carry him back twenty years, and introduce him to himself as he was then, he would see as clearly as we do that this Divine Providence was only a messenger and a message sent—"to buffet him."

Hear Dr. Leavitt a little further: "a paradise, so near, so inviting, and waiting for the free blacks of this country who need a home." We do not wonder that the reverend gentleman felt excited when he uttered that monstrous statement, for all the burial-places of his memory must have given up their dead as swift and angry witnesses against the living lie. There could not but have crowded upon his recollection the times without number when he had branded this statement as false and devilish. No home indeed! If there be upon this earth any people with a home, and an indestructible title thereto, then is that people the blacks, free and enslaved, in these United States. They hold it by right of birth, they hold it by right of culture, they hold it in the teeth of an opposition surely as no people in ancient or modern times ever bore up against, and they will continue to hold it, by God's promise and blessing, against all comers, be they rebels at the South, traitors at the North, or reverend renegades who deny in its extremity the cause of justice and love and mercy and sweet human brotherhood.

IMPERSONAL.

Our delightful neighbor and contemporary, announced last week that the "Pine and Palm," would henceforth be edited solely by James Redpath and G. Lawrence, Jr., and that it would be hereafter an "impersonal newspaper."

We heard that things "looked dusty" next door, but did not know that they had come to this. We felt sorry for friend 'Jeems' when he ran away from his fighting principles, although we knew that he did not have to run far. But now when we find him fleeing from himself—that is, his personality—we are filled with the deepest commiseration. We recommend to his consideration the following story:—An ancient pimp having "hoped that —— might strike him dead in his bed if he ever drank another drop," was overpowered a few days afterward and went home tipsy; he took the back log and laid it in his bed and went to sleep in the fireplace. Brother Jeems might dress up a stick of wood in Shoddy, and leave it to the tender mercies of the next arrival of emigrants FROM Hayti.

CONFIRMATION AT ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.

A very large audience assembled at said church on the evening of the 2d inst. to witness the ceremonies attendant on the rite of confirmation. Bishop Potter, whose appearance is quite commanding, and whose words and actions indicate a full knowledge of the duties of his position, was assisted in the service by the Rev. Dr. Morris and the Rev. Mr. Alston, the minister of the church.

The service preceding the confirmation was led by the Rev. Dr. Morris.

The candidates, being eighteen in number, were then assembled around the altar. They looked exceedingly neat, most of them being attired in white.

The Bishop put the usual questions, and after a fervent prayer proceeded to administer the rite that relieves the sponsors from the vows taken by them in behalf of the candidates in earlier life, and places the esponsibility of their salvation wholly upon themselves, they having arrived at years of maturity.

The address of the Bishop to the candidates was very appropriate; there was nothing brilliant about it, yet every word was a light to the feet of those who stood before him. The manner of the Bishop was very solemn and had its due effect upon the audience. From a remark made by him we were pleased to learn that the Bishop approves of congregational singing. This mode of singing has always been in vogue in St. Philip's church, as well as all other colored churches, and we trust it will always be so.

How very different must have been the Bishop's feelings while joining in the hymn of praise gushing in full tone from the lips of six or seven hundred people—as was the case at St. Philip's—to being penned up in a fashionable church and being obliged to listen to some three or four voices away off in the gallery.

Closing prayers were made by the Rev. Mr. Alston, and the benediction was pronounced by the Bishop.

A PICTURE BY A COLORED ARTIST.

Mr. Editor: I have had the pleasure to see a truly magnificent work of art by Mr. Chaplin, the Huntingdon artist, painted for Mr. Solomon G. Brown. In my humble judgment it is a triumph of art. The subject, however, is one likely to call forth the greatest talent of an artist—Mr. Chaplin has responded to the call with the most triumphant success.

The Adoration of the Wise Men of the East is the chosen subject. I cannot but admire amongst the many grand figures in the picture the retired one of Joseph, who stands near the Virgin, whose youthful face glows with maternal pride as she beholds the honors bestowed by the Magi upon the infant God. The figures of the wise men are grand. One with holy reverence presents the infant with his gifts, and with delight sees the infant God receive his offering, while the others hasten to honor him in the same manner.

The grouping is admirable. The artist's ability in the management of the clare-obscure is wonderful, while the flesh coloring is entrancing. I hope the happy owner will place his gem in the exhibition, and let the public eyes feast upon its great beauty. I hope also that Mr. Chaplin will have ready a match for his masterly painting, "the death of Hannibal," to place in the contemplated art exhibition; I know they will certainly be grand, coming from such a source. Edward M. Thomas.

Washington, March 29, '62.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE NEW YORK AFRICAN SOCIETY FOR MUTUAL RELIEF.

This venerable institution celebrated its 52d anniversary on the evening of the 25th of March, in the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms.

As the yearly festivals of this society are always of the most pleasant character, many of our citizens, both old and young, look forward to their return with the most pleasing emotions.

The performances at this meeting were of more than usual interest, although there was no Oration delivered. The President, Rev. C. B. Ray, made a few appropriate remarks, which were preceded by a prayer by the Rev. Sampson White, at the conclusion of which Miss F. Clark, daughter of E. V. Clark, Esq., performed upon the piano the overture from "Robert le Diable." The President's address was followed by the chorus of the "Water lilies," sung by several young ladies, led by the Misses Vogelsang. This chorus was followed by "The Maiden's Prayer," piano solo, by Miss M. R. Lyons, daughter of Albro Lyons, Esq.

Mr. John J. Zuille, the Secretary of the Society, then read an oration delivered before the Society in 1811, by Mr. John Teasman, the first colored school teacher that ever taught in this city. Of course this ancient document was listened to with marked attention, and was loudly applauded. The ode "Mutual Relief," written by the late James Latham, was then sung by the volunteer choir; but we think they will execute it much better the next time, although their singing was loudly applauded.

Mr. Geo. Bodee sung, with very good effect, the highly popular song "Where liberty dwells there's my country;" as did also Mr. John C. Gambier the beautiful solo "By the sad sea waves." Miss Lyons then performed "The Battle of Prague;" after which the duett from Norma, "Take them, I implore thee," was sung by Misses Mary Remsen and Martha Wary. Mr. Jas. Spelman sung the solo "Let me kiss him for his mother," in good taste, but it is not a tenor solo. Miss C. E. Ray, daughter of the President, performed airs from "Ernani," and Miss Clark performed selections from "Lucia." The musical portion of the exercises were closed by Miss Louisa Vogelsang and Mr. Spelman singing the comic duett of "Mr. and Mrs. Snibbs," which was received with roars of laughter and applause. The singing of the young ladies and gentlemen was excellent, being full of life and spirit. We sincerely trust that they are securing a knowledge of that beautiful art which they take such great delight in.

Of the three young pianists we are glad to be able to speak in terms of praise—not that their playing was perfect, but when the fact of its being their first public appearance is taken into consideration, it was excellent. We sincerely hope that they may prosecute their studies of the instrument until they may take rank as pianists among those who are pianists indeed.

Addresses were delivered by the Rev. Dr. Lively, and Geo. T. Downing, Esq., whose remarks elicited much applause. John Peterson, Esq., read a short extract from an address delivered before the Society in the year 1810 by the Rev. Peter Williams, also a hymn written by Wm. Hamilton, and sung on the same occasion.

It is hardly necessary to say that the reading of these old documents was listened to with marked attention. The reader was loudly applauded.

At the conclusion of these exercises, the company passed to the upper hall, where Mr. E. V. Clark had prepared a very fine repast, consisting of tea, coffee, sandwiches, cakes, cream, &c., which were furnished to the guests with a lavish hand. After this the young enjoyed about two hours in the dance.

The price of admission to this literary, vocal and corporeal feast was only twenty-five cents. Is it a wonder that the company retired well satisfied with the evening's enjoyment?

PHILADELPHIA AFFAIRS.

The "Press" of 1st inst. says:

Last evening a lecture was delivered in the Shiloh Baptist Church, Clifton and South streets, by John S. Rock, Esq., a colored lawyer of Boston. The subject selected was "A Plea for my Race," which was handled in a masterly manner. The lecturer did not enter into any lengthy discussion of slavery, but merely alluded to the present condition of the colored race, and the part they are destined to act in the future. He spoke of the colored people as fighting side by side with the whites during the Revolutionary war and the war of 1812. He made mention of the late message of President Lincoln touching emancipation, which the speaker thought, showed that he was on the way to salvation. The lecture was both interesting and instructive, and was listened to with the deepest attention by the audience.

On the evening of March 31st the brick Wesley Church, Lombard st., was crowded to its utmost capacity for the reception of a number of contrabands, one of whom was a mother of over a hundred and four years. The meeting was organized by the appointment of Rev. Jno. D. Brooks as chairman, Prof. A. M. Green, Secretary. There were some of the most respectable citizens, white and colored, in attendance, a number of whom addressed the meeting in relation to the down-trodden and outraged descendants of Africa. Several of the contrabands narrated their escape from the prison-house of bondage, and were congratulated upon their change from oppression to freedom. An admission fee of ten cents was charged. After the speaking was through the assembly joined in the singing of a verse given out by the chairman, commencing with,

"Whate'er I say or do Thy glory be my aim."

after which a prayer was made by Rev. J. A. Williams. The meeting was closed by the singing of the doxology and the benediction by Rev. J. A. Fuller, of the A. M. E. connexion.

The colored Presbyterian churches of Philadelphia have for sometime past been in the habit of communing together every three months. This very commendable arrangement is to be continued and we are pleased to learn that our friend Rev. Jas. N. Gloucester of Brooklyn will administer the communion for this quarter in the St. Mary Street church on Sunday next. He will also visit Reading and other places in Pennsylvania.

In another column will be found recorded the death of Mrs. Esther Burr wife of the much esteemed John P. Burr. Mr. Burr, in his great affliction, has the condolence of many friends.

Miss Anna E. Dickinson lectured before the Philadelphia Library Company on Tuesday evening, 25th ult, in the lecture room of St. Thomas' Church. Although an admission fee of five cents was charged the room was densely packed with a very intelligent audience. The subject of her lecture was "Emancipation."

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

A correspondent, W. B., writes us that a great revival is now in progress at the A. M. E. Zion church, (Rev. J. F. Lloyd, pastor) Gasper st., Providence. The meetings have continued now for more than five weeks, during which time 18 males and 24 females have expressed a hope in Christ. Thirty-six (of them have already united themselves with the church, and the good work still continues. "Let the Lord's name be praised for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men."

As the fruits of a revival now going on in the Abssynian Baptist Church (Rev. Mr. Spelman pastor) sixteen persons will be baptized at the foot of 16th street, North River, on Sunday morning at 10 oclock.

Protracted meetings are being held in the Zion Mission Church, Philadelphia, Rev. Stephen Smith, pastor. Already twenty conversions have taken place and the altar is nightly crowded with anxious penitents.

A Benefit.—In our advertising columns will be found the advertisement for an entertainment gotten up by a commmittee of ladies and gentlemen connected with Zion Church, Williamsburg, for the benefit of Rev. Moses Manning the esteemed pastor of said Church. As this will be the last demonstration for his pecuniary benefit, unless the General Conference will accede to the wishes of not only his congregation but the entire community and leave him in charge for at least another term, we hope that a special effort will be made to make it a benefit in reality.

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

Camp Thomas, Md.,
Headquarters of 95th Regiment.
Warren Rifles, April 6th, 1862.

Mr. Editor: I cannot remember at any time of my life of being so supremely happy as I have been for these few days past, for so much has transpired for the future weal or woe of the colored people of the District of Columbia. On Wednesday, the 2d inst., the countenance of every colored person you met was expressive of hope and fear blended, and that of almost every other white person was fearfully distorted with vindictive hate. They have done everything to excite the colored people to exhibit a feeling whereby their opposers might get some hold upon them, but it was no go, for the timorous predicted a mob, and the more wise spoke almost in whispers within their doors; but none gave public expression to their feelings, although a lying journal said that they had became insolent on the streets, even before the passage of the bill. But since the passage of the bill in the Senate the feelings of the colored people are differently expressed. As the face is the index of their heart, so they show in their countenances the great joy they feel, but they give no other demonstration of it. But in the midst of all that is transpiring the gloom has not all receded, the shadow is not wholly gone, for out of the dark shadow of slavery comes flashes of the malignant serpent eyes of our enemies.

I was not in Washington on Friday, the 4th, for my attention having been called on the 3d to an attempt to run off some four contrabands secretly, I was consequently absent. The kidnappers had succeeded in getting the contrabands as far as Rockville, some 18 miles from Washington, when I and a few influential persons pursued them, and after a little reconnoissance we found them in the basement of a tavern, whose sign showed the words of "Union Hotel." The kidnappers were in the upper part of the tavern drunk and asleep. We then called the landlord, and showed him our authority, and gave him the details of the abduction, when he immediately proceeded to the basement and gave us the charge of the persons, two men and two boys. Having accomplished our object, we started on our return for Washington, leaving the slaveholders still asleep, to awake in the morning and find themselves in charge of the guard detailed to police Rockville, to which place, within the past week, those slaveholders in the District of Columbia, who have anticipated the passage of the bill, have sent their slaves, in order to hold on to them, and not give them the benefit of the manumission; and even now they are smuggling the ignorant and the young away, and before that bill is in full force many poor wretches will be hurried away into hopeless slavery. O, may God save His people in this day of their utmost trial. Even in this one sunny spot of our existence we feel the wicked hate of our oppressors coming thicker and faster and swifter around us, clutching at our vitals and drinking up our blood; an intensely wicked will working day and night to create some evil to crush us down lower than the brute. John V. Givens.

From the N. Y. Evening Post, April 4th 1862.

SAN DOMINGO AND ITS RESOURCES.

The Colonization of Free Blacks—A Paper by Mr. Fabens and a discussion.

A meeting of the American Geographical Society was held last evening at the rooms of the society in Clinton Hall. A paper was read by J. W. Fabens, late United States Consul at Cayenne, on "San Domingo and its resources," comprising the results of careful personal observation. Mr. Fabens began with the discovery of the island by Columbus, tracing the progress and subsequent failure of the Spanish rule, and explaining how, after three centuries of Spanish occupation, the country returned again to its first condition of savage occupation. He then considered the state of facts at the present time, remarking that the subject was, in some of its bearings, more important to us than any other in which we were interested. In the western end of Hayti there is a free black republic, which is not a failure; and a consideration of the subject in this connection (he added) might aid in solving one of the great problems of the age.

Mr. Fabens then gave an elaborate description of the island of San Domingo; its physical geography; its climate (which he declared to be one of the best, if not the very best, in the world); its natural productions, among which are nearly all the products of the temperate as well as tropical zones; its forests and mineral wealth; the extraordinary fertility of the soil, and its special adaptation to the culture of cotton, tobacco and coffee, of which the first grew spontaneously, and was of excellent quality; and he expressed his belief, founded on much observation and reading, that San Domingo, in its natural gifts and resources, is the paradise of the world. He referred, in conclusion, to the voluntary return of the people of the island to Spanish rule. In their helplessness—which Mr. Fabens explained as a necessary condition of the circumstances—they naturally looked abroad for aid, and only from Spain, the mother country, was there any response. There was a semi-recognition on the part of England, France and the United States, but this was given mainly for the purpose of securing certain claims. From the great republic of America, to which the eyes of the people of San Domingo naturally turn, they receive no genuine sympathy or assistance; we were not quite ready to stand by our principles. Besides, the people knew, what we all conceded with lively pleasure, that the Spain of to-day was not the Spain of the sixteenth century; and the speaker from his own experience testified to the entire change of the policy of that country towards her colony. She was now liberal and tolerant, seeking not to absorb and supplant the nationality of the people. She has guarantied perfect equality, decreeing that no one man should own another. She was by her legislation encouraging emigration, and the future liberality of her legislature could not be doubted.

At the conclusion of Mr. Faben's remarks Mr. Hiram Ketchum said: something should be done towards carrying out the suggestions which must have occurred to many minds. A question of great interest now in this country—a question of absorbing interest—is the colonization of the blacks. The subject has attracted a great deal of attention for years. We have a colony on the coast of Africa, which engages the attention of a great many very wise and philanthropic citizens of this country, and it is now the home of many thousands of the blacks, who, it was hoped, would demonstrate their capacity for self-government, if indeed they have that capacity. I suppose it is to be conceded now, without entering into any discussion on this occasion, that though there is a large class of free blacks in this country, their number must from necessity be greatly increased before long [applause].

What shall be done with this increased population of free colored people, is the problem to be solved. They are natives of our country—they are Americans—and it is not to be doubted that a great many of them love this country very sincerely. In my judgment it would be very unwise, very unjust, to force them from this land of their nativity. Yet at the same time, if by their own consent they should be willing to emigrate, it would be to their advantage. And now the point arises—a very important point, upon which we have heard an interesting paper read—whether this population should be encouraged and assisted to go to San Domingo. We have heard a glowing, and I doubt not truthful, description of that country—of its abundance, its salubrious climate and fertile soil. If there be a paradise upon earth, or that which is capable of being made a paradise, it is San Domingo.

[Mr. Fabens, at the request of the speaker, indicated on the map the part of the island under the government of Hayti—about one-quarter of the whole.]

Mr. Ketchum continued: Less than one-quarter is under the government of Hayti. All the rest and perhaps the best part, is under Spain, and to that part the free colored people are invited. Some thirty years ago I belonged to an association in this city—embracing Colson, Drs. Clarkson, and Wainwright and others—for the encouragement of such colonization. An invitation had been sent from Hayti to colored persons to come there, and quite a number went. Now the question arises whether it is desirable to promote emigration to this island (San Domingo). I suppose we should be very certain of two or three things before any of us could encourage this emigration. We must be certain, first, that those who go could never be reduced to slavery. [Applause] Further, that they should be guarantied full religious liberty. I am very certain that the colored race in this country would be very tenacious upon this point. And finally, whether, by reasonable industry and care, they can earn enough to support themselves and their families. If we were reasonably sure of these things, there are a great many people—I might say the government itself—would encourage and aid this emigration. Perhaps it may be insisted that it should be connected with this country—connected wih our government. But it is very difficult to have them here without allowing them to be a part of the government, that is, to be represented, and it might be better that they should go to another country, so near us that we can help them if neccessary. In order that some action should be taken on this important subject, I offer a resolution which has a preamble embodying the sense of which I have already said.

Resolved, That a committee be now appointed to make inquiries and to thoroughly investigate the facts of the case, and especially to what extent the Spanish government have acknowledged rights of jurisdiction of that island (San Domingo); what sureties like those contemplated in the foregoing preamble (and stated by Mr Ketchum) can be given, and generally the advantages and disadvantages which would result from such emigration; and to take such action therein as to said committee may be deemed desirable.

Resolved, That such committee consist of—persons, to be appointed by the chair, with power to fill vacancies and add to their number.

Rev. Dr. Leavitt said: Mr. President; I am in favor of that resolution. I have been very much interested and instructed and excited by this lecture, disclosing to us the existence of an almost unoccupied paradise, so near, so inviting, and waiting for the free blacks of this country who need a home. And I wish, also, in this place to express my concurrence in the main in the remarks of my honorable friend who has just taken his seat.

He and I have long differed before the public on questions connected with this very subject—differed earnestly and honestly. I have long been aware of the immensity of the question involved in what is now before us; and I long ago made up my mind that when this should become a practical question before the people of the United States, it would be the occasion of a great national movement, before it could be satisfactorily disposed of. And so it is, sir: I look upon the lecture we have just heard as the gift of an overruling Providence, bringing up a new aspect of the whole question—bringing us in this time of trial a common ground of feeling and co-operation we have never had before.

Dr. Leavitt concluded with the remark that time was moving on as fast as we needed to go. That there was no fear that this great question would sleep.

After some further discussion, Judge Daly opposing the passage of the preamble, and stating that he disagreed with the gentlemen as to the feasibility of the project, both the preamble and resolution were referred to counsel for consideration, who are to report them to the next meeting of the society, with such changes as they may deem advisable.

AN AGREEABLE SURPRISE.

A few evenings since, whilst in conversation with a friend at my house, I was startled by a tolerably loud rap on the door. It being about 10 o'clock at night, I was at a loss for a moment to account for it, when the thought arose, perhaps some one is sick, or my services may be needed somewhere; of course the thought passed rapidly through my mind. Opening the door, judge of my surprise when there came pouring in quite an imposing number of young ladies, attended by several gentlemen. In they came and on they went, filling every available spot in the house. It was a beautiful sight. Another feature of this remarkable visit was, that each one bore a basket, bundle or package of some kind—and I might add just here, that smiles and pleasantry pervaded them all. It was a happy gathering. One of the ladies very facetiously remarked:—"Mr. Catto, we have called to pay you this visit without invitation, and in fact without your consent; we hope we have not acted amiss." I could but most cheerfully reply:—"Of course not, ladies; you are ever welcome"—casting a glance at the piles of the good and substantial things of life which lay in heaps around me. And this was not all: these friends seemed to have considered the words of our Saviour—"that man shall not live by bread alone;" and stopping at that point, they on this evening gave a practical turn to the text, by presenting me with that which, in the pocket or purse, enables one to feel bouyant and cheerful, and, in these war times, to wish that all could engage in such visits of love.

Permit me, through the "Anglo-African," to thank those dear friends for their kindness in this instance, and for the many proofs of affection shown me since I have been among them.

William T. Catto,
Pastor Temple St. Church.
New Haven, Ct., April 7, 1862.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE CONCERT AT THE COOPER INSTITUTE.

Was decidedly the most numerous and brilliant assemblage ever witnessed at a colored people's concert in this city, and had it not been for the rain, which ceased falling but two hours previous to the commencement of the exercises, we verily believe that every seat in that great hall, the largest in the city, would have been filled.

A rainy day in March being most disagreeable to invalids, of course many were kept at home.

THE HALL,

which will seat 2,000, exclusive of the platform, is a very fine room, but an exceedingly poor place to sing in, the ceiling being supported by girders and columns.

THE PLATFORM,

which will seat about 300, was occupied by the children, who made a very beautiful appearance. The girls occupied the right and the boys the left of the stage, the larger ones in the rear.

The concert was opened by a fantasia on the piano by Miss Virginia Magnan, which was loudly applauded; after which the children from the Primary department of School No. 2 sung two lively little choruses, which were also loudly applauded. These were followed by a solo by Miss Lydia Dangerfield, whose singing was honored with an encore.

"Eva's vision," by Miss Alice Taylor, was very prettily sung, and much applauded—such was also the case with the solo "Bacon and Greens," by Master Jas. Hamilton.

Miss Pauline Green, who is a great favorite with the public, sang the charming Scotch song, "Twas within a mile of Edinburg town," handsomely, and was honored with an encore. Standing before such an audience and singing without a copy a song which four days before she had never seen, we considered rather an extraordinary feat.

Master Edward Thorne volunteered to sing, in the place of another, the solo "Where liberty dwells there's my country," which he rendered with fine effect, and was much applauded.

Miss P. C. Groves sang the solo "Spring flowers are coming again," but this being her first appearance, and she being rather timorous, of course she could not do it that justice which a second trial will enable her to do. The solo "I'm leaving thee in sorrow, Annie," was well sung and deservedly applauded. Miss Mary Day and Miss Mary Hamilton also sung, but their voices were not in a fit condition, so they must try again. The solo "Come my love, my dearest," is a very pretty song, and was well executed by Miss Mary Brown, and for which she received the hearty applause of the audience. We predict that she will make that song a favorite one with the public.

The solos "Let me alone," by Miss Addie Hamilton, and "Annie of the vale," by Master Edward Thorne were both honored with a tremendous encore, as was also the solo singing of Miss Caroline Brown of Brooklyn. These solos were interspersed by choruses, sung by classes of young ladies and gentlemen from Grammar School No. 2, (Mr. Wake and Miss Tompkins principals) and by a class of young gentlemen from Grammar School No. 1 (Mr. John Peterson, principal), by some of the Primary department of School No. 2, and the full force of the company. The choruses were well executed, and loudly applauded. As proof of the deep interest taken in the affair, we would state that very few persons left before eleven o'clock, although they began to assemble before 6 o'clock.

YOUNG FOLKS CONCERT IN BROOKLYN.

This concert, which was given in the Bridge street Church on Thursday evening, the 3d inst., for the benefit of the great Union Bazaar soon to be held in this city for the benefit of the Colored Orphan Asylumn, was a very creditable affair. The little children were very neatly dressed, and their behavior was all that could be desired. Mr. Henry Latham acted as conductor, and Miss Susan Smith presided at the piano. The chorus singing showed much practice; and to hear the young voices blending harmoniously in the parts, sounded beautiful indeed. The duetts sung by Misses Elizabeth and Mary Smith, and Alice Taylor and Susan Tompkins, were sang very sweetly, as was also the solo by Miss Annie Hoffman, of Williamsburgh. The solo of Master J. McC. S. Hamilton was honored with an encore. During the exercises the Rev. Mr. Cain made some appropriate remarks, and the concert was concluded with the appropriate chorus of "Home, sweet home." The whole affair reflects much credit on Mrs. Tompkins and her sister Miss Smith; and we are pleased to learn that the concert is to be repeated in Williamsburgh.

PERSONAL.

Rev. Dr. Haven, the able editor of "Zion's Herald," lectured in Springfield on the evening of the 1st inst. He spoke of the "White races in America" as inevitably superseding the savage tribes, and working out a new civilization under free institutions, which not even rebellion could put down. The peculiar effect of our climate in developing brain and nerve, imparting quickness of decision, fertility, inquisitiveness and invention, were dwelt upon, and a bright future anticipated when the white races of America shall be inspired with the sentiment of justice toward all other races.

A Washington correspondent of the New York "Express" having stated that a rumor had been going the rounds in Washington that Frederick Douglass was to lecture in that city, with strong probabilities of a riot, the "National Republican" remarks:

> "This 'rumor' is about as true as many other statements found in the 'Express,' designed to give a stab at Freedom and its advocates. No proposition has ever been made to, or entertained by the Washington Lecture Association to invite Mr. Douglass to lecture before them, although a large number of members of Congress and other distinguished gentlemen have urged its propriety. Let it be understood, however, that if, this year, or the next, the Association sees proper to avail itself of this distinguished and eloquent Virginian's talents as a lecturer, it will do so, in defiance of any pro-slavery opposition or mobs which the enemies of freedom can rally."

The President of Liberia has appointed John D. Johnson, Esq., formerly of this city, now a citizen of Liberia, a Special Commissioner, on behalf of said Republic, to this country, to represent to our Government their claims on the sympathy of the civilized world, and to afford the necessary information preparatory to the formal recognition of the Republic by this Government as a sovereign and independent State. He s also authorized to bring to the notice of he United States the desires of his Government to enter into an arrangement for the comfortable settlement in Liberia of such persons of African descent as may be desirous of going there. Mr. Johnson is empowered to appoint one or more persons, citizens of the United States, as Commissioners to be associated with himself for the furtherance of the above named objects.

We learn that Mr. James Redpath left this city a few days ago for Canada, for the purpose of bringing down a colony. We wonder if it will consist of the balance due on the five thousand emigrants that were to come from Canada before the 1st of last January? If so, "Jeems" will have to put on another steamer. By the way, the "Chicago Tribune" and other influential papers in the West are doing our people in that section a great service by publishing an account of that ruse, and declaring truthfully that "the movement has fizzled out."

APRIL SHOWERS.—Snow storms in the North and bomb shells and cannon balls in the South.

SOLDIERS NO LONGER SLAVE-CATCHERS.—The correspondent of 'The Cincinnati Gazette,' with Gen. Mitchell's Division, writes:

> Yesterday morning I was in the quarters of a Colonel of one of our Ohio regiments. A slaveholder, clad in the inevitable butternut-colored stuff, with a black cloth overcoat, entered the tent.
>
> 'What is your business, Sir?' queried the Colonel.
>
> 'Why I've lost a boy. I understand he is in your regiment, and I want to look for him.'
>
> 'Have you a pass?' demanded the officer.
>
> 'No; I was told it wasn't necessary to have a pass.'
>
> 'We want nothing more to do with you here,' replied the Colonel. 'Adjutant, conduct this man over the lines.'
>
> My lips remained closed, but my heart said, 'God bless you, Colonel, for a soldier and a man.' I have seen officers cringe in similar cases, as though they supposed that only the most disgusting servility would save their backs from the slaveholder's lash. But those officers did not belong to Gen. Mitchell's Division.
>
> Gen. Mitchell himself yielded strict obedience to orders, as every soldier should; yet I know that in his heart he sympathizes, not with the oppressor, but with his victims, and looks upon the institution of Slavery as an almost insurmountable obstacle to the restoration of Union and peace.

THE CONCERT AT COOPER INSTITUTE.—The New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer in his letter to that paper under date March 29th, says:

> "The colored people of this city, with commendable enterprise, are getting up a grand concert in aid of the weekly 'Anglo-African'—their newspaper organ—the editors of which have recently made a touching appeal to their sympaties. The entertainment comes off on Monday evening, at Irving Hall, and will include one hundred and fifty colored vocalist of all ages and of both sexes. Invitations have been sent to the Rev. Mr. Beecher, Wendell Philips, and other distinguished humanitarians. This little affair is making a great flutter among the African fasionables, and the chances are that the newspaper editor, on whose behalf it is gotten up, will have occasion to give thanks for the money it will put in his purse."

The advertisement of Mrs. Hawkins in our issue of March 29th, should have read instead of "white silk," a fine needle worked cambric handkercheif. The finder of said article will be liberally rewarded on returning it to the owner.

Binques smiled when he read the announcement in the last "Pine and Palm", that hereafter, that journal will be an "impersonal newspaper." He says that the few readers of that paper in this neighborhood always considered it an imp-ersonal newspaper.

In the recent editorial rencontre at the Tribune Buildings, Horace is said to have quoted Virgil thus, "Tie me O Dana, O!" (timeo danaos!) But whether he wanted some one to hold him, or whether he was afraid of the great manager, does not appear.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

"Land of the Free," song and chorus by Wm. Oland Bourne. We beg to return our thanks to the author of the above song, for copies which enabled us to sing it at our Concert at the Cooper Institute. We found it to be a production easy of execution, yet full of life and spirit. We also thank him for interest taken in the success of our paper.

We have received from Mr. Horace Waters a copy of the "Harp of Freedom" (part 1st) a collection of Anti-Slavery, patriotic and contraband songs, solos, duetts and chorusses. As this is the kind of music wanted at this time let there be an extensive purchase of this book. In addition to many others, it contains the "Song of the Contrabands" and Whittier's celebrated song, "We wait beneath the furnace blast." price 5 cents single, $3 per hundred.

SUMMARY.

The Albany Statesman of April 7th, says: "Yesterday afternoon, a colored woman on her way to Church, fell upon the sidewalk, corner of Second and Swan street, in a fainting fit. A crowd immediately gathered around, but their serious apprehensions were removed by a citizen, who coolly informed them that the woman was accustomed to such fits, and would 'soon come out of it.' The rabble gazed with indifference upon the sad spectacle, while Pharisees and Levites passed by on the other side. But, by chance, a U. S. soldier came that way, and unwilling to leave a friendless woman in that condition, with the aid of another gentleman, removed the unfortunate stranger to a neighboring drug store, and like the good Samaritan, committed her to the care of the proprietor. 'Go thou and do likewise.'"

The Washington Star says that a colored woman named Sarah Longstreet, living on the Island was badly burned on the evening of the 27th ult, by her clothes taking fire from a lamp.

In Baltimore on the 1st. of April a baker keeping a shop on Howard St. near Franklin amused himself by furnishing a crowd of colored boys who had been in the habit of hanging around his windows, with confectionery filled with cotton, and seeing them attempt to masticate it.

On the 22d ult, a colored convict, was caught in the attempt to scale the walls of the Ohio Penitentiary. On examination he was found to be encased in boiler iron so as to be completely bullet proof.

The following is from the Washington Star of the 28th ult.

Officer McCauley yesterday afternoon arrested a cavalry man who gave his name as Thomas Ryan, for firing at a colored man near the corner of Virginia avenue and Third street. It is not known yet what was the cause of his shooting at the negro, nor who the negro was, for he ran so fast that the police were unable to overtake him. Justice Stratton holds Ryan for a further examination.

From the N. Y. Daily Times, April 6th, 1862.

COLONIZATION OF BLACKS.

To the Editor of the New York Times:

The colonization of American negroes, now amounting to one fourth more than our entire population in 1776, is proposed by some statesmen. Several insuperable objections occur: First—The labor of the one million or so of these negroes—its working force—is essential to the Southern and Southwestern planters, and without them, for several years, there would be a ruinous reduction in the American product of cotton, sugar, rice and tobacco, affecting, injuriously, our whole country, and the South most of all. Second—It is inhuman to drive forth the poor negro from his native home and abode, and break up his local and social attachments. Third—The expense of removing and settling four millions of people in a new home, would be from five to eight hundred millions of dollars. Fourth—If these poor negroes are to be driven forth by legal inflictions, or forcibly expelled, the curse of God and the execrations of all Christian nations would fall deservedly upon us. This colonization scheme is wholly impracticable. Gradual emancipation—changing within twenty-one years our slaves into free laborers by a slow and sure process, leaving them, in the meantime, in compulsory apprenticeship, in the place of Slavery and its wrongs and dis-qualifications.

WILBERFORCE.

MARRIED.

HOGARTH—JOHNS.—On Wednesday evening, April 2d, at the residence of the bride's father, Atlantic near Troy Avenue, Brooklyn, by the Rev. Henry M. Wilson, George Hogarth to Miss Octavia Johns, all of said city.

☞ Christian Recorder will please copy.

LATHAM—BROWN.—In this city, March 27th, 1862, by the Rev. Thomas Johnson, Mr. Henry F. Latham to Mary L. Brown, all of this city.

DIED.

TATE.—In this city, March 29th, of hasty consumption, Sarah Tate, daughter of the late Wm. P. Johnson, aged 32 years and 10 months.

MASON.—In Medina, N. Y., April 1st, of diphtheria, Miss Lovenia M. Mason, of Lockport, N. J., in the 18th year of her age.

COONIS.—In Philadelphia, on Thursday, March 20th, Harriet Coonis, aged 67 years.

BURR.—In Philadelphia, Wednesday evening, March 19th, Esther, wife of John P. Burr, in the 67th year of her age.

Special Notices.

THE GREAT AFRICAN MAGICIAN AND WIZARD, MONS. KELLIES.

Begs leave to announce his appearance in a series of Grand Drawing Room Entertainments, consisting of astounding transformations and illusions, as presented before Queen Victoria and the Court at Balmoral Castle, Scotland, to be given at

THE METROPOLITAN ROOMS,
178 PRINCE ST., ON THURSDAY AND FRIDAY EVENINGS, APRIL 17th, and 18th, 1862.

These Entertainments have been extensively patronised by distinguised clergymen of all denominations, and are universally pronounced by the public and the press to be unequalled.

Mons. Kellies will give selections from the most recherche of his experiments, many of which are entirely new. The whole will be illustrated by new and gorgeous paraphernalia, manufactured expressly for him in London and Paris.

Tickets of admission 25 cents. Children under 12 years, 13 cents.

Doors open at 7 o'clock. Performances to begin at 8. ☞ No postponement on account of the weather.

For further particulars see small bills.

AN ENTERTAINMENT WILL BE GIVEN ON

THURSDAY EVENING, April 17th, 1862,

In the basement of Zion M. E. Church, Devoe st., Williamsburg. Rev. Mr. Manning, Elder in charge.

The proceeds are expressly for paying him his salary. The patronage of the public is respectfully solicited, and the Committee pledge themselves to make the Entertainment agreeable to all who may honor us with their presence.

All Donations to be left with Sister A. E. Woods, No. 289 South Third Street.

Tickets 25 cents.

To be had of the following Committee.

LADIES.—Mrs. E. M. Dunn, 26 Varets st., Mrs. J. A. Seaman, 17 Skillman st., Mrs. A. E. Woods, 289 South 3d st. Mrs. R. Graham, 22 Ewen st., Mrs. F. A. Hicks, corner South 3d and 11th sts.

GENTLEMEN.—Mr. I. Pernel, 218 Church st., N. Y., J. Seaman, 17 Skillman st., J. Dixon, 64 11th st., Wm. S. Manning, 26 Varet st.

THE AFRICAN CIVILIZATION SOCIETY stands adjourned to meet in the 7th Avenue Presbyterian Church, on Monday, April 21st, at 8 o'clock P. M.

HENRY M. WILSON,
Secretary.

GRAND CONCERT.

The Young Folks of Brooklyn will give a Grand Concert in aid of the Ladies' Union Bazaar, for the Colored Orphan Asylum, on Tuesday evening, April 22d, in the Congregational Church, cor. South 3d and 11th sts., Williamsburg.

Doors open at 6½ o'clock: Concert to commence at 7½ o'clock. Admission 15 cents.

ARRIVALS

At Mrs. PLANT'S Boarding House.

Dr. Skinner, wife and pupils, of Trenton, N. J.
Wm. Rhodes, of Washington, D. C.
Alex. Wildey, of Frederickton, N. B.
Mr. Pelham, of Newburg, N. Y.

A. T. HARDY,

MUSICIAN,

109 Thompson street, (near Prince) New York.

HELP WANTED.

AT TILMON'S AGENCY, 70. East 13th st. one door east of 4th Avenue. Farmers and Gardeners with their wives for the country; and young men and boys as waiters and cooks, chambermaids, laundresses, house-workers for city and country.

Also immediately,—a head and second waiter; a head and second cook, and pantry maid for a summer house.—Wages good.

37 tf.

WANTED.

A Colored Waitress, who perfectly understands her duties and can give undoubted references.

Apply at 5 West 16th st., between the hours of 9 and 11 A. M.

NOTICE.

Is hereby given that Phoenix Union Lodge No, 3, of Hudson, N. Y., under the jurisdiction of the E. D. Grand Lodge, No. 1, of G. S. & D. of S. is indefinitely suspended for non compliance with the rules and regulations of the Order.

JNO. R. PORTER, G. Sec.

LADIES' UNION BAZAAR,

For the Benefit of the
COLORED ORPHAN ASYLUM.

In consideration of the many pressing wants of the Asylum, and the great and constant need of funds to supply those wants the Ladies of New York and Brooklyn have consented to hold a Bazaar, to aid the Managers in their labors of love and charity for the Orphans under their charge.

The object is one which speaks for itself we therefore deem any further appeal to the sympathies of the people wholly unnecessary.

The Ladies most earnestly solicit the aid of the community in donations of money or goods of any kind.

Contributions may be sent to the directress, Mrs. E. Bastien, or to any of the committee.

OFFICERS.

Mrs. Emeline Bastien, Directress, 89 Thompson st. N. Y. Mrs. Ransom F. Wake, Assistant, 99 Thompson st. N. Y., Mrs. Rev. J. N. Gloucester, Assistant Bridge st., Brooklyn, Mrs. D. Roselle, Assistant, South Second st., Brooklyn, Mrs. Mrs. J. H. Jackson, Assistant, Sullivan st., N. Y., Miss. F. Tompkins, Secretary, 59 Laurens st., N. Y., Mrs. C. Graham, Asst., Broome st., N. Y. Mrs. W. J. Wilson, Asst., Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, Mrs. C. L. Reason, Treasurer, 118 Laurens st., N. Y.

COMMITTEE.

Mrs. C. Robinson, N.Y.	Mrs Rv.H.H. Garnet, N.Y
" Rev. P. Williams, "	" Margt. Jackson, "
" R. Rich, "	" E Stevens, "
" H. Scott, "	" P. Van Dyke, "
" Dr. Smith, "	" W. Curtis, "
" C. Fitch, "	" Lambert, "
" E. Parker, "	" E. Symonette, "
" A. Duncan. "	" Shadd, "
" Bowser, "	" A. Williams, "
" J. Jenkins, "	" E. Mann, "
" J. Bell, "	" B. Stanley, "
" J. Peterson, "	" J. W. Bowers, "
Miss E. D. Richards, "	" H. Mars, "
Mrs. C. Topp, "	" R. Jackson, Br'klyn
" P. Guignon, Br'klyn	" M. Van Stay, "
" Barnswell, "	" Hall, "
" W. Leonard, "	" J. C. Morell, "
" Rev. C. Thompson, "	" Tompkins, "

ANNIVERSARY.

The Young Men's Literary Association of the city of New York, will hold their sixth Anniversary on Wednesday Evening, April 24th, at the Continental Hall, corner of 34th st. and 8th avenue. Several distinguished speakers from abroad are expected to make addresses. For further particulars see small bills.

JOHN W. WILLIAMS, President.
Abr'm. W. Larkins, Sec'ry.

A GRAND MENTAL FEAST.

The ladies of the Zion Baptist Church intend giving a Grand Mental Feast, commencing on Easter Monday, April 20th, and continue the 22d and 23d, for the benefit of the Church. Doors open at 4 o'clock P. M. Admission 10 cents; children, 5 cents.

A FAIR.

A judicious Committee of ladies attached to the First A. M. E. Bethel Church, Second street, under the pastoral charge of the Rev. J. D. S. Hall, will give a Grand Union Fair in the basement of M. E. Church, Sullivan street, between Bleeker and Amity streets, opening on April the 1st and continuing for the space of ten days.

Open at 4 o'clock every afternoon.

PHILADELPHIA AGENCY.

Wm. R. De Cordover, 419 South 7th st. is authorised to receive subscriptions and advertisements for the Anglo-African. All orders left with him will receive prompt attention.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER. A Printing Office for $10. LOWE'S Improved Printing Presses are the Best, Cheapest, most Durable portable Card and Job Presses ever made, and have been awarded Diplomas and silver medals. You will find a press a source of pleasure and profit, by printing for yourself or your neighbors. Many persons are saving and making money by using one at their homes or places of business. A comfortable living may be obtained in any city, town or village, with a small outlay for press and types. The press costs but one-tenth as much as a common job press, and is so simple, a boy or girl of twelve can do common and fancy printing with ease. Cards, Bill-Heads, Labels, Receipts, Circulars, &c., can be printed at a trifling expense. Price of Presses—No. 1, $5; No. 2, $10; No. 3, $15; No. 4, $20. Price of Printing Offices, including press.—No. 1, $10; No. 2, $20; No. 3, $30; No. 4, $40. Send for a Circular to the

LOWE PRESS COMPANY,
34tf 13 Water street, Boston.

A. ROBERTS,

120 Clinton Court, 8th st., New York, agent for the Weekly Anglo-African. Copies may be had of him at an early hour after its publication.

APARTMENTS to let No. 217 Sullivan street. Inquire on the premises of

E. V. CLARK.

25 4t.

ZION CONFERENCE.

☞ Notice is hereby given to the Members of the Annual Conference of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion, that the Annual Conference of the New York District will meet in Zion Church, corner of Church and Leonard streets, New York city, on the Third Saturday in May, 1862.

WM. H. BISHOP,
Superintendent of the 1st Dist. of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

STONE SQUARE LODGE NO. 6, A. Y. M. under the jurisdiction of the M. W. United Grand Lodge of the State of New York, meet every Friday Evening at 8 o'clock, at their Hall 309 Grand st., Williamsburg, Brooklyn, E. D.

J. H. DAVIS, Sec'ry.

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,

REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.

New York—corner of Prince and Marion street near Broadway.

Hours of Worship:—
Prayer-meeting, 10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.

Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock,
Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.
Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,

(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. WM. J. ALSTON, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . . P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—
10½ . . . . . . A. M.
3 . . . . . . P. M.
7½ . . . . . . P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn.
13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

REV. ELI N. HALL, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:
10½ o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . . P. M.
7½ " . . . . . P. M.
10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . . P. M.
7½ " . . . . . P. M.
12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—
3 o'clock, ... P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

LECTURE every Wednesday evening.

Rev. CHAS. H. THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . . P. M.
7½ " . . . . . P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. HALL, Pastor. Residence—293 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. JOHN T. RAYMOND, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . . P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

AGENT FOR WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

TROY AGENCY.—Mr. Henry Berke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

MRS. ELIZA LEWIS' SALVE,
ANDERSON'S HAIR RESTORATIVE,
(New London,)
SPANISH OIL, (For the Hair,)
WHITE'S VEGETABLE EXTRACT,
BRANDRETH'S SUGAR COATED PILLS,
For Sale at the
Drug Store 56 West Broadway
4-47

GLASS, CHINA, AND EARTHEN-WARE MENDED,

BY A. ROBERTS,
120 Clinton Court, 8th st. New York.

A Supply of the EGYPTIAN CEMENT, for the above purpose constantly on hand. Price 25 cents per bottle.

29tf.

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,

CARD AND JOB PRINTER
219 Greene Street New York.

LODGINGS. Four Gentlemen can obtain comfortable lodgings by applying to Mrs. Ellen Anderson No. 156 W. 29th street, between 7th and 8th avenues. The house is in a very pleasant part of the city and within half a block of cars and stages.

24 5t.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Use Dr. CLARKE'S

SHERRY WINE BITTERS!!

Composed of

Dock Root,	Wild Cherry,
Sarsaparilla,	Prickly Ash,
Thoroughwort,	Poplar Bark,
Rock Rose,	Rhubarb,
Wintergreen,	Dandelion,

&c. &c.

For Weakness, Loss of Appetite, Sour Stomach, Jaundice, Headache, Piles of long standing, Humors,

And all Diseases which arise from an unhealthy state of the Stomach, Bowels, and Blood.

PRICE ONLY 25 CENTS A BOTTLE!

For Sale at the office of the Anglo-African, 48 Beekman street.

TO LET.—Two furnished Rooms in Mrs. Plant's Boarding House suitable for a gentleman and wife, or for single gentlemen or ladies. Apply on the premises.

BOSTON HOUSE

MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of al the principal colored Churches.

19 26t

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this in any other city, please call at the Merchan Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG

Where you will find a splendid assortment o seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTING

of every description. Also constantly on hand well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.

DON'T FORGET,
168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS, EMPIRE STATE HOTEL

AND

UNION HOUSE, 541 BROOME STREET

Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y.

19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
23 26t

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding.

8 tf

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTEN, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 SOUTH STREET, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate.

81y

HENRY G. LEASK,

HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS AND FURS.

COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.

Shipping Furs Bought. 12-26

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) respectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

MRS. E. LEONARD,

FASHIONABLE

DRESS MAKER,

25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.

Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.

3tf

BOARDING AND LODGING

BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 120 West [illegible] Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in a very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies [illegible]
" Gents [illegible]
Lodging per week 75

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,

FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,

In all its branches—such as BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHAINS, ETC. Residence—126th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.

18 26t

HATS CAPS & FURS,

IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premiums for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS. The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.

10 1y.

THE HORACE WATERS PIANOS, MELODEONS, ALEXANDRE ORGANS,

T. Gilbert & Co's. Celebrated Aeolian Pianos,

are the finest instruments for Parlors and Churches now in use. A large assortment can be seen at the new Warerooms 481 Broadway, between Grand and Broome streets, which will be sold at extremely low prices. Pianos and Melodeons from sundry makers, new and second hand, to let, and rent allowed if purchased, as per agreement. Monthly payments received for the same, Also, second-hand pianos at great bargains, prices from $25 to $100. Sheet Music, Music Books, and all kinds of Music merchandise at war prices. A Pianist in attendance will try new music.

HORACE WATERS, AGENT.

32 13t.

GEORGE OTON'S

QUADRILLE BAND

BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,

PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St., and with G. Oton.

18tf

TO LET.—Furnished rooms for gentlemen, with or without board, at 68 Sullivan st.

JOHN H. JACKSON.

TO LET in Williamsburgh to a small family, the upper part of No. 64 South 8th st., containing all the modern improvements, within three minutes walk of all the ferries.

For particulars inquire as above Possession given immediately.

WORLD'S FAIR AGENCY.—The undersigned are acting as Agents for Merchants and Manufacturers to Exhibit at World's Fair, and to introduce into England, France and other European countries, articles of American Invention, Procuring Patents, making Sales, or in any way promoting their interests.

DEXTER & CO. 17 Spruce st. N. Y.; 86 Milk street, Boston; 149 S. Fourth st., Philad

1m 3ap.

HELP WANTED

At Tilmon's Agency, No. 70 East 13th st., one door East of the 4th Avenue. Spring is here and now is the time. Never was there a greater demand for all first class colored help than now. Remember that this is the oldest and most responsible office in the city for colored help. Situations constantly on hand for both city and country. Terms cash and strict attention paid to business. All persons coming to this city and wishing to save board will do well to call during Office hours, from 7 A. M. to 5 P. M.

31tf L. TILMON, Proprietor.

PETER S. PORTER,

GENERAL AGENT FOR

HOUSE LETTING,

170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City.

17 13t

PLANE St. SELECT SCHOOL.

195 PLANE ST., NEWARK, N. J.
MRS. HARRIET E. ROGERS, PRINCIPAL.

The branches taught are Reading, Writing Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography and History.

Plain Sewing. Ornamental Needlework, Worsted Embroidery and Fancy Knitting.

Piano Forte, Melodeon, and Vocal Music by Prof. John H. O'Fake.

A limited number of Misses between the ages of ten and fourteen may be boarded in the house on moderate terms. Healthy location, and a fine yard for exercise.

REFERENCES.

NEWARK, N.J.

Rev. E. J. Adams, Jefferson Ellis,
Adam Ray, Abram T. Cook.

BROOKLYN.

Rev. J. N. Gloucester.

NEW YORK.

Rev. H. M. Wilson, Rev. H. H. Garnet.

All letters may be addressed to Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, 194 Plane st. Newark N. J.

27 6t.

Elizabeth City, N. J. Feb. 6, 1862.

This is to certify that I heartily approve of the effort of Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers to establish a Select School for young misses. I have been acquainted with her for over twenty-five years and am happy to recommend her and her enterprise to the patronage of the public in general.

DANIEL H. VANDERVEER,
Pastor of the 1st Colored Pres. Church, Eliz. City

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated "[illegible] Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

WANTED IMMEDIATELY—At Tilmon's Agency, 70 East 13th street, one door east of the 4th Avenue, several colored men and their wives, as farmers and gardeners. Best of wages given. [illegible] quickly. [illegible] required.

36 4t.

APARTMENTS TO LET, [illegible] houses on [illegible] street, between [illegible] Avenues, (Harlem) for first class colored families,—those without children preferred. Apply at No. 70 East 13th street. L. TILMON.

36 4t.

BOARDING AND LODGING. [illegible]

Poetry.

CZAR AND SERF.

BY A. J. H. DUGANNE.

There came out word from Muscovy
  To all the Christian lands—
That Kaiser Alexander
  Had loosed his vassals' bands;
That the Czar of all the Russias,
  By brave and wise commands,
Had risen the yoke from bondmen's necks,
  The shackles from their hands.
    Then the wide world shouted—
      Wherever Christians are—
    "'Tis a noble deed this man hath done!
      All hail the Russian Czar!"

O'er all the land of Muscovy
  Was slavery's leprous scurf—
Till Kaiser Alexander said,
  "Emancipate the serf!"
Till the Czar of all the Russias
  To shapes of breathing turf
Gave thrice ten million freemen's souls—
  A soul for every serf.
    Then all the wide world shouted—
      Wherever Christians are—
    "'Tis a noble deed this man hath done!
      God keep the Russian Czar!"

I think if he of Muscovy
  Were ruler here, this day,
And underneath Rebellion's foot
  His bleeding country lay,
With twice three hundred thousand men
  Behind him fierce for fray,
He would not brook that Slavery
  Should hold him long at bay;
    With all the wide world gazing—
      Wherever Christians are—
    I'm sure a deed would soon be done
      By Russia's valiant Czar!

God knows this land, like Muscovy,
  Was rank with Slavery's scurf;
God knows it made the ruler oft
  More leprous than the serf:
And yet, in sight of Bunker Hill,
  In sight of Vernon's turf,
We shrink from Alexander's cry—
  "Emancipate the serf!"
    With all the wide world gazing—
      Wherever Christians are—
    We are cowering still at Slavery's feet
      Rebuked by Russia's Czar!

KIND WORDS.

Kind words are links that draw us near,
  In hope and peace and love;
They fall like music on the ear,
  And dew-drops from above.

Like links, they mend affection's chain,
  Each broken heart they bind,
And cause old enemies again
  The path of friendship find.

O, what a world of happiness
  Would be this earth of ours
If kind words in their potentness
  Would be the ruling powers.

O, then each face would beam with love,
  Each heart with joy would leap;
Our lives in union then would move,
  In peace we all would sleep.

When life's appalling storm doth blow,
  And bow us down in tears;
Kind words our wonted hopes restore,
  And drive away our fears.

Yes, friendly whispers often bring
  Fond yearnings to the heart;
And with their magic potent wing
  Our thoughts to Heaven start.

JOHN WILLIS MAYNARD.

Detroit, March 31st, 1862.

"DEAL GENTLY WITH THE ERRING."

The following circumstance was related to me about three years ago by an aged Friend, a well esteemed minister of the gospel, who has since been gathered to his heavenly home. The relation so much interested me that I thought it worth writing down, and if thou shouldst think proper to insert it in the Review, thou art at liberty to do so. D. G.

WARREN CO., Ohio, 1st mo. 10th, '58.

"When I carried on farming many years ago, I had a man sometimes in my employ who was very intemperate and often abused his family, and was frequently in want of the necessaries of life. At length I told him that if he would refrain from intemperance and the abuse of his family, I would purchase a cow for him. He promised to do so, and accordingly I bought the cow. He worked for me faithfully until he had nearly paid for her, keeping his promise, as far as I knew. But I became suspicious that he was not entirely honest. During hay harvest we had a rain one afternoon, and he starting homeward through a piece of woods, I followed unobserved after him, having my dog with me. After he was fairly out of sight of my house he turned square out of his course and went some distance to a stone fence, and took something white out of a hole putting it under his coat, then went back and took his first course. I went to the hole in the fence and found an article belonging to me, which I took home, and communicated the circumstances to an aged uncle of mine. The next day, when dinner was over, and the man and several other hands were starting to their work, I spoke to him mildly, and, asking him to come back into the house, I took him into the room where my uncle was, and requested him to be calm as I had somewhat to say to him. I told him that having cause to suspect his honesty, I had followed him the evening before, and saw him take something out of the stone fence, and put it under his coat, and that I had been at the place and found an article which I showed to him. He seemed much startled, but confessed to the stealing of all that I had missed, and asked it I had sent for a constable. I told him that I wanted no constable, but would propose that if he would still refrain from intemperance and use his family well and act honestly hereafter, I would book the articles he had taken, and he might work out the price of them; and as the circumstance was only known to himself, my uncle, and myself, it should never be divulged in his name; but if he again became intemperate, abused his family or acted dishonestly, this affair would be exposed, and he would have to answer to the law for the offense. He conducted himself well whilst in the neighborhood, and removed some time afterwards more than one hundred miles from me. In the course of a few years he and his family became members of our religious society, and he afterwards came back to my neighborhood and was on a visit at my house."—Friends' Review.

THE SLAVERY QUESTION IN TENNESSEE.

The Nashville correspondent of the World writes a very interesting letter about the remarkable speech which Mr. Etheridge gave at Nashville a few days ago, to a crowded audience. We make the following extracts:

"But the huge thing of the speech was its declaration, in this proud slave capital, that whenever the question arose, the constitution or slavery, slavery must go down—that every negro would be liberated. He declared emphatically that slavery would never be allowed to embarrass the United States government, or to protract the war.

These sentiments were announced explicitly and emphatically, and were received with as much enthusiasm as they could have been in Boston. I turned to a gentleman by my side with the old remark, 'the world moves.' And so it does.

Mr. Etheridge said also that this war had made more abolitionists than all the thirty years of anti-slavery agitation, and that slavery could never have the security it once had in this country. With the whole civilized world against it, the government of the United States had sheltered and protected it.

He said slavery was much more easily defended as a permissive than as an aggressive thing. You have got to live in the Union with your slaves if you will, without them if you must.

He specified the nations of the earth that had abolished it. He proved it an outlaw. These points were put and pressed with fine force and frankness—with a frankness that amazed me, accustomed as I have been to the public reserve and caution on this question of questions in the south country, during all my life.

Etheridge is a slaveholder. So are hundreds of others in this State who breathe freely and talk frankly on this importunate Banquo's ghost of negro bondage.

If this war is protracted, exclaimed Mr. Etheridge, then confiscation and emancipation! And slaveholders shook him by the hand afterward and said amen. I have heard and seen enough here to convince me that Tennessee is beyond any border State on the slavery question, unless it be Delaware. I have been told by large slave owners that they would be mightily glad to get rid of the institution. They spoke in praise of President Lincoln's late message. They are in favor of its experiment. One gentleman said: 'I was born among slaves; I was nursed by them, and have always owned them; but I confess to you that I am thoroughly sick of the whole institution. When this army came I called my negroes together and said: "If you have any notion of leaving me I have only one request to make: leave me altogether and forever; stop nowhere within my reach. If you turn up around here I'll take you back and flog you; if you get out of my sight I'll not stir a step after you." Sir,' he continued, 'the owner is the slave in the border States. Free white labor is the best for all concerned.'

Upon expressing my surprise at such sentiments, I was told they were nothing unusual in this State."

THE CATS AND THE BUCKWHEAT CAKES.

Rev. Robert Boyd, of the Pittsburg Conference, in his Personal Memoirs, just published, narrates the following:

'I recollect a sore red eyed woman, that wore an old hat, on the first circuit I traveled, who had prepared dinner before going to meeting at the old log school-house. And as it was her purpose to bring the preacher home with her, even the buckwheat cakes were all baked, and set in what was called the stockhole, in the back wall of her cabin chimney. As all had gone to meeting except the cats, when the door was opened the cats were seen helping themselves to the cakes. The old lady halloed ''scat!' at the top of her voice, and then, in the way of heavy complaint, remarked that she believed they had the worst cats in all the country, for they would'nt let anything alone.' But as they only nibbled round the edges and did not eat much, the old lady sprung around and got the cakes on a slab table, with some milk in hard looking tins, and some butter on an old pewter plate which reminded me of Joseph's coat of many colors. I managed so as to wait till some one took the top cake, on which the cats had sat, and in taking off another, I was careful to use only the middle part, leaving the edge part marked with the cat's teeth on my plate. I have often felt that it would have been a great relief if I could have kept away from such meals. And I only sat at these tables lest I should offend them by staying away. I frequently tried to talk about hunting, or any thing that came to hand, in order to keep them from noticing how little I ate. Yet I often heard the wonder expressed how it was I looked so well and ate so little. But they did not know that I sometimes had bread in my saddle-bags, which I used along the road, and drank pure water from the rocks instead of dirty milk.'

EMANCIPATION IN RHODE ISLAND. From an elaborate article in the New York Commercial Advertiser, showing how and when slavery was eradicated from the States now free, we select the following concerning Rhode Island:

"Rhode Island took her first step in the same direction, (towards emancipation) in 1778, when she proclaimed freedom to all slaves who would enlist as soldiers. Many of them took advantage of this act and served with fidelity. Next year slaves were prohibited from being sold out of the state. In 1784 a law was passed for gradual abolition, declaring all children who should be born after that date free. This was modified in part the next year; but the principal features remained untouched. In 1787 severe penalties were imposed on the foreign slave trade. The new constitution adopted in 1843, provided expressly against the longer existence of slavery in that State; yet it would seem that it still continued for a time, from the language of certain clauses in acts relating to the support of the poor."

"Are you not alarmed at the approach of the king of terrors?" said a clergyman to an invalid.—"Oh, no," was the reply, "I have been living six and thirty years with the queen of terrors: the king cannot be much worse!"

LETTER FROM NEWBURGH.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., March 28, '62.

MR. EDITOR: Newburgh is still extant, and still continues to improve not only in beauty but in wealth and population. Since my last visit to this place the colored Baptist Church has become extinct; but the Zion still flourishes. The church has been re-painted, and other improvements made; the greater part has been done through the exertions of the young ladies, who have formed themselves into an association for that and other benevolent purposes. Such conduct upon the part of the young ladies is worthy of emulation.

The weather is bright and clear, but cool. There is yet some ice in the river, and considerable snow upon the hills and mountains, which may account for the backwardness of Spring.

From appearances the war seems to have little effect upon the colored inhabitants of this place; all appear as cheerful and happy as though they were not identified with the cause that is now convulsing this once great but always degraded country.

S. E.

THE HAYTIAN MOVEMENT DEAD IN THE WEST.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 27, '62.

MR. EDITOR: We deem it proper to inform our Eastern friends that the Haytian emigration scheme is played out in the West. We are beginning to have our eyes opened, although there has not been one emigrated from Columbus, but there has been quite a number from this State. We think the scheme is a perfect humbug inducing our best citizens to leave their homes, led on by the accomplished deceiver, the notorious Jim Redpath, who cares nothing about the colored people of this country no farther than self-interest goes. Joseph E. Williams has been converted from the scheme since his return from Hayti, and is now lecturing against the mischievous enterprise. This gentleman lectured in the colored Methodist Church last evening. His subject was the exposition of the Haytian scheme of emigration. Mr. Williams is very popular among the colored people of the West. He is persevering in whatever he undertakes, and ready at any time to meet his opponents. William M. Cook is also in the field lecturing against the scheme. This gentleman is an honest young man, and has the confidence of this people. We hope that the scheme is entirely broken up in the North-west, and that our friends in the East will protest against this infernal scheme, and not suffer any more agents to pollute their churches with this deception.

BUCK EYE.

LETTER FROM ITHACA.

Ithaca, N. Y. April 4, 1862.

DEAR ANGLO.—Once more we have reached our cottage home in this beautiful village. I have some anxiety that the name of this village and its transactions should occur oftener in your columns.

Many excellent reasons might be given for this desire, but let a few suffice. Ithaca contains a population of 7,000 white, and 250 colored. The latter have two churches, both of the Methodist denomination, Zion and Wesleyan. The people generally are intelligent and industrious, and most of them possessing their own pleasant little homes, the appearance of which would be creditable to any community, and may be found interspersed through the fairest portion of the village, shaded by well arranged trees. It differs materially from many other villages, where the Anglo-African can only be found in his well known colored settlement, which is either a well selected narrow lane, alley, or hollow.

On Tuesday, the 1st. inst., we returned from a short leave of absence just in time to cast our vote at town election, which resulted in a republican victory. In this contest the figures showed that the Anglo-African held the balance of power, and made not bad use of it, but cast their votes as they believed, for such men as would act for the best interests of their beloved town. Miserable, modern democracy was made to surrender. When we expressed our sovereignty by the exercise of our right at the polls, we were reminded of the insignificance into which this party had dwindled. Our vote was challenged by one of its numbers, a well known citizen, (with a face but an apology for white,) whom we hitherto had desired to respect; but as this was but one of the meager measures of the weakest instrument of the abandoned and corrupt party, we "stooped to conquer." The oath was administered, and our vote equalled the chief magistrate's. We shall remember with pity our citizen, who attempted to retard by his conduct our manhood, as the tool of a fallen and inevitably lost party.

On Monday evening the Colored Literary Association of Ithaca held a meeting and discussed the following proposition: "Resolved that secret societies are injurious to the community at large." Disputants Mr. Henry Moore, affirmative, Mr. Adam Boardman, negative.

There were two other gentlemen chosen for each side. A warm and intellectual discussion ensued, which resulted in a decision for the affirmative. A John Brown song was sung and the Lyceum closed.

On the morning of the 3d inst., we were by death deprived of one of our most active female citizens, Mrs. Sarah Sanford, wife of the Rev. Wm. Sanford, of Zion Connexion. She died at her residence, after a painful illness of some seven weeks, and leaves a husband and seven children to mourn her loss.

Perhaps this disconnected letter may induce some of our young men and women of superior letter-writing capacity (by reason of our excellent schools,) to contribute to the columns of yours—the best of good periodicals. I shall say more in my next of the village, white citizens and schools. The latter I trust I have not a little interest in.

W. F. JOHNSON.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT AT BALTIMORE.—About 8 o'clock on Saturday morning a colored boy, about 18 years of age, named Jabez Sangston was seriously injured by being run over by a car at the north side of Calvert Station, of the Northern Central Railway. He had just placed a trunk in the baggage car of the Western Maryland train, and was side of the gateway near Centre street, when the baggage cars of the train were backed out so as to make a connection with the passenger cars. At this juncture the Buffalo Express train passed round the curve from North street to the Station. Sangston, in trying to get out of the way of the first train, was knocked down by the front of the Express train, one wheel of which passed over the right leg, midway between the knee and ankle, crushing the bones thereof completely. After the first wheel passed over the leg he had the presence of mind to roll himself off the track, and was thereby saved from further injury, though, when he was knocked down, his face was badly cut coming in contact with the ground. He was placed in a carriage and conveyed by Policemen Batchelor and Knipe to the dwelling of his mother on Hill street, near Hanover, where Dr. George W. Benson was called to render his surgical services. The injury to the leg is such that it is apprehended amputation will be necessary.—Baltimore American March 24th.

AMUSING ANECDOTE.—Daniel Webster had an anecdote of old Father Searl, the minister of his boyhood, which is too good to be lost. It was customary then to wear buckskin breeches in cool weather. On Sunday morning in the autumn, Father Searl brought his breeches down from the garret, but the wasps had taken possession during the summer, and were having a nice time of it in them. By dint of effort he got out the intruders and dressed for meeting. But, while reading the scriptures to the congregation, he felt a dagger from one of the enraged small waisted fellows, and jumped around the pulpit slapping his thighs. But the more he slapped and danced, the more they stung. The people thought him crazy, but he explained the matter by saying: "Brethren, don't be alarmed; the word of the Lord is in my mouth, but the devil is in my breeches!" Webster always told it with great glee to the ministers.

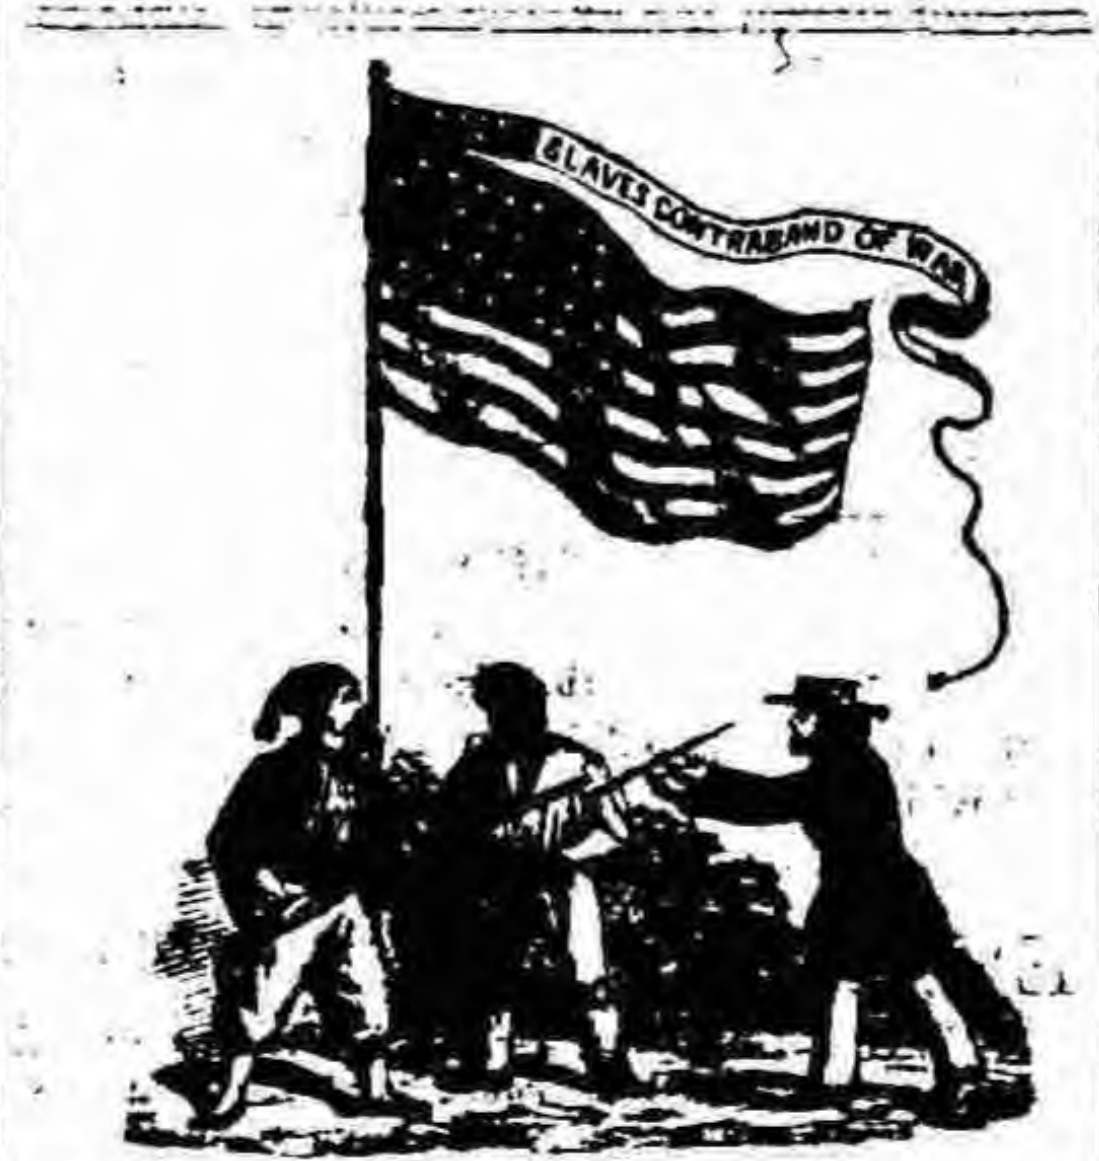
People who go out of church before the benediction ought to have the old Scotch clergyman, of whom this story is told, speak to them. The ancient reverend had just raised his hands to give the parting blessing, when the noise of the escaping multitude attracted his attention and disturbed the quiet of the church. Quietly opening his eyes, he thus addressed the door-keeper, and effectually stopped the practice, for that day at any rate:—"And now, John, open the doors, and let all these cursed people who don't want the blessing retire!"

An Explanation.—"Doctor, kin you tell what's the matter with my child's nose?" "Yes, ma'm: its probably irritation of the gastric mucous membrane communicating a sympathetic titillation to the epithelium of the echoerian." "Thar, now, that's jest what I told Becky!"

A minister, appointed chaplain in an Ohio regiment, lately wrote the following note to a brother preacher; "Dear brother, if you can git a comishun as chaplin it will pay you $6ty a month and a livin beside. The cause of krist kneads you in this army."

"I like to see the dear little creatures amuse themselves," said Mrs Brown when her eldest boy took a visitor's new bonnet and affixed it on the tail of his kite. "Never fear," said the good old lady to her visitor, when she saw her bonnet in the air, "as soon as the kite comes down he will give it back to you."

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE. Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.

Orders should be addressed

THOS. HAMILTON

48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs, and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.

PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.

10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,

BY USING

B. T. BABBITT'S

SUPERIOR FRENCH

CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by

THOS. HAMILTON,

48 Beekman Street.

THE

PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC,

Containing besides the Calendar and Copious Astronomical Statistics, a History of the Great Rebellion, Biographical Sketches of the Prominent Military Officers, a Dictionary of Military Terms, very full information relative to Military Matters of interest to the people at large, National Hymns, Incidents, Anecdotes, &c., &c.

Published and for sale by DEXTER & Co., 17 Spruce street. Newsboys and others wanted to make sales.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S

RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;

—OR—

Great American Remedy for the Hair,

AND CURE FOR

NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess of dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing; and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,

THOS. R. CROCKER,

Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1861.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.

D. W. INGERSOL,

(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 12th, 1855.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

JAMES EDWIN HALSEY,

193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Headache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want and safe article.

ALBRO LYONS.

20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway; Mrs. Staat's, 78 Thompson St.; Chas. H. Ring's, 155 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

WM. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of

THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S

VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S

SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Warranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occasionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK.

REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY EXPLORING PARTY;

BY

M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Product
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions.

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,

48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS:

EMBELLISHMENT—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or the Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihndas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas.—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches.—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture,—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon.
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robert Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James M'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Mercer Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to

THOMAS HAMILTON,

48 Beekman street,

New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY THOMAS HAMILTON,

48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gordon Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. Nell Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown

The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.

By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo., 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.

The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

The Martyrs and the Fugitive.

By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.

The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Lonisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.

For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787-9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Associatian 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvery, annd the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory; also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,

In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.

By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 294 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.

By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.

Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel between decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which places it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.

A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,

Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.

"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;

Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $4 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.

By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;

An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual.

Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.

100 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 38. NEW YORK, APRIL 19, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENTS

The Weekly Anglo-African.
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY
BY ROBT. HAMILTON
NO 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.
Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.
All communications for the paper must be addressed ROBT. HAMILTON,
18 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY

PART II.

Hear the word!—who fight for freedom!
Shout it in the battle van!
Hope! for bleeding human nature!
Christ the God, is Christ the Man!

H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

KING'S DAY.

It was now in January, the sixth day of the month, on the occasion of "El Dios De Los," or "King's Day," at Havana, to witness and enjoy which, many of all classes, both strangers and residents, white and black, had come from different parts of the island to the city.

Should the disaffected party persist in their seditious indications on this occasion, the Captain-General intended at the head of an army of negroes, to put the rebels to a merciless sword.

The demonstration consisted of a Festival—physical, mental and religious—by the native Africans in Cuba, in honor of one of their monarchs; being identical, but more systematic, grand and imposing, with the "Congo Dance," formerly observed every Sabbath among the slaves in New Orleans.

I am indebted for the following description of the grand negro festival, to a popular American literary periodical, given by an eye witness to the exhibition:

"For the week preceding the sixth of January, the native African servants of Havana are in a state of intense excitement. Their Amor masters and mistresses are begged for every spare feather, flower, bit of tinsel, ribbon, or finery of any description whatever; their pocket money is spent on the conventional trash consecrated to the occasion; and every leisure moment is consecrated to preparing for that great day on which they may at least fancy for a few hours that they are free. In all the year, this is the only day the black can call his own; the law gives it to him, and no master has the right to refuse his slave permission to go out for the whole day. At last the important day arrives; the dawn is ushered in by saloos of artillery from Moro Castle—the negroes pour out of the city gates in crowds to assemble at the places where they are to dress—dainty dressing rooms are they—and the delicate ear is agonised by sounds proceeding from the musical instruments of Africa. They generally assemble according to their tribes. The Gazas, the Lucumis, the Congoes, and Mandingos, etc, in separate parties. One party ordinarily consists of from ten to twenty. There are about half a dozen of principal actors, and the rest hang around and are ready to do any extra dancing or shaking that may be required. Women there are too, in plenty: their dresses 'low in the neck and high in the arms,' covered with gay ribbons, and tinsel flowers, that dance all day long for the pure love of the fun, joining first one party and then another, constant to none, and therefore have no right to a portion of the money collected.

"Their place of rendezvous on the King's Day being the grand square or Plaza de San Francisco, called after the church and convent of that name.

"There are three principal personages that appear, with but slight variation of costume, in every group, no matter to what tribe it belongs. They are always chiefs, princes or prophets, or if these elevated individuals are not sufficiently numerous to head the numberless parties, the highest in rank is always chosen to wear the regal African paraphernalia. * * * The king is dressed in a net work of red cord, through the insterstices of which glisten oddly enough, square inches of the royal black skin. Round his waiste is an immense hoop, with a thick drapery of horsetails with every color of the rainbow, with many hues not found therein.

"Another has a hideous mask surmounted by horns. He is the prophet of the tribe, and is sometimes supposed to be gifted with magical powers—a full belief in charms being a part of the negroe's native creed. * * * This Obesh or Jumbo butts with horns, yells, and perform various antics that impress deeply the surrounding negroes. If a white person pretends to be alarmed at the unearthly sounds or sights, it is, of course, a great triumph.

"Around the feet of the principal performers are fastened branches of horsehair, that divide the mind between Mercury and a bantam cock.

"Placing themselves in the attitudes of Kangaroos, they go through a series of shuffling, screwing and shaking that utterly defy any description. It cannot be called dancing, for Sorocco would disown it; neither can it be called convulsions, for the doctors would pronounce them perfectly healthy. St. Vitus himself would be puzzled what to call it, though he could not but be gratified at the favor of his votaries.

"All day long they keep up a movement of some kind, either dancing or waltzing to an almost incredible degree. The parties roam all over the city, stopping in front of the principal houses, or before the windows in which they see Indies and children. They have also their favorite corners, and there they will go through with fifteen or twenty minutes violent agitation, during which the perspiration pours off their faces, and one unaccustomed to the sight is momentarily expecting to see them fall exhausted to the ground, perhaps never to rise again. The only stoppage, however, is when that elaborately dressed personage with a cane, so beruffled and beringed, hands round the box to the spectators for 'pesetas' and 'medios.' He is the steward of the party, and after all is done, he produces the money which pays for the room in which they hold their ball at night—all night indeed, for they keep it up till morning.

"Large sums of money are often collected in this way; and gold occasionally finds its way in; but the negro improvidence of character makes it of very little consequence whether they have much or little. * *

"The inside of the hall is extraordinary, but not pleasing. A piece of parchment stretched over a hollow log beaten with bones, or a box or gourd filled with beans or stones, rattled out of all time, comprise their instruments. The songs are quite in keeping with the instruments and performers. On this day they are allowed to use their own language and their own songs, a privilege denied them on other days, lest they might lay plans for a general rising.

"As it is, the sights, the sounds, the savage shrieks, the uncouth yells suggest very uncomfortable thoughts of negro insurrection. One cannot help thinking of the menace of the Spanish Government that Cuba shall be either Spanish or African, and when we see these savages in their play more like wild animals than human beings, the idea what their rage would probably be, makes the boldest shudder. It would be easy on King's Day for the negroes to free themselves, or at least to make the streets of Havana run with blood, if they only knew their power; Heaven be praised that they do not, for who can count the lives that would be lost in such a fearful struggle?

"The whites of Havana are rejoiced when the day is over. Apart from a certain uneasy feeling of distrust which the government shares, for it doubles its guard everywhere, the cessation of all business, and the circumstance that the streets are not safe after an early morning hour, make one such day quite enough for a year. The tintimar is such, that the head must indeed be strong that escapes a furious aching by night fall. To a stranger the first few hours are amusing enough in their novelty, but he speedily wearies of the scene, and is not apt to wish for a repetition of it.

"In 1849, Roncali, the Captain General, then in power, took advantage of the Dia de los Reyes to give the Creoles of Cuba a significant hint of what they might expect from the government if they gave any alarming degree of aid to the revolutionary operations of General Lopez. He prolonged for three days, the privilege of the day to the Lucumis, the most warlike of the tribes of the African slaves in Cuba. The hint was well understood, and many a Creole family shuddered and trembled within doors at the fearful illustration thus exhibited under their eyes of the standing threat that Cuba must be Spanish or African.

"As night comes on all the scattered parties begin to crowd back again to their starting places; they replace the paint and feathers they have danced off, and repair the ravages of the day. Let it be remembered that all this dancing has been done under a tropical sun, and that the January of Cuba is sometimes like our June, or even July. All is then wound up by a ball. The money derived from the sale of licences for negro balls forms no contemptible item in the income of the Queen Mother Christiana."

CHAPTER XXXIX.

INCREASED ALARM.

On the evening of "King's Day" the disaffected whites sought by device to aggravate a tendency to insubordination of the blacks, hoping thereby to destroy confidence in them and turn the suspicions and rigor of the Captain General from themselves to the negroes.

To accomplish their designs, no act however derogatory to manhood and justice, equity and honor, was too atrocious for them to perpetrate.

During the African Ball this evening, a party of the rebels called at a restaurateur, where getting among them a stupid, demented slave whom for hours they kept stimulated with spirits, then aroused to a state of intense excitement by dreadful tales of horror, they placed him in a close carriage, had him taken to the door of the hall in which the ball was held, and when at the height of their amusement he was ushered into the hall crying, "blood, blood, blood! Rise negroes, rise!" when being soon forced out he continued thus to scream in the street.

Soon was the city in the greatest consternation; the streets in a few minutes filled with troops, and the National Guards were seen in every direction. The sound of the bugle, rattling and ringing of arms, hasty dashing forth and back of expert horsemen, made the scene one of portentious warning.

The frantic black was shot as he ran through the street; fell bleeding, and arrested: the ball immediately surrounded, the inmates arrested and confined in Moro Castle. Arrests were continued during the night, with reports the most extravagant. And although the free black and colored inhabitants were generally safe in their own houses, but few enjoyed sleep that evening.

Early next morning the sound of the reveille was heard and the troops hastening to their posts while the city was alive with the excited inhabitants anxious to catch every word of passing gossip. The Captain General ever on the alert and always suspicious of the dissatisfied rebellious American settlers, was early at his post, determined as was his wont in criminal transactions, to make summary work of the whole affair.

The first step in the proceedings was to hear the story of the wounded black, shot by the gens d' armes, wherein the Americans objected to the testimony of a negro being taken before white men's.

This the Captain General declared was done in due deference to the Americans, that it might not be said, that they had been disparaged by a negro giving evidence against them. As no white man had yet testified, the negro's testimony was against none. He would, therefore, take the negro's first and their's afterwards. There was nothing out of the usual course in those proceedings, except the order of taking the testimony, which gave them the advantage. Negroes in Cuba, had the right of testimony; but a slave could not rebut the evidence of a freeman whatever his color, and all free persons in evidence, stood equal before the law.

There had been nothing on the part of the negroes done out of their usual course on the celebration of King's Day. By all the evidence, even that of the gens d' armes themselves, there was nothing to convict them of an overt act. But the testimony of the carriage driver and the wounded negro implicated a number of white Americans, as being conspirators assembled at the Hotel de Americana Nord for the purpose of getting up a "patriot" demonstration, by turning the attention of the authorities to the negroes.

"We'll force the Captain General to terms whether he will or not. Can we but once get him at issue with the negroes, his only dependence will be cut off, and if not they'll be too feeble to be either formidable or dangerous," said one.

"The negroes," said another, "the only formidable enemy in the event of a patriot movement we should have to contend against, must be got out of the way. That can only be done successfully by getting the government down on them. This once effected, we are safe, as they will never again place confidence in those who once go against or deceive them.'

'Never!' was the reply, 'the Spaniards have taken great pains to prejudice them against us Americans by impressing them with the fear that should we be successful in taking the Island they will not be allowed King's Day, nor any of the privileges they now enjoy under Spanish rule.'

'Then,' said a fourth, 'the sooner the government is brought against them the better. Let it be done, by all and every means in our power, and I know of no more favorable time than this evening.'

'Yes,' this evening, by all means!' exclaimed a voice, "as we can't tell what may take place against another King's day. Let it be done at once, as we have a negro in readiness to make the alarm.'

'Come then and let us be at it!' exclaimed the crowd, rushing into the dining apartment where the black was confined.

This the gens d'armes testified that they heard, and following closely in their wake saw the slave put into the carriage, three of the Americans entering with him, drove to the doorway leading to the dancing hall, taken out by whites standing near the door the three Americans remaining inside, when he rushed forth exclaiming the insurrectionary words.

Instantly releasing the blacks from confinement and proclaiming the city again under martial law, the Captain General caused the arrest and imprisonment of every white in the least suspected of seditious designs. A coup de main upon the American Hôtel seriously implicated the proprietor and all the white inmates, resulting in a destruction of the establishment.

But a short time was required to counteract the report of attempted insurrection of the blacks, which like a flash of light spread over the city. The report of their release from Moro Castle by order of His Excellency the Governor, took the community by surprise, producing great dissatisfaction, but soon became reconciled in the security they enjoyed from the calamity of a servile Negro Insurrection.

Few people in the world lead such a life as the white inhabitants of Cuba, and those of the South now comprising the "Southern Confederacy of America.' A dreamy existence of the most fearful apprehensions, of dread, horror and dismay; suspicion and distrust, jealousy and envy continually pervade the community; and Havana, New Orleans, Charleston or Richmond may be thrown into consternation by an idle expression of the most trifling or ordinary ignorant black. A sleeping wake, or waking sleep, a living death or tormented life is that of the Cuban and American slaveholder. For them there is no safety. A criminal in the midst of a powder bin with a red hot pigot of iron in his hand, which he is compelled to hold and char the living flesh to save his life, or let it fall to relieve him from torture, and thereby incur instantaneous destruction, nor the inhabitants of a house on the brow of a volcano could not exist in greater torment than these most unhappy people.

Of the two classes of these communities, the master and slave, the blacks have every thing to hope for and nothing to fear, since let what may take place their redemption from bondage is inevitable. They must and will be free; whilst the whites have everything to fear and nothing to hope for. "God is just, and his justice will not sleep forever."

The general orders issued by the government were stringent bearing directly and heavily upon all Americans resident or transient in the colonies. All who visited the Island were required at Quarantine to obtain from an officer a passport for landing, couched in Spanish, French and English. For this during the restrictions two spanish dollars each were paid, ordinarily the price being only fifty cents Spanish, by which police regulation large sums were realized to the revenue on the arrival of every steamer, especially the California mails touching there, the passengers of which were generally curious to go on shore.

The government continued its rigors, sparing none on account of age, position, or family; the high and low, rich and poor, all faring alike; consequently many were made to feel the force of the strong arm of the law: among whom were several connected with some of the first families of the United States.

Thus, the expense to those who connived at the prerogatives of the Castilians, Spanish colonists and negroes, was far greater than they had reckoned in their calculation; the first installment being paid under a pressure, it was reasonable to suppose that the full share when demanded would be hard to meet.

For the time it had the desired effect of checking the extravagant political experiments and military adventures in Cuba, the stock becoming depreciated, shares were rated far below par, so that the brigand jobbers were at a loss to meet the second installment of rebellions.

For a time political brokers suspended operations in all of the conclave exchanges in the United States, whilst their marauding agents in Cuba repudiated not only the claims again them, but really denied their own identity. The concern proving a bankruptcy, ruined many more in the fall with themselves by the final execution of Lopez on the garrote with his many American followers.

From the Christian Recorder.

A LETTER FROM KENTUCKY.

MR. EDITOR:—As it has been some time since I have corresponded with you, and my mind being pregnant with many thoughts concerning our condition and situation in Kentucky, I thought that it would not be amiss to give you a few items by way of information, and also the many readers of the "Recorder." Your correspondents from Washington, Baltimore, and other directions in the East, have thrown much "light, West," on the various topics of the day, especially as it regards our people, and we feel honored to reciprocate the favor.

We are truly glad to learn that the effects of the war has so far proved beneficial to our race in the vicinity of Washington, Alexandria, Baltimore, and elsewhere, our prayers are, that it may continue, for to enjoy the privileges of a free man, and then be kidnapped, and taken into bondage, is but little less than death, from which good Lord deliver me.

Louisville has been noted as being one of the best Southern cities for privileges toward our people, but it has undergone many changes for several years—for the worst. When the rebellion broke out we were worshipping every Sabbath and once through the week, in our churches, and when the legions of the North made Louisville their headquarters, it seemed that a new reign was instituted, and we worshipped in our splendid churches, almost ad limitum, and nothing said to the contrary, notwithstanding.

But lo! a sad change has taken place, the Northern army has proceeded southward, forcing its passage into the "Land of Dixie.' Kentucky has been redeemed; "her white people are free" and her "free blacks are enslaved," and they have no more "rights that white men are bound to respect." Our condition so far is worse than before the war. Our churches are closed, and a free man cannot walk after dark though he has his free papers, with the great seal of the state and county, and owns thousands of dollars' worth of property, (which some do) and pay taxes, and support the war, and be also loyal to the government. All this has been brought about by a slaveholder and a negro hater, the Provost Marshal, whose name is Dent, he having control of the city since the removal of the headquarters of Gen. Buell to Nashville, and instead of hunting rebels, as there are thousands in the city, he has made the colored people his subjects of oppression and inhuman treatment. He commenced his cruel operations by ordering his provost guards, the cavalry men, to flog all colored persons out after dark, free or slave; so we were then pounced upon with the cow hide and cat-o'nine tails in old "plantation style" without hinderance, for his order was supreme. He had many visitors the next day to inquire into his order: he replied, it was a "military" order and must be respected. All free negroes who had business out after dark, must have passes.

COPY OF PASS.

Headquarters, Provost Guard, }
Louisville, Mar. '62. }

By order of Lt. Col. Henry Dent, A. B., is permitted to pass from his shop on C street to his home on W street. This pass will be respected until 10 1-2 o'clock, P. M.

SELLY HARVEY,
Major, Pro. Guard.

Before one of these passes could be obtained you would be compelled to take some responsible white citizen with you, and then undergo the most severe and rigid investigation, as though the blacks were conspiring to overthrow the government; at first he refused to respect passes given by masters to their slaves, but after receiving some severe cursing, he concluded to respect white men. Mr. Editor, these are some of the ordeals we are passing through in the "neutral state of Kentucky," and we have yet to see the first remonstrance raised against it by the press; our daily editors are dumb: they open not their mouths; from their silence I judge it is approved by them. I think that if the government has any loyal people in her midst, it is the colored people, and they have done good service even in this city towards detecting smugglers and traitors, and the marshal has at times been suspected of secession proclivities; I judge that he is now being revenged on the colored people for their faithfulness to the Union cause, as his guards have dispensed with fire arms and formed into "patrols" and instituted the cow hide and cat-o-nine tails, which seem to please them well, for they are very nimble and dexterous in chasing the blacks after dark through the streets, on the pavements, down lanes and alleys, as though they were riding down wild bulls, and when caught their cries and screams are heart-rending, but no one dare interfere for the patrol are dressed in "Uncle Sam's livery." Some have been whipped unmercifully.

Our churches have suffered much since this barbarous treatment. He has told them to open on Sunday, but some have had the flogging meted out to them after benediction, so many have concluded to stay at home, (since old Satan has been loosed) but we trust "only for a little season." Now you see the effect of the war in this direction This is considerable worse than the old status, and if it is to continue, I think of all men we will be the most miserable. And as it regards the subject of emigration, such treatment as we have been receiving for two weeks, if not discontinued, we will be willing to go any where rather than suffer such degredation, and it is now the theme of many, Where shall we go? And where can we go?

About three weeks ago, our esteemed and worthy brother, Rev. M. M. Clark visited us, and he preached and lectured in both of our churches and in two of the churches under the M. E. church, on the subject of Liberia, his tour while in that country, &c., &c. His lecture was highly interesting to our community from the fact that the information was general and satisfactory to nearly all who heard him, and he had crowded houses on each occasion. He was tendered the hospitality of the city by the mayor, and the police forbidden to disturb him; he has proceeded to the capital of the state and other surrounding towns, where no doubt he will be treated kindly, but we venture to say, that on no other subject could he get permission to lecture in this state, hence the cause of so much mistrust among our people on the subject of Liberia and colonization.

The sympathy and prayers of our people have been for the ultimate triumph of the Union cause, but if these are the fruits we fear that we have not prayed aright, but we shall continue to pray, and also begin to work some with our hands, and feet and legs. Perhaps our faith hath been without works, and if so, pray for us, that we may have strong faith, living faith, and great works also.

AN OBSERVER.

Louisville, Ky., March, 1862.

COLORED PEOPLE OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

STATISTICS OF THEIR CONDITION.

Correspondence of the N. Y. Evening Post.

WASHINGTON, March 24, 1862.

When it was stated, in a recent number of the "Evening Post," that for thirty years past no colored person had been buried in the District of Columbia at the public expense, the reference was to the free blacks alone. In a few cases slaves have been buried by the municipal authorities, their dead bodies being neglected, (some of them in old age and infirmity,) as their living bodies had been, by their pretended "owners." There have been cases in which the free blacks have buried dead slaves, without any resort to public charity.

The total number of colored persons in the District of Columbia is now fourteen thousand three hundred and sixteen. They are divided as follows:

Slaves in Washington City	1,744
Slaves in Washington county . .	834
Slaves in Georgetown . . .	577
Free people of color	11,131
Total	14,316

PROPORTION OF FREE BLACKS AND SLAVES.

The free blacks of the District are distributed through the city of Washington proper, a district called the island, (being that part on the point of land running down between the Potomac and Anacostia rivers) the navy yard vicinity, Capitol Hill, Meridian Hill, and Georgetown. The most dense portions of the permanent residents are on the island. Here many of them occupy small wooden tenements, as they do in other places in the District, with garden patches attached. Here they keep their horses and hacks, used for hire, having small barns or stables attached to their premises. These properties are their own, generally, the products of hard earnings, obtained in small sums, by public and private service. Nearly all of them have families, with the strongest natural attachments binding them to the soil and each other.

THE SLAVES.

Probably about one half the slaves now in the District are brought in by non-residents and are retained for limited periods and for temporary purposes.

A large proportion of the slaves here are females. The reason of this is obvious. They are the most profitable. They allow of an increase of numbers, and consequently in value, as the condition of the child always follows that of the mother. There is less danger, on this account, also, of their attempting to escape. The sacred tie of consanguinity is thus used to fasten the slave.

PROPERTY OWNED BY BLACKS.

The amount of property, real and personal estate, distributed among this population, is shown by the official records to be at least five hundred thousand dollars. It is believed by persons well acquainted with the facts to be 100,000 more. There is one colored man in the District worth, in real estate and personal property, seventy-five thousand dollars. This amount has all been earned in an honorable business, which this man has pursued for years under many difficulties of unjust laws. He has frequently lent his money to white men; has had mortgages on the houses of three public men here, two of whom have been, and one of whom now is, a Senator in Congress. One of the ex-Senators and debtors is no less a person than the ex-honorable John C. Breckenridge. The traitors Floyd and Wigfall are of the number who borrowed money from this black capitalist. It is generally understood that he does not value his claims against these distinguished secessionists at a very high figure.

A clergyman in the District of Columbia, who has always been most vehement in advocating the enslavement of men, had occasion a few months ago to remove further South. Just previous to his departure he magnanimously borrowed two hundred dollars of a black man, for traveling expenses but, unfortunately for the generous lender, the borrower has never been heard of since! So much for "chivalry."

It has been ascertained from the records that in addition to the taxes they pay on their real estate and personal property, the colored people pay ten cents on every hundred dollars' worth of property for school purposes, or to be applied to the Common School fund, for the education of white children exclusively; so that the negroes of the District of Columbia are taxed to pay for the education of the whites. The amount annually paid by them for this purpose is not far from six hundred dollars.

THEIR SCHOOLS AND PAPERS.

The children of the blacks are forbidden by law to be educated in the very schools they are thus taxed to support! They are obliged to support their own schools.

A magazine and weekly paper are circulated among the blacks in this District. The monthly is printed at Baltimore, called the "Repository." It is devoted to religion, literature, science and art. It is owned and conducted entirely by black men. The number for February contains sixteen articles—all original.

They have a large and handsome weekly paper, also, published in Philadelphia—the "Christian Recorder." A colored man is the editor, and acts also as the general book steward for the church that owns the concern. There are several corresponding editors.

CHARACTER OF THE BLACKS.

They are docile, and have—even the free blacks—a curious willingness to listen to advice. They resort to it, among those they believe to be their friends, habitually and constantly. Touching instances of this kind are frequently occurring.

They are willing to labor. This is abundantly proved by what they have done and are doing. In every case where they are fairly compensated they acquire property.

Within my knowledge a colored servant man of the late Daniel Webster, who was paid reasonable wages, supported his family respectably, purchased a lot of land on the island and erected a neat and convenient house out of his savings.

The expenditures of many large establishments are managed entirely and with complete success by black men.

EDUCATION OF THE BLACKS.

Though they pay to support the schools for white children, and though they live too far apart for advantageous combinations, yet the blacks of the District maintain schools for their children. These are generally kept in the basements of their churches, which are not as well fitted for such purposes as they should be. Some of them are damp and injurious to health. Notwithstanding these and many other disadvantages, they exhibit a decided love for education, and acquire the rudiments with marked success. In numerals and geography, they soon become experts. In recitations, especially of pathetic or descriptive poems, they are excellent.

SOCIAL PECULIARITIES.

They have a great number of voluntary associations, and some of their benevolent and literary societies are of the most creditable character. Considerable sums of money are constantly raised in this way. Literary tastes are fostered. Cemeteries, public grounds and edifices, schools, libraries, clothing and food for the poor are thus procured, and objects connected with the Christian church and its ministry are permanently established. There are at least thirty associations of this kind in constant operation among the people of color in the District of Columbia.

RELIGIOUS CONDITION.

The number of their churches, in all, is twelve. The average attendance at each service is about three hundred. The congregations vary considerably at different seasons of the year. Those who come with their employers to the District, go away with them. In proportion as these employers are engaged on Sundays, so will the blacks often be.

Their appearance in church is creditable. Their dress is decorous and becoming. In some congregations the plain garbs of the primitive Methodists—similar in several respects to those of the Friends—quite extensively predominate. Quiet, solemnity, order, everywhere prevail, with only such exceptions as are always found in certain portions of every society.

One of their churches has a neat organ, and some large choirs. Congregational singing is popular. One or two of the churches pay their pastors salaries of a thousand dollars a year. All these are worthy men, and render the most efficient service. A more self-denying, persevering, laborious, body of men than the colored ministers of the District of Columbia cannot be found in any country. Their influence is deservedly great, and may be safely trusted by the friends of the Union and popular government.

ATTACHMENT TO THE COUNTRY.

No people in the United States are more ready and willing to "follow the flag and keep step to the music of the Union," than are the blacks in the District. Their patriotism is well informed, strong, and zealous. They understand the great question of the day—having a deep personal interest in all its practical bearings. The sacred preservation of the Union is everything to them.

They know, by means of information accessible as well to no others, the exact condition of their brethren in the South. Communications at certain important points are constant, and sometimes frequent. All these convey arguments and appeals in favor of the Union. An intact Union is believed to be the death-knell of slavery. Escaping slaves, passing through the District, are quickly taught who their real friends are, and inspired with true Union sentiments.

It is certain that a large number of the able-bodied colored men all through the District are ready to take up arms in defence of the Union. A regiment of a thousand picked men could be obtained at a very short warning. These men are constantly watching the progress of events. They study the military and naval tactics of the day with a zest and enthusiasm impelled by the vital interest they have in the struggle. Not a man of this body but knows what drill is; not a man but is inured to fatigue; not a man but would fight bravely to the last.

The conflicts of the ancient people of God with their enemies are symbolical to these people of their struggles for universal freedom. They think and speak of General Hannibal as one of their own immortal heroes. The brave deeds of Toussaint L'Ouverture, of Christophe, Rigaud and Geffrard abroad, of Attucks and Turner at home, are as familiar to these people as household words. They remember the histories of Polydora and Boston, of Macardel and New Orleans, of Padryan and Virginia, and their strong arms and stout hearts are nerved for battle and victory.

C. W. D.

WASHINGTON—ALEXANDRIA—COLONIZATION.

MR. EDITOR: Encouraged by your kind notice of my last letter, I take pleasure in communicating to you again. I promised that the burden of this should be Washington, and yet you will, I have no doubt, permit me, in your liberality, to go beyond its limits proper, to that place which has played both first and second to it in the great drama of human bondage—Alexandria. Alexandria lies but a few miles distant, along the banks of the beautiful Potomac, with a commodious harbor; and, for a city environed by slavedom, is one of much attraction, activity, and trade. But here you see brilliant traces of its long barbarism—its past active service in the merchandise of men. Here were two human markets where its shambles were continually wet with the blood of its victims at the ply of the terrible lash. Here was the great barter depot that, ever since the righteous indignation of a free people drove it out of the Capitol city, was kept here; where the gentleman slaveholder of Washington bought his slave, or sent him for the further trade of the South. Here were acts of cruelty and sorrow enacted, enough to make an angel weep, and that reached the ear of the Great Jehovah, until, in his justice, he could no longer withhold his judgments. Now we see, in this city, the palace garnished with the tear, blood, and toil of the slave, forsaken by the treacherous cruel master; his once splendid home now barracks for the army; here and there an empty, humble dwelling;—the intelligence you receive is—"Ah, ha! he who was once master of this, has fled to parts unknown." Here is the house where the brave Ellsworth lost his valuable life. Compared to what it was, I am told, it is but a wreck.

Farther on, is the charred remains of once a splendid edifice, made desolate that day by those faithful Zouaves, when their loved leader fell; and I am told, that had not his death been adroitly concealed from the mass of them that day, Alexandria to-day would have been but a mass of ruins; and now, as if to keep up in this city a fearful remembrance of his name and deeds, the Union spirit here has graced one of their beautiful hills—Mount Ellsworth—hard by these slave hells (that once were), but now army barracks. So that this hill, that once was redolent with the wailing music that came up from the lips of the slave, as he lay chained in his prison, is now but the clash of arms, made to beat to the unity, the symphony of a promised, impartial joyous liberty.

While standing in view of this beautiful eminence, along side of the walls of this prison, this American Bastile, there came along, on the last mile of the last thirty miles tramp, between twenty and thirty weary fugitive travellers (contrabands) of all ages, sizes and colors—some children nursing at the bosom, while others were led by the hand; the adults carrying on their backs what was once called masters, but now promising, joyfully, to become their own. They were on their way to Washington to the care of the Provost Marshal, where, I rejoice to say, they are humanely provided for. Ah, but what a scene to witness in a professed civilized Christian land, for hard by this graphic, all-moving picture afforded by these unhappy and yet joyous travellers, stood the barren walls of this prison, on which was pencilled in shameless letters, "Price, Burch and Mellon, Dealers in Slaves," and within hailing distance, too, of the professed temple of God, daring to cast its elevated front, as if it would touch the silvery heavens, as if it would offer praise, surrounded with such hellish inconsistencies. God has no sympathy with such temples, which keep closed lips amid such a surrounding iniquity.

The colored people, the most of them do well here; they own neat dwellings, are persevering and thoughtful. Some of them with heroic spirit sent their children every day to Washington to be instructed, when they were prohibited from receiving instruction in this city, at a considerable expense and peril, for there was a very stringent law against it, and it required a good deal of adroitness to escape its unrelenting, fearful penalties. But, thank God, the danger now appears to be past, so that there is now no longer fear, or a necessity to send to Washington, but an excellen school or schools at their own doors. You see the dear little ones tripping, at the hour appointed, with their neat little baskets, with, ensconced under a pretty little napkin, mother's choice little bits for her darling; and all this a midst the smiles of the approving citizens, and the scowls of the not approving. But who cares for scowls? say they. Secesh has, here, his back broke, and the most he can now do is but to limp and howl; soon, we trust in God, we will have him under the sod. In plain terms, the people here are most joyous and grateful to God for the glorious change. One man said to me, "sir are you from the North?" I replied, "yes." He then said, "from New York, where that "Angoli-African" paper is made?" I told him I was from New York, but that he had made a mistake in its name; it was the "Anglo-African." "Ah, that is it—the greatest paper I ever read. It gives us poor souls so much comfort to know what is going on for our poor race, to see so much talent in our people. I read it to one of my old friends the other day. The old man almost shouted, it filled his mind with such a mighty comfort." "Could I get this paper, sir?" "I replied, yes you might, if you could make it an object to the Editor to send it." Here he seemed to be puzzled, but finally said it would pay him well should he bring it. Ah, sir, here are thirsty souls waiting at the promised pool for the flow of the life giving waters. The American heel of a crushing, cruel despotism from them, we trust in God, is about to be removed; and now there is no seeming reason why they should not be brought to the full fount of both secular and religious knowledge. I rejoice to know that our Methodist friends have their eye on this promising field, and will aim to occupy it as soon as possible. Send your organ, or take it there without fear, for He who is now so visibly for us, is more than they who be against us.

Now for Washington. This city, in the first place, is anything but beautiful, unless you call mud, almost knee deep, and dust, driving in a clear day at the rate of a perfect hurricane, beautiful—then indeed you have it. Perfect annoyance, when you call upon a lady, when she asks you, in that sweet bland, and yet majestic style that only a Southern lady can do (now don't get jealous, Northern dames)—"Pray, my dear sir, how do you like our city?" Now, sir, you feel as if you ever had a stumper. you have one now; and as soon as you can get your would-be convulsed tongue to come out from between its ivories to do its office, and utter the qualifying word, 'well,' you see a brow, just before noble and beautiful, favor a scowl. Ah, I will stop. Go yourself, Mr. Editor, and perhaps with your clever smile, ever radiating your face, and your quick wit, you may come out of the contest better than I did: for my tongue, never the clearest, never so unwillingly hung.

But amidst this mass, sometimes of mud and then again heaps of rolling dust, there is much surrounding beauty, in the elaborate architecture and finish of its public buildings, though sadly speckled by the surrounding dirt. The exterior and interior of the President's mansion might be well improved; the outside, by a more modern architecture, and the inside by the attendance of a careful, cleanly steward: for with all its elegance there is much in the way of dirt—yes dirt, to offend the eye if no more. The Capitol is being now most extensively, elegantly and expensively built. The sculpture that is intended to adorn its outside is of the most elaborate and exquisite finish, the work of some of the ablest masters. Inside of this spacious building, it appears to me, that there is much going on in the way of frescoing—especially at this juncture of the nation in its finances—both useless and extravagant; however, as it furnishes food for some hungry stomachs I will not complain, but yet I think the Government might do better with its stinted means. There is certainly great beauty in the interior of this building; costly and elegant paintings, the black man not certainly left out; any quantity of marble trimmings—indeed the hall and stairways completely marbleised. The stairs and wainscoating leading to the Senate Chamber is of beautiful Tennessee marble, the handsomest I ever beheld. To bring it to such a perfect, brilliant finish, must have cost many days of earnest, patient toil, intellectual and physical. Ah, I thought, as I looked upon this splendid edifice, the costly materials, how few of them but that have been wet with the tears of the toiling slave. No black man, though he may visit the Capitol, may not visit either one of its Legislative Chambers when in session; an oppression that is inflicted, to say the least, on no decent class of men throughout the civilized world but here. I am much mistaken if God, in His Providence, don't give the black man claims in such an auditory as will make the ears of the whole civilized world tingle. Yes; black men will not only soon enter these chambers with pleasure, to hear the wisdom of their vaunted superiors, but shall ultimately sit here, on a broad equality, to administer it themselves. Till then, let us wait and be hopeful.

You are aware, Mr. Editor, what efforts are now making to free this District from the bitter curse of negro slavery, therefore I shall not burden your columns with its notice, except to say that no bitterer opposer has been found to this scheme than colonization. unless attached to it was their ill-scheme of expatriation; for you must know that as emancipation progresses this infernal scheme, expatriation, dies. It lives upon the life-blood of slavery. Let emancipation take place to-morrow, and no barrier raised against its attending legitimate blessings, and these so very benevolent gentlemen—these lovers of black men, a thousand miles off with their colored associates—that have been hanging around Congress this winter pushing their very benevolent schemes, (but, in truth, infamous ones), would soon have nothing to do: for the slave, as well as his brother who is free, is wedded to the soil, and nothing but utter hopelessness will ever drive them from it. Strike off his chains: lift disabilities from the nominally free, and you have them united in one permanent home. Colonizationists have ever perceived this—that no black man would ever leave the United States, his legitimate home, unless he grew desperate over his seeming unchanging position; hence it has spared no efforts wherever there has been the least despondency in the heart of any black man to increase it: increase it in his own bosom, and to spread the contagion to others. Thus, in its long career, it has dropt many a soul, unprepared in every sense, on Liberia's deadly shore. It has also by its machinations taken from us some valuable men, and thus enfeebled us who have had the good sense to remain, in our resistance to our country's wrongs; and now after forty years trial: after scores of good men have left its ranks, convinced of its inexpediency, its supreme wickedness: after, amidst the philanthropic, benevolent objects of the day, it has almost become a dead letter,—and now, as if to galvanise it into life, societies have been formed, which, if not upon the same principle, they and it, find it convenient to perfectly affiliate, and has offered a premium to intelligent black men to stump its interest through the country. But, sir, I am now persuaded that, at least at Washington—Washington which has always been the strong-hold of this iniquity—that it will not be able to clog the wheels effectually of the glorious car of emancipation. That car, God be praised, will march on in spite of it—in spite of the opposition of men or devils. God is now in the fiery chariot of his truth, and he will guide it to glorious victory.

The colored people here, to use a homely phrase, "are alive and kicking"—alive to all their rights, and kicking off their shackles. There are men here in extensive business, and those that are qualified for any exalted sphere in life. I have no doubt if their lives are spared they will make things hum: for I feel free to say, that for a full, profound knowledge of American politics, no class of men over the broad country understand them better than the colored men of Washington; and I would, if I were not afraid of making invidious distinction, name some of them; but you will, no doubt have the pleasure to see some of them at the Art Exhibition. Edward M. Thomas, Esq., Professor Solomon G. Brown, Edward Crusoe, Esq.; these gentlemen look forward with great interest to that proposed measure, and are making strenuous efforts to be present, and be eminent in their dedications to it.

Allow me, in conclusion, to say that the religious interest of the colored people here is good; they have fine churches, and intelligent ministry: and thus are making substantial progress in life. May God bless them, and make them an opening, mastering, glorious power to the whole, South.

James N. Gloucester.

NEW YORK, APRIL 19, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

Colored Inventors, Artists, Mechanics, etc. are earnestly requested to lose no time in getting their articles ready for the National Exhibition of Anglo-African Industry and Art, which will positively be held in this city or Brooklyn in the early part of the ensuing fall.—All communications in relation to said Exhibition may be addressed for the present to this office.

SLAVERY IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

It was a fitting celebration of the anniversary of Fort Sumter, that Congress should pass a bill to emancipate the Capital from the thrall of slavery forever. Henceforth, whatever betide the nation, its physical heart is freed from the presence of slavery: for, to use the words of "freedom's best and bravest man,"—"It will never come back to curse us. The nation that has tried slavery and abolished it never recalls it.*"

This event is so sudden and so unexpected that we can scarcely realize it as a matter of fact: it falls on the ear like the reading of the emancipation of the Danish West Indies, or of the Serfs of Russia; it can scarcely be our turn yet: it can not be the American Congress at Washington, with the voices of Calhoun and Mason, Jeff. Davis and Crittenden, of Pugh and Vallandigham yet echoing through its halls, it cannot be the American Congress which has done this thing! And yet, blessed be God, who maketh the wrath of man to praise him—it is true—Slavery is abolished in the District of Columbia.

If we rejoice and give thanks to the Almighty for this great boon, we rejoice less as black men than as part and parcel of the American people: for it is clearly a greater boon to the nation at large than to the class more immediately concerned. There will not be set free by this act one tenth as many persons as were liberated by the guns of the Wabash at Port Royal: and of these actually set free the expiring malignity of slavery will leave a large proportion too old or too decrepit to vindicate in their conduct the benefits of this act of emancipation. But to the nation at large the good wrought by this act is incalculable: there is no such thing as measuring it by the ordinary tests of value. The first burst of sunlight to a man immured for years in a dark dungeon, the first breath of fresh air to one imprisoned in choke-damp to the verge of suffocation, the first throb of returning health to one tossed for months on a fevered couch—are but faint glimmerings of the glorious healing which emancipation bears on its wings to the great national citadel. The heart once clear, the core once sound, there is no restraining the return of health and vigor and freedom to the whole national body. The profound sagacity of the slave power saw all this, knew all this, acted on this knowledge. The temple, the chariot and the arms of the dark daughter of death were entrenched in the Capitol where she hoped to dwell forever. No victory by arms will shoot such a panic through slavedom as will this victory by votes; this weapon,

Keener yet
And better than the bayonet, will reach farther than the cannon of McClellan, or the sabres of Grant and Buell.

It is an act of emancipation which frees a hundred thousand white men for every individual black man. Washington is at last free—to the white man. The man from Maine or the man from Massachusetts can each go to the Capital, and say aloud that his soul is his own. Members of congress from the free North can take their seats and vote and speak without first bending their knees to Baal on the one hand, or courting the bludgeon and the stiletto on the other.

Then the glorious effect of this act among Christian nations, is truly a national concern, which stirs up all our patriotism. There will be one place at least in the national territory where slaves cannot breathe and where the old flag floats over freemen only. We can point to our Capital and say to all nations, "It is free!" Americans abroad can now hold up their heads when interrogated as to what the Federal Government is fighting for, and answer "There, look at our Capitol and see what we have fought for."

We say no more on this topic now, believing that a movement is on foot among our brethren in this city—and we hope in every city—to celebrate this glorious event

*Letter of Hon: Gerrit Smith to Montgomery Blair, Apr. 5, 1862.

THE BILL EMANCIPATING SLAVES IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The following is a copy of the bill introduced in the United States Senate by Senator Henry Wilson and which passed that body by a vote of twenty nine to thirteen and subsequently the House of Representatives by a vote of ninety three yeas to thirty nine nays.

A BILL FOR THE RELEASE OF CERTAIN PERSONS HELD TO SERVICE OR LABOR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all persons held to service or labor within the District of Columbia, by reason of African descent, are hereby discharged and freed of and from all claim to such service or labor; and from and after the passage of this act neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except for crimes, whereof the party shall be duly convicted, shall hereafter exist in said district.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That all persons loyal to the United States, holding claims to service or labor against persons discharged therefrom by this act may, within ninety days from the passage thereof, but not thereafter, present to the commissioners hereinafter mentioned their respective statement or petitions in writing, verified by oath or affirmaton, setting forth the names, ages and personal description of such persons, the manner in which said petitioners acquired such claim, and any facts touching the value thereof, and declaring his allegiance to the government of the United States. And that he has not borne arms against the United States during the present rebellion, nor in any way given aid or comfort thereto: Provided, That the oath of the party to the petition shall not be evidence of the facts therein stated.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States, with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint three commissioners, residents of the District of Columbia, any two of whom shall have power to act, who shall receive the petitions above mentioned, and who shall investigate and determine the validity and value of the claims therein presented, as aforesaid, and appraise and apportion, under the proviso hereto annexed, the value in money of the several claims by them found to be valid: Provided, however, That the entire sum so appraised and apportioned shall not exceed in the aggregate an amount equal to three hundred dollars for each person shown to have been so held by lawful claim. And provided further, That no claim shall be allowed for any slave or slaves brought into said District after the passage of this act, or which originates in or by virtue of any transfer heretofore made, or which shall hereafter be made by any person who has in any manner aided or sustained the rebellion against the government of the United States.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That said commissioners shall, within nine months from the passage of this act, make a full and final report of their proceedings, findings and appraisement, and shall deliver the same to the Secretary of the Treasury, which report shall be deemed and taken to be conclusive in all respects, except as hereinafter provided and the Secretary of the Treasury shall, with like exception, cause the amounts so apportioned to said claims to be paid from the Treasury of the United States to the parties found by said report to be entitled thereto as aforesaid, and the same shall be received in full and complete compensation: Provided, That in cases where petitions may be filled presenting conflicting claims or setting up liens, said commissioners shall so specify in said report, and payment shall not be made according to the award of said commissioners until a period of sixty days shall have elapsed, during which time any petitioner claiming an interest in the particular amount may file a bill in equity in the Circuit Court of the District of Columbia making all other claimants defendants thereto setting forth the proceedings in such case before said commissioners and their action therein, and praying that the party to whom payment has been awarded may be enjoined from receiving the same; and if said court shall grant such provisional order, a copy thereof may, on motion of said complainant, be served upon the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall thereupon cause the said amount of money to be paid into said court, subject to its orders and final decree, which payment shall be in full and complete compensation, as in other cases.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That said commissioners shall hold their sessions in the city of Washington, at such place and times as the President of the United States may direct, of which they shall give due and public notice. They shall have power to subpœna and compel the attendance of witnesses, and to receive testimony and enforce its production, as in civil cases, before courts of Justice, without any exclusion of such testimony, on account of color, and they may summon before them the persons making claim to service or labor, and examine them under oath; and they may also, for purposes of identification and appraisement, call before them the persons so claimed. Said commissioners shall appoint a clerk, who shall keep files and complete record of all proceedings before them, who shall have power to administer oaths and affirmations in said proceedings, and who shall issue all lawful process by them ordered. The marshal of the District of Columbia shall personally, or by deputy, attend upon the sessions of said commissioners, and shall execute the process issued by said clerk.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That said commissioners shall receive in compensation for their services, the sum of two thousand dollars each, to be paid upon the filing their report; that said clerk shall receive for his services the sum of two hundred dollars per month; that said marshall shall receive such fees as are allowed by law for similar services performed by him in the Circuit court of the District of Columbia; that the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause all other reasonable expenses of said commission to be audited and allowed, and that said compensation fees and expenses shall be paid from the Treasury of the United States.

Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That for the purpose of carrying this act into effect there is hereby appropriated (from the Treasury of the United States), out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum not exceeding one million of dollars.

Sec. 8. And be it further enacted, That any person or persons who shall kidnap, or in any manner transport or procure to be taken out of said District, any person or persons discharged and freed by the provisions of this act, or any free person or persons with intent to re-enslave or sell such person or persons into slavery, or shall re-enslave any of said freed persons, the person or persons so offending shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and on conviction thereof in any court of competent jurisdiction in said District shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than five nor more than twenty years.

Sec. 9. And be it further enacted, That within twenty days after the passage of this act a statement, in writing or schedule, shall be filed with the clerk of the circuit court for the District of Columbia, by the several owners or claimants to the service of the persons made free or manumitted by this act, setting forth the name, age, sex and particular description of such persons severally; and the said clerk shall receive and record in a book by him to be provided, and kept for that person, the statements or schedules, on receiving fifty cents each therefor; and no claim shall be allowed to any claimant or owner who shall neglect this requirement.

Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That the said clerk, or his successors in office, shall from time to time, on demand, and on receiving twenty-five cents therefor, prepare, sign and deliver to each person made free, or manumitted by this act, a certificate under the seal of said court, setting out the name and description of such person, and stating that such person was duly manumitted and made free by virtue of this act.

Sec. 11. And be it further enacted, That the sum of one hundred thousand dollars out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, is hereby appropriated to be expended under the direction of the President of the United States, to aid in the colonization and settlement of such free persons of African descent now residing in said District, including those to be liberated by this act, as may desire to emigrate to the republics of Hayti or Liberia, or such other country beyond the limits of the United States as the President may determine; Provided, The expenditure for this purpose shall not exceed $100 for each emigrant.

Sec. 12. And be it further enacted, That all acts of Congress and all laws of the State of Maryland in force in said District, and all ordinances of the cities of Washington and Georgetown, inconsistent with the provisions of this act, are hereby repealed.

The District of Columbia Emancipation Bill.—The following is the vote on the bill in the House of Representatives on Friday Feb. 11th.

Yeas.—Messrs. Aldrich, Alley, Arnold, Ashley, Babbitt, Baker, Baxter, Beaman, Bingham, Blair of Mo., Blair of Pa., Blake, Brown of R. I., Buffington, Campbell, Chamberlain, Clark, Colfax, F. A. Conk. R. Conkling, Covode, Davis, Dawes, Delano, Diven, Duell, Dunn, Egerton, Edwards, Eliot, English, Fenton, Fessenden, Fisher, Franchot, Frank, Gooch, Goodwin, Granger, Haight, Hale, Hanchett, Harrison, Hickman, Hooper, Hutchins, Julian, Kelley, Kellogg of Mich., Kellinger, Lansing, Loomis, Lovejoy, McKnight, McPherson, Mitchell, Moorhead, Morrill of Me., Morrill of Vt., Nixon, Odell, Olin, Patton, Pike, Porter, Potter, Rice of Mass., Rice, of Me., Riddle, Rollins of N. H., Sargent, Sedgwick, Shanks, Sheffield, Shellaberger, Sloan, Spaulding, Stevens, Stratton, Thomas of Mass., Train, Trowbridge, Van Horn Van Valkenburgh, Verree, Wallace, Walton of Vt., Washburne, Wheeler, White of Ia., Wilson and Windom.—93.

Nays.—Messrs. Allen, Bailey of Pa., Biddle, Blair of Va., Brown of Va., Casey, Crittenden, Delaplain, Grider, Hall, Harding, Holman, Johnson, Knapp, Law, Lazear, Mallory, May, Menzies, Morris, Noble, Norden, Nugent, Pendleton, Perry, Price, Rollins of Mo., Shiel, Steele of N. Y., Steele of N. J., Thomas of Md., Vallandigham, Voorhies, Wadsworth, Wood, White of Ohio, Wickliffe, Wright.—39.

EMANCIPATION IN THE DISTRICT.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Fellow Citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives:

The act entitled "An act for the release of certain persons held to service or labor in the District of Columbia," has this day been approved and signed.

I have never doubted the constitutional authority of Congress to abolish slavery in this District, and I have ever desired to see the National Capital freed from the institution in some satisfactory way. Hence there has never been in my mind any question upon the subject, except the one of expediency, arising in view of all the circumstances. If there be matters within and about this act which might have taken a course or shape more satisfactory to my judgment, I do not attempt to specify them. I am gratified that the two principles of compensation and colonization are both recognized and practically applied in the act.

In the matter of compensation, it is provided that claims may be presented within ninety days from the passage of the act, but not thereafter; and there is saving* for minors, femmes covert, insane, or absent persons. I presume there is an omission by mere oversight, and I recommend that it be supplied by an amendatory or supplemental act.

Abraham Lincoln.

Washington, April 16, 1862.

*[So telegraphed; but the word "no" is undoubtedly omitted.—Ed.]

Washington, Wednesday,
April 16, 1862.

The President to-day nominated to the Senate James G. Berret, ex-Mayor of Washington, the Hon. James F. Vinton of Ohio, and Daniel R. Goodloe, formerly of North Carolina, Commissioners under the act for the abolition of Slavery in the District of Columbia, whose duty is to investigate and determine the validity and value of the claims presented.

LETTER FROM TROY.

Troy, N. Y., April 14, '62.

Mr. Editor: We had here, last Thursday evening, an exhibition, comprising tableaux, singing and recitations, for the benefit of the pastor of the A. M. E. Church, and we are pleased to say that it was a perfect success, there being over sixteen hundred persons in attendance, and at least two hundred who could not get into the hall. The "Troy Whig" of the following day contained the subjoined notice:

"The entertainment gotten up by our colored fellow citizens at Harmony Hall last evening, for the benefit of the pastor of the African M. E. Church, was largely attended, and passed off very successfully. The exercises consisted of vocal and instrumental music, tableaux and recitation. The tableauxs were all finely rendered, and several were deservedly encored. The vocal music was of a superior order, as was also the recitation of Poe's 'Raven,' by Mr. R. M. Dunmore. Mr. D. is a good elocutionist, and was highly complimented for the admirable manner in which he recited this difficult production. The stage was handsomely decorated, and the different exercises were very cleverly performed. The entertainment would bear repetition, as many persons went away from the Hall last evening unable to gain admission."

The repetition of the affair is talked of, but not yet decided upon.

S. H. Smith.

MEETING IN WILLIAMSBURG.

At a public meeting of the colored citizens of Brooklyn, E D., held at the church of the Rev. Wm. J. Hodges, on Monday evening, April 14th, 1862, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas the Congress of the United States have recently passed an act emancipating the slaves of the District of Columbia, and abolishing slavery therein, and which said District is the heart and seat of Government of this our great republic, thereby showing to the world that they still adhere to, and act in accordance with, the principles maintained by Jefferson, and which are embodied in the constitution of this United States, "that all men are created free and equal, and endowed with certain enalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Resolved, That we, the colored citizens of Brooklyn, E. D., do highly approve, sanction and endorse the recent action of Congress abolishing slavery in this District, and do return our sincere thanks to those noble and Christian like statesmen who voted in favor of the same, for so faithfully discharging their duties in behalf of those oppressed people.

Resolved, That we will ever stand by the country that gave us birth, and that we will do all we can to maintain this Government and support the constitution of the United States at any sacrifice of life and property, if called for at our hands.

Resolved, That we hail this as a day of deliverence and a year of jubilee to the colored people of this country, and of the African race in general, and as the commencement of the great work which will yet be performed for the enfranchisement of the colored people of this country.

Wm. J. Hodges, President.
Wm. A. Gibbs, Jun., Sect'y.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Joseph C. Bustill, of Harrisburg, arrived in this city last Saturday, expecting to leave shortly for Hayti, but intelligence gleaned from parties from that country and other sources, has not only led him to abandon the idea of taking his family there, but he has written to parties who were to have gone along not to leave their homes until they hear further from him. In fact Mr. Bustill is quite undecided in regard to his own movements; but it is very probable that he will return to Pennsylvania.

Mr. Henry Hopper of Paterson N. J. manufacturer of machinists' tool handles, has lately erected a new workshop in the rear of his old one, the increasing demand for handles making the enlargement necessary. His reputation as a handle maker is not surpassed by that of any Anglo Saxonin this country. We hope that Mr. Hopper will have some specimens of his workmanship in the approaching Exhibition.

THE EMANCIPATION BILL SIGNED.

Special Dispatch to the Evening Post.

Washington, Wednesday,
April 16, 1862.

The hearts of all the friends of Freedom are rejoiced by the report just made current that Mr. Lincoln has signed the bill for the emancipation of the blacks of this District. True to his instincts, true to his noble principles, true to the benevolent policy which his Message recently inaugurated, he has put his name to the great act which carries joy to thousands upon thousands of homes and hearts. If our cannons roar out the glorious triumphs of the battlefield, surely they should announce this triumph with double thunders of sound.

Mr. Lincoln has not hesitated in affixing his name to the charter which brings liberty to so many because he had any doubts of the propriety or the justice of the measure, but simply in obedience to his just-mindedness. He does nothing hastily; he is disposed to hear arguments on all sides, and for the last two days he has listened patiently to the objections of those who were interested in the retention of Slavery.

The Border-State men have said all they could say; the President has given mature consideration to their words, but he decides, at last, that he is unable to stain his fair fame with the reproach that he had been the obstacle to the great work of the day.

Even if the President had withheld his name from the bill there were votes enough in Congress to pass it over his head; but he preferred to attach the "Abraham Lincoln" to a measure which will reflect such lasting honor upon him and his administration. At home and abroad this deed is of more use to our cause than any great battle.

The Baptism on Sunday Last.—By a sad blunder many of our readers were sent to the foot of 16th street, instead of 34th St. and were obliged to walk to said point: some arriving there too late to witness the ceremony. This is a matter of regret to us and would have been made right had we discovered the error in time. We learn that there was a very large number present and that every thing passed off quietly. In the afternoon the Abyssinian Baptist Church was crowded and twenty-one persons were abmitted to membership.

Festival of the Young Men's Literary Association.—In our advertising columns will be found the programme of the aforesaid Association for their festival on Thursday evening next, from which it will be seen that invitations have been sent to many of the leading minds of this country, and no doubt the speaking on that occasion will be of the highest order. We learn that already over two hundred tickets have been sold. This looks as though the committee of arrangements had made a blunder in selecting so small a hall, although one that would accomodate an audience brought out by an ordinary occasion. Aside from the great efforts of the members to make the affair a perfect success the novelty of the exercises would be likely to attract a very large audience.

The following persons have been made honorary members of the Association: Mrs Rev. Alex. Crummel, Mrs. Rev. H. H. Garnet, Mrs. Rev. W. J. Alston, Mrs. Caroline W. Groves, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglas, Miss Sara G. Stanley, Mrs. Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Mrs. Mary A. Shadd Cary, Rt. Rev. Danl. A. Payne, Rev. Wm. Douglass, Prof. Sol. G. Brown, Jerh. Bowers, Ezekial Dias, Warren M. Stewart, Saml. S. Rankins, Jas. R. W. Leonard, and Thomas Hamilton.

PERFORMANCE OF MONS. KELLIES.

New Haven, Conn., Ap. 14th, 1862.

Mr. Editor,—Noticing the advertisement of Mons. Kellies in your paper of the 10th inst. and having had the pleasure of seeing him perform in New Haven some weeks ago, I take this opportunity of saying to the colored people and the public of New York city in general, that it is impossible for a person who has not been an eye witness to form an idea of the almost superhuman feats performed by Mons. Kellies. I venture to say no exhibition of the kind was ever given in New Haven which afforded equal satisfaction to those who have witnessed it as that of Mons. Kellies. Will not your colored citizens improve the opportunity of witnessing some of the greatest feats ever performed, done by an individual of their own color, as well as to give a worthy man what he really deserves, a good benefit!

S. F.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, N. Y.

At a large and influential meeting of the members and pew holders of this church on Tuesday night, the 14th inst., a resolution was adopted requesting the whole Board of Trustees to resign their office, only one single person voting in the negative. The meeting was one of unusual harmony and decision.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENT FOR THE GERRIT SMITH LAND MOVEMENT —CONGRATULATORY.

Friends: Your powerful and earnest response to our humble demand on Thursday last has answered our object, and we greet you to-day the truly interested friends of our cause, fully appreciating its lofty and independent principle.

Nearly six months ago we ventured an experiment single handed and alone, in test of the public interest in the improvement of the Gerrit Smith Lands, many of which, we learned, were being stripped of their valuable timber, whilst vast tracts were but awaiting the fall of the auctioneer's hammer to become the coveted property of the appreciative speculator, for non-payment of taxes. But our zeal outstripped our caution, and the effort failed. In falling back to recruit, of course we were obliged to run the gauntlet of old fogy derision, badly damaged in the sacrifice of our scanty means. Our faith, though once defeated was not destroyed. Abiding our time, the mammoth expression at the Cooper Institute told the ripe season: and pressing hot upon its heels, we urged the claims of our movement. We again beat the alarums, but the old fogies flew the track with epithets of disapprobation for our presumption. Suddenly, however, as though inspired with the "forward" spirit of the movement, the gallant young yoemanry, together with a few progressive though retired old veterans, vaulted into the arena, and with your cheering encouragement, gave us a victory. Your liberal support of our enterprise has placed in our hands the necessary means to secure the first step toward the accomplishment of our purpose, and a few weeks shall develope its import.

We cannot adequately express our sense of obligation for the sterling and and excellent entertainment rendered on the occasion by Mr. Manager James J. Spelman, with his Dramatic troup, represented by Misses Tilly and Josephine Williams, Miss Ophelia Powers; Messrs. Geo. Bodee, Augustus Powers, John Gambier, Chas. Ross, Josh. Gray and John Jacobs. Also, to the Misses L. and M. Vogelsang and Miss Powers for the rich attraction of their sweet voices; and to Miss Victoria Price, the popular organist and piano instructor of Brooklyn, Miss Virginia Magnan and Miss Jane A. Williams, of New York, we offer our grateful acknowledgment for their skillful services at the piano, as well as to Miss Mary Highland Garnet, though disabled, we regret, by a severe accident to a finger, she was, nevertheless, present.

The volunteer musicians advertised on the programme not appearing, the public as well as ourself are deeply obliged to Prof. A. T. Hardy who generously volunteered on the spot to relieve our embarrassment, and electrified the delighted audience with his magic bow. The violin solo performed by him, together with his masterly success in his entertainmen of the guests during the evening and after the close of the performances, will not be forgotten by those who heard him.

We also tender our thanks to the committee of arrangements, Messrs. Theo. Giles, Peter Vogelsang, John W. Williams and Wm. H. Leonard for their very valuable services, the remembrance of all of which shall give new impetus to our zeal, and render certain the accomplishment of a noble object, but shortly since so gloomy and obscure.

James R. W. Leonard.

Bethel Fair.—The ladies of Bethel Church opened, on the 1st inst., in the basement of the M. E. Church, in Sullivan street, above Bleecker, a Fair for the benefit of their church, which we are pleased to say has been a perfect success. The room has been crowded nightly by our citizens and quite a large amount has been realised by the ladies. The fact that the authorities of Bethel Church are talking about purchasing the property where the fair was held, and their using it to worship in for the last month, gave the ladies an immense advantage, which they have made the best possible use of. The purchase of this property by Bethel would be an act of very great wisdom, as the place is centrally located and easy of access from all parts of the city.

Youths' Literary Society of Brooklyn.—This society gave an entertainment on the evening of the 10th in the Concord Street Baptist Church, for the benefit of said church. The attendance was not very numerous, but we hear that those present were well pleased with the performances. The entertainment was concluded with a ball at Poplar Hall.

Prof. Wm. J. Wilson's School at the Polytechnic Institute, Brooklyn.—This school repeated their exhibition on the evening of the 11th inst., at the above named place, before a densely crowded audience. The children—some of whom possess fine natural abilities—acquitted themselves superbly. Indeed we do not know that we ever witnessed a more spirited performance. Miss Laura Williams, whose singing in the duett from Norma with Miss Anna Lamas was so deservedly applauded at the last exhibition, received a splendid bouquet in acknowledgment of said performance. The little farce of "Bluster and Fuster," written by Mr. Wilson expresely for the occasion, was capitally performed and elicited unbounded applause.

SURPRISERS SURPRISED.

Having received a very pressing invitation to attend a party on the 15th inst.—we knew not where—we made due acknowledgments and repaired to the place of rendesvous, which was in 34th street near the 7th avenue. About 11 o'clock a long line of pleasure seekers might have been seen wending their way up 7th avenue with baskets, which seemed to be somewhat weighty; kettles carried very carefully, and suspicious looking bottles—the whole procession being guarded in the rear by three rather small men, two of whom carried black boxes, and the other a tremendous big fiddle. Some of the party having no idea where they were going, would frequently ask the others to let them know when they had passed Harlem, Sing Sing, &c. The leaders kept steadily on until they had arrived at the house of Miss B——e, 54th street corner of 7th avenue, about 5 miles from the City Hall. It was very evident that a very few of the party expected to go in the country so soon in the season, therefore this was surprise the first. On the way up we had anticipated much pleasure from turning people out of bed, &c.; but we had also expected some little deprivation of comfort from crowded rooms, but you may judge of our surprise when we say that everybody was up, and the house all prepared for our reception. The room into which we were ushered measured just 39 feet by 23, thus affording ample room to the company. The musicians, Messrs Douglass, Flow and Snyder, having secured a position, soon brought the company to their feet, who whirled the night away amid the mazes of all the fashionable dances.

Reader, you must not suppose that the creature comforts were lost sight of, for we can testify that the contents of a certain very large bowl was not forgotten, nor were the viands, including the oysters and their "fixins" neglected. This being a private affair, it is not lawful to introduce the public nose thereinto, and we hope the ladies will excuse us for making public what we have. The ladies were very finely dressed—too much so, we thought, for the occasion—but as many of them expect to make a "change" this season, we suppose that they must make themselves look as lovely as possible. The aid rendered by the gentlemen was prompt and unceasing, thus rendering the labors of the committee light indeed; in fact so little did the committee have to do, that to this moment we do not know to whom we owe the exceedingly pleasant evening's enjoyment.

Wanderer.

A NATIONAL CONVENTION.

Mr. Editor.—Some little time ago I read in your paper a communication from Dr. Delany urging upon our people the importance of holding a National Convention. I have waited for some time, hoping that many would follow recommending the same thing, but as yet few have said anything about it.

Now Sir, allow me to ask why such a convention should not be held? When was there ever a time when such a convention was more needed?

Sir, I hope that this matter will not be overlooked.

If it were here necessary many considerations might be urged why such a convention should be held.

Let us meet, then, say about the first week in October, or sooner if thought best. What say you, Mr. Editor? Yours,

A. N. Freeman.

Hartford, Ct., March 29th, 1862.

Negro Regiments.—A Washington correspondent of the Baltimore "Sun" intimates that the War Department have in contemplation the formation of a few negro regiments to garrison the Southern forts when the sickly season approaches. I have reason to believe that Mr. Stanton is now entertaining this proposition. It is evident to all that if the rebels hold out in the summer, it will be necessary to make use of the acclimated native population. Mr. Stanton will not hesitate to make use of this class of people the moment the necessity becomes apparent.—Cor. N. Y. Post.

The loyal whites then, are deemed adequate to whip all the rebels of the South, though aided by forced battallions of slaves and free negroes, but they shrink from an engagement with "Yellow Jack." We wonder if Mr. Stanton will follow Mr. Cameron in forbidding colored soldiers to wear the U. S. uniform? Won't it degrade the white soldier?—Albany Statesman.

The Churches.—The war has made great changes in the churches of Alexandria. The following are the statistics.

Three Protestant Episcopal; the ministers all gone into Secessia.

Two Presbyterian; one minister gone.

Two Episcopal Methodist; one minister gone.

One Protestant Methodist; minister remains.

One Baptist; minister went but has returned.

One Catholic; minister remains.

One Quaker; sound on the goose.

Two colored; very ditto, ditto.

To this may be added, as a general remark,—"Like people like priests."

OBITUARY.

Frances J. Clinton, oldest daughter of Joseph J. and Letitia Clinton, was born on the 23d of August 1847, departed this life on the 29th of March 1862; Aged 14 years 7 months, 6 days

Of an exceedingly amiable disposition—a dutiful and affectionate daughter, she was the idol of fond parents, and beloved by all who knew her. Zealous in the pursuit of knowledge, and eager for mental improvement she was always attentive to instruction, obedient, and respectful to her teachers, and kind and conciliating toward her schoolmates. Stricken by fell disease while pursuing her studies, she lingered but a few days, before her classmates and companions were called to pay the last tribute of respect to the mortal remains of one, whose kind and gentle bearing had won the hearts of all.

Her last words were "mother I am not afraid to die," so calmly, and peacefully passed from earth a spirit, that will long be "mourned and missed," by the home circle and by her school companions.

While we sympathise with the bereaved parents and friends we feel that the change, for her, has been a happy one, that her ransomed spirit has now entered upon a course of heavenly instruction, that angels and the spirits of the just made perfect are her associates and fellow pupils, and Infinite Wisdom her teacher.

M. H. Freeman

Principal of Avery College

Allegheny City Pa. April 8th, 1862.

DIED.

Johnson.—In this city, April 11, of apoplexy, Rachel Johnson, aged 71 years

The deceased, whom many of our readers will better remember as Mrs. Michael Johnson, was a lady of very great usefulness in this city, and exceedinglypublic spirited for one of her age At the time of her death she was a member of Shiloh Presbyterian Church, where she had belonged for the last forty years; and during that long period her name has scarcely been lost sight of in all movements whether for the church or the public good. She was a person of quick perception and of good judgment; hence her counsels were always sought after by those who knew her best.—On the evening of her death she bid fair for a long continuance of life, having entertained company in her usual vivacious manner until the hour of retiring; when on ascending the stairs she was taken ill, and lived but a few hours thereafter.

Mrs. Johnson was buried from Shiloh Church on Monday the 14th inst., Rev. Chas. H. Thompson of Brooklyn, Rev. Benj. Lynch of this city, and Rev. H. H. Garnet, pastor of the church, officiating on the occasion. Her body now rests near the remains of her late pastor, Rev. Theo. S Wright. A vast concourse of persons, filling the church in very part, attended the funeral.

Stewart.—Died, in this city, on Thursday, the 10th inst., after a short illness, Alonzo A., son of Jeremiah and Frances Stewart, aged 4 years and 4 months.

Hodges.—In New York city, April 10th, of the scarlet fever, John V. Hodge, jr. aged 3 years 3 months and 17 days.

Sebra.—In Hartford, Ct. March 29th, Miss Catherine Sebra, aged 45 years.

Johnson.—In Williamsburg, suddenly on Monday, April 7th, Catharine Johnson wife of Wm. Johnson and sister of Saml. Johnson, aged 48 years.

Special Notices.

THE SIXTH
ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL,
of the
Young Men's Literary Association
OF THE THE CITY OF NEW YORK,
Will be given at the
CONTINENTAL HALL,
Eighth Avenue, corner of 34th street,
On Thursday Evening, April 24th, 1862.
For the purpose of Establishing A LIBRARY.

The following distinguished Gentlemen, representing the Ecclesiastical, Professional and Literary classes, have been invited to address the Association.

Rev. H. H. Garnet, Rev. W. J. Alston. Rev. A. Crummell, Rev. H. M. Wilson, Rev. William Spelman, Rev. J. T. Raymond, Rev. J. D. S. Hall, Rev. David Stevens, Rev. R. H. Kane, Bk'n. Rev. R. Wilson, Rev. C. B. Ray, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Dr. J. M'Cune Smith, Dr. M. R. Delany, Judge J. S. Rock, Boston, Fred. Douglass, Esq., Wm. C. Nell, Esq., Boston, C. L. Remond, Esq., Salem, Ransom F. Wake, Esq., Prof. Chas. L. Reason, John Peterson, Esq., George T. Downing, Esq., William Rich, Esq., Troy, Rev. C. H. Thompson, Bk'n.

The evening will be enlivened by a series of Musical Exercises, Consisting of Solos, Duetts, Choruses etc., by a number of young Ladies and Gentlemen, who have kindly volunteered their services.

A NOVEL FESTIVAL.

A Grand Saloon will be opened, combining the Sportive with the Refreshment Department, under the superintendance of the following named Ladies:

Mrs. P. S. Porter, Mrs. Eliza Odell, Mrs. Harriet Roberts, Mrs. M. A. Johnson, Mrs. Ellen W. Anderson, Mrs. Ellen P. Anderson, Mrs Rachel Maxey, Mrs. Harriet Harper, Mrs. T. S. W. Titus, Mrs. Ann R. Mills, Mrs. Robert Thompson, Mrs. Rachel Merrit, Miss Catherine Lyons, Miss Georgiana Freeman, Miss Mary A. Geers, Miss H. A. Hollingsworth, Miss Catherine Rome, Miss M. Highland Garnet, Miss Jane Merritt, Miss Margaret Fuller, Miss Elizabeth J. Baldwin, Miss Mary Williams, Miss Eliza Forster, Miss Hannah Colter, Miss Matilda Higgins, Miss Margaret O. Powers, Miss R. Mills, Miss Georgiana Harris.

Tickets may be had of the following Ladies and Gentlemen, and also of the Ladies of the Committee of Superintendence.

Mr. T. S. W. Titus, 272 Thompson st. Mr. Robert Thompson, 154 Sullivan st. Mr. Jeremiah Powers, 18 Greene st., Mr. Peter S. Porter, 170 West 20th st., Mr. Abraham Roberts, 120 Clinton Place, Miss Serena Rock, 134 West 29th st., Mrs. Levin Polk, 6 Morton st., Mr. James Hawkins, Everett House, Mr. James P. Miller, 95 West 32d st.

Tickets 15 cents.

Doors open at 7 o'clock, Exercises to mence at 8.

John W. Williams, President.
Lewis W. Green, V. Pres.
Abraham W. Larkin, Secretary.
Peter S. Porter, Treasurer.

No Bills received at the door. No postponement on account of the weather.

ARRIVALS

At Mrs. PLANT'S Boarding House.

Mr. Timothy Washington, of Washington, D. C.
— Wilson, of Philadelphia.
— Walter Peterson, of North Hempstead, L. I.
— Black, of Sweden.

THE FUTURE OF AFRICA;

BY Rev. Alexander Crummell, is NOW READY. Copies may be obtained of Chas. Scribner, Grand street, between Broadway and Crosby street. Price one dollar.

APARTMENTS TO LET, with water and waste pipe on the same floor: Apply at 207 Wooster st.

TO LET. The dwelling part of house 55 West Broadway, either the whole or by apartments. Inquire in the Drug Store on the premises

MATRIMONIAL.

A Young man, aged 22 years, wishes to find a Young Lady who has got a disposition as sweet as his own, with the view to matrimony. A young widow with one child under 5 years preferred.

Address with candor, Wm. Thomas, Station A, Spring street, New York.

38 1t

I. O. OF G. S. AND D. OF S.

Notice is hereby given that Sophia Proctor has been expelled from Purity Lodge No. 3 D. of S. for defrauding said Lodge out of the sum of forty dollars.

By order of said Lodge,
Margarett Allen, W. P. D.
Ailcy Ann Zabriskie.
New York, April 14.

GRAND CONCERT.

The Young Folks of Brooklyn will give a Grand Concert in aid of the Ladies' Union Bazaar, for the Colored Orphan Asylum, on Tuesday evening, April 22d, in the Congregational Church, cor. South 3d and 11th sts., Williamsburg.

Doors open at 6½ o'clock. Concert to commence at 7½ o'clock. Admission 15 cents.

A. T. HARDY,
MUSICIAN,
109 Thompson street, (near Prince) New York.

NEW HAVEN AGENCY.

Orders or advertisements for this paper left with Rev. J. G. Smith, No. 5 Rose street, will be promptly attended to.

The African Civilization Society stands adjourned to meet in the 7th Avenue Presbyterian Church, on Monday, April 21st, at 8 o'clock P. M.

Henry M. Wilson,
Secretary.

THE GREAT AFRICAN MAGICIAN AND WIZARD, MONS. KELLIES.

Begs leave to announce his appearance in a series of Grand Drawing Room Entertainments, consisting of astounding transformations and illusions, as presented before Queen Victoria and the Court at Balmoral Castle, Scotland, to be given at

The Metropolitan Rooms,
178 Prince st., on Thursday and Friday Evenings, April 17th, and 18th, 1862.

These Entertainments have been extensively patronised by distinguished clergymen of all denominations, and are universally pronounced by the public and the press to be unequalled.

Mons. Kellies will give selections from the most recherche of his experiments, many of which are entirely new. The whole will be illustrated by new and gorgeous paraphernalia, manufactured expressly for him in London and Paris.

Tickets of admission 25 cents. Children under 12 years, 13 cents.

Doors open at 7 o'clock. Performances to begin at 8. ☞No postponement on account of the weather.

For further particulars see small bills.

HELP WANTED.

AT Tilmon's Agency, 70 East 13th st. one door east of 4th Avenue. Farmers and Gardeners with their wives for the country; and young men and boys as waiters and cooks, chambermaids, laundresses, house-workers for city and country.

Also immediately,—a head and second waiter; a head and second cook, and pantry maid for a summer house.—Wages good.

37 tf.

LADIES' UNION BAZAAR,

For the Benefit of the
COLORED ORPHAN ASYLUM.

In consideration of the many pressing wants of the Asylum, and the great and constant need of funds to supply those wants the Ladies of New York and Brooklyn have consented to hold a Bazaar, to aid the Managers in their labors of love and charity for the Orphans under their charge.

The object is one which speaks for itself we therefore deem any further appeal to the sympathies of the people wholly unnecessary.

The Ladies most earnestly solicit the aid of the community in donations of money or goods of any kind.

Contributsons may be sent to the directress, Mrs. E. Bastien, or to any of the committee.

OFFICERS.

Mrs. Emeline Bastien, Directress, 189 Thompson st. N. Y. Mrs. Ransom F. Wake, Assistant, 99 Thompson st. N. Y., Mrs. Rev. J. N. Gloucester, Assistant Bridge st., Brooklyn, Mrs. D. Roselle, Assistant, South Second st., Brooklyn, Mrs. Mrs. J. H. Jackson, Assistant, Sullivan st., N. Y., Miss. F. Tompkins, Secretary, 52 Laurens st., N. Y., Mrs. C. Graham, Asst., Broome st., N. Y. Mrs. W. J. Wilson, Asst., Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, Mrs. C. L. Reason, Treasurer, 118 Laurens st., N. Y.

COMMITTEE.

Mrs. C. Robinson, N.Y.
" Rev. P. Williams, "
" R. Rich, "
" H. Scott, "
" Dr. Smith, "
" C. Fitch, "
" E. Parker, "
" A. Duncan. "
" Bowser, "
" J. Jenkins, "
" J. Bell, "
" J. Peterson, "
Miss E. D. Richards, "
Mrs. C. Topp,
" P. Guignon, Br'klyn
" Barnswell, "
" W. Leopard, "
" Rev. C. Thompson, "

Mrs. Rv. H. H. Garnet, N.Y
" Margt. Jackson, "
" E Stevens, "
" P. Van Dyke, "
" W. Curtis, "
" Lambert, "
" E. Symonette, "
" Shadd, "
" A. Williams, "
" E. Mann, "
" B. Stanley, "
" J. W. Bowers, "
" H. Mars, "
" R. Jackson, Br'klyn
" M. Van Stay, "
" Hall, "
" J. C. Morell, "
" Tompkins, "

A GRAND MENTAL FEAST.

The ladies of the Zion Baptist Church intend giving a Grand Mental Feast, commencing on [illegible]day, April 20th, and continuing [illegible] 23d, for the benefit of the Church. Doors open at 4 o'clock P. M. Admission 10 cents; children, 5 cents.

PHILADELPHIA AGENCY.

Wm. R. De Cordova, 419 South 7th st. is authorized to receive subscriptions and advertisements for the Anglo-African. All orders left with him will receive prompt attention.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER. A Printing Office for $10. LOWE'S Improved Printing Presses are the Best, Cheapest, most Durable portable Card and Job Presses ever made, and have been awarded Diplomas and silver medals. You will find a press a source of pleasure and profit, by printing for yourself or your neighbors. Many persons are saving and making money by using one at their houses or places of business. A comfortable living may be obtained in any city, town or village, with a small outlay for press and types. The press costs but one-tenth as much as a common Job press, and is so simple a boy or girl of twelve can do common and fancy printing with ease. Cards, Bill-Heads, Labels, Receipts, Circulars, &c., can be printed at a trifling expense.

Price of Presses—No. 1, $5; No. 2, $10; No. 3, $15; No. 4, $20. Price of Printing Offices, including press—No. 1, $10; No. 2, $20; No. 3, $30; No. 4, $40. Send for a Circular to the

LOWE PRESS COMPANY,
13 Water street, Boston.

24ts

A. ROBERTS,

120 Clinton Court, 8th st, New York, agent for the Weekly Anglo-African. Copies may be had of him at an early hour after its publication.

APARTMENTS to let No. 217 Sullivan street. Inquire on the premises of

E V CLARK

25 4t.

ZION CONFERENCE.

☞ Notice is hereby given to the Members of the Annual Conference of the A. M. E. Zion Connexion, that the Annual Conference of the New York District will meet in Zion Church, corner of Church and Leonard streets, New York city, on the Third Saturday in May, 1862.

WM. H. BISHOP,
Superintendent of the 1st Dist. of the A. M. E Zion Connexion.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

STONE SQUARE LODGE NO. 6, A. Y. M. under the jurisdiction of the M W. United Grand Lodge of the State of New York, meet every Friday Evening at 8 o'clock, at their Hall 309 Grand st., Williamsburg, Brooklyn, E. D.

J. H. DAVIS, Sec'ry.

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.

New York—corner of Prince and Marion street near Broadway.

Hours of Worship;—
Prayer-meeting, 10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.

Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock, Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock. Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,

(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. Wm. J. Alston, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1 2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . . P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—
10½ . . . . . A. M.
3 . . . . . P. M.
7½ . . . . . P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn.

13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

Rev. Eli N. Hall, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:
10½ o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . . P. M.
7½ " . . . . . P. M.

10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:
10 1-2 o clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . . P. M.
7½ " . . . . . P. M.

12-1y.

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—
3 o'clock, ... P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . . P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

LECTURE every Wednesday evening.

Rev. Chas. H. Thompson, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . . P. M.
7½ " . . . . . P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. Hall, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. John T. Raymond, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . . P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.

Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.

Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Agent for Washington.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson will be promptly forwarded.

Troy Agency.—Mr. Henry Barke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

MRS. ELIZA LEWIS' SALVE,
ANDERSON'S HAIR RESTORATIVE,
(New London,)
SPANISH OIL, (For the Hair,)
WHITE'S VEGETABLE EXTRACT,
BRANDRETH'S SUGAR COATED PILLS,
For Sale at the
Drug Store 55 West Broadway
tf-47

GLASS, CHINA, AND EARTHEN-WARE MENDED,
BY A. ROBERTS,
120 Clinton-Court, 8th st. New York.

A Supply of the EGYPTIAN CEMENT, for the above purpose constantly on hand. Price 25 cents per bottle.

29tf.

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER
219 Centre Street New York.

LODGINGS. Four Gentlemen can obtain comfortable lodgings by applying to Mrs. Ellen Anderson No. 150 W. 29th street, between 7th and 8th avenues. The house is in a very pleasant part of the city and within half a block of cars and stages.

25 5t.

NOW IS THE TIME
To Use Dr. CLARKE'S
SHERRY WINE
BITTERS!!

Composed of

Dock Root,	Wild Cherry,
Sarsaparilla,	Prickly Ash,
Thoroughwort,	Poplar Bark,
Rock Rose,	Rhubarb,
Wintergreen,	Dandelion,

&c. &c.

For Weakness, Loss of Appetite, Sour Stomach, Jaundice, Headache, Piles of long standing, Humors,

And all Diseases which arise from an unhealthy state of the Stomach, Bowels, and Blood.

PRICE ONLY 25 CENTS A BOTTLE!

For Sale at the office of the Anglo-African, 48 Beekman street.

TO LET.—Two furnished Rooms in Mrs. Plant's Boarding House suitable for a gentleman and wife, or for single gentlemen or ladies. Apply on the premises.

BOSTON HOUSE
MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of al the principal colored Churches.

19 26t

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen it you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this in any other city, please call at the Mercha Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG

Where you will find a splendid assortment o seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTING

of every description. Also constantly on hand well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.

Don't Forget,
168 EWEN ST.,
Williamsburg

9 1y.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. Ramsey.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y.

19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
Residence—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding.

8 tf

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. Foster, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 South Street, N.Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate.

31y

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS,
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought.
12-tf

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly Richardson) respectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

MRS E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 Sullivan Street, New York.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.

BOARDING AND LODGING

By Mrs. Mary Johnson, 120 West 30th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in a very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies . . . [illegible]
" " Gents. . . . [illegible]
Lodging per week, . . . [illegible]

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER.
In all its branches—such as
BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHAINS, ETC.
Residence—120th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.
18 26t

HATS CAPS & [illegible]
In great variety.
First Premium for [illegible]
HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING [illegible]
The Clergy supplied at a discount.
KELLOGG, 331 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

THE HORACE WATERS PIANOS,
MELODEONS, ALEXANDRE ORGANS,
T. Gilbert & Co's. Celebrated [illegible] Pianos, are the finest instruments for Parlors and Churches now in use. A large assortment may be seen at the new Warerooms 481 Broadway, between Grand and Broome streets, which will be sold at extremely low prices. Pianos and Melodeons from [illegible] makers, new and second hand, to let, and rent allowed if purchased, as per agreement. Monthly payments received for the same. Also, second-hand pianos at great bargains, prices from $25 to $100. Sheet Music, Music Books, and all kinds of Music merchandise at war prices. A Pianist in attendance will try new music.

HORACE WATERS, Agent.

33 13t.

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND
BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,
PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St., and with G. Oton.

18tf

TO LET.—Furnished rooms for gentlemen, with or without board, at 68 Sullivan st.

JOHN H. JACKSON

TO LET in Williamsburgh to a small family, the upper part of No. 64 South 8th st., containing all the modern improvements, within three minutes walk of all the ferries.

For particulars inquire as above Possession given immediately.

WORLD'S FAIR AGENCY.—The undersigned are acting as Agents for Merchants and Manufacturers to Exhibit at World's Fair, and to introduce into England, France and other European countries, articles of American Invention, Procuring Patents, making Sales, or in any way promoting their interests.

DEXTER & CO. 17 Spruce st. N. Y.; 86 Milk street, Boston; 149 S. Fourth st., Philad 1m3sp.

HELP WANTED

At Tilmon's Agency, No. 70 East 13th st., one door East of the 4th Avenue. Spring is here and now is the time. Never was there a greater demand for all first class colored help than now. Remember that this is the oldest and most responsible office in the city for colored help. Situations constantly on hand for both city and country. Terms cash and strict attention paid to business. All persons coming to this city and wishing to save board will do well to call during Office hours, from 7 A. M. to 5 P. M.

31tf L. Tilmon, Proprietor.

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City.

17 12t

PLANE St. SELECT SCHOOL.
195 PLANE ST., NEWARK, N. J.
MRS. HARRIET E. ROGERS, PRINCIPAL.

The branches taught are Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography and History. Plain Sewing. Ornamental Needlework, Worsted Embroidery and Fancy Knitting.

Piano Forte, Melodeon, and Vocal Music by Prof. John H. O'Fake.

A limited number of Misses between the ages of ten and fourteen may be boarded in the house on moderate terms. Healthy location, with a fine yard for exercise.

REFERENCES.

NEWARK, N.J.

Rev. E. J. Adams, [illegible]

Adam Ray, [illegible]

BROOKLYN.

Rev. J. N. Gloucester.

NEW YORK.

Rev. H. M. Wilson, Rev. H. H. Garnet.

All letters may be addressed to Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, 194 Plane st. Newark N. J.

Elizabeth City, N. J. Feb. [illegible], 1862.

This is to certify that I heartily approve of the Select School for young misses. I have been acquainted with her for over twenty-five years [illegible] I am happy to recommend her [illegible] to the patronage of the public in general.

DANIEL H. VENDERVEER,

Pastor of the 1st Colored Pres. Church [illegible]

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated [illegible] Patent, equalling in durability [illegible] three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African" [illegible] cents. Give them a trial.

WANTED IMMEDIATELY [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

Poetry.

From the Independent.

"LET MY PEOPLE GO."—THE SONG OF THE SLAVES' HOPE.

BY GEO. S. BURLEIGH.

A murmur in the midnight! Hark!
The whisper of a tremulous hope
That battle's earthquake tramp may ope
The bondman's dungeon, deep and dark!
Old smothered heart-beats leaping out
Almost to utterance, old despair
Catching new breath in quickened air—
The indrawn breath of Freedom's shout!

A quick thought gleaming in the night,—
Orion's sword by daylight sheathed!—
A voice to morning never breathed.
The lark song of an inward light!
Long ere this glow of lurid dawn,
One sleepless eye, one listening ear,
In gloom could see, in silence hear,
The whisper'd hope and sword undrawn

By broad Missouri's winding wave,
By slow Savannah's heavy flood,
On fair Potomac dash'd with blood,
Sings low the long-enduring slave
Old songs, the heir-looms of old time,
The awful words that smote erewhile,
The crested dragon of the Nile,
Preluding Israel's march sublime.

In plagues, the tenfold scourge of God,
Vermin and blight—all loathsome things
Commission'd by the King of kings—
Obedient to the prophet's rod,—
With blood and hail, and lightning-glow,
And darkness deeper than the tomb,
Came down the trumpet voice of doom,
"Proud monarch! let my people go!"

Not till the robber's land was shorn
Of all her glory and her power,
And judgment rang its final hour
In death groans of the earliest born;
Nor till the Red Sea's refluent wave
Rolled in eternal overthrow
The pomp and pride of Pharaoh,—
Came full deliverance to the slave.

The fire and blood and reptile swarm
Are on the land of bondage now,
The Judgment angel's lowering brow
Portends the final thunder-storm;
While mutters in the sulphurous cloud
The summons "Let my people go!"
Slaves in their cabin chant it low,
And red-mouthed cannon shout it loud.

How long, avenging God! how long
Must rise the old predictive wail,
Must fall the lightning and the hail,
Ere dance the Freed to Miriam's song?
The murmur deepens to a cry,
Thought leaps to utterance like a sword
Of fire unsheathing for the Lord,
And Freedom calls to do or die!

The slave has hope! then hope my soul,
No steed to slaughter drives amain
But where God holds the bridle-rein:
He calls from battle's thunder roll,
'Ere all the firstborn feel the blow,
And war's Red Sea for ever whelms
The glory of your banded realms,
Arise! and let my people go!"

From The Washington Republican, April 7.

ATTEMPTED KIDNAPPING IN WASHINGTON.

THE KIDNAPPERS CAUGHT AND LOCKED UP.

On Saturday, the camps of the 7th New York and 4th Pennsylvania Cavalry, on the Seventh street road, beyond the Park Hotel, were scenes of the wildest excitement, caused by an attempt on the part of two county constables named John H. Wise (late jailor) and Chas. Kemble, to arrest a free negro man on suspicion of being a run away slave The colored man whose arrest was attempted is named Edward Sam He is a native of the Island of Trinidad, and has free papers, which are certified to by the United States consul at that port, and also by the British consul in this city. We paid a visit to both of the camps yesterday, and gleaned the following particulars of the affair:

Early on Saturday afternoon a hack containing three persons was seen to stop on the Seventh street road, about a half a mile beyond the Park Hotel. At that point one of the men (a former sergeant of the 7th New York Cavalry) got out and stood in the road. The hack passed on a short distance and stopped again in front of the camp of the 7th New York. The two men there got out, and at a given signal from the soldier standing in the road, pounced upon and seized a negro man who was within the lines. The man arrested inquired the reason of such proceeding, when he was informed by one of the kidnappers that they were going to take him to his master, as he was a runaway slave. The colored man told them that he had no master, that he was as free as they were, and that he had his free papers, which he offered to produce if they would release him and give him time to go after them. This the kidnappers refused to do, and began to drag him to the hack, the colored man all the while protesting that he was free, and crying lustily for help. His cries attracted the attention of a sentinel named Michael Hickey, a member of Company M. 4th Pennsylvania Cavalry, (a squad of whom were engaged in guarding some Government property near by) who rushed to his rescue and demanded of the kidnappers the cause of the colored man's arrest.

He was told by Kemble that the man was his slave, and that he had come to take him into custody. The sentinel, who knew the colored man to be free, told him that if they did not release him immediately, he would run them through with his saber, at the same time drawing his weapon. The kidnappers did not mind his threat, and again attempted to drag their victim to the carriage, but were soon stopped by the soldier, who made a thrust at one of them with his saber. Wise asked the soldier if he knew what he was about, and if he intended to place himself between them and the law, to which he replied that he would place himself between them and h—l sooner than they should carry a free man into Slavery. The kidnappers professed to have an order from Provost-Marshal Porter giving them permission to search any of the camps around the city for runaways, which, upon being asked to exhibit, they could not do.

By this time a large of crowd soldiers from the surrounding camps had collected around the kidnappers, who got into the carraiage and ordered the driver to take them into town, vowing vengeance against the sentinel, who had interfered with them "while in discharge of their duty." The sentinel, who was not to be bamboozled in that way, however, ordered the driver to halt, and the "kids" to get out of the carriage and accompany him to his colonel's tent. The two men refusing to accede to the modest request of the sentinel, he drew his pistol with one hand, and, with the other, jerked them out of the vehicle, threatening, if they made the least resistance, to blow their brains out. This proceeding had the effect of persuading the gallant "kids" that it was best for them to obey the sentinel's command, and to follow him to the colonel's tent.

The crowd by this time had further increased, and as the men were taken from the carriage a scene of the wildest excitement ensued. From the throats of between 300 and 400 enraged men came loud demands of "Hang the d—d kidnappers!" "Run them through!" "Shoot the nigger catchers!" "Stone them to death!" "Get a rope!" and like cries very unpleasant to men in the position of the "kids." It was with great difficulty that the officers of the 7th New York could prevent their men from executing summary vengeance upon the constables, who were being conveyed to the camp of the 4th Pennsylvania, about a hundred rods beyond that of the 7th New York. Arriving at the camp of the 4th, the "kids" were taken before Col. Childs, who, after hearing the evidence, ordered them to be sent into town to the Provost Marshall's office. They were immediately placed upon a charger, and under the escort of about a dozen mounted men, proceeded on their journey townwards. The escort was accompanied by Quartermaster Light, and Capt. C. D. Rosseau of the 7th New York Cavalry.

The cortege passed down Seventh street, followed until below the Park Hotel by an immense crowd, who kept up a continual hooting and jeering, interspersed with threats of lynching, which so scared the poor "kids" that they were pale with fear, each of them now and then turning his head around to see if there was any immediate prospect of the threats being put into execution. As the party proceeded still farther along Seventh street, the boys, seeing that something was loose, began to follow, and by the time the procession reached the Provost Marshal's office, on the corner of Nineteenth and I streets, two or three hundred boys had collected around, some shouting with all their might "Secessson nigger thieves!" "Kidnappers!" "Nigger stealers!" "Got you this time, old fellows!" "How do you like nigger stealing now?" and similar cries.

At the Provost Marshal's office the "kids" were ordered to dismount, and were then taken before Gen Wadsworth, who asked them to show him the warrant upon which they attempted to arrest the colored man. They informed him that they had no warrant, and did not need any to arrest a slave, or even a supposed runaway. Their explanation, however, did not suit the General, who ordered them to the Central Guard-House, there to be confined until further examination can be had.

They were then paraded down to the Guard-House, where they still are, and where we hope and trust they may remain until they are entirely cured of their mania for arresting negroes on suspicion of being runaways.

The man who gave the Coustables the information that a runaway slave was in the camp of the 7th New York Cavalry is named Albert K. McMurray, of Lansingburg, N. Y. He was formerly a Sergeant in that corps, but was degraded from his rank and dismissed from the regiment on account of gross misconduct. We were informed by a number of officers of the regiment that through information derived from him three other colored men have been arrested and carried off from the camp on suspicion of being slaves, and since then no tidings have been received of them. We are requested to state by the officers and men of the regiment, that he is universally hated and despised by the whole corps.

The negro man whose arrest was attempted is engaged as cook to the Adjutant of the regiment, and was previously employed as officers' servant in the 4th Pennsylvania Cavalry, which regiment he left to join the 7th New York. He seems to be a very intelligent man, and is universally esteemed by all who know him in both regiments. He says that he was born and raised in Trinidad, and has always been a free man. He is consequently a British subject. He was brought by one of the Captains of the 7th from the State of New York. The officers of both regiments expres themselves determined to ferret out the whole transaction—other persons being, it is supposed, behind the scenes—and to have the guilty parties punished.

P. S.—Since writing the above, we have received a communication from an eye-witness to the transaction, fully corroborating the above statement, with the following addition: In reference to the arrest, the writer says: "Soon a negro left the camp for the spring, to get a bucket of water. The constables went to the negro and asked him if the water was good, and if he would give them a drink! While he was in the act of giving them a drink, one of them knocked the water and pail out of his hand, at the same time both of them seizing him by the collar and dragging him along toward the carriage He halloed as no human being ever halloed before." The writer concludes: "They were soon mounted on horses, and under a strong guard, amid hisses and groans and showers of mud, brought to the city."

Double Assassination.—A shocking tragedy has just come to light in Cuba. A slaveholder named Linares disappeared recently, who, it seems had incurred the vengeance of one Arango, who having sold him some negroes just arrived from Africa, was by him cheated in the payment thereof. Arango hired two noted robbers, known as Los Asturianos, and a mulatto, Bello by name. He went to Linares plantation, pretended to have forgotten the past and stated that he had some negroes to sell from an expedition just arrived at San Juan de los Remedios, which he would dispose of cheap for cash down.—Peraza, a fellow dealer, being with him, they agreed to start at once After spending the night at Remedios, they started for a tobacco plantation called the Hoye, belonging to the mulatto Bello's father, and there after stunning Linares and Peraza with a blow on the head of each, strangled them, and digging a hole, threw the bodies in. To avoid detection by smell, they killed a horse and dragged him over to the spot. It seems a woman gave the indications for the finding of the bodies.—Sixty-two persons were arrested, and among them the four culprits, and they have confessed.

THE UNION VOCALISTS.

In a late number of the Kingston (N. Y.) Argus appears the following highly complimentary notice of the performances of the talented troupe of singers under the leadership of Mr. Wm. Johnson of Rhinebeck. We are pleased to state that this company purpose giving a series of concerts in this city and vicinity at an early day.

The Union Vocalists.—Mr. Wm. Johnson's troupe of singers, who have assumed the above title, gave one of their entertainments at the Court House, on Thursday evening last. Although a small number were in attendance, still it did not detract from the merit of the singing, which we pronounce superior to anything heard in these parts for years. The "Star Spangled Banner" was repeatedly encored, and at each time it was but the same outburst of harmonious melody, in which the audience involuntarily joined in the chorus. Perhaps the color of these individuals may prove a disadvantage to them in some cases in the way of securing patronage; but we can assure all who wish a rare treat in the way of singing, that they will find it in the combined voices of the Union Vocalists. We would suggest to Mr. Johnson that he cultivates with his troupe a slight modulation of tone corresponding to the sentiments expressed in some of his selections, and there is no impediment in the way to render this corps the most popular now traveling.—Kingston Argus.

PERSONAL.

A writer in the N. Y. Leader furnishing a series of papers on the City Hospital makes the following notice of the celebrated nurse, Mrs. Catherine Robinson:

But by what I hear from the doctors in the Hospital, no sketch of that establishment could be fair unless it put in a word about Aunty Robinson, a colored nurse, who has officiated there in that capacity for over twenty yenrs. This good creature has all the appearance of one of the most favorable samples of the Southern mammy, or house nurse, in the families of the high old Carolina and Virginia planters. She has big old-fashioned gold ear-rings in her ears, and wears a clean, bright red and yellow blue handkerchief around her head, and such an expression on her face, that I at once made up my mind, if ever I should be unfortunate enough to go to the Hospital as a patient, I should want to be nursed by Aunty Robinson.

A Lecture that Didn't Come Off.—A report having been started in George town a day or two since, and extensively circulated, to the effect that Rev. Chas. W. Denison had delivered a lecture to the colored people on Sunday last, and would address them on political affairs, Wednesday (last) night, at the Ebenezer (colored) Church, considerable excitement resulted. Threats were made to lynch the lecturer, and the affair assumed such a serious aspect that Sergeant Newman, of the Metropolitan Police, yesterday morning notified the Superintendent of Police of the fact that trouble might be expected, unless preventive measures were taken. The church was lighted last evening, and shortly after eight o'clock, a number of colored people had assembled inside, and there was a large gathering of white citizens—mostly young men and boys—on a corner in the vicinity. Things remained in statu quo for about an hour, the church slowly filling up meanwhile, and the outside crowd augmenting. Shortly after nine o'clock, the colored people left the church, and the crowd on the corner slowly dispersed. No demonstration was made.

It is stated that many of the better class of colored people were opposed to opening the church for the proposed lecture, while others were in favor of it.

If such a lecture was to have been delivered—we have no means of ascertaining the origin or truthfulness of the report—much as we deprecate any disturbance of the relation of master and slave in this District, except by lawful and constitutional means; we deprecate much more any evocation of the mob spirit in this community, to deal with a question which should be decided by rational argument, and not by heated and prejudiced appeals pro and con. Nothing good can come of mob violence, no matter how earnest the actors may be in their convictions of right.—Washington Star, April 3d.

Sad Accident.—While a colored man by the name of Spencer was engaged, with six others, in felling trees on the farm of James McMullen, Esq, in the township of Harwich, on Tuesday last, an accident occurred of a serious nature, and which—from injuries received by said Spencer—will terminate in the death of this unfortunate man. It appears that Spencer was engaged in chopping a tree partly off, while two other men were cutting a tree a short distance from the one at which Spencer was to work for the purpose of falling the one against the other. Spencer, it appears, not being aware of the falling of the tree until it was too late, endeavored, but in vain, to evade its branches, but the main limb of the tree struck him upon the shoulders, crushing him to the ground. Some time afterwards the unfortunate man was conveyed to his home, a distance of about three miles, where he was when our informant left.—Chatham, C. W., Planet, April 10.

LETTER FROM BALTIMORE.

Baltimore, April 10, '62.

Dear Anglo: We again sit down to drop you a few lines in regard to some of the doings of our city. Since we last wrote, the Rev. Alex. Crummell, of Liberia, has spent some time in our city lecturing, preaching, and obtaining subscribers for a work which he has published entitled the "Future of Africa." He has now left here for Philadelphia. After spending some time here, Bishop Payne has gone on to Washington to attend Conference, which is to sit on the 17th inst. On the 24th ult. a young colored man, whilst driving a wagon up Baltimore street, was seen to fall apparently lifeless in the wagon, and was taken to the station house where medical aid was called in, and he was found to have been struck by paralysis. An old colored woman named Priscilla Gault died here last month at the advanced age of 115 years, she having been born in 1746. The Young Folks Musical Association, a new organization, gave their first concert on the 24th ult., which was well patronised. The singers are all young persons, and sang very creditably, several pieces being encored. On Sunday evening, the 23d ult., whilst Bethel congregation were coming out of church, two white fellows passed through the crowd rudely jostling the people; on being expostulated with, one of them drew a dirk and cut one of the bystanders slightly about the face and neck, who promptly knocked him down, whilst a friend, with equal good will, loaned a "plumper" to the other. Regaining his feet he flourished around with his knife in the crowd for a few minutes, carefully abstaining from striking any one else, and then passed on up the street; after which several "guardians of the night" came up from the station house, which is the enormous distance of about 20 yards from the church. We have to record the deaths of two estimable young men of our city, Abraham Dorsey on the 22d, and Henry Brisco on the 25th ult., both of consumption.

On the evening of the 1st inst., a committee of ladies publicly presented the King Solomon Lyceum with several valuable books. There were several addresses and a debate upon the occasion; but the crowning glory was the presentation address by Miss Henrietta E. Cornish, and the response by Mr. Jas. T. Bradford. Seldom has it been our privilege to listen to an address so perfect in language, eloquence and length as was that of Miss Cornish, and round after round of applause burst from the audience, who scarcely breathed whilst she spoke. Like honors were bestowed upon Mr. Bradford, the respondent; both were excellent in every respect.

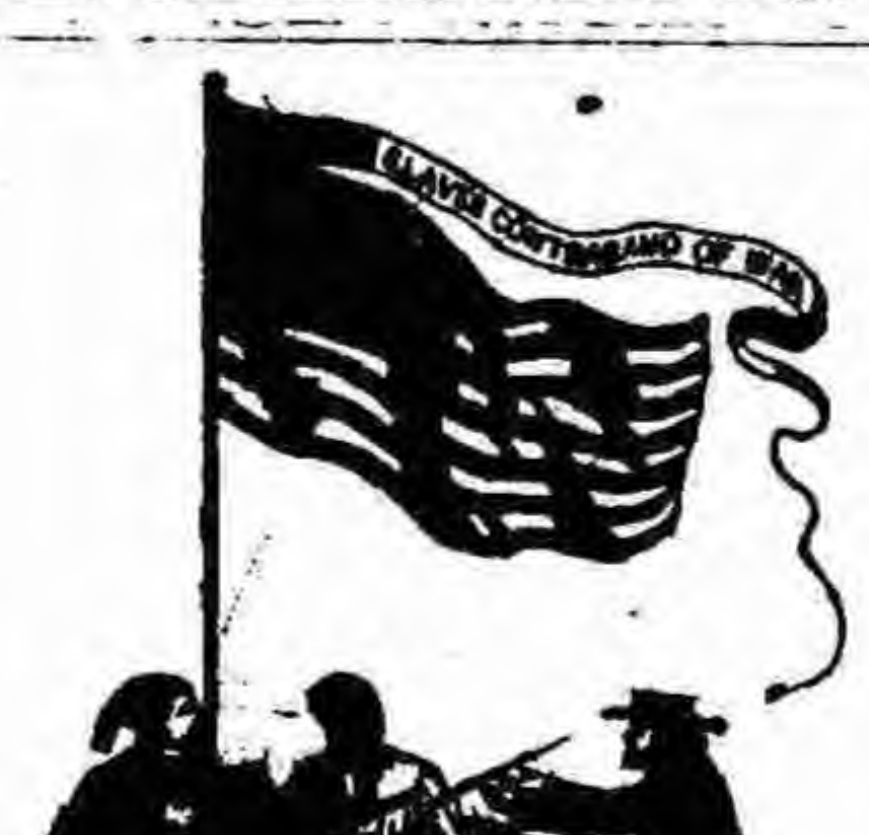
The congregation of Rev. Henry M. Turner having failed to minister unto their minister's temporal wants, a concert was given for his benefit, at Bethel Church, on the 10th inst., and addresses were delivered by Revs. Tanner and Lynch, from Washington. During his remarks, Mr. Lynch introduced the anecdote of the Irishman who induced the post-office clerk to read his letter to him, and then refused to pay for it, as he had got all that he wanted out of it. The application is too obvious for further comment.

Thinking of Washington, I have frequently been asked what has become of you Washington correspondent? Is his "Box" empty, or is it filled, nailed up, and stored away? Whenever it is we would like to know, as news from Washington is always acceptable in Baltimore.

Mr. Solomon G. Brown, of Washington, D. C., the presenter of the minerals, specimens, &c., mentioned in a former letter, will lecture before the Galbreath Lyceum upon "Geology," on Tuesday, 22d inst. We had the pleasure of witnessing on Tuesday evening, 8th inst., the marriage of Mr. L. J. Hudson to Mrs. Mary J. Jenkins, both well known here, by Rev. A. W. Wayman. Notwithstanding the prevalence of a storm, every available spot in the house for standing or sitting was occupied. We wish them all prosperity. Major

"Do you believe in fore-runners?" asked a lady of Deacon L——. "Yes ma'am," replied the deacon, fixing his eyes with a solemn stare on a dark corner of the room, "I see one now!" "Mercy on me!" shrieked the lady where?" "There, there!" said the deacon, pointing to where his eyes were directed. "That cat, ma'am, may be called a fore-runner, for she runs on all fours."

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, Diptheria and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, Diptheria, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING

B. T. BABBITT'S

SUPERIOR FRENCH

CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the Original Inventor of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we Challenge the World to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

THE

PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC,

Containing besides the Calendar and Copious Astronomical Statistics, a History of the Great Rebellion, Biographical Sketches of the Prominent Military Officers, a Dictionary of Military Terms, very full information relative to Military Matters of interest to the people at large, National Hymns, Incidents, Anecdotes, &c., &c.

Published and for sale by DEXTER & Co., 17 Spruce street. Newsboys and others wanted to make sales.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place,

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess or dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing; and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
Thos. R. Crocker,
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.

D. W. Ingersol,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 12th, 1855.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

James Edwin Halsey.
193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Head ache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want and safe article.

Albro Lyons.
20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway; Mrs. Staat's, 78 Thompson St.; Chas. H. King's, 155 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

Wm. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes of people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Billous Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Waranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equral in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangemen of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occassionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

Price, 25 Cents per Bottle.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK.

REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY EXPLORING PARTY;

BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Product
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.-N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

Price.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS:

Embellishment—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
Music.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or the Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizensihp,—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihndas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Rober Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robert Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry,—Anonymous,
Selected Items,
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell,
The Attraction of Planets—by R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James Mc Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Mercer Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Horland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY THOMAS HAMILTON,

48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE. Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. Contents: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gordon Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. ell. Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo., 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

Th Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Associatian 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvery, annd the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory; also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 291 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing. &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz. or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland.
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (16 cents must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe,
100 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents, sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of tables, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 39. NEW YORK, APRIL 26, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY SATURDAY

BY ROBT. HAMILTON

NO. 48, BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.

Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.

All communications for the paper must be addressed

ROBT HAMILTON,

48 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

PART II.

Hear the word!—who fight for freedom!
Shout it in the battle van!
Hope! for bleeding human nature!
Christ the God, is Christ the Man!

H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER XL.

AMERICAN TYRANNY—OPPRESSION OF THE NEGROES.

The severe ordeal through which the rebel party had recently passed, tended only to awaken in them against the blacks feelings of the bitterest resentment. Smarting as they were by the wound still bleeding from the disappointment lately received under trying circumstances, they determined on taking a stand in which, could they not succeed in attaining political equality with the Castilians, at least would enjoy the satisfaction of knowing that they stood above the negroes. This superiority they were satisfied was not to be attained by the elevation of themselves, but by putting the negroes down.

For weeks subsequent to the evening of the last King's Day, the blacks had to withstand the most trying difficulties. Every place of public entertainment, saloon, hotel, coach, cabin passage or what not—the greater part of which being controlled by Americans—were closed against negroes and mulattoes.

On entering the public market, did a white but appear at a shamble or a stand, though the black was first, he must await the serving of the white, and at his or her bidding, stand back at a 'respectful' distance; and on passing along the side walk, at the command of a white, every black man was compelled to uncover his head, and leave the pavement for the street. The rule as applied to the side walks was afterwards restricted upon both sexes. On entering shops and storehouses their hats had always to be raised, and females on entering such places were subject to the coarsest of treatment.

Every day brought to the ears of the unhappy blacks fresh news of some new outrage, but as yet this had not been extended to the better class among them. They were doomed, however, to enjoy but a short respite of this kind, as one evening the whole population was thrown into a ferment of feverish consternation.

Placido, in passing along one of the principal thoroughfares, stepped into a book-dealer's establishment, the proprietor of which was an American, formerly of Baltimore, to whom the poet was, of course, unknown. He was known to have negro blood; it was enough to know that he was a mulatto. 'Take off your hat, sir,' abruptly ordered the bookseller.

The surprise came so suddenly that the poet stopped short in front of the counter in a kind of gaze of bewilderment. Before he could recover himself the man had leaped over the counter, knocked off his hat, kicking it into the street and seized him by the collar of the coat. Though physically weaker, the poet grappled with him, until nearly exhausted he let go his grasp.

As the dealer relinquished his hold, the sacred fire of Heaven which burnt divinely in the poet's soul, blazing as fearfully from his eyes as a lightning flash from a thunder cloud, he gave him a look of god-like defiance.

Do you look so at me, you black villain! Insulted are you—angry, hey! I'll please you!' The poet still said nothing, but kept his eye firmly fixed on him, terrible as wrath. 'Look pleased, sir,' indignantly continued he; 'look pleased, I say, laugh I bid you, you black rascal, laugh!'—when dealing him a well aimed blow he sent the bard of Cuba staggering prostrate upon the pavement in the street.*

A respectably dressed white man passing at the moment, supposing the person to have stumbled and fell accidentally, ran quickly to his relief; but on observing him to be colored, although stunned and bleeding upon the earth, he hurriedly passed along without extending a finger of assistance.

The wounded part immediately inflaming and swelling, became discolored and painful, accompanied with lightness of head and dimness of vision. Putting up his hand to the part, and feeling the extent of the brutal mutilation, the, left molar both being badly wounded, picking up his hat, with sacred eloquence in touching tones he exclaimed,

'How long, oh gracious God! how long
Shall power lord it over right?
The feeble trampled by the strong
Remain in Slavery's gloomy night!'

When walking feebly on, he turned into the first by-way, lest, ere he reached his humble abode he might meet with other summary corporeal abuse, and the majesty of heaven again be compelled to yield before the mandate of hell.

The divine aspirations escaping the poet's lips reached his oppressor's ears, and the wretch who with perfidy had just stricken him to the earth, was now touched with sympathy at the outrage perpetraed by his own hand.

'Listen, listen!' admonished he, 'he's a praying! he must be a negro preacher. I'm sorry I used him so badly. I'll try after this to be more careful. I knew several of them while doing business in Baltimore, and always found them good religious black men. They are good customers, always buying large and costly works on divinity, and other books whether or not they need them. They are indeed clever black fellows, and know their place. Which way did he go?' Going to the door he looked every way, but the sorrow-stricken poet was out of sight.

On entering his study, where sat in waiting Blake, Montego, Antonio, Blacus, and Gofer Gondolier, the mutilated and crippled bard exclaimed:

'At last has it come! at last has it come!' falling exhausted upon his couch.

'Good heavens! Placido, what is the matter?' cried Blacus, to which there was no reply.

'My God! What is the matter?' exclaimed Montego.

'Enough's the matter!', interposed Gondolier. 'These devils of 'Patriots' as they call themselves, have been murdering him as sure's you're born, just as they'll do the whole of us if we don't begin first.'

'Gondolier, I'm surprised!' replied Montego; 'and ———'

'So am I,' interrupted he. 'General, pardon me—but I do hate them reptiles so!'

'You are wrong, Gondolier. We should not 'hate' our fellow man; as God made us all,' admonished Montego.

'I don't care if he did, General; they hate us, an' I'll do them as they do us. They don't care if God did make us: they don't treat us any better on that account,' rejoined Gondolier.

'They don't all hate us; there are some good ones among them, as well as other people.'

'Good ones, hey! I don't know where you'd find them; I'm sure it wouldn't be among the whites of Cuba. But we're neglecting our murdered brother there, disputing about them serpents which the Scriptures told us long ago should have their heads mashed,' said Gondolier.

'Never mind, he dozes now,' admonished Montego in a whisper, looking round at the couch where lay the bleeding poet.

'We must know something more about this,' said Gondolier; 'find out who these devils is that have been beating out his brains.'

Justin Pampo, the black surgeon, was called in, who, on examination, pronounced a serious contusion of the cheek, with slight concussion of the brain. On recovering sufficiently to relate his grievances, a thrill of terror and almost irrepressible indignation were manifestly felt.

'This is certainly a serious state of affairs, and that, too, without a medium of redress,' said the surgeon.

'Yes,' replied Gondolier; 'and we ought to by this time be able to redress our grievances. Some men are born to command and others to obey; and it is well that this is the case, else I might be a commander; and of I was, I might command when orders should not be given.'

'This is you failing, Gondolier,' said Montego; 'and one good reason why you should not hold command. I want no better under-officer, as orders received would be strictly executed.''

'Yes, General, I know my 'failing,' and it's useless to talk to me about 'policy' and nonsense when a blood-hound is tearing out my vitals. 'Discretion' at such a time. Give me a revolver, knife, club, brickbat, or anything with which to defend myself, and I'll put a varment to flight. If a tiger, hyena, or any other wild beast should attack you, ought you to take its life immediately, or stop to argue the best method of getting rid of danger? Self preservation is nature's first law;' an old truth my grandmammy taught me many years ago when a child sitting in the chimbly corner. I haven't forgot it yet,' rejoined Gondolier starting from his seat toward the door.

'I am now satisfied that we must do something,' concluded Montego.

Placido was removed to the residence of Carmino, the architect and civil engineer, when a council of the Seclusion was ordered to be held.

The consternation succeeding the spread of this intelligence was indescribable. Females who heretofore held up their heads as ladies of the first rank in society, lost their personal pride and seemingly self-respect, and might thenceforth be seen with dejected spirits, down cast countenances, shying along, giving the entire sidewalk at the approach of every white, frequently going into the street. Men of position and means had also begun to lose their spirits, and children cowered at the sight of a white child.

Among the restrictions in the new negro laws, the blacks, without regard to age or sex, were compelled to salute all white children, by the appellation of 'master' and 'mistress.' Though the people generally despaired, their leaders were firm; and the maltreatment of one of the ablest and best men among them had well nigh cost the whites in exchange for the proud edifices of their extensive city, a smouldering heap of ruins. Succeeding this despair there was a reaction. A new vigor seemed ever to actuate, and a new impulse given to these faithful men and women determined to be free.

'I will never submit—I will never submit to the base and degrading restrictions! I'll die first!' indignantly exclaimed Madam Montego as she sat with other ladies at the bedside of the disabled and suffering Placido.

We will not,' replied Madam Carmino; 'we are Creoles, and take our people generally, are the most numerous part of the population. I don't see why we should be put down by a set of intruders.'

'We will not submit!' added Carolus Blacus; 'this, ladies, you may depend upon.'

'Thank God,' exclaimed Madam Montego, 'there is yet some hope!'

Blake during the whole of these scenes was grave and sober, having nothing to say; Montego was thoughtless with determined look, while Gondolier occasionally gave his head a significant nod to one side which all present comprehended.

That evening the seclusion met in Council against the most intense sensation. The bedside of Placido was visited by every member again and again, with sighs, tears, prayers and expressions of vengeance by Gofer Gondolier who had no scruples in [assuming to himself this particular duty of political dispensation. The Council sat the whole evening, the members dispersing after daylight the next morning.

That day early in the afternoon Ambrosina Cordora the daughter of Madame Montego, and Seraphina Blacus took a promenade through a portion of the Almeda. When in a thronged part of the thoroughfare, Ambrosina accidently came against a lady with whom there was a gentleman. Politely bowing she made acknowledgements for the baulk which the lady acknowledged with a bow and passed on. The man however gave her a rude push with an oath and other hard language.

On returing she passed by a store (a fancy dry goods shop) in which sat the man whom she had encountered with the lady, who proved to be the proprietor of the shop. Snatching up a horsewhip, which seems to have been secured for the purpose, running out and seizing her by the breast of the dress rending it in tatters, he dealt upon her person over the arms, neck, head and face, the most cruel punishment, to the sad disfiguring of her features for the time. Her cries brought no white persons to her relief—the blacks dared not have attempted it.

With the clothes half torn from her person, the distressed young woman made as hasty retreat as possible to her home, rushing into the house, falling upon the neck of her mother with a screech, as that lady sat in the drawing room in conversation with a number of others, just then recounting their sufferings as a class.

'Oh! my God, my God!' screamed the mother, 'what does all this mean?'

'I see it! I see!' exclaimed Madame Sebastian, 'tis but a continuance of the outrages commenced on Placido. Oh gracious Heaven's is there no remedy for this!'

'If this is the way we are to be treated,' said Maggie Blake who was then residing in the Montego family; 'for my own part I would rather be dead at once! oh, must I again become a slave! Is there no mercy in Heaven for us!'

'Oh! this is dreadful, dreadful!' exclaimed Madame Blacus wife of Carolus; 'in God's name what's to become of us!'

'God only knows!' responded Madame Barbosa, throwing herself carelessly upon a sofa.

'Lord have mercy on us!' implored Abyssa Gondolier, clasping her hands, the tears streaming down her cheeks as she looked upon the tattered, torn and abused beautiful girl, still clinging to the neck of her distressed mother. 'Have mercy on'—

'If He dont I will!' interupted Gondolier who just entered in time to catch the exclamation of his wife, he having learned of the outrage previously in the streets.

'I wish I was dead, so I do!' sobbed the poor girl, amidst the most distressing weeping.

'God!'——

'Stop Gondolier, dont blaspheme! Remember upon whom we depend for aid;' interrupted Madame Montego as he stood with eyes fixed upon her maltreated child; 'Offend not Him who gave us being.'

'Thank you Madame for the advice; I wont! All honor and praise be to God! But we have a race of devils to deal with that would make an angel swear. Educated devils that's capable of every thing hellish under the name of religion, law politics social regulations, and the higher civilization; so that the helpless victim be of the black race. Curse them! I hate 'em! Let me into the streets and give me but half a chance and I'll unjoint them faster than ever I did a roast pig for the palace dinner table.'

'Yes, Gondolier, I know your desires; but we must be prudent and use no rashness at such a time as this especially, 'He that killeth with the sword, will be slain with the sword,' remember,' admonished madam Montego.

'Madam Montego, your gospel talking is very good,' replied Gondolier, 'but the same book tells me, 'whosoever sheds man's blood shall his blood be shed.' As they shed the blood of our brother two days ago by dashing him on the pavement, and the blood of our sister here to-day by a horsewhip, I would like to shed theirs with a knife,' replied he.

'We must not exasperate, nor even aggravate the whites,' signor Gondolier,' remarked Madame Barbosa, 'as we must guard against making bad worse.'

'I wish I was a man, I'd lay the city in ashes this night, so I would,' retorted Ambrosina.

'Stop, my child,' admonished the mother, 'if you were a man suited to such an undertaking, you would have better sense than to attempt it at an improper time.'

'Yes, yes, my child, you must think of these things and not desire that which would only precipitate us into more trouble,' added Madame Blacus.

'One thing I do know, if our men do not soon decide on something in our favor, they will soon be called to look upon us in a state of concubinage; for such treatment as this will force every weak minded woman to place herself under the care of those who are able to protect them from personal abuse. If they have no men of their associations who can, they must find those who will!—Oh, my God, the thought is enough to drive me distracted,—I'll destroy myself first!' said Ambrosina, startling every person present.

'You speak rationally, my child, regarding yourself, that is just what white men desire to do, drive colored women as a necessity to seek their protection that they may become the subjects of their lust. Do you die first before thinking of such a thing: and let what might come, before yielding to such degradation as that I would be one of the first to aid in laying the city in ashes!' replied the mother.

'What say you to this, General?' exclaimed Gondolier, pointing at the girl, who renewed her lamentations with those of her mother, as Montego, who hearing of the circumstance had hastened to the mansion and just entered the room.

'By yonder blue heavens, I'll avenge this outrage!' said Montego, embracing the mother and daughter as they sat wailing.

'I thank God, then there is still some hope! My lot is cast with that of my race, whether for weal or woe;' exclaimed Ambrosina, with brightened countenance; when Gondolier, rejoicing as he left the room to spread among the blacks an authentic statement of the outrage:

'Woe be unto those devils of whites, I say!'

---

* A similar circumstance really transpired in Wheeling, Va., between a white man called a "gentleman" and a black man.

GERRIT SMITH TO MONTGOMERY BLAIR.

"OF ONE BLOOD ALL NATIONS." OF EQUAL RIGHTS ALL RACES. "HONOR ALL MEN."

PETERBORO, April 5th, 1862.

HON. M. BLAIR, Postmaster General—Dear Sir: I have read the letter which you sent to the great anti-slavery meeting held in New York 6th last month; and I have read it with the respect due to its distinguished author, and with my ever deep interest in the subjects of which it treats.

You evidently foresee the speedy death of American slavery. It will be as sure as speedy. The nation will not let it live to become the cause of another war. One such reckoning-day for the crime of slaveholding as is this day or horrors will cure us of all disposition to repeat the crime. The punishment which the guilty South and no less guilty North are suffering cannot be forgotten by either. And was there ever a punishment more justly allotted!—more righteously retributive? It falls just where it should, and only where it should. The whites of the two sections are plundering and slaughtering each other; and in neither are the blacks harmed. The South is not aggravating the sorrows of the blacks. The North has ceased to send them into slavery, and is becoming kind to them. The slaves are getting their freedom without fighting for it. The blood of their oppressors, Northern and Southern, instead of their own blood, is purchasing it.

And however expedient it might be, it nevertheless will not be indispensable to build up barriers, statutory, constitutional or other against the return of slavery. It will never come back to curse us. The nation that has tried slavery and abolished it, never recalls it. As they who have had the small-pox do not have it again, so, too, the nation that has had the infinitely more loathsome disease of slavery does not have it again. The British West India planters, although they grumbled at some of the workings of emancipation, had nevertheless no desire for the restoration of slavery.

You are "morally certain" that if the slaves shall be unconditionally freed, they will be massacred. I am greatly astonished that you are. My more favorable views of human nature would not allow the slightest suspicion of such diabolism. And no less astonished am I that your only preventive of the unparalleled crime is for government to fall in with the claims of the guilty and to yield up the rights of the innocent. How unlike are your views of the office of government to those expressed by the noble and lovely Paul! He would have it "a terror to evil doers and a praise to them that do well." But you would have it take sides with the guilty against the innocent. A true government goes for the innocent at whatever expense to the guilty. A true government stands by the least black baby at whatever cost to the millions of men who would wrong it. A true government goes for justice without compromise. But your best proposition is to leave undisturbed the monsters who are whetting their knives, and to save millions of men from those knives only by tearing them from their homes and driving them out of their country. I acknowledge your hope that these millions will go voluntarily. But if it is not your plan that they must go, then I know not why you should have written your letter. The most radical Abolitionists admit, aye, and claim, that they may go. Moreover, you would probably (I would not) call it a voluntary going, however much it might have been induced by their disabilities, deprivations and oppressions at the hands of government.

Government is now, and ever has been, the heaviest curse of earth. But it will be transmuted into its greatest blessing when it shall be driven back from its manifold usurpations to its sole legitimate office of protection. Then it will meddle with the rights of none; but will simply hold a sure and steady shield over the rights of all. Then beneath that shield will the right of all to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" be equally sacred. Then government will have no part in assorting, domesticating or colonizing its subjects; but will leave them to dispose of such matters after their own free choice.

The colonizing of the blacks may be highly expedient; but government has no more to do with it than with their dress or food. If the blacks have an insurmountable dislike of their white neighbors, or of the climate, or government, then let them leave us to go where they please. Hayti, Central America and other countries will invite them and pay much of the expense of their emigration. Their white neighbors will very probably prize the labor of the blacks too highly to consent to pay anything to get rid of them. You and I and other speculatists may have our theories about collecting the whites into the temperate and the blacks into the tropical regions. I confess that I am among those who believe that, were government to allow free play to the laws of nature, the blacks would move toward and the whites from the Equator. But government is not to act upon, nor so much as to take knowledge of these theories. Its one work is to protect those who, for the time being, are its subjects. It is to have no choice of subjects. Whether they become more or less white, red or black, is nothing to it. Should the white men of this nation visit other nations and bring back for their wives negresses and squaws, there would be no power in the government to stop it and no modification of its duties resulting from it

You would have government colonize the blacks to prevent their being murdered by the whites. I apprehend that your assumption of this illegitimate power for government is not your only fault at this point. You would not have the power wielded impartially. Were the case reversed and the blacks to threaten the murder of the whites, not the colonisation of the whites, but the slaughter, if need be, of every black would be your remedy. I much fear that your highest ideal of government is a white man's government. But that is no better than a black man's government. And neither is good for anything. For whether it be the government or the individual that, instead of being ennobled with the soul of manhood, is shrivelled with the spirit of caste, humanity has nothing to hope for from the miserable counterfeit.

You have much to say of the difference of races; and you hold that out of this difference have grown difficult problems for our government to solve. What I have already said shows that, in my opinion, government has nothing to do with such problems. I add, that the less individuals have to do with them the better. The bare entertainment of them begets conceit, arrogance and oppression. What is more, they are not real problems. There is in them nothing to solve—nothing to tax the ingenuity of either government or individuals. What we shall do about the difference between two races is no more a problem than what we shall do about the difference between two stars or two mountains. We are simply to accept the difference and to pass on. An owlish philosophic inquiry into what we shall do about the difference God has made in the skins of different men is not less impertinent than would be such an inquiry into what we shall do about the difference He has ordained between the complexion of the sun and moon. Moreover, that one portion of the human family is essentially inferior to another is probably nothing better than a prejudice. Englishmen were not essentially inferior to Irishmen when long ago Irishmen bought and sold them; and Irishmen are not essentially inferior to Englishmen when now they are oppressed by Englishmen. Changes of circumstances, along with other causes, alternately lift up and depress a people. But their inherent, inborn faculties are neither multiplied nor diminished because developed in one age and undeveloped in another. Africa has contained the pre-eminent seats of learning and power; and in the endless revolutions in human affairs she may again and again contain and cease to contain them. The sooner government shall stop its war upon nature the sooner will these fluctuations become less, and the sooner will the nations begin to approach the same permanent level.

In your eyes the special action of government where there are "two different races in the same community" is a duty. It is its duty, you mean, to prefer one to the other. I would that you could see such special action and such preference to be a crime—and a crime for which God has desolated many nations and is now desolating this.

You justify the "jealousy of caste"—the "jealousy of races," and your proof that it is the product of "the highest wisdom" is that "we conquer and hold our conquests by it." But what is to you proof of its good is to me proof of its bad character. And you commend this jealousy because it protects a superior race from social intercourse with an inferior one. Better such intercourse, however, than to fortify ourselves against it by hatred. At the risk of whatever consequences, we are to love all men and to rejoice at their rising in the social scale! And whilst I dare not admit that to refuse intercourse with any portion of our Common Father's children is sinless, I dare affirm that such intercourse is not to be avoided if it can be avoided only at the expense of ignoring the claims of the human brotherhood and of withholding our love from a portion of it. Whatever else you have learned in the school of Christ, I cannot believe that you learned this jealousy there. Much as you hate slavery, I feel confident that it is to its teachings and influences you are indebted for this jealousy. It is a sad fact that slavery has been a successful teacher of our whole people, and that the damaged characters of even those who hate it prove the universality of its baleful influences. Our hatred of the blacks, notwithstanding you so strangely construe it into an expression of our hatred of slavery, comes, nevertheless, from the teachings and largely also from our love of slavery. In the nature of things, the unrighteousness of hating men cannot stand in connection with the righteousness of hating oppression. Go the world over, and you will no more find the haters of men hating oppression than you find the lovers of men loving it. I confess that the mass of the Southern whites (and there is a great deal of such malignity at the North also) hate the blacks, and I affirm that it is because they hate them that they love to see them sunk in slavery.

Your remark that "the blacks have quickly disappeared when emancipated" can be accounted for only on the supposition that at the moment of making it you inadvertently confounded them with the Indians. All writers are liable to such confusion. It is very true that the Indians diminish rapidly. But it is as true that the negroes do not diminish at all. Whether bond or free, they increase everywhere, if we except instances where, as on sugar plantations, they are from purpose and policy worked to death. They increase in the West India Islands, and in the rigorous climate of Canada. And even in the Northern States, where, by force of cruel laws, both civil and social, they are shut out of respectable employments, places and associations; degraded; driven into the narrowest straits of poverty, and driven into the most waisting vices—they almost everywhere keep up their numbers. And this, too, notwithstanding that at every Census many, under that "bleaching process" which goes steadily on, pass from the black to the white class. I must believe that were the Northern blacks, instead of being crowded into the unhealthiest tenements of our towns, scattered through the rural districts in as large proportion as are the whites, their increase would, in spite of all their disadvantages, fall little short of that of the whites. I would say in this connection that they who argue that the negro's habits of improvidence in slavery hinder his thrift in freedom, argue not against setting him free but in favor of hurrying him out of slavery.

You assume quite too much when you say that the whites hold the lands of the South by title from the Creator. If you mean only that the climate of these lands is more favorable to the whites (though for pro slavery ends the reverse is often insisted on), I am willing to let the assumption pass for what it is worth. But the title to a country growing out of considerations of climate is very far from being the only one. Occupation is a ground of title; and the title is none the weaker if the occupation be compulsory instead of voluntary. The earned title is another; and by this most emphatically does the South belong to the sweat-and-tear and blood-drenched slave. Moreover, there is such a thing as the forfeiture of title to a country; and in all their generations the Southern oppressors have, by turning a free country into a prison and its blessings into curses, repeated their forfeiture of all possible title to it.

Do you ask what is to become of the lands of the South when the war is ended and slavery abolished? I would that these, as well as lands elsewhere, could be disposed of on those great and precious land reform principles, which teach that the right of all to the soil is as equal and sacred as to the light and air. But few, even of the good and intelligent, are as yet up to the level of these principles. The lands of the South will, in the main, continue to be held by the families that now hold them. It will be said that wives and children should not, because their husbands and fathers were rebels, be made homeless. And even the rebels themselves, although they have forfeited both lands and lives, we shall be slow to drive from their homes when we remember our own share of the reponsibility for the rebellion. Parents, who give wine to their children until they are so intoxicated as to kick the table over, are hardly the right persons to punish them for their uncontrollable feet. And we, who have fostered slavery, until slaveholders could no longer contain themselves, are in hardly a suitable relation to punish them very severely for their outbreaking insanity. [illegible] rebellion we must put down. But all the time we are putting it down we should be holding ourselves largely responsible for it and condemning ourselves quite as emphatically as we condemn the traitors. Slavery made them traitors; and we were so [illegible] and cruel as to sustain slavery. [illegible] believe that anything else than slavery [illegible] or did or could prompt the rebellion is evidence of the last degree of prejudice and foolishness. No free States [illegible] and every slave State [illegible] excepted, would have [illegible] fear of free States [illegible] the avowed purpose of [illegible] make slavery the corner-stone [illegible] nation. And what [illegible] that nothing short of the [illegible] erance, imperiousness and [illegible] generated in an [illegible] slaveholding could have sufficed to urge the men to the point of this wild and guilty rebellion.

I said that we must put down this rebellion. God teach our rulers how to do it! They are impoverishing the nation, and sacrificing scores of thousands of lives, [illegible] but too probably, all in vain. Very [illegible] and very easy is the way to put it down, and, to put it down surely, and so that it will stay down. Very plain is it too, [illegible] our rulers are as yet too blind to see it. Simply take slavery from the hands of the rebels, and the rebellion is ended [illegible] entirely and forever. It is, however, immeasurably important both to them and to us, that it be taken in the right spirit. It must be taken, not vindictively, not with self-complacency and with pharisaical righteousness, but in penitence and pity. We are to take slavery from the hands of the rebels as the reasonable parent takes the knife which, with false indulgence, he had given to his child. He is more disposed to blame himself than to punish the child for the cutting of the furniture and fingers. Conquered the rebels must be in mercy to themselves. Conquered they must be that the country may be saved. Conquered they must be that a rebellion, which is the most horrible pro-slavery piracy, may be adequately abhorred, and that civil government may be adequately vindicated and honored. But it is not for us to magnify their crime and invoke its severest punishment. Their pro-slavery is not half so guilty as ours. Theirs falls in with their education. Our education forbids ours. Theirs comes of mighty temptation. Ours has nothing better to feed on than the poor scraps which pro-slavery merchants and manufacturers, politicians and priests, throw out to it. There are many among us who are wont to say that we cannot forgive such men as Davis, and Stephens, and Mason, and Slidell. Punished they should be—though not excessively. But when we come to the point of forgiveness, the question which should most engage us is, what we, the great sinners, shall do in order that we may be able to forgive ourselves. There is one thing, and only one thing, to do, to this end,—and that is, to take from the hands of the slaveholders the slavery which we have strengthened in their hands. This done—this mercy rendered to the slaveholders, the slaves and ourselves—and we shall then be at peace with ourselves, or, in other words, shall have forgiven ourselves. Talk of our inability to forgive rebels! Why, every Northern editor who continues to cry against the Abolitionists, or, in other words, to cry for slavery, and every Northern preacher who preaches prudence on the slavery question, and every Northern member of Congress who stands in the way of making an instant and clean sweep of slavery, is in important respects, a far guiltier upholder of the rebellion than is the worst rebel who was born and bred under Southern influences.

Could I have my wish, [illegible]

[illegible]

though with damage here and there from its bolts, is nevertheless a messenger of health, so will the war, in purifying the moral and political atmosphere, bring us some recompense for our frightful sacrifices in it.

Will the illiterate and ignorant blacks of the South be allowed to vote? Not unless the illiterate and ignorant whites are. There will be no bounty on a black skin. Qualifications for voting, and in short for all political and civil rights will, I trust, be at the South as in the British West Indies, entirely irrespective of complexion.

Alas, that the question was ever raised: "What shall government do with the blacks at the close of the war?" Because of our ignorance and prejudice we have entertained it, and been embarrassed by it. Nothing so much as this question has kept and still keeps us from prosecuting the war unconditionally and thoroughly, and therefore to a speedy and triumphant result. I admit that our leading men are concerned to have the rebellion put down. Far greater, however, is the concern of a large share of them to have the slaves continued in their chains or colonized. To these the ending of the rebellion, if it is to be also the lifting up of five millions of blacks into fellow-citizens, would be no joyful prospect.

Pardon me, dear sir, for expressing regret that you sent such a letter to the New York meeting. I readily admit that most of our statesmen would not have written a better one. They would have written a worse one at some points. But I believed that you would be able to rise in this crisis above vulgar statesmanship, and contrast yourself honorably and beautifully with its prejudice, narrowness and superstition. I did not suspect that, in answer to the thunder calls for the abolition of the crime of crimes, you, too, would be found proposing conditions. I had counted confidently on your readiness to have slavery struck down by the war power. I should even have hoped that, for a piracy, and that too the superlative one, you would be found to hold that there is no law, and can be no law. I could not doubt that, in your eyes, no race of men is "common or unclean"; and that even in the one which has been more bruised and battered than any other by its unnatural brethren, you would discern, aye, and gratefully and joyfully, the image of the Common Father.

I am disappointed in you. I am disappointed in many. Nevertheless, I do not despair of the nation. It will come out of the "seven times more heated" furnace of this war freed from much dross. It will come out of it not to be still shamed by the world for a sham and pro slavery democracy, but to win the world's admiration of the beautiful and glorious first fruits of a genuine and anti-slavery democracy. Degraded and trampled-on men will be lifted up by this war, and will for the first time be invested with sacredness and held in honor. Their better-conditioned brethren will receive them into fellowship, and will henceforth talk less about inferier races and be less disposed to argue an essential and permanent inferiority from a circumstantial and transient one.

"It's comin yet for a' that,
That man to man the warld o'er
Shall brothers be for a' that."

Men will yet consent to dwell with men. Preposterous is the hope that, before they do, "The Tabernacle of God shall be with men and He will dwell with them, and they shall be His people, and God himself shall be with them and be their God." That men consent to dwell with men will ever be the highest proof that God dwells with them. As the harmony of mankind is the most persuasive prayer for the descent of the Spirit, so is it also the surest evidence that the prayer is heard, and that the Spirit has descended. As the recognition of their entire brotherhood is what God most loves in His children, so is the recognition the surest evidence that He dwells with them and in them.

I do not choose words too strong to express my emotions when I say I am alarmed and distressed at the multiplying indications that a political Caste-Colonization Party is in process of organization, and that gentlemen of the high standing and anti slavery antecedents of yourself and Senator Doolittle are favoring it. It will, from the first, act in concert with, and will probably soon become openly one with, that portion of the Democratic party which its pro-slavery leaders are now at work to rally. Such a colonization party is distinguishable in name only, and not at all in effect, from an open pro-slavery party. The unconditional patriots in the Democratic as well as the Republican party feel that the present is emphatically no time for such work. Until the war which threatens the life of the country is ended, they will have no part in building up the Democratic or Republican or any other party. Until then their one work will be to save the country.

I deprecate this nascent colonization party, not because I fear its success. When slavery shall be abolished (and we are on the eve of its abolition), the party will die. Hatred of the blacks, which is the pabulum and soul of the party, gets all its life and virus from slavery. Slavery dead, and the desire to colonize the blacks would also be dead. You and Senator Doolittle would find no more sympathy with your scheme. Nay, you would yourselves have no more sympathy with it. And if slavery shall live, even the slaveholders will not consent on any terms to the colonization of the mass of the blacks, either those in or those out of slavery. They will, as were the slaveholders of Maryland, be found valuing the labor of black men too highly to consent to their expulsion from the country. Nor do I deprecate the party because the first actual attempt to drive five millions of useful innocent people out of the nation would begin a war of races in which the dozen millions of blacks in this hemisphere and the whole civilized world in addition would be against us. For there will never be this first actual attempt. When the time for it shall have come the daring and the disposition will both be lacking.

It is for other reasons that I deprecate this colonization movement. Its tendency will be to hold back the government from striking at the cause of the war; and to produce hesitation, diversion, compromise, at a moment when the salvation of the country calls for blows, immediate, united, and where, at whatever damage to whatever other interest, they will fall most effectively. Not its least lamentable tendency is to foster in the American people that mean pride of race and that murderous spirit of caste by which they have outraged and crushed so many millions, and for which they are now, in the righteous providence of God, called to an account so appalling.

I am, dear sir, respectfully yours,

GERRIT SMITH.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, APRIL 26, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

COLORED INVENTORS, ARTISTS, MECHANICS, ETC. are earnestly requested to lose no time in getting their articles ready for the NATIONAL EXHIBITION of ANGLO-AFRICAN INDUSTRY and ART, which will positively be held in this city or Brooklyn in the early part of the ensuing fall.—All communications in relation to said Exhibition may be addressed for the present to this office.

GERRIT SMITH'S LETTER.

We trust that none of our friends will fail to read the letter of Gerrit Smith to Postmaster General Blair, which we publish in this issue. It will bear a careful and studious perusal: it is full of good things, well said, and most pertinent to the present state of the public mind. The revolution in public opinion is advancing more rapidly than our arms in the field, yet this revolution requires, under God, the careful, earnest and skilful direction of the best minds in the country—minds which will not knock at the door of the present, for gold lace and plumes and batons, but which will be decorated in the good time coming with the deathless laurels ever due to those true to humanity and to sweet human brotherhood.

Of the two great revolutions in this land, that of '76 tried men's bodies, the present tries men's souls. To-day lays its hand upon a man, and in a twinkling he stands bared, that all may see what manner of man he is. Such sharply defined developments of character stand out in the noon day's sun as the ken of mortal never discovered before. There stand Lincoln, McClellan and Stone and Banks and Seward and Blair and Halleck and Davis and Beauregard, so cleanly cut that all men know them well and thoroughly, and they may be said to enjoy while living the very sight of their post-humous character. They are like men looking at their own ghosts. If there be anything in a man these times bring it out: if men have had reputations beyond their deserts, the cheat is exposed at once and promptly. We have thus far in the present revolution no great man in the field, and but two, perhaps, only one, in the nation — Gerrit Smith or Abraham Lincoln, which?

Of the prominent friends of freedom, Garrison does not seem rightly to get the hang of things; like Grant at Pittsburgh Landing, of undoubted bravery and pluck he is taken by surprise. Wendell Phillips turns up a brilliant cavalry officer, a very Murat in the thickest of the fight, his white plume waving wherever the fight is thickest, a host in himself, charging through and through the foe—he startles and astonishes with his brilliant daring, but he lacks the commanding mind in the present struggle.

The glance of Gerrit Smith flashes over the whole field of conflict, sees everything, knows everything, and from the quiet of his closet in Petersboro' marshalls the hosts.

"Strengthening the weak and trampling on the strong;"

with a lordly power which we, of to-day, scarcely understand. Long years of deep and ardent study, long habits of closely Bible-ward reflection, a heart full of instructive nobility and of human love, and a habit of trying events and opinions by certain thoroughly thought out general principles, together with a wonderful alertness of faculty, have prepared him for just such a crisis. A year and more before this speck of rebellion had dotted the clear sky, he said, with prophetic foreboding, "I am sad to think that slavery must go down in blood." And when the rebellion came, and when the great uprising occurred, and the nation veered Anti-Slavery-ward: when Garrison and Phillips recanted their long avowed disunion sentiments, Gerrit Smith had no sentiment to disavow, his principles, more deeply founded, were adequate for this unlooked for occasion. Keenly perceiving at once the real character of Lincoln he avowed confidence in him, and lent him—worthily as it now seems—the aid and comfort of his great name and pure character. In some of the early letters, on the rebellion, written by Mr. Smith, there were some things said, which we doubted, some hopes uttered, in which we could not participate. We now frankly admit that in all these things, or nearly all, his vision was correct, and we therefore feel a confident joy in some of the jubilant announcements contained in the letter which we copy to-day.

The most remarkable matter in this letter is a certain radical democracy—a democracy of the peoples—which in the coming time will be appealed to and relied upon as the sayings of Thomas Jefferson have been respected during the last half century. And this democracy is as much nobler and purer than Jefferson's as the character of the man of Peterboro' is nobler and purer than that of the Sage of Monticello. The letter is especially rich in those views of the nature of Civil Government to which Gerrit Smith has given so much consideration, and on which will mostly rest his fame. We especially honor this letter for its very thorough uprooting of the foundations on which emigration, colonization and a certain "nationality" purport to rest. He says:

"I much fear that your highest ideal of government is a white man's government. But that is no better than a black man's government. And neither is good for anything. For whether it be the government or the individual that, instead of being ennobled with the soul of manhood, is shrivelled with the spirit of caste, humanity has nothing to hope from the miserable counterfeit."

To which we say, a thousand times, "AMEN!"

Again, hear Gerret Smith:

"You have much to say of the difference of races: and you hold that out of this difference have grown difficult problems for our government to solve. What I have already said shows that, in my opinion, government has nothing to do with such problems. I add that the less individuals have to do with them the better. The bare entertainment of them begets conceit, arrogance and oppression."

While we shout Amen! to this also we call especial attention to both sentiments on the part of the General Agent of the Haytian Bureau, and of the Commissioners and coming President of Liberia, who are bent on the un-heavenly mission of pampering our national caste-hate (of course they are too disinterested to be governed by the dollar view of the question) by proposing, on favorable terms, to aid in the expatriation of American citizens for no crime but color. We have heard it whispered that some of our brethren of the weaker sort have in view the project of a public welcome to President Benson, of Liberia: we recommend them to include in the ceremonies a welcome of R. R. Gurley, Mr. Latrobe, Mr. Pinney, and—a bust of Henry Clay: for if "colonization," as we understand it, be cruel and unrighteous in principle, it cannot be made innocent and hallowed, by the mere advocacy of black men.

We have not room for further comment on this letter. There is one sentiment in it which we advise our young men to commit to memory. It contains a noble principle, one which will warm and inspirit them in whatever struggles against oppression it may be their lot to bear: it contains also a glorious prophecy which they will live to see fulfilled. Hear it—remember it.

"Men will yet consent to dwell with men. Preposterous is the hope that before they do, "The tabernacle of God shall be with men and He will dwell with them, and they shall be His people, and God himself shall be with them and be their God." That men consent to dwell with men will ever be the highest proof that God dwells with them. As the harmony of mankind is the most persuasive prayer for the descent of his Spirit, so is it also the surest evidence that the prayer is heard, and that the Spirit has descended. As the recognition of the entire brotherhood is what God most loves in His children, so is the recognition the surest evidence that He dwells with them and in them."

THE LESSON OF PITTSBURGH LANDING.—The shameful surprise and almost defeat of our troops at Pittsburgh Landing is the best and bitterest comment on General Halleck's order to exclude, drive out from, and forbid the admission of fugitive slaves within the federal lines. Had the black loyalists had free access to the Union lines they would have given such early and positive information of the advance of Beauregard and Johnson as would have given another issue to the fight on the first day, and would have crushed out rebellion in the Southwest.

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

HOOKER'S DIVISION,
Before Yorktown, April
19th, 1862.

MR. EDITOR: On the 17th inst. our division was thrown out to the extreme front and within pistol shot of Gen. McClellan's headquarters. We keep the rebels in continual alarm. They dare scarcely show themselves above the ramparts of their entrenchments. The preparations of Gen. McClellan are progressing with marvelous rapidity. On the 17th about 5 o'clock in the afternoon the enemy threw a shell into our lines while Lieut. Wagner of the Engineer corps was just finishing a sketch of their works, which exploded with terrible effect, killing private Barrier of the 57th Penn. Volunteers; fatally wounding Jerry Luther of the 2nd. Rhode Island; shattering the left arm of Lieut. Wagner, and slightly wounding three others. The chart was spread out upon a table, the group standing around. When Dr. Mintzer rode over to the Lieut. he politely waived his right hand and facetiously remarked "Doctor, I have met with a little accident," and conversed with the officers until his arm was amputated which was skillfully done by Dr. Judson of Gen. Nagel's staff and Mintzer of 26th Penn. Vols. Lieut. Wagner says he is willing to use the other arm in the service of his country*. Luther still lives. When the Doctor asked him whether he had any message to send to his mother, he gave a comrade a peice of shell which he himself had taken from his own bowels to be sent to her, and requesting that his dead body be forwarded to her. The Doctor asked him whether he was married—he answered "Nary time." His left arm was amputated this morning by Dr. Mintzer.

We took a walk out to the extreme outposts yesterday afternoon to see our artillerymen stir the rebels up. They threw sundry shell after them scattering them like frightened sheep. They returned the compliment. Their skirmishes drove us away, which turned out to be quite fortunate for our physical comfort for the rebels had just got our range and sent an iron missile which struck the very spot where we stood but a minute before. At the time it struck Genl. Nagel and his aid were riding within fifteen paces of that spot.

We heard heavy firing on our left last evening; I could not learn the particulars of it. It is supposed that the rebels attempted a sortie upon our approaches. In less time than I have occupied in penning these three lines this vast army was under arms and ready for mortal combat.

G. E. S.

* Lieut. Wagner has since died of his wounds. [Ed.]

LETTER FROM REV. M. FRENCH.

BEAUFORT, S. C., March 31, '62.

MR. HAMILTON—Dear Sir: The ladies desire me to say, through you, to the friends in New York, who, by a festival, raised means to send so valuable a box of unmade goods, as well as many garments, valued at about two hundred and thirty dollars, to their colored friends here now so much in want of these things, that they have distributed the garments to the needy, and the unmade goods are being manufactured in the Industrial School, which now numbers between seventy and eighty. The address of the donors was read to the members of the school, which is under the care ef Miss Curtis, of New York, and Mrs. Hale, of Boston. It was cheering indeed to these afflicted and crushed ones to find such sympathy and substantial aid from those of their own race. We have spared no pains to relieve them, to instruct them, to inspire them with a holy, undying zeal and determination, to elevate and qualify themselves for freedom and self-support. All our efforts seem to be appreciated, and improvement is manifest in many respects. We fully believe God stands between them and future servitude. We are introducing all possible reforms and improvements. The military co-operate with us. Sunlight seems to have broken in upon this thick darkness, and at some future day their children or childrens' children will see meridian day.

A thousand laborers could find work in this field. The ladies who came with me (eighteen) are all at work. Their mission is of vast importance to the housekeepers, the wives, mothers and daughters. I trust the day is not far distant when the last bond will be broken, the last captive set free. It is a marvel to me that so many, even of God's own children, eminent for holy communion with him, should have been permitted to suffer on so long and so intensely. But the revelations of this iron system will now be made to its own destruction. I trust the friends of this people, everywhere, will now work while God gives them opportunity.

Some two hundred plantations are now superintended, and a thousand or more men, women and children are now being taught in our schools.

Yours truly, M. FRENCH,
Agent National Freedmens' Rel. Asso.

P. S.—The box of goods from the ladies of the 15th Street Church was carefully distributed by Mrs. Nicholson. M. F.

EMANCIPATION IN WASHINGTON.

A correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune writing from Washington under date of April 13th states:

"In anticipation of the liberty-day that seems so near to them, the slaves all over the city, and the free negroes, who are connected with them by the ties of kindred and sympathy, are dressed in their best to-day (many of them in their seedy best, to be sure), and are assembled to celebrate this Sabbath as a day of praise and thanksgiving. I have talked with several "candidates" this evening, from whom I gather that this "Thanksgiving Day" has been kept joyously in nearly all of their seventeen churches. There seems to have been preconcert among them, and the afternoon was devoted to love feasts.

I attended the Bethel Church, near the Capitol, this morning. The black clergyman preached a very good sermon from the text, 'If God be for us, who can be against us?' to an audience of 200 or 300 of his own people.

He spoke of the deliverance of Moses and the children of Israel from bondage; and by a natural transition, referred to the condition of the slaves in America, and especially in this District. He thanked the Lord most fervently that he had been permitted to live to see this day; 43 years ago he was tarred and feathered in Washington because he would preach the Lord Jesus as he understood it! 'but now,' shouted the sable speaker, 'let Ethiopia lift up her hands to God, for a great good is coming out of this war!—a good for me, for us, and for our people whom every nation has set its heel upon!' His audience was boisterously joyous, from the beginning to the end of the discourse. Of course, the expressions and demonstrations were extravagant—true to the quick fancy and fervent hearts of the race. Some rubbed their hands in glee, some laughed outright, some leaped up in the air or twisted themselves into grotesque attitudes, as if their joy was too intense to be entertained at a staid perpendicular; many shouted 'Glory to God!' 'Hallelulah!' 'Amen!' 'The blessed day has come!' &c; while nearly all were in tears. When the speaker thanked the Lord that the slaves were to be free, the jubilee became utterly indescribable. What a Babel of triumphant voices! An old 'aunt,' off in the right hand upper corner, shouted and wept persistently. Probably she had a reason for it, I thought—perhaps two or three of them, helpless, and in the hands of the kidnappers. 'Glory to God!' said the preacher, solemnly and slowly. 'Glory to Lovejoy!' yelled a voice at the right that belonged to a strongly built mulatto. 'No,' commanded the speaker instantly, 'I tell you glory to God!' for he seemed determined from the first word that God should have the undivided praise, refusing to give a moiety to the President or Congress. A pair of hands clenched spasmodically the top of the seat in which I was sitting. I looked back and the man was hopping up and down, as if he had just caught a glimpse of heaven, and presently interrupted the speaker by trying to sing, 'I am bound for the land of Canaan.' His face bore a deep scar across the nose, and tears were streaming from the long furrows of his cheeks. He had seen [illegible] years, perhaps, and the light gray rags that he [illegible]ered about him told me that he had 'come out of the house of bondage.' Most of the hearers were partly white; many were mulattoes, quadroons, octoroons—and one or two women, I imagined, would attract attention, for their good looks, in Broadway. But what a day of sunshine it was to the stricken souls! They seemed to think little of the kidnapper; they were full of hope and looked ahead. Such a chorus of exultation I never heard before; such joyful gestures I never beheld—it was a spectacle for men and angels.

God grant that the hour of deliverance be near. W. A. C.

A SUPPOSED FULFILMENT OF THE APOCALYPSE.

It is generally believed that that book, of the New Testament, called Revelation, or Apocalypse, contains a prophetic history of the great events, which would transpire in the church, and in the World, from the Apostolic times, until 'the consummation of all things'. Now if this be so, it is more than probable that the remarkable occurrences, now taking place, in this country, are recorded in this wonderful book.

I make no pretensions to theological lore, yet, I think, we have evidence to conclude, that the history of these times, is contained in the eighteenth chapter; and, in order to trace the resemblance, it will be necessary to transcribe a portion of it. The language is highly figurative; and although "Babylon" is generally thought, by commentators, to signify Papal Rome, any other gigantic system of iniquity, may likewise be signified.

The chapter begins as follows:—"And after these things, I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power, and the earth was lightened with his glory. And he cried mightily, with a strong voice, saying Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird." Now, this appears to be a vivid picture of the Southern States at the present time. And might not the system of slavery be represented under the figure of Babylon the great, the mother of Harlots? The tree is known by its fruit. Slavery is a system of harlotry! the sanctity of the marriage relation is entirely ignored; and it is no unfrequent occurrence, for slaveholders to sell their own children! At an anti-slavery anniversary, held in the City of New York, more than twenty years ago, I heard a talented young man, from Lane Seminary,—who was raised in one of the slave States, and the son of a slaveholder—make a statement, to the effect, that "every slave kitchen was a brothel."

But, let us pass on to the 11th verse, where we will find other features of resemblance:—"And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her; for no man buyeth their merchandise any more;" (How many merchants are now weeping and howling for lack of Southern Trade) "the merchandise of gold, and silver, and precious stones, and of pearls, and fine linen, and purple and silk, and scarlet, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and slaves, and souls of men." (Now, are not these recognized as articles of traffic in the Southern market?) "And the fruits that thy soul lusted after, are departed from thee, and thou shalt find no more at all. The merchants, of these things, which were made rich by her, shall stand afar off for the fear of her torment, weeping and wailing, and saying Alas! alas, ! for in one hour so great riches is come to naught." (How rapidly is the wealth of the slaveholders vanishing away!) "And every shipmaster, and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea, stood afar off." (Does not this signify the blockading of the ports!) verse 21st. "And a mighty angel took up a stone, like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying 'Thus with violence, shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all.'" So may this monstrous system of iniquity perish! and let all the friends of humanity say Amen.

GONE HOME.

We are pleased to announce that our friend Jos. C. Bustill, of Pennsylvania, has returned to his home. Our readers will recollect this gentleman was to have headed a colony from Harrisburgh to Hayti, this spring, but Mr. Edmund C. Molson, from Hayti, having arrived in Harrisburgh in time to scatter the "regiment of coffee growers" which "Col." Bustill was to command, that gentleman concluded to "go it" alone; but after reaching this city and gaining certain information he very wisely determined to stay at home. So much for the "Colonel's" reconnoisance of the "Bureau." Let other commanders follow his example.

A MERRIMAC AMONG THE EMIGRATIONISTS.—We announced several weeks ago, the return of Mr. Edward B. Molson of Lewistown Pa. from Hayti. On his arrival at home he immediately set himself to work informing parties purposing going to that country of the true state of affairs there, and in a few hours he was so successful in turning the tide that scarcely a solitary individual could be found but that had come to the conclusion to remain at home. In the language of oun informant "he has completely killed the movement in Pennsylvania."

RETURNING FROM HAYTI.

The brig King Brothers arrived here last Tuesday from Port au Prince. She brought as passengers Mrs. Ann S. Scantlen, Moses Jones, J. P. Williams and M. Alexander. Mr. Williams left Marysville, Cal., in company with his wife, last fall, for Hayti, reaching there at a cost of over seven hundred dollars, and where subsequently Mrs. Williams died. Elsewhere in our columns will be found a communication of Mr. Williams to his friends in California. Mr. Jones is of the neighborhood of Towanda, Penn., and left this city last November with the Oberlin colony, of which Mr. N. B. Harris was leader. He reports much suffering among that colony, and names among the survivors who are desirous of returning to this country, but cannot until they purchase their freedom of the Haytian Government, Messrs. N. B. Harris, Armstrong, K. W. Simmons and family, Fras. Cordin and family, and the family of Zech. Cordin, who reached here several weeks ago. Mr. Jones gave the name also of Mr. Jos. Purvis, of Philadelphia. He charges the Haytian Government with extorting from him an extravagant board bill for miserable fare, and says he was unfairly dealt by on his passage out.

Mr. Jones returned to his friends in Pennsylvania last Friday determined to do all that he could to break down the damnable scheme.

MR. J. P. WILLIAMS TO HIS CALIFORNIA FRIENDS.

DEAR FRIENDS.—On my departure from California for Hayti, I promised that I would furnish you with all the information that I could gather in regard to that country and keep you advised of the working of the emigration scheme, then, apparently, going on smoothly. Owing to the great difficulty in transmitting letters to points much nearer than California, I made up my mind that it would be useless to attempt a correspondence with you, consequently my promise was not fulfilled. However, I will now endeavor to make amends for my delinquency by furnishing you with a brief statement of my experience in that island, although it may come too late to reach some who had determined to go there, and perhaps have already gone.

I left, with my wife, San Francisco for Panama, arriving there Oct. 21st, crossed the Isthmus to Aspinwall, from which place I started for St. Thomas, Oct. 22d. After spending a short time there, we left for Kingston, Jamaica, remaining in that city about three weeks. From Kingston we again sailed for Port au Prince, arriving there Dec. 19th. On our arrival in said city, we took board with a private family, but after being there a short time my wife discovered among the occupants of the emigrant house a number of persons with whom she was acquainted when in America, and who prevailed on her to change our quarters. On the 30th of Jan., I was attacked with the fever, as was my wife a few days subsequent. After an illness of thirteen days she died, Feb, 14th, and so sick was I at the time, that I was not cognizant of the hour she expired, although lying alongside of her. I continued ill, but recovered sufficiently to take passage in a vessel for New York, leaving Port au Prince on the 3d of April, arriving here on the 18th inst., much shattered physically and pecuniarily.

My opinion in regard to the country is that it is not the place for the colored American to emigrate to, for many reasons: the danger attending the acclimating process; the difficulty in cultivating the land from the want of water; the distasteful and disgusting habits of the people; the opposition of the Haytian laboring classes to immigration from this country, are a few of them. It is said by many that the fever has no terror if the laws of health are strictly attended to; this may be the rule, but to it I saw many exceptions. Many have thought that the wrong course in regard to labor has been pursued. While there I saw three colored men from Canada, Messrs. Geo. Cary, Morris and Brady, who had gone to Hayti for the purpose of showing the other emigrants what could be done by industry and good management. They succeeded in getting employment at cutting cane on the Presidents' plantation for which labor they wanted fifty cents a day but were given so much per task. After laboring three weeks during which period, Cary died, the surviving two received as compensation for the whole labor performed, forty six Haytien dollars or about three and a half dollars in our currency. These men when I left were watching an opportunity to escape from the Island, as were hundreds of others.

When space and time allows you shall hear further from me on this subject.

J. P. WILLIAMS.

THE ARTIST MR. WM. H. DORSEY.

MR. EDITOR.—Merit should always receive applause and commendation. So acting on this principle I shall not refrain from carrying it out as far as concerns Mr. William H. Dorsey, of Philadelphia. Mr. Dorsey seems peculiarly happy in having chosen as his department of art, painting in water colors—a department of art requiring not only an inventive genius, but an acute perception of nature in all her varied beauty I have before me now, as I write, two most [illegible] gems of his production; one a winter scene in Germany, the other a landscape showing a portion of a temple in ruins ([illegible].) In the beauty of landscape and minute description of natural reality they are undisputed triumphs.

One who has begun a career so brilliantly, who when young excels in so eminent a degree, will not, most assuredly, disappoint any expectations we may form of his future excellence.

In all his paintings he has mastered with surprising ability that greatest difficulty of landscape painting, viz: a true representation of the skies. Success to one who has so great an ability to achieve a brilliant renown and an uneviable enjoyment of that renown when obtained. CRITIC.

Washington, D. C., April 18th, 1862.

RELIGIOUS REJOICING OVER THE EMANCIPATION ACT AT SHILOH CHURCH.

A crowded audience was assembled at Shiloh Church on Sunday evening last, to participate in thanksgiving exercises for the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia. The Rev. Henry Highland Garnet took his text from 1Sam. iii, 3. After a brief scriptural elucidation, the providential dispensations within our present political difficulties, were considered. The forced contact of our northern men with southern rebels was fast educating them to abolition principles. But shortly since, regiments of men representing the most rabid pro-slavery sentiment, passed through our streets to the seat of war. Their experience in the tobacco manufactories wonderfully changed their sentiments and made of them the most ultra emancipationists.

Considering the colonization clause of the Emancipation Act, he pronounced it the most ridiculous idea of the times to suppose that men who had watered their native soil with the sweat of their unpaid labor should not cling to its beauties and taste its benefits when freedom came.

A beautiful peroration was delivered to the apostles of liberty, Clarkson, Wilberforce, Theo. S. Wright, David Ruggles, and John Brown, which, although on the Sabbath, elicited uncontrollable applause.

The pulpit was draped in the ample folds of an American flag, as was also the choir. At the close of the exercises Mr. Garnet recommended the erection of a flagstaff and flag upon the church, which suggestion, we learn, the ladies of the church have already commenced acting upon.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE ENTERTAINMENT which was given in Zion Church, as per announcement, on the evening of the 17th inst., was the occasion of a very agreeable reunion. The greatest good feeling and satisfaction seemed to pervade the large company, which was heightened by the excellence of the refreshments provided for the occasion by the efficient committee of ladies having the matter in charge. The pecuniary result of the effort will be found acknowledged elsewhere over the signature of Rev. Moses Manning, pastor of said church, for whose special benefit the entertainment was gotten up.

THE PERFORMANCES OF PROF. KELLIES, THE CELEBRATED AFRICAN WIZARD AND MAGICIAN.—This gentleman gave a series of performances to appreciative audiences on the evenings of the 17th and 18th inst., at the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms, and we feel proud to say that the affair, so far as the exercises were concerned, was a perfect success; and as he will shortly appear again we feel confident that large and admiring audiences will greet him. We will not enter into a general description of the performances, but will note one or two of the principal features of the exercises. We heard many commiserative expressions from different persons in the audience when the young lady who had so kindly loaned her bonnet to the Professor for the exercise of his magic powers, had the mortification of seeing him and his aid tear the bonnet into fragments, light it, burn it up, and throwing part of the ashes in the stove, put the remainder in a small tin can—we shall not attempt to describe the slight of hand movements gone through with by the Professor—but suffice it to say that, after having fired off a pistol in the direction of the tin can, he opened a black wooden box, which had previously contained nothing, to all appearance, and caused a cloud of joy to overspread the countenance of the lady, and a universal feeling of surprise and astonishment to pervade the audience, many of whom had prophesied that "she would have to go home bareheaded," by restoring the identical hat to its owner! We will pass over the wondrous feats performed by the Professor, including the manufacture of "magic ice cream," the hatching of "magic eggs," &c. &c., to the "ribbon manufacture," which together with the treatment the Professor subjected his juvenile aids to, threw the highly delighted audience into ecstacies, until cheer succeeded cheer and roar succeeded roar of laughter. In conclusion, we would say that the audiences who witnessed his two nights performances became thoroughly convinced that Prof. Kellies is all that he professes to be, and that he can do all that he says he can do; and as he intends repeating the exhibition, by the urgent request of many of the persons who had the pleasure of seeing his performances, we bespeak for him an overwhelming audience.

A SURPRISE

On Monday evening last, about fifty ladies and gentlemen, regardless of a raging storm, met in the basement of St. Philip's Church to enjoy the pleasure of a surprise. Invitations had been extended to some of our distinguished clergymen, but the Rev. J. T. Raymond was the only one in attendance. Some of the company had made collections from friends; while others came with their own donations. About 11 o'clock, when everything was in order, a gentleman was dispatched to the residence of the Pastor, Rev. Wm. J. Alston, to secure his presence at the church. The rev. gentleman demurred to going to see the vestrymen on business at that hour, or going at all, as he thought that they could settle their own affairs; but the gentleman would not go without him. Our readers can judge of his surprise when, on entering the room, instead of finding the vestrymen in a business snarl, he found so large a company, whose countenances were radiant with smiles, and whose eyes were beaming with the pleasure which the occasion afforded them.

The speakers appointed by the company were John Peterson, Esq., who made the presentation, and the Rev. John T. Raymond. To say that these gentlemen fulfilled the desires of the assembly in the performance of the parts assigned them, is superfluous. The Rev. Mr. Alston attempted a reply, but we must say that he was not very eloquent in words; whether his tears were any more so we leave our readers to judge. Mr. Alston's wife has been extremely ill, he fearing at one time that he would loose her; he has also been sick. This had exhausted his means, which fact he alluded to in his remarks, and thanked God that He had put it into their hearts to administer to his wants in this the hour of his necessities.

The contributions amounted to $92 in money, a silver cup presented to Mr. A.'s child by a gentleman, and a few groceries.

LETTER FROM NEW HAVEN.

New Haven, Con., April 14th, 1862.

Mr. Editor.—The passage of the bill by Congress abolishing slavery in the District of Columbia has been hailed with no small degree of gladness among our people here; they view it as the raising of one corner of the black mantle of misery that has for many years enveloped the whole country. But at last (thank God, through the noble exertions of those men who feel to do right,) one corner has been detached from its fastenings, and the glorious sunbeams of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness begin to peer in upon a few of the down-trodden sons of Africa. Folks look pleasant once more around here, and are preparing to have a time of rejoicing.

By the way this is not all that they are preparing for. They feel that they have an opportunity to act a noble part toward the freedmen in the South, and through a little exertion have got a committee nearly in working order, and I hope your next issue will contain a full report of the whole organization.

I am also pleased to inform you that our white friends have a committee, working, as I learn, very favorably to the cause, therefore we feel that as men we have a right to work too, as the present state of affairs seems to indicate a great need of all the assistance possible for us to render.

J. G. S.

THE GREAT TRAGEDIAN ALDRIDGE.

The following from a late London paper will no doubt be read with much interest by our readers:

Mr. Ira Aldridge.—We have received further intelligence of the progress of this distinguished actor. Having been successful in Odessa, he fulfilled an engagement at Keshenoff, in Bessarabia, where his reception was of the most enthusiastic character. Mr. Aldridge was feted by the Governor-General, the houses were filled to overflowing at double prices of admission, Mr. Aldridge has been inscribed a life member of the assembly of nobles, and has been presented with a magnificent gold crown of wreath, the names of the donors being inscribed on each leaf. We extract the following tribute from the "Bessarabian Gazette" of the 18th of January last;—At the present moment, at Keshenoff, the undivided attention of the public is directed to Mr. Ira Aldridge and his performances. Every time he performs our theatre is full (at double prices). The public attention is so absorbed by the artist, that they requested him to give a few more performances, and amongst them "King Lear," to which he consented. The Keshenoff public are fully sensible of this favour, and endeavour to show it in every way in their power, by expressing to the talented artist their admiration, love, and consideration. A dinner was given on the 31st December, in the ball room of the assembly of nobles, in honour of Mr. Aldridge; 50 persons assisted at this dinner, amongst them a few artists of our theatre. The dinner was not one distinguished by luxury, but for its hospitable reception of the artist; it was, in fact, more like an agreeable meeting, in which much real sympathy was expressed on both sides. Mr. Aldridge was surrounded by friends met to express with one voice their sympathy and friendship for the greatest talent as an artist that his race ever produced. One of the company, in proposing the health of our valued guest, expressed in a few words all the pleasure, the wonder experienced, on assisting at his performances, and the wish of the whole assembly to show him hospitality, and to divide their bread and salt with him; also the desire of the assembled nobles and others, to commemorate this event by inscribing Mr. Aldridge's name as an honorary life member of the society in assembly. (The next day a letter in due form was received by Mr. Aldridge to the above effect.) He then thanked [illegible] to Mr. Aldridge and expressed a wish that all his race might enjoy freedom and all the rights of a free people. Mr. Aldridge, [illegible] and was deeply affected when reference was made to his race so long oppressed, and the wish expressed that they might enjoy all the privileges of freemen. Tears stopped his utterance when expressing his thanks for this wish, so sincerely expressed in so distant a part of the world.

Mr. Aldridge several times expressed his warm thanks to all around him, and to the directors of the theatre in particular, saying that his visit to Keshenoff will ever remain impressed on his mind as one of the most agreeable events of his life. In conclusion, Mr. Aldridge begged to propose the health of the ladies of Keshenoff, whose bright eyes, directed toward him, had so much contributed to reduce his exertions, consequently to his success, and that it was not possible to refuse their request to play Macbeth again. The dinner given to Mr. Aldridge was remarkable for its simplicity and unostentatiousness; there every class of our society was represented. Many of the Jewish nation, occupying various positions in our town, expressed their warmest sympathy for the illustrious artist. We were much amused by the manner of one of our good citizens, who, not able to speak to Mr. Aldridge to be understood, begged to express his feelings and that of the society by kissing him. In the evening Mr. Aldridge was invited, in the name of the nobles, to assist at a ball at the English Club, where the governor and all of our chief persons were assembled, and, according to custom, they welcomed the new year by drinking each others health in a goblet of champagne.

Grand Emancipation Celebration at the Cooper Institute.—We are pleased to announce that great preparations are now being made for a grand union meeting of the colored people of New York, Brooklyn, Williamsburg, Jersey City, Newark, Elizabethtown, Jamaica, Flushing, Harlem, Paterson, and all other towns in this vicinity, to celebrate appropriately, the emancipation of the capital of our country. All churches headed by their Pastors, and all Lodges, and societies, are to be invited to attend.

Small Pox in Hayti.—Recent letters from that island state that the small pox is raging fearfully among the American emigrants there. It made its appearance first at St. Marks.

The Augsberg Gazette asserts, on reliable authority, that England has succeeded in bringing Spain to her side in the Mexican question, by a promise not to object should Spain take possession of Hayti.

More Trouble Brewing for Hayti.—In the Havana correspondence of the N. Y. Herald we find the following item:

By the last news from St. Domingo it would appear there is trouble brewing between the Spaniards and Haytiens. The former allege that the latter have possession of a portion of frontier territory which does not belong to them, and what follows can easily be divined. The Spaniards have collected a force of about 4,000 men at Azua, who were ready to move forward if the Haytiens did not immediately give up the contested ground. For further particulars see the story of the wolf and the lamb.

Acknowledgement.—The undersigned takes this method of expressing his gratitude to the committee engaged in getting up the entertainment for his especial benefit at Zion Church Williamsburg, on the evening of the 17th inst. and to the public, for the liberality shown on that occasion, manifested in a contribution of forty two dollars in cash.

Rev. Moses Manning,
Pastor of Zion Church, Williamsburg.

Emancipation Rejoicing in Providence.—The people of Providence were jubilant Thursday 17th inst. over the glorious news of Emancipation in the District of Columbia. One hundred guns were fired in honor of the event.

Obituary.—Died, in Waverly, N. Y., at the residence of her mother, April 15th, Miss Elizabeth Holland, of consumption, aged 25 years 9 months and 6 days. Her father and an only brother had passed on some time before her. She alone was left to her widowed mother. She was a young lady of more than ordinary talent and genius; she early exhibited talent and an ambition to acquire an education, in pursuit of which she made rapid advancement. She entered a school for young ladies at Waverly while in pursuit of her education, but was, by a vote of the school, compelled to leave on account of her complexion. After a time her case was again considered, and she was received again into the school, where she made rapid progress in her studies, excelling her class. She ultimately won largely upon the respect of her teachers and class-mates. She subsequently became an agent for the "Pine and Palm," for which her labors were efficient, and she gained much respect. She was also a correspondent of the "Anglo-African;" and has been engaged in lecturing for the improvement, redemption and amelioration of her race, for several years. She leaves a large circle of dear and warm friends who will ever fondly remember her name and labors. It seemed hard for her to leave a lone widowed mother, to struggle on with life's uneven ways; but her confidence was unwavering in the goodness and purposes of an over-ruling, intelligent power that controlls all things for the good of all; and quietly passed away like one who wraps his drapery around him, and then lies quietly down to pleasant dreams, and sleeps the sleep of rest.

Thus has passed away one of Ethiopia's beautiful flowers.

Communicated.

Died.—In this city, of congestion of the bowels, Ida, infant daughter of Wm. M. and [illegible], aged 8 months and 3 days.

[illegible]

Special Notices.

Wonderful! Wonderful! Wonderful!

A GREAT GALA NIGHT OF MAGIC!

PROF. KELLIES,

The unrivalled, and only Anglo-African Magician in the World, begs most respectfully to announce a

Grand Drawing Room Entertainment

of Astonishing Transformations and Illusions, (as presented before QUEEN VICTORIA and the Court at Balmoral Castle, Scotland,)

On Monday Evening, April 28th, at the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms, 178 Prince st.

These Entertainments have been extensively patronized by distinguished Clergymen of all denominations, and universally pronounced by the public and the press to be unequalled. Prof. Kellies will make selections from the most recherche of his experiments, many of which are ENTIRELY NEW. The whole illustrated by novel and gorgeous paraphernalia, manufactured expressly in London and Paris.

Come listen my friends to the truth I impart,
Concerning a Wizard of Wonderful art,
Who plays tricks with spirits, and jokes with young fellows;
And is known o'er the world as the wonderful
KELLIES.

The Extraordinary, Inexplicable,

MYSTIC, MAGIC PROGRAMME,

Will contain a variety of incredible Feats in the Art Magique, among which will be

The Astonishing Handkerchief Feat,
Hydraulic Fountain, or Fun for the little ones,
The Magic Egg Bag, or Novel Egg Hatching,
Enchanted Goblet, or seeing not always believing,
The Sybil Coins,
Wonderful Bottle Delusion, or Brazilian Gold Fish,
Magic Breakfast, or Hot Punch for the million,
The Goblet of Fortune Telling,
Delicious Ice Cream, made as if by Magic,—all FREE.

These feats will appear incredible to the senses, impossible to the eye, and improbable to the imagination. They bewilder the one, delude the other, and defy the whole.

Including Changes, Transformation, Secret Manipulation, Secret Ocular Deception, and Necromantic Illusions, consisting of Dissolution, Re-production, Separation and Re-union of an infinity of objects belonging to the company combining rapidity of motion and its imperceptible effects on the observer,—illustrating the Arts and Mysteries of the Ancient Magicians, Hindoo and Brahmin Astrologers, Egyptian Sorcerers, India Jugglers, and the marvels of the Eastern Magi of old.

Part II.

The Burnt Card Restored,
The Wonderful Book,
Mysterious Ball and Cup,
Mysterious Block,
Chase of Cards,
Magic Cone and Ball,
Enchanted Cards, or Gamblers Played Out,
Magic Balls and Cups,
Egyptian Magical Rings,
Enchanted Glove,
The Ribbon Manufacture,
The Rising Cards,
Enchanted Handkerchief,
The Wonderful Diamond Ball of Worsted.

The whole to conclude with the astonishing feat of the enchanted, or

WYMAN'S GUN TRICK.

Prof. Kellies will allow any person in the audience to load the gun and shoot at him, and he will catch the ball in a mysterious manner.

Doors open at 7 o'clock, Performance to commence at 8.

Admission 15 Cents,

To be had at the door on the evening of the performance.

No postponement on account of the weather.

The African Civilization Society stands adjourned to meet in the 7th Avenue Presbyterian Church, on Monday, April 28, at 8 o'clock P. M.

Henry M. Wilson,
Secretary.

The Third Monthly and Closing

SOIREE AND MUSICAL FESTIVAL

of the

Chelsea Musical Club, on Tuesday Evening, April 29, 1862,

AT CONTINENTAL HALL,

Eighth Avenue, Corner of Thirty-fourth street.

The Orchestra on this occasion will be composed as follows:—Professors A. T. Hardy, 1st Violin, S. Flew, 2d do.—T. Snyder, Contra Basso, R. H. Brown, Cornet.

Admittance 25 Cents.

Jas. H. Woodbrook, Pres.
Jas. E. Seaman, V. Pres.
M. A. Edwards, Sec.
J. E. Jessop, Treas.

The Ball is up!

The Metropolitan

SKATING & DANCING SCHOOL,

BY PROF. HARDY & CO.,

Who beg leave to inform their friends and the public, that they have opened the above School for the accommodation of all who desire to learn the Art of Skating, and enjoy its pleasures [illegible].

A Quadrille band is engaged, and the School will be open every Tuesday Evening during the season. The strictest decorum will be observed.

Admission 20 Cents.

Skating from 8 to 10.—Dancing from 10 to 1.

39 tf.

DEHIEL & CASE,

New Jersey Family Grocery Store,

90 West 30th street,

Between 6th and 7th Avenues, New York.

Butter, Cheese, Lard, Eggs, Teas, Coffees, Sugar, Syrup, Molasses, Salt, and Fresh Meats,—Salt and Smoked Fish,—Foreign and Domestic Fruit and Vegetables,—Soap, Candles, Coals, Wood, Kerosene, Fluid, Whale Oil, &c. &c.

Mrs. E. Dehiel. Miss E. H. Case.

SKATING SCHOOL, AND FANCY AND CIVIC BALL

Will come off at the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms, No. 178 Prince street, on THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 8, 1862.

Mr. A. T. Hardy wishes to inform his friends and patrons that it is his intention to try to make this the gala ball of the season.

Gentlemen will please to understand that no hats or coats will be allowed to lay around the ball room.

Committee of Arrangements—Messrs. Augustus Saunders, Jacob Butler, John Gray, James McQuay, T. Janeway and G. Ball.

Floor Manager, Mr. Benjamin Myers, assisted by competent gentlemen.

Leader of the Orchestra, Mr. A. T. Hardy.

N. B.—Ladies dressing-room is in charge of competent persons.

The bar will be furnished with the best liquors and segars, and the supper-room will be in charge of a well known caterer.

Admission, 25 cents.

The Sunday School Teachers' Union of New York City,

Will hold a FESTIVAL on Monday Evening, April 28th, in the Lecture Room of the Seventh Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Admittance 10 cents.—Children belonging to the School free.

All refreshments for sale.

Short addresses may be expected from Dr. Holton the Pastor, and others. The School will sing some favorite pieces under the direction of Thos. R. Williams, Esq. the teacher.

Benj. F. Fisher, } Superintendents,
Danl. H. Riley, }
Mrs. Charlotte Housman, Directress.

This effort, I believe has the entire confidence of the church and congregation, and we hope that it may be well attended.

H. M. WILSON, Pastor.

LADIES' UNION BAZAAR,

For the Benefit of the

COLORED ORPHAN ASYLUM.

In consideration of the many pressing wants of the Asylum, and the great and constant need of funds to supply those wants the Ladies of New York and Brooklyn have consented to hold a Bazaar, to aid the Managers in their labors of love and charity for the Orphans under their charge.

The object is one which speaks for itself, we therefore deem any further appeal to the sympathies of the people wholly unnecessary.

The Ladies most earnestly solicit the aid of the community in donations of money or goods of any kind.

Contributions may be sent to the directress, Mrs. E. Bastian, or to any of the committee.

OFFICERS.

Mrs. Emeline Bastian, Directress, 189 Thompson st. N. Y. Mrs. Ransom F. Wake, Assistant, 99 Thompson st. N. Y., Mrs. Rev. J. N. Gloucester, Assistant Bridge st., Brooklyn, Mrs. D. Rosselle, Assistant, South Second st., Brooklyn, Mrs. Mrs. J. H. Jackson, Assistant, Sullivan st., N. Y., Miss. F. Tompkins, Secretary, 59 Laurens st., N. Y., Mrs. C. Graham, Asst., Broome st., N. Y. Mrs. W. J. Wilson, Asst., Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, Mrs. C. L. Reason, Treasurer, 118 Laurens st., N. Y.

COMMITTEE.

Mrs. C. Robinson,	N. Y.	Mrs Rv. H. H. Garnet,	N. Y
" Rev. P. Williams,	"	" Margt. Jackson,	"
" R. Rich,	"	" E Stevens,	"
" H. Scott,	"	" P. Van Dyke,	"
" Dr. Smith,	"	" W. Curtis,	"
" C. Fitch,	"	" Lambert,	"
" R. Parker,	"	" E. Symonette,	"
" A. Duncan,	"	" Shadd,	"
" Bowser,	"	" A. Williams,	"
" J. Jenkins,	"	" E. Mann,	"
" J. Bell,	"	" B. Stanley,	"
" J. Peterson,	"	" J. W. Bowers,	"
Miss E. D. Richards,	"	" H. Mars,	"
Mrs. C. Topp,	"	" R. Jackson,	Br'klyn
" F. Guignon,	Br'klyn	" M. Van Stay,	"
" Barnswell,	"	" Hall,	"
" W. Leonard,	"	" J. C. Morell,	"
" Rev. C. Thompson,	"	" Tompkins,	"

PHILADELPHIA AGENCY.

Wm. R. De Cordover, 418 South 7th st. is authorized to receive subscriptions and advertisements for the Anglo-African. All orders left with him will receive prompt attention.

STONE SQUARE LODGE NO. 6, A. Y. M. under the jurisdiction of the M. W. United Grand Lodge of the State of New York, meet every Friday Evening at 8 o'clock, at their Hall 209 Grand st., Williamsburg, Brooklyn, E. D.

J. H. DAVIS, Sec'ry.

HELP WANTED.

At Tilmon's Agency, 70 East 13th st. one door east of 4th Avenue. Farmers and Gardeners with their wives for the country; and young men and boys as waiters and cooks, chambermaids, laundresses, house-workers for city and country.

Also immediately,—a head and second waiter; a head and second cook, and pantry maid for a summer house.—Wages good.

37 tf.

A. ROBERTS,

120 Clinton Court, 8th st., New York, agent for the Weekly Anglo-African. Copies may be had of him at an early hour after its publication.

APARTMENTS to let No. 217 Sullivan street. Inquire on the premises of

E. V. CLARK.

25 4t.

LECTURES AND EXHIBITIONS.

The Subscriber is prepared to Lecture on Phrenology and the Southern Rebellion, before Lyceums and other bodies, or to give exhibitions of John Brown's Raid on Virginia, and the affair in which the hero Tillman figured. My address is Elmira, N. Y. box 270.

34 tf. W. F. JOHNSON.

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

THE FIRST COLORED AMERICAN CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. [illegible], Pastor.

Formerly [illegible] at [illegible] street, now worship at 194 Green St., between Bleecker and Amity streets.

Pastor's residence, No. 18 Green street.

Services.—Expositions of Scripture, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.—Sabbath School at 1½ P. M.—Preaching at 3 o'clock, P. M. and at 7½ P. M.—Prayer-meeting every Friday Evening.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,

REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.

New York—corner of Prince and Marion street near Broadway.

Hours of Worship:—

Prayer-meeting,	10½	A. M.
	3	P. M.
	7½	P. M.

Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock.
Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.
Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,

(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. Wm. J. Alston, Pastor. [illegible] Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence [illegible] Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in St. [illegible] Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—

10½	A. M.
3	P. M.
7½	P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn.

13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

Rev. Eli N. Hall, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:

10½ o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7½ "	P. M.

10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor. Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7½ "	P. M.

12-1y.

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—

3 o'clock,	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

LECTURE every Wednesday evening.

Rev. Chas. H. Thompson, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7½ "	P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. Hall, Pastor. Residence—233 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. John T. Raymond, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Agent for Washington.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

Troy Agency.—Mr. Henry Burke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

MRS. ELIZA LEWIS' SALVE,
ANDERSON'S HAIR RESTORATIVE,
(New London,)
SPANISH OIL, (For the Hair,)
WHITE'S VEGETABLE EXTRACT,
BRANDRETH'S SUGAR COATED PILLS,
For Sale at the
Drug Store 55 West Broadway
12-47

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER
219 Centre Street New York.

LODGINGS. Four Gentlemen can obtain comfortable lodgings by applying to Mrs. Ellen Anderson No. 150 W. 29th street, between 7th and 8th avenues. The house is in a very pleasant part of the city and within half a block of cars and stages.

26 5t.

A. T. HARDY,
MUSICIAN,
109 Thompson street, (near Prince) New York.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER. A Printing Office for $10.

LOWE'S Improved Printing Presses are the Best, Cheapest, most Durable portable Card and Job Presses ever made, and have been awarded Diplomas and silver medals. You will find a press a source of pleasure and profit, by printing for yourself or your neighbors. Many persons are saving and making money by using one at their homes or places of business. A comfortable living may be obtained in any city, town or village, with a small outlay for press and types. The press costs but one-tenth as much as a common job press, and is so simple a boy or girl of twelve can do common and fancy printing with ease. Cards, Bill-Heads, Labels, Receipts, Circulars, &c., can be printed at a trifling expense.

Price of Presses—No. 1, $5; No. 2, $10; No. 3, $15; No. 4, $20. Price of Printing Offices, including press—No. 1, $10; No. 2, $20; No. 3, $30; No. 4, $40. Send for a Circular to the

LOWE PRESS COMPANY,
34tf. 13 Water street, Boston.

NEW HAVEN AGENCY.

Orders or advertisements for this paper left with Rev. J. G. Smith, No. 5 Rose street, will be promptly attended to.

THE FUTURE OF AFRICA.

By Rev. Alexander Crummell, is now ready [illegible] of Church st., between Broadway and [illegible] street. Price one dollar.

APARTMENTS TO LET, with water and waste pipe on the same floor. Apply at 201 Wooster st.

NOW IS THE TIME
To Use Dr. CLARKE'S
SHERRY WINE
BITTERS!!

Composed of

Dock Root,	Wild Cherry,
Sarsaparilla,	Prickly Ash,
Thoroughwort,	Poplar Bark,
Rock Rose,	Rhubarb,
Wintergreen,	Dandelion,
	&c. &c.

For Weakness, Loss of Appetite, Sour Stomach, Jaundice, Headache, Piles of long standing, Humors,

And all Diseases which arise from an unhealthy state of the Stomach, Bowels, and Blood.

PRICE ONLY 25 CENTS A BOTTLE!

For Sale at the office of the Anglo-African, 48 Beekman street.

BOSTON HOUSE

MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of al the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,

BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTING

of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.

Don't Forget,
168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET

Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T. L. JENNINGS successor to Mrs. Ramsey.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
Residence—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tf

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. Forres, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 South Street, N. Y. Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS,
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly Richardson) respectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

MRS E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 Sullivan Street, New York.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.
3tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING

By Mrs. Mary Johnson, 190 West 30th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in a very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies	$2.50
" " Gents,	3.00
Lodging per week,	75

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,
In all its branches—such as
BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, &c.
Residence—126th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.
18 26t

HATS, C[illegible]

[illegible]

THE HORACE WATERS [illegible]

MELODEONS [illegible]

T. Gilbert & Co.'s [illegible]

are the finest [illegible] Also, second-hand pianos [illegible] from $25 to $150. [illegible] and all kinds of Music [illegible] A Pianist in attendance [illegible]

HORACE WATERS, [illegible]

22 13t.

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND
BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with Music at the shortest notice.
MR. GEORGE OTON,
Professor of Music,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish [illegible] all the latest and most fashionable [illegible] hopes by strict attention to business to command a share of the public patronage, by [illegible] number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room [illegible]

Orders may be left with Samuel Flack, [illegible] John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St., and with G. Oton.

18tf

TO LET.—Furnished rooms for gentlemen, with or without board, at 68 Sullivan st.

JOHN H. JACKSON.

TO LET in Williamsburgh to a small family, the upper part of House [illegible] st., containing all the modern improvements, within three minutes walk of all the ferries.

For particulars inquire as above. Possession given immediately.

WORLD'S FAIR AGENCY.—The undersigned are acting as Agents for Merchants and Manufacturers to Exhibit at World's Fair, and to introduce into England, France and other European countries, articles of American Invention, Procuring Patents, making Sales, or in any way promoting their interests.

DEXTER & CO. 17 Spruce st. N. Y.; 86 Milk street, Boston; 149 S. Fourth st., Philad.

1m3ap.

HELP WANTED

At Tilmon's Agency, No. 70 East 13th st., one door East of the 4th Avenue. Spring is here and now is the time. Never was there a greater demand for all first class colored help than now. Remember that this is the oldest and most responsible office in the city for colored help. Situations constantly on hand for both city and country. Terms cash and strict attention paid to business. All persons coming to this city and wishing to save board will do well to call during Office hours, from 7 A. M. to 5 P. M.

31tf L. Tilmon, Proprietor.

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 12t

PLANE St. SELECT SCHOOL.

195 PLANE ST., NEWARK, N. J.

Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, Principal.

The branches taught are Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography and History, Plain Sewing, Ornamental Needlework, Worsted Embroidery and Fancy Knitting.

Piano Forte, Melodeon, and Vocal Music by Prof. John H. O'Fake.

A limited number of Misses between the age of ten and fourteen may be boarded in the house on moderate terms. Healthy location, and a fine yard for exercise.

REFERENCES.

Newark, N. J.

Rev. E. J. Adams, Jefferson [illegible]
Adam Ray, Abner T. [illegible]

Brooklyn.

Rev. J. N. Gloucester.

New York.

Rev. H. M. Wilson, Rev. H. H. Garnet.

All letters may be addressed to Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers, 194 Plane st. Newark N. J.

27 6t.

Elizabeth City, N. J. Feb. 8, 18[illegible]

This is to certify that I heartily approve of the effort of Mrs. Harriet E. Rogers to establish a Select School for young misses. I have been acquainted with her for over twenty-five years and am happy to recommend her and her [illegible] to the patronage of the public in general.

DANIEL H. VANDERVEER,
Pastor of the 1st Colored Pres. Church, [illegible]

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated "[illegible] Patent," equalling in durability [illegible] three of the old style boards, for [illegible] Office of the "Anglo-African," [illegible] cents. Give them a trial.

WANTED IMMEDIATELY [illegible] Agency, 70 East 13th, [illegible] of the 4th Avenue, [illegible] wives, as farmers and gardeners, [illegible] given. [illegible] one required.

26 tf.

APARTMENTS TO LET, [illegible]

[illegible] Avenue, (Harlem) [illegible]

at No. 70 [illegible]

20 4t.

BOARDING [illegible]

[illegible]

Poetry.

CHILDREN.

O how lovely look the children,
As they near my window play;
When I hear their joyous voices,
All my sorrows flit away.
And amidst this smoky city
Sweet refreshing visions come
Of the sky-lark and the sunshine,
And my childhood's happy home.

Toiling, toiling, ever toiling,
'Mid the city's smoke and din,
Long ago my heart has failed me,
Weary of this world of sin;
But the sweet ways of the children,
All their innocence and love,
Bear my thoughts from crafts of worldlings
To the angel choirs above.

For I think how in the old time,
I, who now am all alone,
Since the friends I made in summer
With the summer birds have flown,
Once was, as those joyous children,
With the friends who loved me best,
Press'd unto a mother's bosom,
By a father's hand caress'd.

While these memories crowd upon me,
Like a shower of summer rain,
I exclaim, in silent sorrow—
"Would I were a child again."
And it seems so vain thus wishing,
But a voice within replies—
We shall all again be children
With our Father in the skies.

Let us never handle rudely
Children and their simple mirth,
Lest we break before they blossom
These the golden buds of earth;
For our Lord who so loved children—
He, the gentle and the mild—
Said that they who dwell in heaven
Must be simple as a child.

—J. J. K. in Dublin Nation.

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

Budd's Ferry Md. April 5th, 1862.

Mr. Editor.—After weeks and months of tedious rest and painful suspense we find ourselves at last on the march to meet the enemy. We do not wish to make your readers think that we are anxious to meet death on the battle field that we are pawing here in the muddy vallies of Maryland smelling the battle afar off, or to use the language of a cotemporary, "go out as gaily to meet death as to our bridal," but we came here to brave danger, and even before we united our destinies with the Union cause we counted the cost. Fancy pictured to us all the dangers, all the horrors of bloody war. We felt that we were but unknown and insignificant; that thousands like us might be swept away in the ensanguined flood, unwept, unhonored, and unsung. Although we loved our country, "Our own our native land," and revered her flag, we left behind us dear relations and cherished friends and all the comforts and pleasures of home. But what are all these when liberty is imperilled; when this corner-stone of progressive civilization is threatened with an upheaval? Although we rushed with ready hands and willing hearts to the defence of that liberty, we were told to stand back!

Denied the privilege of taking up arms against traitors and assassins, or to defend our country, which stood on the very brink of the yawning gulf of anarchical ruin. But there is a logic in this denial; the enfranchised man seems to tell us, "Negro, you have endured and suffered enough. Burnings, tortures and death have been meted out to you with a fiendish lavishness;—the cup of your misery is filled to overflowing. Stand aside while we take our draught of the poisoned chalice." Every tear shed by the bereaved widow and orphan, every sigh for the departed brave, form the sad and mournful atonement and portion, and are sanctifying the motto "Liberty and Union"—soon to adorn our flag. Thus the blood and the tortures of the slave blending with the blood and the tears of the free, promise eventually to insure universal freedom and a peaceful and united country.

But the strangest thing of all is that although all the power of the nation (those in authority) have signally failed, and in spite of that power the negro has and is playing his part in the bloody arena. He is the spy in every household of the enemy. He conveys from every point the information without which the military operations of the United States would be ineffective. When the Union soldier meets the negro in the enemy's country he knows him as a friend and asks him to strive for freedom in spite of fugitive-slave laws, proclamations and orders. He must play his part in spite of men and devils. He is a power that cannot be ignored. Yesterday afternoon Gen. Nagel issued an order that no colored man from a southern state should accompany the officers in the capacity of servant, that there were several hundred of Maryland slaves in the camps, and every officer who did take one such would be guilty of pillage! What folly to waste paper writing such orders. How many northern colored men could be found to risk their lives for nothing? They are bound to take these men, and who will Gen. Nagel get to prevent them? The thing works very nicely; they stay long enough to get a start and then they make tracks to more congenial regions, and others take their place. So the regenerating process goes on.

There is one thing to which the attention of the authorities at Washington should be called. There are about 350 freedmen here. They have received no pay from the government, although they have done all the shipping and unshipping of goods at Liverpool Point—some of them for the past six months. They have no one to instruct them, and seldom do any of the Lord's shepherds hereabouts trouble themselves about them. I rode over again to Liverpool Point the other day, to see Mr. James Lawson, the negro scout, but he had gone over into Virginia, in company with some twelve or fifteen freedmen, and Gen. Sickes and some part of his command. Cornelius, his comrade, whom James reported dead, returned some time ago, safe and sound. He successfully accomplished the mission on which he was sent, bringing back papers and valuable information. He has pluck, and had he not greeted the rebel pickets with a shot the whole party would have been taken. Jim's story about the picket's firing at Cornelius seems to have been forced on the imagination by excitement. Cornelius kept on, and made a successful reconnoisance to Fredericksburg, and has been highly complimented by Gen. Hooker. The fugitives still continue to flock in, and I think they should be looked after. There is one remarkable fact that has come under my observation: it is the dissimilarity between the slaves of Virginia and those of Maryland. The people of the latter are stupid, careless, and shiftless, while those of the former are intelligent, cleanly, and are able to talk on political matters with as much judgment as ordinary people in the free states. I account for this in this way; those who brave death are those who have obtained light, and consequently value liberty, and willingly dare to brave death for the sake of it, while the best of the latter have already left for the North and the debris is left behind.

Some of the most stirring tales of adventure are told by these people, of suffering of hair-breadth escapes. The man who crossed the river for his wife and family is the First Lieutenant of the freedmen at Liverpool Point. His name is Dennis Bland. His elder brother is the captain. When he brought his wife and two little children he also brought two young girls and a man. His noble and heroic wife gave a little idea of her trials after her husband came away. She said the moment her husband made his escape she commenced to plan her own. She, with a female companion hired two slave men to build a boat, promising to give him a passage. She and her comrade carried over four miles the boards to build the boat down to the river side. They labored in the night, so that they could not be found out. When the boat was put together they took their scissors, after buying tar and hemp, and caulked it. They fixed a night for the hegira, they gathered all the children and a little provisions and started. They passed the pickets and safely reached the appointed spot—when, Heavens, the boat was gone! The men they had paid to build it had stolen it and made their escape. Back that unfortunate night to their houses they had to travel. When she got home she was overcome by excitement and fatigue, and relieved her almost broken heart with soothing tears. Some one ran in and told her that Dennis was there!—She lived again, for she knew he came to rescue her. That night Dennis brought off his charges safely, wading waist deep out in the river on a December night, carrying that wife and those children he loved so well. She said, "I did not get angry when I found the boat was gone, but I prayed to the good Lord. I knew he saw my struggles and knew my desires, and I felt that he could not desert me in the trying hour." Such faith as this will remove a mountain of difficulty.

A court-martial has been assembled in the 11th Massachusetts' Regt. for the trial of Col. Wm. F. Small, 26th Regt. Pennsylvania Volunteers.

G. E. S.

TREATMENT OF NATIVES ON THE COAST OF AFRICA.

A correspondence has been placed in our hands, the parties to which are the Rev. Alexander Innes, a Baptist Missionary, recently from the Cameroons, and the Committee of the Baptist Missionary Society. We do not wish to discuss, and we shall strive to keep clear of the personal question which this series of letters discloses, as existing between the parties named and the Rev. Mr. Saker, now at the Cameroons Mission; but we may legitimately assume there is truth in the statements Mr. Innes makes, when he brings forward specific cases of cruelty witnessed by himself, and the matter is a fit one for inquiry. We believe that no member of the Baptist Missionary Board would knowingly permit wanton cruelties to be perpetrated upon the natives under their charge; and the question is, how to render amenable to justice the parties alleged to be guilty of committing them. The first step appears to be to give publicity to the allegations. The following is one of the statements made by the Rev. A. Innes, and we ask, "Can such things be?"

"Among the traders, great cruelties are perpetrated in the name of some parties who stand high in this country, the very recital of which is enough to make the blood run cold in one's veins. The 'credit system' is much pactised there, and if the natives fall behind in their payments, they are pounced upon by the agents, taken on board the hulks or vessels, and subjected to the most cruel treatment. A heavy chain is placed round the neck and locked with a heavy padlock; they are then chained to the mast, down among the wet salt in the bottom of the vessel. There they are confined for weeks, lying naked in the wet salt, until their bodies are swollen to a fearful extent. It is a wonder how any of them ever survive: were they not endowed with almost miraculous powers of endurance they never could recover after such treatment.

"While I was at the Cameroons I went on board of Horsfall's hulk, again and again, to plead for the liberation of one poor man, a converted native, who was detained for several weeks chained to the mast in the salt, and was very near death: his debt was but a trifling balance, which was promised as soon as he could collect it from his customers in the country to whom he had given credit. The agent said that he was acting under instructions from his employers, and it was not till I threatened to report the case in England that the poor man was released from his horrible prison.

"From the same hulk a poor man jumped overboard in desperation. He had been once flogged, and was to be flogged a second time, when, in desperation, he jumped overboard. It was on Saturday night; no boat was lowered down to try to save him: he was in the water all night, all next day, Sunday, all day Monday, and on Tuesday he was picked up by a fishing canoe about fifteen miles below the place. Life, wonderful to state, was still in him, and with care he was brought round.

"I could fill a volume with such statements as these, but I give these as a specimen of what came under my own personal observation. The cheif articles of commerce are rum, gunpowder, and muskets; yet surprise is expressed at the slow progress of African civilization."

The comparatively recent massacre at Porto Nuova prepares us to learn, without surprise, from Mr. Innes, that the late Consul Foote's exploit had a precedent. He writes to us as follows:

"While in conversation with Mr.——, there was a subject alluded to which he thought of great importance, and he regretted that he had not heard of it sooner. It referred to the conduct of Consul Hutchinson to King Aqua, in bringing over a Spanish gunboat from Fernando Po, and bombarding Aqua Town, merely because King Aqua would not sign a paper which he considered he had no right to sign. About fifty shot were fired at his house, which demolished it, and destroyed all his furniture, looking-glasses, earthenware, &c.: all was smashed, and one man killed. The reason for such a brutal outrage upon an unoffending man was this:

"About forty years ago an agreement was entered into between the British Consul at Fernando Po, and all the native chiefs in that district, that they should give up the practice of offering human sacrifices on the death of a chief. Shortly before my arrival a chief named King Bell died. While I was there his son beheaded two men as a sacrifice for his father. When he was charged with the offence, and was told that he had violated the agreement, he pleaded ignorance of the existence of such a treaty. To prevent a similar mistake, Consul Hutchinson drew up a fresh agreement, and called upon all the chiefs to sign it. King Aqua, the head chief, declined to sign it. He said he had never broken the original agreement, and for him to sign a fresh agreement would be an acknowledgment that he had broken the first, which he had not done. He said: 'When my father died, I did not kill any man; when my elder brother died, I did not kill any man; when my other two brothers died, I did not kill any man. If King Bell, or any other chief, break their agreements with England, that is their palaver, not mine: go to King Bell and settle it; I have nothing whatever to do with it.'

"This was the man's argument, and a very sound argument it was; but Hutchinson would not listen to it, but did as I have stated. The poor man came to me and asked, 'What harm have I done that they should break down my house? Will you speak to the Queen for me?'

"I wrote a letter to Lord John Russell on the subject, and gave an explanation of the facts of the case. I enclose his reply. What the nature of 'Mr. Consul Hutchinson's report' was I know not. The facts are as I have stated. King Aqua had nothing more to do with the affair than you or I.

"The accompanying extract, which I took from a Liverpool newspaper, which was sent out to me, shows how facts are misrepresented:

"'There was no dispute whatever be- "King Bell and the King of Aqua," consequently the "English subjects and property were placed in no peril." It is a fabrication. I read this paragraph from the newspapers to King Aqua, from which he saw how the English people were imposed upon by false reports."

The following is the extract dated September 1859:

"The 'Madrid Gazette' of the 24th has the following: The Governor of Fernando Po writes, under date the 28th July, that, at the request of the English Consul at Rio Camerones, he had sent the schooner Santa Teresa to protect the English subjects and property placed in peril by dissension between King Bell and the King of Aqua. The schooner opened fire on the palace of the King of Aqua, and she afterwards sent on shore a small detachment under the orders of midshipman Martinez, which, protected by the guns of the schooner, carried off a flag hoisted by the blacks. The King of Aqua subsequently made known that he was disposed to sign a treaty with King Bell. The English Consul thanked the Governor, in his own name and that of his Government, for the service rendered."

We believe the whole system of government on the West Coast of Africa, from one end of it to the other, where our Government has power, is a huge blunder, and requires thorough revision. We shall recur to this subject.—London Anti-Slavery Reporter.

EMIGRATION TO HAYTI—IMPORTANT FACTS.

To the Editors of the Journal of Commerce:

Perceiving from occasional articles in your Journal, as well as from various other papers, that the colored people, and many of their friends, are looking with increasing interest to Hayti, as a land promising them the homes and privileges of freemen, I feel it my duty to call attention to a few facts having an important bearing upon a question involving so greatly the welfare of a people entitled to our sympathy. In everything promising to improve their condition, I have ever taken a lively interest. Enjoying a most favorable acquaintance with American gentlemen who have for many years resided at Port-au-Prince as merchants, as well as with some who have dwelt there for a long time as Protestant missionaries, I have availed myself of the opportunities afforded by their frequent visits to this country, to ascertain whatever might exist to encourage emigration by the colored people from this country. Their views have been given with great candor, and though they have uniformly spoken in the highest terms of the President now administering the Government of Hayti, as an amiable, enlightened and liberal man, yet I have never been able to procure from this source such information as would assure me that it was advisable to encourage our colored people to resort to Hayti. On the contrary, I had strong misgivings. These misgivings, though not removed, were greatly modified, by interviews with several colored persons, highly intelligent, who had gone expressly to Hayti to acquire the fullest information. Among these was the Rev. Mr. Holly, a colored clergyman of the Protestant Episcopal Church, an educated and energetic man, apparently ardently desirous of promoting the welfare of his people. Through his exertions, mainly, a company of colonists was gathered from Boston and New Haven, and the time designated for their embarkation from the latter place. With many of these colonists I was well acquainted, knowing them to be industrious, moral, and most of them sincerely religious. Feeling, from many considerations, a deep interest in their enterprise, and earnestly desiring their welfare, I consented to address them at a farewell meeting, held prior to their departure upon their voyage. They were present in strong force, and seemed to be animated by an ardent desire to find a home congenial to their aspirations for a home in a land where they might be, indeed, numbered among the free. The meeting was also addressed by Professor J. A. Porter, of Yale College. Many clergymen were present, and some of the leading citizens took a great interest in the occasion.

In the course of a few months, we were all deeply grieved in learning that the hopes of the colonists were all blighted. Disappointment and death spread desolation among them, and the survivors sighed to return. Accounts were sent us of their sufferings, and feeling some responsibility in the measure, we were very anxious to afford them some relief. I inquired how far the chartering of a vessel to bring back the survivors was practicable. This we found could not be accomplished, as the Government required that they should remain for three years, or reimburse it for the expenses incurred. Every account has brought us painful intelligence of want, sorrow, and death. Mr. Holly, who led the enterprise, has lost nearly all the members of his own family, and recent information gives but little hope of his own recovery.

From this experiment, and all the information I can procure, I am induced to dissuade our colored friends from any thought of going to Hayti. Besides the deplorable failure above referred to, I will suggest a few considerations:

1. All persons who become agents for the Haytian Government, and induce persons to emigrate, receive from that Government a premium on each person. This fact should lead to caution in receiving the statement of parties thus pecuniarily interested.

2. The Roman Catholic religion is the established religion, and though the President is a liberal man, and a measure of toleration exists, yet our colored people can scarcely bear the restrictions which exist.

3. It is a country threatened with constant revolutions; even the colonists are called upon to perform military duty, and are subject to all the inconvenient circumstances of such liability.

4. Whatever the Government pays for passage or settlement money must be refunded, or no colonist can leave until the expiration of three years.

5. Among the common prejudices of the country, one of a most virulent nature is the irreconcilable hatred shown towards all mulattoes by those of deeper color.

The disabilities of the colored people in our own country are numerous; yet in leaving it to go to Hayti, they will, I am assured, in no instance find improvement.

J. Kennady,
Pastor First Meth. Ep. Church New Haven, Conn.
New Haven, March 12, 1862.

—A doctor's wife attempted to move him by her tears. "Ah," said he, "tears are useless, I have analyzed them. They contain a little phosphate of lime, some chlorate of sodium, and water."

The celebrated John Wesley, with all his ministerial gravity, was addicted to joking once in a while. His servant, John Fenwick complained that his name never was mentioned in the published Journal. Wesley in the next number said, "I left Epworth with great satisfaction, and about one preached at Clayworth. I think none were unmoved but Michael Fenwick, who fell fast asleep under an adjoining hayrick."

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, Diptheria and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent liniment for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a liniment.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, Diptheria, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here, and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.

PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.

10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the Original Inventor of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we Challenge the World to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

THE
PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC,

Containing besides the Calendar and Copious Astronomical Statistics, a History of the Great Rebellion, Biographical Sketches of the Prominent Military Officers, a Dictionary of Military Terms, very full information relative to military matters of interest to the people at large, National Hymns, Incidents, Anecdotes, &c., &c.

Published and for sale by DEXTER & Co., 17 Spruce street. Newsboys and others wanted to make sales.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess of dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing; and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
Thos. R. Crocker,
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1861.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.

D. W. Ingersol,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 12th, 1860.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

James Edwin Halsey,
193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Headache," and found it valuable for the purpose specified and recommend it to all who want such an article.

[illegible]
29 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 26th, [illegible]

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, [illegible] Broadway; [illegible] Chas. H. Ring's, 192 Fulton St.; [illegible] 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

WM. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 50 and 25 cents per bottle, [illegible]

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, [illegible], Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c. They should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all feeling of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs, sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic diseases, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes of people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system via, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach, Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex.

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Warranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body, from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occasionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

Price, 25 Cents per Bottle.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK.
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Product
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS;

Embellishment—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
Music.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or the Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James McCune Smith.
Claude Brindis De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture,—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there should be a Religious Element,—by [illegible].
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. [illegible].—Anon.
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thomas Jefferson's Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause,—by Robert Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love,
Poetry—Anonymous.
[illegible]
[illegible] for Freedom in Jamaica,—by Robert Campbell.
The Influence of Planets,—by M. R. Delany.
The Colored Man's [illegible], by James McCune Smith.
[illegible] A. G. Cary.
The Captive—Poetry—by W. J. Wilson.
The [illegible] Wants of the Free Colored People, by [illegible].
Thomas L. [illegible]
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly.
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by C. B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. M. Langston.
The Shadows of [illegible] Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African, and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade,—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.,
New York.

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound. Price $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. Contents: Embellishment—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Connor. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James McCune Smith, M.D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Rev. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. T. Holly, Miss Frances Ellen Watkins, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gordon, Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs. M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps, Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. Nell, Esq., J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend, Esq.

The Life of Captain John Brown. The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. In one neat 12mo. volume of 400 pages. Illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom. By Fredrick Douglass. One vol., 12 mo. 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage [illegible].

Life of Jermain W. Loguen. The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

The Martyrs and the Fugitive. By the Rev. S. H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 25 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave. The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Several Illustrations. 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1.00, postage paid.

Our National Charters. For the Millions: Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association, 1774. With notes showing their bearing on slavery, and the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions, selected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, concerning Slavery in the North-west Territory; also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid, single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1.00.

The American Slave-Code, In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts. postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery. By Lysander Spooner. In paper, [illegible] Price 75 cts., or postage paid 80 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery. By Wendell Phillips. Price [illegible] Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler. Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, [illegible], representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate giving views of a slave vessel between decks, [illegible] slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which places it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage ([illegible]) must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection. A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin. By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes in one. Price $1.25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed. Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, "Vina," after forty years of slavery. By Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May. Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1.25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress. "Slavery has no rights but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all the speeches delivered in Congress; also, an elaborate likeness. Price only 20 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream; Or, the true history of Deacon Giles's Distillery and Deacon Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents; $1 per dozen, or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea. By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail, postage paid, on receipt of [illegible]

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland. An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, [illegible] By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party, and Chief of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia, [illegible] cents. When sent by mail, postage [illegible] must be added.

[illegible] Cotton [illegible] [illegible]

The [illegible] [illegible]